

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE

THE object of the present edition of the Iliad is to offer a guide to students anxious to know more of Homer than they can learn from elementary school books. It must be confessed that, when once the strict limits of a verbal commentary are passed, it is hard to know which path to choose from the many which open into the world revealed to us by the Homeric poems. We find ourselves at the starting-point of all that has given Greece her place in the world—of Greek history, of Greek art, of Greek philosophy, theology, and myth. The poems are our ultimate resource for the study of the history of the Greek language, and it is to them that we owe all our knowledge of the one great school of Greek criticism. An editor may be pardoned if, at the risk of apparent superficiality and discursiveness, he attempts, not of course to follow all or any of these roads, but barely to indicate the direction in which they lead.

Unfortunately for the English student, the works which he must study if he wishes to pursue these lines of enquiry are almost entirely in German; unfortunately also for the editor, who can hardly escape the appearance of pedantry when he has to be continually quoting works in a foreign language. The difficulty is one however which it lies with English scholars themselves to remove.

Where the acumen and industry of Germany have been for nearly a century so largely devoted to the Iliad and Odyssey, it is not to be expected, or even desired, that in a commentary for general use a new editor should contribute much that is really original. The proper place for new work is in the pages of philological journals and dissertations. Indeed it is not possible for any man to be sure of the novelty of any suggestion he may make, so vast is the mass of Homeric literature which has been annually poured forth since Wolf revived the study. While believing therefore that some few improvements on old interpretation will be found in the following pages, I am at no pains to specify them, and shall be quite content if I see them adopted without acknowledgment. On the other hand, I have freely taken wherever I have found, only acknowledging in the case of recent work which has not yet passed into the common stock, and reserving for this place a general statement of the great debts which I owe to previous authors.

Prominent among these¹ I must place Ameis' edition of the Iliad, and more particularly Dr. Hentze's Appendix thereto; the references given in it are of inestimable value to the student. Heyne's large Iliad, and the editions of Pierron, Düntzer, Paley, La Roche, Christ, Nauck, Nägelsbach, Fäsi, and Mr. Monro, have all been consulted; the last two continually and with especial respect. References to notes on the Odyssey have, as far as possible, been confined to Merry and Riddell's edition of the first twelve books, but here again Ameis and Hentze have been valued guides. Ebeling's great Lexicon Homericum, at last completed, has been of course an indispensable companion, though often usefully supplemented by Seiler's smaller dictionary. The other principal authorities will be found in the list at the end of the introduction; isolated papers and monographs can hardly be enumerated.

I have further to express my thanks to Mr. J. A. Platt, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, who has been so good as

Finally I have to name with affectionate remembrance my friend, the late John Henry Pratt, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. The eight years which have elapsed since his lamentable death by drowning in the lake of Como have so greatly modified the work which I inherited from him that I have no right to make him responsible for any opinion expressed in the following pages; but I would emphatically say that their existence is entirely due to him, and that it is my earnest hope that I have said nothing which would not have met with his approval, had he lived.

The Frontispiece is from a red-figured Attic amphora from Vulci, published in the Monumenti dell' Istituto, i. 35, 36. It clearly represents the ending of the duel between Aias and Hector, after the exchange of gifts related in H 303. The name ΦOINIX instead of Idaios seems to be merely an instance of carelessness such as is not uncommon on vases in the case of secondary personages.

INTRODUCTION

THE TEXT.

THE critic may set about the construction of a text of Homer with either of two aims in view. He may propose to reproduce so far as may be the original words of the poems, as they were first composed; or he may on the other hand set before himself only the humbler ambition of amending the vulgate till he can give it in the purest form preserved by tradition.

The former method, which has to rely, to a large extent, upon conjectural divination and philological comparison, came into existence with Bentley's discovery of the traces of the digamma in the common text, and for the last century has been steadily worked with a large measure of success. Among the more important classes of emendation thus fixed, a few may be specially named.

First in order comes the restoration of the initial digamma. Heyne, Bekker, Cobet, Nauck, and others have shewn how large a proportion of the apparent "violations" of this consonant can be corrected by emendations of more or less probability; in the Iliad at least, the number of recalcitrant lines in passages of undoubted antiquity has been reduced to a comparatively small number. Nauck has further shewn that many words which, as we write them, contain a diphthong are always scanned in such a manner that we may write two open vowels in place of the diphthong; we may for instance always write σκηπτόροχος for σκηπτούροχος, θέϊος for θείος, ἡῶα for ἡῶ; and when we find the same rule in words like κόϊλος for κοῖλος, Ἀτρεΐδης for Ἀτρείδης, and others where we know that a digamma originally existed between the two open vowels, we have come as near as the case will allow to a restoration of the medial as well as of the initial digamma.

Ahrens has done important service in shewing that the poems contain many evident traces of a genitive of the second declension in -οο, an intermediate form between -οιο and -ου; and he has further pointed out numerous corruptions which have crept into the text through ignorance or neglect of the fact that the hiatus in certain parts of the Homeric hexameter is legitimate and far from uncommon.

acceptance, and is far less cogent in its results, will be found to have rendered services to criticism, even though its form and much of its substance be rejected. While not admitting that the Aeolic into which he converts the poems is in any way to be regarded as the original dialect, I believe that his proof that the poems were not originally in an Ionic form will be found to hold good; and that the peculiarly Ionic forms which the metre will not let us alter are in many cases evidence of the later origin of the passages where they occur. But our knowledge of the old Aeolic dialect is so imperfect—the inscriptions, the only really trustworthy evidence, are all later than the fifth century, and most of them even than the Christian era—that this criterion is one which we shall never be able to apply with confidence until we have a satisfactory knowledge of the Greek dialects as they were at least in the seventh century B.C.

A particular question of some importance which, though not first raised by Nauck, has been prominently brought forward by his work, is that of the form of the dative plural of the first and second declensions. It is well known that the Ionic dialect, as found both in Herodotos and the inscriptions, admits only the longer form in -ησι and -ουσι, to the exclusion of -ης and -ois. The same is the case in the Aeolic inscriptions, except with the article, which is always found in the short form τοῖς, ταῖς. If we examine the text of Homer, we shall find in a very large majority of cases that the shorter form where it occurs precedes a vowel, and may therefore be written -οι', -ησ'. There is a further large class of phrases where the long form can easily be introduced; namely, in the combinations like ἀγανοῖς βελέεσσι, πλείοις δεπάεσσι, τρητοῖς λεχέεσσι, and so on, which can at once be altered to ἀγανοῖσι βέλεσσι, πλείοισι δέπασσι, τρητοῖσι λέχεσσι; and similarly we may write μειλιχίοισι Φέπεσσι, etc. When these alterations are made it will be found that the number of cases where we must leave the short form is extremely small; according to Nauck there is no instance left in seven of the twenty-four books of the Iliad (ΔΖΙΝΟΣΦ) and only thirty-nine in all the rest; with seventy-five in the Odyssey. Hence both Nauck, who wishes to reduce the dialect to old Ionic, and Fick, who wishes to find nothing but Aeolic, alike endeavour to remove these remaining obstacles by conjecture or excision. The case is undoubtedly a strong one, but there are several reasons for hesitation for those who do not believe in the purely Ionic or Aeolic origin of the poems, and are not satisfied to find in the "Attic" forms an evidence of the now discredited story of the recension of Peisistratos. Even a follower of Fick must remember that in the fragments of Sappho we find the long and short forms used side by side.¹ If therefore with Fick we accept the inscriptions, late though they are, as evidence for old Aeolic, we are driven to the conclusion that Sappho did not write in a pure dialect, and can hardly fail to see a trace of the influence of the Epic language in something like its present form, at least so far as this point is concerned. Again it may be noticed that in two dialects, Arcadian and Cyprian, which shew a particularly close affinity with one another, and in many ways with the Epic language, the short form is regular; though there is at least one case of the longer in Arcadian (Collitz, 1183, Ἀλειοῖσι, a pre-Ionic inscription). Finally, for those who believe that the poems, or at least the dialect, arose on the mainland of Greece proper, it is significant that the shorter form is on the whole as characteristic of this region (Thessaly, Boeotia, Elis, Attica, etc.) as the longer is of the colonies in Asia Minor. Since then a complete uniformity is not to be attained without considerable violence to the text, it is better not to aim at it, and to see in the remains of the shorter form what was, in the later home of the poems in Asia Minor, not a modernism but an archaism.

However this may be, the importance of these investigations is not to be mistaken; but even if we allow that each one of them has brought us a step nearer to the primitive language of the poems, it is none the less clear that we can never actually reach this ultimate goal. For every difference which is deduced by metrical analysis—and it is on this, in the last resort, that everything depends—there may, for all we know, be fifty which have not betrayed themselves by a difference of scansion. Until this doubt is settled, and this it can hardly ever be, we can have no confidence that we have really carried the tradition back to the original form. Here and there we have made a certain correction, but those of which we know nothing may be infinite. And short of the original form of the poems, there is for the same reason no intermediate port for which we can steer when once we cut adrift from the safe hold of tradition. We then have no test whatever which will enable us to prove the outcome of our labour to be such a text as ever was, or ever could be, at one time in the mouths of men; for we cannot tell that the corruptions which we remove came in together, or if not, in what order they appeared.

The most scientific course therefore would be to carry back the tradition as far as may be, and thus to fix our text, leaving to notes and monographs all conjectured earlier forms. This is the aim of the text of the present edition. The canon by which every reading has been judged is the best tradition of the fifth century B.C. The object is not to produce an Iliad as it was first composed, for this is beyond our power, but an Iliad such as Herodotos and Thukydides read, for this may at least approximately be done.

Not the least valuable part of Prof. Ludwich's recent work on Aristarchos is his demonstration that the great critic aimed only at emending a vulgate, and that this vulgate is in the main our common text of to-day. And in the Scholia we find a name which enables us to carry back this long tradition to the fifth century. This name is that of Antimachos of Kolophon, who, as we know, lived in the second half of the fifth century, and published an edition of the Iliad. Now this edition happens to be sometimes quoted, but always as an authority for very small and unimportant variations of the text.¹ The conclusion is very strong; namely, that the edition of Antimachos was in the main the same as our present vulgate, probably not differing from it much more than a good extant MS. differs from a bad one.

It appears therefore that the basis from which we start is the same as that of Aristarchos; and it is to him and his school that we mainly owe our power of emendation. Our materials are as follows:— (1) A very large number of MSS., probably some 200, of one or other or both poems. A short account of the most important of these is appended. Of these all represent the vulgate with more or less accuracy, with the single exception of A, which is written under Aristarchean influence. (2) The very numerous variants collected by Aristarchos and recorded in the Scholia A. (3) The notices of readings of other ancient critics, notably of Zenodotos, preserved in the same work. (4) Scattered quotations, of which the most important are those in the Lexica, especially Hesychios, Apollonios the Sophist, and the Etymologicum Magnum. Quotations in the MSS. of other classical authors are never quite free from the suspicion of having been “cooked” into agreement with the vulgate; the variants which they give are seldom of importance, and may often be shown to arise from mere slips of memory; for in ancient times verbal accuracy in quotation was less rigidly demanded than now.

Of these four classes it may be said at once that the MSS. are as a rule good ones, very free from the blunders of stupid copyists, and never presenting us with the mere nonsense which is but too common in many important codices. Itacism and similar small sources of error are of course to be found in all; but in so large a number the “personal coefficient” can easily be eliminated. A in particular is probably the finest and most accurate MS. of any classical work in existence; Hoffmann has detected only three instances of itacism in the 1126 lines of books Φ and X. In critical value the variants of Aristarchos are, it need hardly be said, of higher value than the readings of any codex; for the great critic, it would seem, made it his business to collect them from all the resources of the Alexandrian library, where he commanded materials a thousand-fold more valuable than any in our possession. Ludwich has shewn how baseless is the supposition to which the schools of Nauck and Cobet continually recur, that the readings of Aristarchos are due to his own conjecture. That they may in some cases have been so is possible; but the manner in which his followers speak of his respect for his authorities precludes us from assuming that his variants were in any large number of cases based on other than documentary authority. At the same time we must remember that Aristarchos was far from a mere collator. He had very strong views indeed, and there is no doubt that he, like any other critic worth the name, did not slavishly follow any one MS. or class of MSS., but adopted the readings, if their authority were only respectable, which fell in with theories sufficiently proved, in his opinion, on other grounds.

Of the readings of Zenodotos and others we know little, as they are rarely quoted unless when attacked by Aristarchos—or rather by Aristonikos, to whom the bitterly polemical tone of the Scholia is probably due. But even from this imperfect side-light we see that they often contain most valuable tradition, and were frequently rejected by Aristarchos for reasons which we know to be invalid. Though we have no positive testimony as to Zenodotos' dealings with his authorities, as we have in the case of Aristarchos, yet what we know about him gives us little reason to suppose that he handled the text in any arbitrary way. A large number of his readings are so peculiar as almost to preclude the idea of conjectural invention; and in some cases they contain the best of evidence in their own favour, by preserving a correct tradition of the digamma, of which Zenodotos, like Aristarchos, must have been wholly ignorant.

The fourth class, the quotations in other authors and in the lexica, needs little remark, as they are of small value, and can only be employed with great caution, and as a last resource, except in the few cases where they are specially brought forward to illustrate a question of textual criticism.

A fifth means of correction, namely conjectural emendation, cannot be entirely excluded; but the "diplomatic" materials are so abundant as to restrict it within very narrow limits. All our authorities agree however in a few cases of obvious error, and most of these have been corrected in the present text, while others are apparently of such high antiquity as to find more fitting mention in the notes, among "violations of the digamma" and other prehistoric faults. An exception has been made—with some slight loss of consistency, no doubt—in cases where the error has produced a line which will not scan at all. On this ground a very few cases of the genitive in -oo have been adopted in the text; as for instance Ἰφίτροο in B 518, Ἀσκληπιόο B 731, and one or two others; but equally certain restorations, such as ἀδελφεόο for ἀδελφειοῦ and the like, have been relegated to the notes, because the traditional reading is not, on the face of it, unmetrical. For ζωσ scanned as a trochee εἶος has been written, on the analogy of the traditional τεῖος, rather than the linguistically preferable ῆος (e.g. A 193). With these exceptions and a few sporadic cases, which are mentioned in the notes, there is, I believe, no reading in the text which cannot be shewn to have some support in ancient tradition, or at least in the readings of some MS. of respectability.

Within the limits of tradition the critic is free to follow the teachings of modern philology. Of readings which have any authority he is bound to choose that which retains, however unconsciously, the tradition of a lost digamma. In parts of the line where modern research has shewn that the ancient Epic poets, unlike their imitators, permitted hiatus, we must cæteris paribus choose the reading which presents the hiatus. Where there is variation between a long vowel and a short in the ictus of the foot, the short vowel, if permissible on other grounds, is to be chosen; for it appears that lengthening by the ictus was far commoner in the oldest poets than the later Greeks conceived. With these rules in view there is no reason why we should despair of reproducing the Homer of Thukydides or even of Pindar—or perhaps even a critically better text than any which, in their non-critical time, had been composed from the existing but scattered materials.

On similar grounds the use of brackets to denote spurious lines has been rarely adopted, except where the omission is found in one at least of the better class of MSS. A mere athetesis by Aristarchos has not been considered sufficient ground of condemnation; but where, as often, we are told that Aristarchos agreed with Aristophanes in athetizing a line, and that Zenodotos omitted it altogether (οὐδὲ ἔγραφε), it will sometimes be found bracketed in the present edition, if strong critical reasons indicate spuriousness. Less cogent evidence can hardly be taken to show that the line was not duly recognized by the tradition of the fifth century; and if we endeavour to go back beyond that date, “interpolation” and “spuriousness” are words which soon begin to lose their meaning.

Another point of difference from the ordinary text may be mentioned. The patronymics Τυδεΐδης, Πηλεΐδης, and the like, are written with diaeresis, as quadrisyllables. We know they must have had this scansion at one time, for they undoubtedly come from Πηλεΐδης, Τυδεΐδης, and the fact that Pindar and the tragedians use the open forms has been accepted as sufficient proof that the tradition lasted till the fifth century. The fact that the trisyllabic measure is never needed in the hexameter is of less weight, and has not induced me to write Ἀργεῖος, θείος, etc., with Nauck; for here we have no evidence to shew that the memory of what was probably the primitive form lasted till historic times.

The text formed on these principles agrees in most points with Hentze's revision of Dindorf's edition (Teubner series, ed. 5, 1884-5); and I have followed this in most minor points of accentuation and spelling.¹ The apparatus criticus from which the MS. readings are quoted is that of J. La Roche (Homeri Ilius, Lipsiae, 1873-1876). Unfortunately this work leaves much to be desired. It is overburdened by petty variants which merely illustrate on the practice of each scribe, and do not indicate either error or difference of reading—a large number deal, for instance, merely with the question of the omission or addition of the ν ἐφελευστικόν in a word which ends a line. It is full of misprints, and is unhappily far from being either trustworthy or complete. Many of the readings are copied from Heyne, who often copied from Barnes, who was a sadly careless collator. Some of the most important of the second class of codices are still uncollated, notably Ven. B; while the Townleianus, which is probably of high value, still requires careful examination, as Heyne's variants are scanty and sometimes incorrect. Even the collation of C and D, the two Laurentian MSS., which forms the most valuable part of La Roche's new material, is said to be very imperfect. It is certain that a new and complete apparatus for the Iliad is urgently needed in order to complete the work which C. A. J. Hoffman began in his careful and scholarly edition of the 21st and 22nd books.

The principal MSS. quoted by name in the notes are as follows:—

A: Codex Venetus, no. 454 (see La Roche, Hom. Textkritik, p. 458, no. 6), 10th century: "liber quo non est emendatio ullus," as Cobet says. It has lost nineteen leaves which are supplied by a late hand; they comprise E 336-635, P 277-577, 729-761, T 126-326, Ω 405-504. This MS. stands quite by itself in preserving the signs of Aristarchos and the Scholia; the text shows considerable signs of Aristarchean influence.

B: Codex Venetus, no. 453 (La Roche, H. T. p. 458, no. 6), eleventh century. This is only quoted for the Scholia, the text not having been collated.

C: Laurentianus, xxxii, 5 (La R. p. 460, no. 14), at Florence; tenth or eleventh century. A valuable MS. with a good many peculiar readings, though rather carelessly written.

D: Laurentianus, xxxii, 15 (La R. p. 460, no. 15), eleventh century; very carefully written, and probably the next best MS. after A.

"Townleianus," in the British Museum, among the Burney MSS. (La R. p. 467, no. 65); a good codex not properly collated.

None of the other complete MSS. are of special importance. There are, however, several fragments of great interest. Among these

¹ It might be thought that it would have been better boldly to adopt La Roche's rules of accentuation, which are based upon the tradition of the grammarians as well as of the best MSS.; but the gain thus made is small, as the grammarians themselves can have had no very ancient tradition to guide them in such matters, and it would hardly compensate the appearance of pedantry in unessential matters which is given by such forms as φάλλὰ τε καὶ φλαῖον, Ὀδλυμπρον δέ, and the like.

are three fragments of papyrus, of which two at least probably date from the first century B.C. They are fully described by La Roche, H. T. pp. 439-450. These venerable relics are of no critical importance, and in some cases are written with gross inaccuracy (κατουλυπου νηφέελπος for κατ' Οὐλύμπου νιφέοντος, etc.). The fragments of the Codex Ambrosianus (La R. p. 450, no. 4) are better; they probably date from about the sixth century, and comprise altogether 800 lines from all parts of the Iliad. The text is that of the ordinary good modern vulgate, without any very noteworthy variations. The same may be said of the Syrian Palimpsest (Syr) in the British Museum, which contains 3873 lines from M-II and Σ-Ω. This dates from the sixth or seventh century, and is not quite so accurately written as the Amlr. Thus all these fragments are chiefly of importance as showing us the chain of tradition extending continuously backwards from the modern vulgate nearly to the age of Aristarchos without noteworthy variation.¹

THE SCHOLIA.

THE Scholia on the Iliad are so important in the history of criticism as well as for the elucidation of the text, that it will not be out of place to give a short account of them, together with some of the preliminary information needed by students who desire to study them for themselves. The Venetian Scholia were first published by Villoison (Venice, 1788). A more complete, but still imperfect, collection from this and other sources is that of J. Bekker (Berlin, 1825). It is now superseded by Dindorf's edition (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1875-7) so far as it goes; and it is to this work that all references are made.

The bulk of the Scholia consists apparently of excerpts from a larger work, a sort of "Variorum" commentary, of the origin of which we know little for certain, except that it was composed between the ages of Porphyrios (A.D. 260) and Eustathios (A.D. 1160). A considerable portion of this corpus, especially in Ven. B, is taken from the "Homeric Problems" of Porphyrios, and a great deal more from the lucubrations of other allegorizing interpreters. This is of little value. We occasionally find however references to the work of Aristarchos, which may be accepted as correct when we have no other reason to doubt their accuracy. They also contain a number of mythological traditions taken from Apollodoros and others, which are not without their value; and aesthetical criticisms on the poetry, which are interesting and often instructive. We know this original work chiefly through four abstracts of it contained in the MSS. known as A, B, the Townleianus, and the Lipsiensis (L). Of these, the Schol. A occupy the two first, and the Schol. B the third and fourth volumes of the Oxford edition. The Townley Scholia will form two more volumes, but are not yet published. They are however to some extent known through the Scholia Victoriana (V), given by a late MS., which is apparently copied from Townl. (without the text), and was employed by Bekker in his edition.¹ The Leipzig Scholia (L) are also partly reproduced by Bekker, but are of little value. The same may be said of one or two other collections ("Leidensis," "Mosquensis," etc.), which apparently would not be worth publishing.

A = Venetus A (6); C = Laurentianus xxxii, 3 (14); D = Laurentianus, xxxii, 15 (15); E = Eustathius; G = Vindobonensis 39 (92); H = Vindobonensis 117 (95); L = Vindobonensis 5 (105); M = Venetus 456 (107); N = Venetus 459 chartaceus, and O = Ven. 459, bombycinus (10); S = Stuttgartensis 5 (111).

Fortunately however A contains, beside much of these comparatively unimportant excerpts, a large mass of information of far higher value; and fortunately too it has preserved for us a distinct statement of the source from which it comes. This is repeated at the end of every book in similar words, of which the following at the end of the third book may serve as a specimen:—παράκειται τὰ Ἀριστονίκου σημεῖα, καὶ τὰ Διόμουν περὶ τῆς Ἀρισταρχείου διορθώσεως, τινὰ δὲ καὶ ἐκ τῆς Ἰλιακῆς προσωδίας Ἡρωδιανοῦ καὶ Νικάνωρος περὶ τῆς Ὀμηρικῆς στιγμῆς.

Of the four authorities here named Nikanor and Herodianos are the latest in date, being contemporary with Hadrian and M. Aurelius. Both were decided but often ill-informed followers of Aristarchos. Nikanor's views on punctuation often of course deal with the interpretation of the text and frequently give us interesting information. The notes of Herodianos on prosody—which, in the Greek sense of the word, included accentuation—are of less value to the commentator, though they form a valuable supplement to the other works of Herodianos which have come down to us.

But it is in the extracts from Aristonikos and Didymos that the chief value of the Scholia is to be found; for these are the direct and authentic tradition of the teaching of Aristarchos himself.

The great critic, as we know from other sources, marked the lines of Homer upon which he commented with various signs, of which we are chiefly concerned with four; the ὀβελός (—), the διπλῆ (∩), the διπλῆ περιεστιγμένη (⋈), and the ἀστερίσκος, (·×·). Of these the first marked lines which were "athetized" (ἀθετεῖται) or condemned as spurious; the second was a general mark of reference to notes on grammar, Homeric usage, etc.; the διπλῆ περιεστιγμένη was affixed to

passages where the reading of Aristarchos differed from that of Zenodotos; while the ἀστερίσκος marked lines which occurred elsewhere in the poems. Where Aristarchos regarded the repetition as faulty he added the ὀβελός (ἀστερίσκος σὺν ὀβελῷ). The work of Aristonikos περὶ τῶν σημείων gave the notes of Aristarchos which explained these marks.

The work of Didymos περὶ τῆς Ἀριστάρχου διορθώσεως, on the critical edition of Aristarchos, is the most important of all. He, like Aristonikos, lived under Augustus; yet it seems that even at this early date the tradition of the teaching of Aristarchos was already falling into oblivion. Didymos, called χαλκέντερος from his amazing industry and powers of work, set himself to restore it, and collected so far as possible the variants which distinguished the corrected text of Aristarchos from the vulgate. It would seem however that he often doubted as to the truth; indeed from one remarkable scholion of his, on K 389, we learn that even Ammonios, the immediate successor of Aristarchos at Alexandria, had to write a treatise to prove that Aristarchos had published no more than two editions of Homer.¹

The works of these four scholars are presented to us by the Scholia only in the form of very brief extracts, often made with little intelligence and occasionally contradictory of one another. There can be no doubt however that the statements of any one of the four (except in a few cases where they are obviously errors) are far superior in authority to those of any of the other scholia; and they are quite sufficient to give us a clear and consistent view of the method of the greatest critic of antiquity. They are in most cases easily to be distinguished both from the "Variorum" Scholia and from one another by their contents and even by their style. Whenever we find a scholion dealing with questions of punctuation we may safely attribute it to Nikanor; those affecting scansion and accentuation belong to Herodianos. The excerpts from Aristonikos always deal explicitly with some critical sign, and are generally marked by containing the word ὅτι, before which we must understand ἡ διπλή (or ὁ ὀβελός, ἀστερίσκος or whatever be the mark appended to the line in question) παράκειται "the dipole is affixed, because," and then the reason follows.²

The Scholia of Didymos are known by their contents. It may be said however that every scholion with οὕτως (or more fully οὕτως Ἀρίσταρχος) is Didymean. This indicates that the notes were originally appended to an Aristarchean text. That of A has been to a great extent brought into harmony with that of Aristarchos, but considerable

² It is not quite safe to assume that every scholion beginning with ὅτι is by Aristonikos, as the later commentators sometimes used the word as a compendium for σημειωτέον ὅτι, "note that," a general introduction to any remark they may have to make.

differences still remain, so that οὕτως now often indicates a reading which differs from the MS. instead of agreeing as it should. It is curious that many of these notes, which are among the most valuable we possess, have been added by a happy afterthought on the part of the scribe of A; they are then written in very minute letters, and squeezed into the narrow space left between the text and the main scholia which fill the greater part of the margin of the MS.

These remarks should be sufficient to explain the references to the Scholia which occur in the following commentary. But the student should not fail to read the great work of Lehrs, de Aristarchi Studiis Homericis,¹ which first sifted and arranged the mass of material. Equally indispensable to a proper knowledge of the subject is the recent work of Ludwich, Aristarch's Homerische Textkritik, aus den Fragmenten des Didymos hergestellt und beurtheilt.² As an illustration of the methods which have to be used we may take the Scholia on B 160-167, which contain extracts from all the different authorities.

To 160-1-2 in the text are prefixed the ἀστερίσκος and ὀβελός. Schol.: ἀπὸ τοῦτου ἕως τοῦ "ἐν Τροίῃ ἀπόλοντο" (sc. line 162) ἀθετοῦνται πῆχοι τρεῖς, καὶ ἀστερίσκοι παράκεινται, ὅτι οἰκειότερον ἐν τῇ τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς λόγῳ ἐξῆς εἰσὶ τεταγμένοι (sc. 176), νῦν δὲ κοινότερον (ἀνοικειότερον, Lehrs) λέγονται. This is of course from Aristonikos.

161 has the διπλῇ περιεστιγμένη as well as the ἀστερίσκος σὺν ἱβελῷ. Schol.: Ἀργεῖν Ἑλένην· ὅτι Ζηνόδοτος γράφει "Ἀργεῖν θ' Ἑλένην," σὺν τῷ συνδέσμῳ, ὥστε εἶναι χωρὶς καύχημα, καὶ σὺν τούτῳ τὴν Ἑλένην. οὐ λέγει δὲ οὕτως, ἀλλ' αὐτὴν τὴν Ἑλένην καύχημα. This is again by Aristonikos, the ὅτι explaining the reason for the διπλῇ περιεστιγμένη. Notice the characteristically flat contradiction with which Zenodotos is disposed of.

* Ἀργεῖν· ἡ Λακωνικὴ πέμπτον τῆς ὅλης Πελοποννήσου. A good specimen of a late scholiast of the feeble sort. The * in Dindorf's edition indicates that it is not one of the main marginal scholia, but like those already mentioned squeezed into the narrow space beside the text.

162. φίλης ἀπὸ πατρίδος αἴης· οὐκ ἀναστρεπτέον τὴν πρόθεσιν (i.e. we are not to write ἀπο) ὡς Τυραννίων καὶ Πτολεμαῖος· ὁπότε γὰρ γενικῇ συντάσσεται ἡ ἀπό, τηρεῖ τὸν τόνον· "καὶ γὰρ τίς θ'" ἕνα μῆνα μένων ἀπὸ ἧς ἰλόχου" (see 292). This deals with accentuation, and is therefore by Herodianus. It must have been imperfectly extracted, however, as it omits part of the doctrine of the anastrophe of prepositions; hence Lehrs adds after ἡ ἀπό, "μὴ μεταξὺ πιπτονσῶν λέξεων, καὶ σημαίνει ὅτι ἀποθεν." Tyrannion and Ptolemy of Askalon held that when ἀπό meant "far away from," it should be written ἀπο. This Herodianus lenies.

² Leipzig, vol. i., 1884: vol. ii., 1885.

163. *οὕτω “κατὰ λαὸν” συμφώνως εἶχον ἀπάσαι—Didymos, on of the additions between the main scholia and the text. “All the editions” had κατὰ, not μετά, which was found in some of the inferior copies, and is preserved in one of our MSS., D. 164 has ἀστερίσκον σὺν ὀβελῷ. Schol.: σοῖς δ’ ἀγανοῖς· χωρὶς τοῦ δ’ εἶχον αἱ χαριέστατα σοῖς ἀγανοῖς· καὶ ἡ Ἀριστοφάνους οὕτως εἶχεν. ἀγανοῖς δὲ, ἄγαν προσηνέσθαι πρᾶοις, ὑπάγεσθαι δυναμένοις· οὕτω γὰρ ἔδει μαλάσσειν τὸν θυμὸν ζέοντι ἀθετεῖται δὲ καὶ ἀστερίσκος παράκειται, ὅτι καὶ οὗτος πρὸς Ἀθηνᾶς οἰκίῳ πρὸς Ὀδυσσεά λέγεται (sc. 180), καὶ ψεύδος περιέχει νῦν. οὐ γὰρ ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ παρίσταται ἐκάστω, ἀλλ’ ὁ Ὀδυσσεύς. Here there are three hands. The first part is of course by Didymos (to οὕτως εἶχεν), the last by Aristonikos (from ἀθετεῖται). The explanation of ἀγανοῖς belongs to the class of “exegetic” Scholia, and is found, as we should expect, in similar words in B. The same is the case with the intermarginal note which follows, *ψιλωτέον τὸ ἀγανός· τοιοῦτο γὰρ τὸ α. πρὸ τοῦ γ, i.e., as we see from the rather fuller form in Sch. B, we must not read, as some did, ἀγανός, for a never has the rough breathing before γ, except in ἀγνός. This may come from Herodianus.

167 has the διπλῇ. Schol. *τελεία (a full stop) ἐπὶ τὸ αἰξασα ἀσύνδετον γὰρ τὸ ἐξῆς πρὸς τὸ ἐπάνω—Nikanor. Οὐλύμπιοι· ὅτι ὄρος Ὀλυμπος—Aristonikos. The διπλῇ here marks a Homeric usage, namely, that Ὀλυμπος means the actual mountain, not, as in later Greek, a celestial abode of the gods.

Of course it is not always so easy to assign the Scholia as in these instances; but they will give a good idea of the general manner in which the distinctions are to be made.

THE ORIGIN OF THE POEMS.

The question of the origin of the poems is one which is too closely bound up with their interpretation to be omitted entirely in an edition like the present. So far as is necessary for the explanation of each book, short special introductions will be found at the beginning of the notes on each; but for the sake of clearness it seems advisable to offer here a general sketch of the scheme of development which has been assumed. One cannot however but feel at a disadvantage in giving a bare statement of a view which is far from popular in England, in a space which forbids defence or even adequate explanation. The scheme here proposed is not identical with that of any one German scholar; it is based upon considerations which will be found in the works of Bergk, Niese, Kayser, Grote, Christ, Fick, and others, among whom particular reference may be made to the introductions to the separate books in Hentze’s appendix to Ameis’ edition of the Iliad—a clear and able series of articles to which I have to acknowledge much.

continual obligations. Scholars who dislike the dissection of the Iliad will, it is to be hoped, at least study the arguments of the critics above mentioned, and of others of their school, before finally condemning the present sketch.¹

That some disintegration of the Iliad is necessary hardly any will deny; for there are few indeed so conservative as to hold that K belongs to the original story; in manner and matter alike it is a little world by itself, a loose stone which can be taken away without loss to the structure. It is with I that the real dispute begins—a dispute which has been hotly fought, and has strangely divided even the apostles of disintegration. For myself, the cumulative evidence of style, language, and plot is sufficient to show that the ninth book does not belong to the original components of the Iliad. With the ninth book the eighth must go; indeed we might argue conversely that the eighth is so abundantly condemned on internal evidence that it must carry the ninth with it. Of the remaining books, it may be said at once that none, if we except certain passages of which the Catalogue is the longest, shews marked evidence of difference of style; but that the contradiction in matter between Γ-Δ and Η, and between parts of Ε and Ζ, and the confusion of motives at the beginning of Β, prevent our conceiving these different parts of the tale as composed in their present form and order for their present places.

So much for destructive criticism. We are bound to see how far we can rebuild the original fabric. And here it must be said at once that no one is more sensible than myself of the hypothetical and tentative nature of the following statements. An apparently dogmatic and categorical form is used merely to avoid the continual repetition of guarding clauses, “we may suppose,” “it is probable,” and the like; the reader is requested to insert them from time to time when he thinks proper.

The original poem, the work of “Homer” himself, was the Μῆνις Ἀχιλλεύς, which related in comparatively brief but undying form the hypothesis the awkward device by which Α is joined on to Β 483 by means of an isolated line taken from Θ (55). But I cannot with him follow Grote and Düntzer in seeing in the bulk of Β-Η an entirely independent poem, an Ὀϊρος Ἰλίου as he calls it, forcibly inserted into its present position. The fact that Achilles is never an actor shews that these books must have been composed with the Μῆνις as a background; to suggest, as Fick does, that the Ὀϊρος may have been originally composed for a period of the siege when Achilles was absent from the camp on one of his raiding expeditions is a shift unworthy of its author.

¹ On the question of the composition of the original Μῆνις I find myself in entire agreement with Fick, the first part of whose Homerische Ilias appeared after the earlier books had passed through the press. In one point I have made a slight alteration in consequence of his arguments, viz. in thinking that the coming of the Greeks in Β 443-483 belongs to the original poem, and that the point when the ἀγορή was inserted is still to be recognized in the substitution of κηρύσσειν ἀγορήνδε in 51 for the πρύσσειν πολεμώνδε of 443, which originally followed 50. By the explanation of θρωσμός πεδίοιο in Α 56, however, I may claim to have removed from his

story of the quarrel of Achilles and Agamemnon, the defeat of the Greeks in consequence of the prayer of Thetis to Zeus, the partial relenting of Achilles, leading to the death of Patroklos, the final arousing of the hero, and the death of Hector. It consisted of the following portions of the Iliad:—The quarrel and the prayer of Thetis (A), the dream of Agamemnon followed at once by the arming of the host (B 1-50, 443-483), the defeat of the Greeks and wounding of the chief heroes, with the message of Patroklos to Nestor (A 56-805, or perhaps to the end; omitting 665-762), the battle at the ships (which cannot now be extricated from M-N-Ξ-O), the sending of Patroklos and his death (the greater part of Π), the carrying of the news to Achilles (the first part of Σ), the reconciliation with Agamemnon (in T, but apparently much altered), the victorious career of Achilles (parts of Υ and Φ) and the killing of Hector (X). This forms a magnificent poem in itself, containing all the dramatic interest of the story, painted in few but vivid colours, with clear and strong motives of human passion throughout—the first and greatest of Epic poems.

Into this superb framework other pictures now began to be fitted, mainly perhaps from the desire to immortalize national heroes, who, like Diomedes, played but an insignificant part in the original story. The first of these accretions may be found in the διωρεία of Diomedes, with its introduction, the last part of Δ (421-544), its sequel, the sixth book, and the duel of Aias and Hector in the seventh; all noble work. Later than this came a variation of the duel episode, the combat between Menelaos and Paris, and the violation of the truce (Γ-Δ 1-222); of the great scene in the assembly, in the second book, we can only say that it belongs to this series of additions, but is not clearly later or earlier than any of them.¹

Now it is important to remark that though these are accretions upon the original story, it does not follow that they are by another hand from that to which we owe the Μῆνις. Not one of them is unworthy of the greatest of poets, and the style is entirely uniform. It has repeatedly been urged that it is in the last degree improbable that there should have been more than one poet in any age who was capable of writing any poetry of the high level of the Iliad and Odyssey. But if it be worth while to discuss questions of probability at all, it must be pointed out that the presumption is entirely in the opposite direction. The existence at any time of an artistic genius of the highest order appears to involve as a necessary corollary the near neighbourhood of others of almost equal rank; Aischylos involves Sophokles and Euripides, Shakespear Marlowe and Milton, Beethoven Mozart and Schubert, and so on through all history. If then we hold, as seems probable, that the Iliad and Odyssey are the only great poetical creations of the pre-historic and pre-cyclic age of Greece, we must admit that a priori they are likely to be the work not of one poet but of several.

In spite of this probability, I see no reason for denying that so much of the Iliad as has already been put together may be the work of one poet; it consists of the whole of the first book, half the second, the greater part of the next five (Γ-H), and of the eleventh. To another hand or hands we must ascribe the eighth and ninth, and to yet another the tenth. As for the twelfth, it contains large passages which may be by the first hand, and probably a good deal of subsequent extension by the poet to whom the greater part of the battle at the ships is due. There remain only a few pieces of different origin. The Catalogue seems to be in the main early, but not to belong to its present position. The ἐπιπώλησις of Agamemnon in the fourth book, the wounding of Aphrodite and Ares in the fifth, the building of the wall in the seventh, the episode of Phoenix in the ninth, and the story of Nestor's youthful exploits in the eleventh, are all interpolations, of very different merit, as to whose authorship it is not worth while speculating. Beyond these there remain to be accounted for only short interpolations of a few lines each, which are left to be noticed not in the introductions to the different books, but only in the notes on the passages concerned.¹

Finally, a word may be added as to the place of origin of the poems. The argument for their birth in continental Greece, first stated by Mr. Gladstone, and lately enforced with more effect, if less enthusiasm, by Mr. Monro in the English Historical Review (i. p. 43), appears to me unanswerable. It is to the courts of the great princes of Achaia, whose homes and even whose remains have been found by Schliemann and explained by Helbig, that we have to look for the dwelling of Homer. The Achaian fugitives from the Dorian invasion took with them to the coasts of Asia Minor this most precious of their possessions, and from thence they began, like their descendants with the Romans, to lead their conquerors captive. To the Achaian time I would refer all the work which I have attributed to Homer himself; but the later additions may have been added in the new Asiatic home, for it is in them only that we find traces of personal knowledge of Asia Minor.

It will follow that the original Epic dialect was Achaian, and past recovery for us. We can only say that this Achaian seems to have been nearly akin to several dialects which we know in their later forms, notably to the Asiatic Aeolic, and to the Cyprian, which, as is well known, leads us to Arcadia. Whether or no the poems passed through a stage of Asiatic Aeolic, or were transferred at once from Achaian to Ionic, it is beyond our power to say ; but that such a change of dialect has been made Fick has almost proved ; to have done so is a notable service to the Homeric question, however little he may satisfy us by the actual dress in which he has clothed them.

may be the work of "Homer"; Θ and I account for 1278, K for 579, and the remaining 1700 lines belong to the later additions of larger compass.

The first book has been the arena in which some of the severest battles of the School of Lachmann have been fought. The surpassing artistic merits of the book, both as a poem in itself, and as an introduction to the Iliad at large, have been so universally recognised, that it has been felt that a successful attack by which it could be split up into smaller songs of independent origin would go far to decide the question for the whole of the Iliad.

The principal point on which Lachmann and his followers have relied is the inconsistency involved in 423, where it is said that all the gods went "yesterday" to the Aethiopians; whereas Apollo is elsewhere conceived as still shooting his darts at the Greeks, and in 474 as present at Chryse; and Hera and Athene are watching the strife in the assembly, the latter descending to Troy and returning to Olympus μετὰ δαίμονας ἄλλους. A further difficulty is also found in ἐκ τοῦτο, 493, which refers back, not to the day indicated in the preceding lines, as we should expect, but to the interview between Thetis and her son which ended in 424, and since which at least one night, and apparently several, have passed.

From this Lachmann concludes that the first book consists of an original song, consisting of 1-347, with two continuations, the first consisting of 430-492, the second of 348-429 and 493 onwards, of which the former may be by the poet of the first song, while the latter is of different origin, and not very skilfully adapted to the place into which it has been put.

The inconsistency as to the whereabouts of the gods cannot be denied; but that it is sufficient to prove the independent origin of the passage, or rather of the few words in question (θεοὶ δ' ἅμα πάντες ἔποντο) may well be disputed. The consistency with which the epic poet is concerned is the consistency of the picture of the moment; the consistency of details in different scenes—so far as they do not touch the story itself as given by the legend on which he works—is of minor importance. And, though the contradiction is here within a smaller range than usual, it is very possible, as von Christ has suggested, that 317 may have formed a point at which a rhapsody ended for purposes of recitation, so that to the hearer the separation would be far wider than it is to the reader. The same supposition would also account for the repetition in 370-392 of the events, and even the words, of the opening of the book.

With Lachmann's first continuation, the restoration of Chryseis (430-492), the case is somewhat different. The vague reference of ἐκ τοῦτο, though not indefensible (as the preceding lines naturally lead the thought back to the point to which ἐκ τοῦτο belongs, cf. 488 with 422), is certainly not what we should expect. Further, the whole

episode can be cut out without being missed—we have only to make 490 follow 430 immediately—and is of no importance to the story. A large portion (about half) consists of lines which are found in other parts of the Homeric poems (including two which appear in the hymn to the Delian Apollo); and of these, one at least, 462, seems more suited to its place in the third book of the Odyssey than here, while 469-470 seem to contradict a well-marked Homeric custom. On the other hand it must be noticed that the episode is most artistically introduced into a pause in the main action, and offers a skilful contrast, in its peace and feasting, to the stormy scenes of the beginning and end of the book. Whatever view be taken of this portion will not affect the general question of the composition of the Iliad, as it might have been interpolated at any time by a poet of sufficient artistic feeling to see his opportunity.

Beyond these two, the first book offers no serious difficulties in the region of the higher criticism.

1. Θαῖ, the Μοῦσα of α 1, who tells the poet the history which he has to relate; see B 484-492, and compare χ 347, ἀποδιδάκτος δ' εἰμὶ, θεὸς δέ μοι ἐν φρεσὶν ὅμας παντοίας ἐνέφυσεν, and θ 44, 64, 488. Πηληϊάδεω, originally no doubt Πηληϊάδα(ο). This is one of a class of patronymics formed with a double suffix, the adjectival -ιο- and the purely patronymic -αδη-: while the commoner form *Πηλε-ιδη-*s has only one.

2. οὐλομένην, "accursed"; it bears the same relation to the curse ὄλοιο as ὀνήμενος (β 93) to the blessing ὄναιο. It is distinctly passive in sense in σ 273, but in other cases it may be active, "deadly"; hence Curtius would take it as a present participle for ὀλνόμενος (Vb. i. 246). μυρία, "countless"; in its later sense, 10,000, the word is accented μύριοι.

3. ἰφθίμος, a word of doubtful formation, but apparently connected with ἴφιος. The feminine, ἰφθίμη, is also found, but only applied to women—e.g. T 116. Ἀΐδα, a metaplastic dative of Αἴδης, which in H. always means the god, not his realm—with the exception, apparently, of Ψ 244. προΐαψε—πρ implies "forth on their way," as in πρ-πέμπευ, προέναι (195, 422, etc.) ιαπ=iac, so that προΐαψεν=pro-iac-i exactly.

4. αὐτότε, the body is to Homer the real self, the ψυχή is a mere shadow: cf. Ψ 65, where the soul of Patroklos is πάντ' αὐτῷ εἰκνύα, like the real man.

5. δαῖτα is the reading of Zenod. fortunately preserved by Athenaeus (i. p. 12 f.): Ar. and all MSS., πᾶσι. The former is obviously the most vigorous and poetical expression, and seems to be alluded to by Aeschylus, Supp. 800, κυσὶν δ' ἐπειθ' ἔλωρα κἀπὶ χυρῖος δρῦσι δαίνοντο οὐκ ἀναίνομαι πέλειν. Cf. Eur. Ion. 503, Hec. 1076. πᾶσι was preferred by Ar. in accordance with his dogma that δαῖς could only be used of a human feast—which does not say much for his poetical feeling. But the fact that there is no trace of δαῖτα in the MSS. shows that he only adopted the vulgate of his own day; there is no reason to suppose, as some have done, that he foisted an arbitrary conjecture into the text; still less to imagine that Zenodotos did so. Ariston. only mentions that Zenod. athetized this line and the next, which is of course not inconsistent with his having given them with this variant. For βουλή there is an old variant βουλῆ.

6. ἐξ οὗ may refer to the preceding line, "the will of Zeus was being fulfilled from the time when" (so Ar.); or better, to δεῖδε in the first line, "take up the song from the point when," as in θ 500, φαῖνε δ' ἀοιδῆν, ἔνθεν ἔλδων, ὥς αὖ μέν, κ.τ.λ.

8. For τ' ἄρ A reads ταρ, which, according to Herodotus (and perhaps Ar.), was a particle like γάρ, but enclitic: so also 65, 93, and elsewhere. But the point is not of such importance, nor is tradition so unanimous, as to render an alteration of the ordinary text advisable. ἔριδι goes with ξυνέηκε, "brought them together for strife." σφωε, according to the rule of Ar. that this form belongs to the 3d person. Zenod. here and elsewhere read σφῶι, which Ar. confined to the 2d person.

11. ἠτίμασεν is the reading of A and a few other MSS; vulg. ἠτίμησεν. Both verbs are found, but the aor. is elsewhere only ἠτίμησεν, and ἠτιμάω is peculiar to the Odyssey. Rhythm, however, is a strong argument here in favour of the text. Nauck indeed wishes to expel ἠτιμάω from the text of Homer altogether; but v. Curtius, Vb. i. p. 341, n. τὸν Χρῦσῃν . . . ἀρητῆρα, a use of the article which "is scarcely to be paralleled in Homer." In other examples with a proper noun it is used with an adversative particle (αὐτάρ, μὲν, δέ), and only of a person already mentioned, e.g. B 105. (D. B. M.) It would simplify this passage if we could take Χρῦσῃς as an appellative, "that man of Chryse, even the priest"; but I do not find any other instance either of a local name thus formed in -ης, or of a person addressed directly by a local name, as in ὦ Χρῦσῃ, 442. Nauck conj. τοῦ, sc. Ἀπόλλωνος.

13. λυσόμενος, the mid. of the person who offers the ransom, the act. of him who accepts it, e.g. 20.

14. ἔχων is subordinate to the preceding participles, indicating a detail, not a main object, of his journey. It is therefore best to retain the vulg. instead of reading στέμμα τ' with Bentley (to agree with στέμμα in 28). The στέμμα is the Apollinis infula of Aen. ii. 430, a wreath of wool wrapped round the staff in token of suppliantship, cf. the ἐριόσπετος κλάδος of Aesch. Supp. 23. It is probably the fillet worn, in ordinary circumstances, by the priest himself, or possibly, as has been suggested, the wreath from the image of the god.

15. λίσσετο, so A Ar.; vulg. ἐλίσσετο. But λίσσομαι apparently had a second initial consonant, and is never preceded by a short vowel.

18. Bentley conj. θμμι θεοὶ μὲν δοῖεν, which is probably right, as the synzesis of θεός in H. is very improbable (§ 251 is the only other case); indeed even for θείος we ought probably always to read θείος, as the word is always found with the last syllable in arsi.

20. λύσαιτε, so A and others; two give λύσαί τε, the old vulg. is λύσατε (!). In such a matter MS. authority is worth nothing; but the opt. is perhaps more suitable to a suppliant, while the MS. reading is τὰ δ', not τὰ τ'. See H. G. § 299 b, and for the article τὰ δ' ἄποινα, "on the other hand accept ransom," § 259, 1.

22. ἐπευφήμησαν, gave pious assent, probably by shouting; hardly by silence, as in the later use of the word. For the use of the infin. to express πυρρῶς, H. G. § 281.

24. θυμῷ is not a "whole and part" construction with Ἀγαμέμνονι, but a locative, "in his soul," as appears from numerous other passages.

“μή σε, γέρον, κοίλῃσιν ἐγὼ παρὰ νηυσὶ κιχέω ἢ νῦν δηθύνοντ’ ἢ ὕστερον αὐτὶς ἰόντα, μή νύ τοι οὐ χραλσμη σκήπτρον καὶ στέμμα θεοῖο.
τὴν δ’ ἐγὼ οὐ λύσω· πρὶν μιν καὶ γῆρας ἔπεισιν ἡμετέρῳ ἐνὶ οἴκῳ ἐν Ἀργεῖ, τηλόθι πάτρης, ἰστὸν ἐποιοχόμενῃν καὶ ἐμὸν λέχος ἀντιώσαν.
ἀλλ’ ἴθι, μή μ’ ἐρέθιζε, σαώτερος ὥς κε νέηαι.”

ὥς ἔφατ’, ἔδεισεν δ’ ὁ γέρον καὶ ἐπέιθετο μύθῳ, βῆ δ’ ἀκέων παρὰ θίνα πολυφλοίσβοιο θαλάσσης.
πολλὰ δ’ ἔπειτ’ ἀπάνευθε κιὼν ἡρᾷθ’ ὁ γεραίος
Ἀπόλλωνι ἀνακτι, τὸν ἡύκομος τέκε Λητώ·

“κλῦθί μευ, ἀργυρότοξ’, δς Χρύσῃν ἀμφιβέβηκας
Κίλλαν τε ζαθέην Τενέδοιό τε ἱφι ἀνάσσεις, Σμινθεύ, εἴ ποτέ τοι χαρίεντ’ ἐπὶ νηὸν ἔρεψα, ἢ εἰ δὴ ποτέ τοι κατὰ πύονα μηρὶ ἔκηα ταύρων ἢδ’ αἰγῶν, τόδε μοι κρήνην ἐέλδωρ· τίσειαν Δαναοὶ ἐμὰ δάκρυα σοῖσι βέλεσσιν.”

26. For κιχέω, Curtius (Vb. ii. 55-63) and others would read κικήω, but v. note on H 439 (and H. G. App. C.) It is not necessary to supply any verb before μή, which is an independent prohibitive particle; the literal meaning is “Far be the thought that I shall find thee.” H. G. § 278; Delbrück, S. F. i. 22. The same explanation can be given in 28, though here the μή-clause is obviously on its way to become subordinate.

29-31. ἀθεοῦνται, ὅτι ἀναλύουσι τὴν ἐπίτασιν τοῦ νοῦ καὶ τὴν ἀπειλήν. ἡσ- μένισεν γὰρ καὶ ὁ Χρύσης εἰπούσης (ἀπ- συνούσης? Cobet) αὐτῆς τῷ βασιλεῖ. ἀπ- ρεπὲς δὲ καὶ τὸ τὸν Ἀγαμέμνονα ταιαῦτα λέγειν. “Quod autem dixit patri gratum esse filiam suam esse Regis concubinam, Alexandriae fortasse in aula dissoluta verum esse poterat, sed non apud heroicæ ætatis homines.”—Cobet (M. C. p. 230, in an amusing essay on ἀπρεπής). It is in such judgments that Ar. appears at his worst.

31. ἀντιώσαν with acc. only here; cf. Soph. Aj. 491, τὸ σὸν λέχος ξυνῆλθον, and H. G. § 136 (1), with other instances there given: “presenting herself to me in the matter of my bed.” ἐποιοχόμενῃν implies the walking backwards and forwards which was necessary with the ancient loom.

33. ἔδωκεν, so Ar.; this is evidently a piece of genuine tradition from the form ἔδφεισεν: MSS. ἔδδωκεν. For the article in ὁ γέρον and ὁ γεραίος see H. G. § 261, 3.

37. Chryse and Killa are towns in the south of the Troad, on the gulf of Adramyttium. ἀμφιβέβηκας, “standest round about,” as protecting deity, like a warrior protecting a fallen friend, e.g. P 4. Cf. Aesch. Sept. 174, ὡς φίλα δαίμονες λυτήρια ἀμφιβάντες πόλιν.

39. Σμινθεύ, lit. “Mouse-god”; Apollo was worshipped under this title in the Troad, as at Smyrna as “Locust-god.” Παρμόπιος; and even on late coins of Alexandria Troas he appears with a mouse at his feet. In an interesting chapter of Custom and Myth, Mr. Lang argues that this indicates the amalgamation of the Greek Apollo with a local mouse-god, originally a tribal totem. The common rationalising explanation is that the word is a familiar abbreviation of Σμινθοφθόρος, destroying the field-mice which ravaged the vineyards: οἱ γὰρ Κρήτες τοὺς μύας σμίνθους καλοῦσιν, Schol. A. Ἐρεψα seems to indicate the most primitive form of temple—a mere roof to protect the image of a god standing in a grove; for it was to groves, not to buildings, that sanctity originally belonged. χαρίεντα seems to be proleptic, “for thy pleasure.” For the construction of the prayer cf. E 115.

ὥς ἔφατ' εὐχόμενος, τοῦ δ' ἔκλυε Φοῖβος Ἀπόλλων,

εἰ δὴ ὁμοῦ πόλεμός τε δαμῶ καὶ λοιμὸς Ἀχαιοῦς.

47. αὐτοῦ, “he” emphatic, “the god”; a use which reminds us of the Pythagorean αὐτὸς ἔφα. We should have expected the word to imply an opposition to some other person as in 51; merely to contrast the god with the arrows seems weak. It was probably this which induced Zenodotos, followed by Bentley and Bekker, to athetize this and the preceding line; but the couplet is too fine to be sacrificed. Zenod. also read ἑλωθείς for ἐοικώς, as appears from the Schol. on M 463.

50. ἐπ' ὤχετο, “visited”; the word is used in this sense only of attacks made by a god or under immediate divine inspiration; v. note on K 487.

51. αὐτοῖσι, the men.

52. The position of βάλλ' is the most emphatic possible: the same effect is obtained by Milton, “Over them triumphant death his dart | Shook; but delayed to strike.” ἔχεπευκός, lit. having sharpness or bitterness; πικ, cf. πικροδανός by πικρός, and for the physical sense of the root, Lat. pung of pungo (Curt. Et. no. 100).

53. The rhythm of this line is very strange; the connection of the preposition with its case is so close as hardly to admit a caesura; but there is no other in the third or fourth foot, cf. Σ 191. ἐννήμαρ . . . τῇ δεκάτῃ, the regular formula for a vague number of days; Z 174, Ω 610, and elsewhere often.

55. τῷ ἐπὶ φρεσὶ θῆκε, so Θ 218; λ 146, ἔπος ἐρέω καὶ ἐπὶ φρεσὶ θήσω, etc. A rather commoner phrase is ἐνὶ φρεσὶ (θυμῷ, στήθεσσι), which shows that ἐπὶ φρεσὶ is to be taken in a locative sense.

59. πλαγχθέντας, foiled, lit. driven from the course: cf. B 132, αἶ με μέγα πλάζουσι. The MSS. write παλμπλαγχθέντας in one word, which is so far right, as it indicates that πάλιν is to be taken in a purely local sense. There is an old and wrong explanation, that πάλιν means “once again,” and contains an allusion to the legend, unknown to Homer, of a previous expedition against Troy in which the Greeks had lost their way, and invaded Mysia by mistake.

60. εἴ κεν with the opt. assumes as a mere supposition, which is expressed as unlikely, while in the next line εἰ with the future indic. assumes as an acknowledged fact (Cf. Lange, EI, pp. 510-2). After ὀίω ἀπονοστήσειν it comes in like a sudden correction of a too confident expression.

ἀλλ' ἄγε δὴ τινα μάντιν ἐρείομεν ἢ ἱερῆα
 ἢ καὶ ὄνειροπόλον, καὶ γάρ τ' ὄναρ ἐκ Διὸς ἐστίν, ὃς κ' εἴποι, ὅτι τόσσον ἐχώσατο Φοῖβος Απόλλων, τοιγὰρ ἐγὼν ἐρέω, σὺ δὲ σύνθεο καὶ μοι ὁμοσοῦν

 ἢ γὰρ ὀλομαι ἄνδρα χολωσέμεν, ὃς μέγα πάντων Ἀργείων κρατεῖ καὶ οἱ πείθονται Ἀχαιοί.

62. The ἱερεῖς is mentioned merely as an authority on ritual (65), not as a diviner; for the Homeric priest as such seems to have had no functions of divination; there are no omens from sacrifices.

63. ὄνειροπόλος, a dreamer of dreams, one who has converse with the god in sleep. The root πολ seems to have been a very primitive word for agricultural and pastoral duties; cf. οἰωνοπόλος beside αἰ-πόλος (βου-κόλος is probably from the same root καρ, Curt. Et. p. 470). It thus means “one who attends to dreams,” or perhaps, as we might say, “cultivates” them; compare the double significance of Lat. col-ere. There is no other mention of a professional dreamer in Homer, hence Zenod. athetized the line.

64. ὅτι is the rel. pron., not the adverb, and is, like τόσσον, a cognate acc., expressing the content of ἐχώσατο; cf. ε 215 μή μοι τόδε χῶεο, and E 185.

65. εὐχολῆς, because of a vow unfulfilled, or hecatomb omitted. For the gen. cf. H. G. § 151 δ; and for cases of res pro rei defectu, E 178, Φ 457.

67. βούλεται, a very rare instance of a subjunctive of a thematic tense with a short vowel. Hence we ought perhaps to read βούλητ' with Curtius, Vb. ii. 72.

68. δχ', a word which only occurs in the phrase δχ' ἄριστος, and is of quite uncertain origin. It is generally compared with ἐξοχος, where, however, the idea of eminence is given by the ἐξ. L. Ahrens and Benfey refer it to Skt. valu = very.

71. ἡγέομαι, with dat. = to guide, as X 101, ψ 134, etc; with gen. = to command. ἔσω = eis, and is always found with the acc. in Il.; in Od. it sometimes takes the gen. as in later Greek. The earlier history of the expedition is evidently presumed as a familiar story. The μάντις was in historical times a regular official in every Greek army.

73. ἐν φρονέων may be either (1) with good sense, opposed to ἀφρονέων, O 104; or (2) with good intent, opposed to κακῶς φρονέων. This double meaning runs through later Greek: e.g. (1) Aesch. Prom. 385, κέρδιστον ἐν φρονούντα μὴ δοκεῖν φρονεῖν; and (2) Ag. 1437, Δγισθος ὡς τὸ πρόσθεν ἐν φρονῶν ἐμοί.

77. ἢ μὲν is the regular Homeric formula of swearing, Att. ἢ μὴν. The short vowel is confirmed by the metre in E 275, T 261. μὲν and μὴν are of course only two forms of the same word.

78. ἄνδρα is of course the object of the transitive χολωσέμεν.

κρείσσων γὰρ βασιλεύς, ὅτε χῶσεται ἀνδρὶ χέρη· 80
εἴ περ γὰρ τε χόλον γε καὶ αὐτῆμαρ καταπέψῃ, ἀλλὰ τε καὶ μετόπισθεν ἔχει κότον, ὄφρα τελέσῃ, ἐν στήθεσσι ἐοῖσι. Σὺ δὲ φράσαι, εἴ με σαώσεις.”

τὸν δ' ἀπαμειβόμενος προσέφη πόδας ὠκὺς Ἀχιλλεύς· 85
“θαρήσας μάλα εἶπὲ θεοπρόπιον, ὅτι οἴσθα·

σοὶ κοίλης παρὰ νηυσὶ βαρέας χεῖρας ἐποίσει συμπάντων Δαναῶν, οὐδ' ἦν Ἀγαμέμνονα εἴπῃς, 90
ὅς νῦν πολλὸν ἄριστος Ἀχαιῶν εὐχεται εἶναι.”

καὶ τότε δὴ θάρσῃσε καὶ ἤυδα μάντις ἀμύμων· “οὐτ' ἄρ' ὃ γ' εὐχολῆς ἐπιμέμφεται οὐθ' ἐκατόμβης, οὐδ' ὃ γε πρὶν Δαναοῖσιν ἀεικέα λοιγὸν ἀπώσει, πρὶν γ' ἀπὸ πατρὶ φίλῃ δόμεναι ἐλικώπιδα κούρην

80. χέρη, another form of χερείον, probably Aeolic, from the analogy of πλέες = πλείονες (see on B 129). It recurs in Δ 400, Z 382.

81. καταπέψῃ, swallow down, lit. digest. Cf. on B 237, and Pindar, O. i. 87, κατ. μέγαν ὄλβον. χόλον, as sudden anger, is contrasted by γε with κότον, enduring resentment. ὄφρα, until. ἔπειτα . . . ἀλλὰ τε—te here marks the two sentences as being correlative; so K 225 (q.v.), Δ 160.

83. φράσαι, consider; neither act. nor mid. means “say” in Homer.

85. θεοπρόπιον—the neuter form occurs only here (and possibly Z 438, where however it is merely a question of accent), and seems harsh in the immediate neighbourhood of the commoner θεοπροπία (87). Hence both θεοπροπιῶν and -πέων (Nauck, as 109) have been conjectured here. θεοπρόπος is probably one who prays to a god (προσ- is perhaps conn. with Lat. prec., prociis, etc.)

88. Cf. II 439. Βλέπειν is commonly used in Attic in the sense of living; e.g. Eur. Alc. 192, καὶ πῶς ἂν αὐτὸς κατθανοί τε καὶ βλεῖται;

91. Ἀχαιῶν, so Ar. Zenod. and Aristoph.: MSS. ἐν στρατῷ. εὐχεται does not imply any boastfulness in our sense of the word, but merely a naive consciousness of his position. False modesty is unknown to the Homeric hero.

94. ἡτίμησε—Nauck ἡτίμασσε' (one or two MSS. give ἡτίμασσε'); see on 11.

97. Δαναοῖσιν ἀεικέα λοιγὸν ἀπώσει; so the editions of Ar. and Rhianus, and the Μασσαλιωτική. MSS. give λοιμὸς βαρέας χεῖρας ἀφέξει, “he will not withhold his hands from the pestilence,” which is meaningless. To translate “he will not keep off (from us) the heavy hands of the pestilence” involves a very un-Homeric personification of λοιμός, which is not much improved by Markland's conj., κῆρας for χεῖρας (cf. v 263).

98. ἐλικώπιδα with the masc. ἐλικώπες (Ἀχαιοί) has been variously explained; (1) by the ancients “black-eyed,” but ἐλικός in such a sense is a grammarian's figment: (2) with round eyes, ἐλιξ = curved; but ἐλιξ rather means “twisted,” and is not used of a circular curve: (3) rolling the eyes: (4) sparkling-eyed (root σελ- of σέλας: so Ameis). The choice lies between (3) and (4), of which the former seems preferable. The epithet well expresses a vivacious keen spirit,

ἐς Χρύσην· τότε κέν μιν ἱλασσάμενοι πεπιθόμεν·”

such as the Greeks were conscious of possessing; while, as applied to a woman, it will imply eagerness and youthful brightness. It is therefore needless to look beyond the familiar sense of Feilik- for an interpretation. This, however, does not explain ἐλικοβλέφαρον Ἀφροδίτην in Hesiod, Th. 16.

99. ἀπριάτην and ἀνάποινον were regarded by Ar. as adverbs—perhaps rightly. ἀπριάτην is certainly so used in § 317; for the form cf. ἀντιβλήν, etc.

103. ἀμφὶ μέλαιναί is the Alexandrine reading; most edd. give ἀμφιμελαιναι—a reading which, as Autenrieth has shown in an Excursus to Nägelsbach, is of late origin. The phrase recurs in P 83, 499, 573 (δ 661 is probably interpolated from this passage). It then means “his midriff black (with anger) was full of fury on both sides (above and below).” This connection of ἀμφὶ with φρένες is common; e.g. ἔρως φρένας ἀμφοτέρωθεν, Γ 442; πόνος φρένας ἀμφιβέβηκε, Z 355; and other instances in H. G. § 181; φρένας ἀμφιγεγῆθως, Hym. Apoll. 273. For the epithet μέλαιναί, as expressing deep emotion, cf. Aesch. Pers. 113, ταῦτά μοι μελαγχλῆτων φρήν ἀμύσσειται φόβῳ; Cho. 406, σπλάγγνα δέ μοι κελαινοῦται; Theog. 1199, κραδίην ἐπάταξε μέλαιναν, as well as the Homeric κραδίην πόρφυρε. This (Autenrieth's) explanation seems much superior to the ordinary interpretation of ἀμφιμελαιναι as “lying in the midmost darkness of the body,” which is hardly Homeric either in thought or expression. Although in P 499, 573, anger is not in question, yet both refer to moments of strong emotion. The metaphor seems to come from the surface of water darkened by a breeze blowing over it; cf. Ω 79, and especially Z 16, ὥς δτε πορφύρη πέλαγος . . . ὥς ὁ γέρον ὤρμαινε.

105. κάκ' ὀσσόμενος, ὅτι ἀπὸ τῶν ὀσσεων κακὸς ὑπιδόμενος, οὐκ ἀπὸ τῆς ὀσσης, τῆς φωνῆς, κακολογῆσας, Ariston. The verb is from root ak, to see, but is always used of the mind's eye in the sense of “boding”; θυμὸς is generally added, e.g. κ 374, σ 154, Σ 224.

106. κρήγυον, a doubtful word; it evidently means “good,” though in late Greek it is sometimes used in the sense of “true.”

107. For the personal constr. φίλα ἐστὶ μαντεύεσθαι, cf. Δ 345, φίλ' ὀπταλῆα κρέα ἔδμεναι; ρ 347, αἰδῶς οὐκ ἀγαθὴ κεκηρμένῳ ἀνδρὶ παρῆναι, etc.; see H. G. § 232.

108. The best MSS. read οὐδέ . . . οὐδ', and so Ar. on the ground that the repetition gives force (ἐμφαντικὸν ἔστιν). But it is very doubtful Greek when preceded by δέ.

112. βούλομαι, prefer, as in 117, A 319, Ψ 594, and often; and with πολὺ, P 331. αὐτήν, emphatic, as opposed to the ransom.

114. κουριδίης, a difficult word; the most plausible, but not entirely satis-

οὐ δέμας οὐδὲ φνὴν, οὐτ' ἄρ φρένας οὔτε τι ἔργα. 115

factory, explanation is that of Curtius (Stud. i. 253), who derives it from κείρω, and refers it to the custom of cutting the bride's hair before marriage; hence "wedded." So κοῦρος from the custom of cutting the πύλακος θρεπτήριος at the age of puberty.

115. The distinction of δέμας and φνὴ is not quite clear. From phrases like δέμας πυρὸς it would seem natural to take δέμας as "outward appearance" generally; φνὴ as "growth," i.e. "stature." But this latter meaning belongs to δέμας in E 801, Τυδεὺς τοι μικρὸς μὲν ἔην δέμας. Perhaps we may render "stature and figure" with about the same degree of vagueness. Cf. N 432, κάλλει καὶ ἐργοῖσιν ἰδὲ φρεσίν.

117. ὅτι Ζηνόδοτος αὐτὸν ἠθέτηκεν ὡς τῆς διανοίας εὐήθους οὐσης. οὐ δὲ αὐτὸν ἰδίᾳ προφέρεσθαι, ἀλλὰ συνάπτειν τοῖς ἄνω ἐν παρενθέσει (MS. ἐν ῥῥει) γὰρ λέγεται, Ariston., rightly. (For the emendation of ἐν ῥῥει see Mr. Verrall on Eur. Med. 148; so in Schol. A on A 234, E 150). σόν, the reading of A, is undoubtedly preferable to the σῶν of Ar., which is not a Homeric form at all.

118. γέρας, the gift of honour to the king, set aside before the division of the spoil.

119. οὐδὲ ἔοικεν, perhaps "it is not even decent," much less reasonable.

123. For πῶς γάρ A has πῶς τὰρ, which is preferred by Cobet and Bekker.

124. κείμενα πολλὰ go together, "a common store laid up in abundance." ξυνήια recurs as an adj. in Ψ 809.

125. τὰ μὲν is here the relative, "what we have plundered out of the towns, that is divided." But this use of τά is not consistent with the usual practice, and we ought probably to read ἀλλὰ θ' ἃ μὲν. See H. G. § 262. The preceding ten years of war have been mainly occupied in plundering neighbouring towns; Achilles counts twenty-three such forays in I 828, and they are often alluded to elsewhere.

126. λαοὺς is perhaps to be taken after ἐπαγεῖρην, in the sense "to gather again from the people," with the double acc. usual after verbs of taking away. ἐπι- thus expresses, as often, the idea of going over a space, or round a number of people, e.g. ἐπιπείμαι, ἐπιπυλίσθαι, ἐπιστρωφᾶν (Paley).

129. Τροίην, Ar., as an adj., "a city of Troas," not "the town of Troy." It would appear in that case better to read Τρωήν, the usual form of the adj. (v. Cobet, M. C. 252); but as this must have occurred to Ar. and been rejected by him, in spite of his desire to make the text as uniform as possible, we must conclude that he had strong authority for the trisyllabic form. Ar. held that H. does not use the expression πόλις Τροίη for "the town of Troy," but πόλις Τρώων, though in λ 510 πόλις Τροίη (Ar. Τροίη) must mean "Troy"; and there seems no reason to reject this sense here. Zoilos, the famous Ὀμηρομάστιξ, accused Homer of solecism in this line for using a plural verb instead of a singular; he must therefore have read δῶσι, and possibly this is right as a singular, from which δῶσι is formed by epenthesis (Curt. Vb. i. 57).

131. πρ seems here to have merely its original force of “very,” rather than of “though,” which indeed belongs properly to the participle. The idea seems to be, “Being a great warrior (the Hom. sense of ἀγαθός), be content with that, and do not attempt to outdo me in cunning too.”

132. νόφ is here instrumental rather than locative; lit. “by thought” as opposed to brute force. Cf. Soph. El. 56 λόγῳ κλέπτοντες; and Ξ 217 πάρφασις, ἢ τ’ ἐκλεψε νόον πύκα περ φρονέωντων; and for παρελεύσεαι, ν 291 κερδαλέος κ’ εἶη καὶ ἐπικλοπος, δε σε παρέλθοι, ε 104 παρῆλθεῖν Διὸς νόον. So Theog. 1185, δὸλῳ παρελεύσεαι.

133. Three ways of translating this line have been proposed. (a) “Wouldest thou, while thou thyself keepest thy prize, have me for my part sit idle with empty hands?” (b) “Wouldest thou, in order that thou mayest keep,” etc. (c) “Dost thou wish that thou shouldest keep thy prize, but that I should sit,” etc. In favour of the construction of ἐθέλει with ὅφρα instead of the infin. in (c) Ε 690 is quoted, λελυμένος ὅφρα τάχιστα ὥσαιτ’ Ἀργείους, and so Δ 465; but in neither of these passages is it necessary to join ὅφρα with the participle. Cf. also Ζ 361, θυμὸς ἐπέσσονται ὅφρα. In Π 653 ὅφρα with the opt. seems to be exegetical of εἶναι: but that single passage does not justify our assuming so harsh a construction here. It is not so easy to decide between (a) and (b); either gives a good sense, (a) referring to the distance of time at which the recompense is to be made (128), (b) Achilles’ refusal to accord the restitution at once. But

(b) is preferable, because ὅφρα when it stands alone is commonly a final particle; in the sense of ὥς it is regularly followed by τόφρα (not always, ν. Ψ 47, Δ 346; H. G. § 287). The αὐτὰρ is not of course logical, but the interposition of an adversative particle to accent the contrast between the two persons is a perfectly natural anacoluthon. A very similar instance is Γ 290, εἰ δ’ ἂν . . . αὐτὰρ ἐγώ. Ar. athetized the two lines on subjective and insufficient grounds.

136. It seems natural to take ὅπως ἀντ. ἔσται in the sense “be sure that the recompense is adequate”; but this construction, though found in Herod. and Attic, is not Homeric; and the clause ἄρσαντες κατὰ θυμόν should come in the apodosis rather than the protasis. It is therefore best to suppose an apomiosis, “If they will give me a prize, suited to my mind, such that the recompense is equal—good!” This is not uncommon when two mutually exclusive suppositions are made on only one of which any emphasis is laid.

137. There is some doubt as to the punctuation here, some putting a colon after ἔλωμαι, but this makes the repetition of the participles ἰὼν . . . ἑλῶν very awkward. That given in the text is unobjectionable. 139 was rejected by Ar. as superfluous and εὐήθης. This athetesis is accepted by those who would banish κε with the fut. ind. from the text of Homer; the grounds given by Ar. are not in themselves convincing, but the omission of the line would certainly be no loss. So also Bentley, Bekker, Heyne, Köchly.

140. μεταφρασόμεσθα, i.e. we will postpone the consideration of this for the present.

144. ἀρχὸς is predicate: let one, a member of the council, be in command. For those who had the right to be summoned to the royal βουλή see B 404.

146. ἐκπαγλος is not entirely a word of blame, cf. Σ 170. It is perhaps for ἐκ-πᾶλ-ος (root πᾶλ-), meaning "vehement," "violent."

149. ἐπιειμένε, cf. ι 214, μεγάλῃν ἐπιειμένον ὥκετ'· γ 205, δύναμιν περιθεῖναι, to clothe as with armour. κερδαλεόφρον, greedy, or perhaps crafty; cf. Z 153, Σίσυφος, ὃς κέρδιστος γένετ' ἀνδρῶν.

150. πείθεται, a subjunctive expressing expectation; cf. H. G. § 277.

151. ὁδόν, whether military or diplomatic. ἱφί, v. Γ 375.

157. σκίοντα MSS., σκιδόντα (casting long shadows) Ar. The epithet is very expressive of the importance of shade in a sunburnt land.

158. χαίρης, subj., because the purpose expressed by ἐσπόμεθα is still present, hence also the present participle ἀρνύμενοι follows. τιμὴν, recompense. The heroic point of honour is not abstract; it requires to be realized in the shape of ransom or material recompense. The present ἀρνύμενοι implies "trying to win."

163. ὅππότε is here "whenever," and Τρώων πτολίεθρον = a town of the Trojan land, see note on 129. Homer never uses Τρ. πτολίεθρον of Troy, but Τρώων πόλις or Ἰλίου πτολίεθρον. Indeed the expression οὐ ποτε ἔχω cannot possibly mean οὐχ ἔξω, and 166 ff. obviously refer to repeated experience in the past.

167. ὀλίγον τε φίλον τε, a proverbial expression; δόσις ὀλίγη τε φίλη τε, ζ' 208; Touchstone's "a poor thing, but mine own." φίλος here indeed is little removed from its original sense "own" (prob. for σφ-ῶς, pron. stem σνα of δς, σνις, etc.; v. on 393).

168. ἐπεὶ κε κάμω, so Ar.: MSS. ἐπὶ κέ κάμω. Perhaps ἐπεὶ κεκάμω is best (see H. G. § 296), though it is strange that this reduplicated form should occur only in passages where the first syllable may be the particle.

170. σ', i.e. σοι; this elision does not recur (except possibly Φ 122), but is sufficiently supported by μ' for μοι, which is found several times. Van Leeuwen (Mnemotagma, xiii. 2) has shown good reason for thinking that it was originally commoner, but has been expelled as against the rules of later prosody. The sense is, "I have no mind to δρᾶν wealth for you," like a slave set to draw water from a well for his master. The fut. ἀφύξω by aor. ἤφυσα is abnormal; it only occurs here, and perhaps should be ἀφύσσειν, or ἀφύσειν (ἀφυσσα, β 349).

173. μάλ᾽, ironical, "run away by all means"; cf. 85.

175. τιμήσουσι, perhaps τιμήσωσι, as the use of κε with the fut. indic. has been seriously called in doubt, and is not well attested except by lines of doubtful authenticity (v. 139). The fut. indic. and aor. subj. are often indistinguishable.

177 was athetized by Ar. here, as wrongly interpolated from E 891; πόλεμοι and μάχαι are no rebuke to a hero in the field.

179. νηυσὶ τε σῆς, a case in which it is impossible to restore the old form of the dat. plur. in -σι. But it is in these monosyllables that the short form seems first to have arisen.

182. The thought with which the sentence starts is, "As Apollo takes Chryseis from me, so will I take Briseis from you." But the second clause is broken up into two, correlated by μέν and δέ. A very similar sentence with a double antithesis will be found in Θ 268-272. (It might appear simpler, though losing the emphasis in ἐμέ, to take ὥς = since. But this causal use is found in Homer only when ὥς follows the principal verb of the sentence, and is thus equivalent to ὅτι οὕτως). κε in 184 indicates that ἄγω is contingent upon πέμψω, virtually meaning "and then I will bring." H. G. § 275, a.

187. ἶσον is an adverb, ἰσαγορησά μοι (Schol.), not an adj., as it would then rather be ἴσος. Cf. ἀντία δεσποίνης φάσθαι, v 377.

188. ἐν is here still an adverb, "within, his heart in his shaggy breast." λασίοισι, according to the Schol. A, because they cover the heart, ἐν ᾗ ἐστὶ τὸ πυρῶδες καὶ θερμὸν καὶ μακρὸν τῆς ψυχῆς . . . ἢ θέρμη γὰρ αἰτία τῆς ἐκφύσεως τῶν τριχῶν. Rather because abundant hair is generally held a sign of bodily strength. διάνδιχα μερμήριξεν—see note on Θ 167; (ὁ ἀβελός) ὅτι δύο ἐμερίμνησεν οὐκ ἐναντία ἀλλήλοις, ὅπερ ἐκλαβὼν (?) τις προσέθηκεν "ἦε χόλον παύσειεν"; and on 192, ὅτι ἐκλύεται τὰ τῆς ὀργῆς (the picture of passion is weakened) διὸ ἀθετεῖται—Ariston. These remarks are perfectly right; διάνδιχα μερμήριξεν means "he had 'half a mind,'" and does not require two alternatives expressed; and 192 entirely spoils the picture.

191. ὁ δὲ as often repeats the subject of the first clause: the contrast is with τοὺς μὲν.

197. στῆ, came up; this is the usual sense of the aor. ἔστην.

200. οἱ may refer to Athene—her eyes gleamed terrible; or to Achilles—terrible shone her eyes on him. Cf. T 17, which is in favour of the former view.

202. αὖτε, "again," an expression of impatience, implying "one vexation after another." Cf. 540.

203. ἴδῃ most MSS. with Ar.; ἴδῃς Zenod. The act. and middle voice of this verb appear to be used without distinction.

205. τάχα, "soon," never "perhaps" in Homer. For ἂν with subj. as a solemn threat see H. G. § 275 b.

206. γλαυκῶπις to Homer meant, no doubt, "bright-eyed"; but this is not inconsistent with the possibility of the word having originally meant "owl-faced," Athene having been no doubt identified with an owl-deity or totem, as Apollo with the mouse. According to Pausanias (i. 14, 5) the epithet was brought into connexion with the Libyan legend of Athene, and her marine origin from the Tritonian lake (cf. Glaukos, the marine deity); but this is doubtless of later origin.

211. ὡς ἔσεται περ is the object of ὀνειδισον, "cast in his teeth how it will be," what will follow, as Achilles proceeds to do. Cf. φ 212, σφῶν δ' ὡς ἔσεται περ ἀληθεῖν καταλέξω, and so τ 312, γ 255; and for the construction of ὀνειδίζειν B 255, ὀνειδίζειν στι . . . διδοῦσιν; cf. I 84, σ 380. ὀνειδίζειν occurs without an expressed object only in H 95.

213. παρέσσεται, shall be laid before thee. τρὶς τόσσα, cf. Ω 686.

216. σφωίτερον, because Athene speaks for Here as well as for herself. εἰρύσσασθαι, in the sense of observing, guarding, is not connected with the similar forms from root φερ-, Fερν-, meaning "to draw" (for which see Curtius, Et. no. 497 b). It is more probably from σερν-, related to Lat. servare, with which it very frequently agrees in sense. It happens that the two words approach very closely in use when applied to wounded warriors or bodies which are drawn away, or saved, from the enemy; but this is merely a coincidence. The F is present, with rare exceptions, when the sense "draw" is required, cf. line 190; in the sense "protect" it is often impossible, and never required (exc. in ι 194 = κ 444, apparently a mistaken alteration of ξ 260 = ρ 429). In the middle, in the non-thematic forms, with εἰ for the first syllable (ἐρυντο, etc.), and in those formed from εἰρύσμαι and ρύσμαι (for σρύσμαι), the sense "protect" is necessary or admissible. The active forms are all from φερν-, to draw. The ambiguous forms are chiefly those of the 1 aor. middle, and the perf. and plpf.

218. The τ' is called a "gnomic" τε. It may, however, be for ται (cf. 170); or possibly we should read ὅς τε for ὅς κε, in which case the repeated τε will simply mark the correlation of the two clauses, as often in gnomic lines; v. on 81, and H. G. § 332. The αὐτοῦ at the end, however, seems so weak as to raise a more serious doubt as to the authenticity of the line, which is in itself rather flat, and precisely of the sort which would be likely to be interpolated in the age of Hesiod or the "seven sages" (Döderlein conj. αὐ τοῦ).

221. βεβήκει, "the pf. βέβηκα expresses the attitude of walking, the step or stride; hence βεβήκει, 'was in act to go,' comes to mean 'started to go' (not 'had gone')." — Mr. Monro.

223. ἀταρτηροῖς, a word of doubtful origin; Hesych. ἀταρτῶται λυπαί, βλάπτει. Cf. β 243, Μέντορ ἀταρτηρεῖ.

225. For the dog as the type of shamelessness, cf. 159, and the curious compar. κύων.

226. Observe the distinction between πόλεμος, open battle in which the whole host (λαός) is engaged, and λόχος, the heroic “forlorn hope,” reserved for the élite (ἀριστής). As a test of courage the λόχος is vividly described in N 275-286.

228. κῆρ, cf. Γ 454, ἴσον γὰρ σφιν πᾶσιν ἀπῆχθεο κῆρ μέλαινα.

230. ἀποαιρεῖσθαι, so 275, but ἀφαίρεται, 182, etc. There is no plausible explanation of these occasional signs of an evanescent initial consonant (Curt. Et. p. 557).

231. δημοβόρος, devourer of the common stock. For δῆμος in this sense see on B 547, Σ 301. For the exclamatory nom. H. G. § 163. οὔτιδανοῖσι, men of naught; cf. 293-4, which explain the γάρ, “else,” in the next line. For the form compare ἡπεδανός by ἥπιος. For λωβήσαιο we should rather have expected the aor. indic.; cf. on E 311, Γ 223.

234. The σκῆπτρον does not belong to Achilles, but is that which is handed by the herald to the speaker as a sign that he is “in possession of the house.” See Σ 505, Ψ 566, β 37.

235. πρῶτα, “at the first,” i.e. once for all, just as in T 9; cf. A 6, Z 489, etc. So ubi primum, “as soon as ever.”

238. δικασπόλος, qui jus colit, see on 63; the σ, however, is unexplained, as compounds are not formed directly from the acc. θέμιστας εἰρύαται, guard (216) the traditions, which are deposited as a sacred mystery in the keeping of the kings. So in old Iceland and Ireland law was a tradition preserved entirely by the special knowledge of a few men; the plur. θέμιστες is used exactly in the sense of our “precedents.”

239. πρὸς Διός, like de par le Roi, by commission of Zeus. Cf. ξ 57, πρὸς γὰρ Διὸς εἰσιν ξεῖνοι, and I 99. Or we may take it with θέμιστας, laws given by Zeus. ὄρκος is here used in the primitive sense of the object sworn by.

242. ἐπὶ, because πίπτωσι is in sense a passive, as P 428; so also with φεύγω, πέρσχω, etc.

244. ὃ τ’, sc. ὃ τε = ὅτι τε. On the difficult question of the elision of ὅτι see H. G. § 269 ad fin.

246. The golden nails fastened the blade to the handle; cf. A 29, and a full explanation of the whole question in Helbig, H. E. pp. 238 ff.

249. The καὶ is very unusual as introducing a merely epexegetic sentence—in this case merely an expansion of what has already been said.

250. Nestor is represented as having lived through more than two generations, and still being a king in the third; i.e. between his 70th and 100th years, if with the Greeks we count three γενεαὶ to a century. In γ 245 he is said to have reigned over three generations, which seems to be an instance of the growth of the legendary into the miraculous. μερόπων, an epithet of which the real sense was in all probability forgotten in Homeric days, as it is used only in purely stereotyped connexion with ἄνθρωποι (exc. B 285, q.v.) We can only say with confidence that it does not mean “articulate,” μερίζοντες τὴν ὄψα, as in so ancient a word the F of ὄψα would not be neglected. The other derivations which have been proposed are quite problematical.

251. τράφεν ἡδὲ γέγοντο—for the δοτερον πρότερον cf. μ 134, θρέψασα τεκούσά τε μήτηρ, and elsewhere. ἐφθίατο is probably plpf., but it might be aor.

252. ἡγάθεος, an epithet, like ῥάθεος, applied only to places; no doubt both mean “divine,” as they are only applied to localities connected with particular gods. We should perhaps read ἀγάθεος (from ἀγαν), the first syllable being lengthened metrically. ἡγ. is used of Pytho (θ 80), Lemnos (B 722), and Νυσήιον (Z 133). It has been thought that it is another form of ἀγαθός, which is, however, never applied to localities.

257. For the construction cf. λ 505, Πηληῖος ἀμύμονος οὐτι πέπυσμαι; lit. “if they were to hear all this about you fighting.” πυθέσθαι τινος for περὶ τινος, as O 224, etc.; cf. εἰπεῖν τινος, λ 174: ὥς γινῶ χωμέναιο, Δ 357; cf. H. G. § 151 d.

258. Construe περίεστε μὲν βουλήν Δαναῶν, περίεστε δὲ μάχεσθαι; cf. περίειμι γυναικῶν, τ 326. For the co-ordination of substantive and infin., O 642 ἀμείνων παντοίας ἀρετὰς, ἡμὲν πόδας ἡδὲ μάχεσθαι. The edition called the πολύστιχος, of which we know nothing, read βουλῇ.

260. ὑμῖν, so Zenod., and a few MSS.: Ar. A D read ἡμῖν, thus saving Nestor's politeness at the cost of his point. Ar.'s objection to Zenod. reading is ἐφύβριστος ὁ λόγος; in other words, he wished to import into heroic language the conventional mock-modesty of the Alexandrian Court. The whole meaning of Nestor's speech is that he himself is the peer of better men than those he is advising (v. Cobet, M. C. p. 229).

262. Cf. § 201, οὐκ ἔσθ' οὗτος ἀνὴρ διερὸς βροτῶς οὐδὲ γένηται. The subjunctive is an emphatic future, see H. G.
 § 276, α.

263. οἶον Πειρίθοον, accus. by attraction to the case of τοίους, for οἶος ἦν Πειρίθοος. The names are those of the chiefs of the Lapithai.

265. This line is quoted by Pausanias (X 29, 4), and is found added by later hands in a few MSS.; it is no doubt the interpolation of a patriotic Athenian, from the pseudo-Hesiodic "Shield of Herakles," 182. Theseus is mentioned again only in λ 322, 631, both doubtful passages; the latter indeed is expressly said by tradition to be an interpolation of Peisistratos—in this case a mere personification of Athenian patriotism.

268. The fight of the Centaurs and Lapithai is mentioned at some length in φ 295-304, and is alluded to in B 743, where the word φῆρες is again used. It is no doubt an Aeolic form for θῆρες, "wild men." There is no allusion in Homer to the mixed bodies of the later legend, and it is very probable that he conceived them as purely human beings; the myth may very likely refer to ancient struggles with a primitive race of autochthones. The last half of the compound ὄρεσκόφιοι is possibly connected with κοῖ-ρος (κείμεναι), and means "couch-ing in the mountains"; or else from κῶς or κόος = a cave (Hesych.); cf.

 ι 155, αἶγας ὄρεσκόφους. In that case we should read ὄρεσκόφιος for -κόφ-ιος.

270. ἀπῆς is generally derived from ἀπό as = "distant"; but there is hardly a Greek analogy for such a formation.
 It is used by Aesch., Soph., and others, as a name of Peloponnesos (ἀπία γῆ), and may be the same here in spite of the difference of quantity. For a suggested etymology see Curtius, Et. p. 469.

271. κατ' ἔμ' αὐτόν, "for my own hand," as we say; as a champion acting independently. Cf. in a slightly different sense κατὰ σφέας μαχέονται, B 366.

272. βροτοὶ ἐπιχθόνιοι together form the predicate.

275. ἀποαίρεο; for this syncopated form (for -πέο) cf. H. G. § 5 (and Fritzsche in Curt. Stud. vi. 128); so Ω 202, β 202, etc.

277. Aristarchus read Πηλεΐδῃ θελ', or, as we should write it, Πηλεΐδῃ θελ', on the ground that ἐθέλειν is the only Homeric form. But it is better to admit the possibility of a single appearance of a form so common in later Greek than to have recourse to an unparalleled synizesis, rendered the harsher by the slight pause
 after Πηλεΐδῃ. (See H. G. § 378.)

278. σὺχ ὁμολίης = "very different" by litotes; cf. E 441; non simili poena, Aen. 1, 136. It has been objected, with force, to this line and the next that they σκηπτούχος βασιλεύς, φ τε Ζεὺς κύδος ἔδωκεν.

 εἰ δέ σὺ καρτερός ἐσσι, θεὰ δέ σε γέλνατο μήτηρ, 280
 ἀλλ' ὅδε φέρτερός ἐστιν, ἐπεὶ πλεόνεσσιν ἀνάσσει.
 Ἀτρεΐδῃ, σὺ δὲ παῦε τεὸν μένος· αὐτὰρ ἐγὼ γε λίσσομ' Ἀχιλλῇ μεθέμεν χόλον, δς μέγα πᾶσιν ἔρκος Ἀχαιοῖσιν πέλεται πολέμοιο κακοῖο."

τὸν δ' ἀπαμειβόμενος προσέφη κρείων Ἀγαμέμνων· 285
 "ναὶ δὴ ταῦτά γε πάντα, γέρον, κατὰ μοῖραν ἔειπες.
 ἀλλ' ὅδ' ἀνὴρ ἐθέλει περὶ πάντων ἔμμεναι ἄλλον, πάντων μὲν κρατέειν ἐθέλει, πάντεσσι δ' ἀνάσσειν, πᾶσι δὲ σημαίνειν, ἃ τιν' οὐ πείσεσθαι ὀλώ.
 εἰ δέ μιν αἰχμητὴν ἔθεσαν θεοὶ αἰὲν ἔόντες, 290 τούνεκά οἱ προθέουσιν ὄνειδεα μυθήσασθαι ;"

are a pointless generality here, as Achilles is just as much a σκηπτούχος βασιλεύς as Agamemnon; the real ground for his yielding is given by 281.

280. The antithesis of καρτερός and φέρτερος ("in greater place") is the same as in 178, 186. The similarity of the terminations has its effect, though they are of course different in origin and meaning as well as accent.

282-4. The connexion of thought in these three lines is not very clear, and has given rise to suspicions of interpolation, which do not seem to me justifiable. The reiterated entreaty, the almost pathetic appeal to personal influence, is entirely in accordance with Nestor's character, human nature, and the necessities of the situation, which is not one where we need demand strict logical consistency. Nestor, after appealing equally to both, ends with an especial prayer to Agamemnon, who is obviously the offending party. αὐτὰρ ἐγὼ γε, "Nay, it is I, Nestor, who ask it." There is no antithesis with σὺ δέ, which is merely the common use of the pronoun after a vocative; αὐτὰρ is not adversative except in so far as it marks the transition to a new line of remonstrance.

283. Ἀχιλλῇ may be taken with χόλον (thine anger with Achilles), or better, on account of the order of the words, with μεθέμεν as a sort of "dat. commodi," "relax in favour of Achilles." Cf. μέθην χαλεποῖο χόλοιο Τηλεμάχῳ, φ 377. μέγα is perhaps an adverb, such as continually precedes πάντες; cf. 78, μέγα πάντων Ἀργείων κρατεῖ, and εὖ πάντα, μάλα πάντα, ἅμα πάντα, often.

287-9. The tautological repetitions of these three lines are very suitable to unreasoning fury; they have to do duty for arguments.

289. σημαίνειν with dat. = to give orders, as B 805. τινα, "one," a general expression in form, though Agamemnon is of course thinking of himself. Nägelsbach compares Soph. Ant. 751, ἡδ' οὖν θανέεται καὶ θανοῦσ' ὀλεῖ τινα (sc. ἐμέ).

291. προθέουσιν—(ἡ διπλῇ) ὅτι συνήθως ἐαυτῷ προθέουσι τὰ ὄνειδα, i.e. the plural verb with the neuter plural is in accordance with the poet's practice. We are not told how Ar. explained this difficult expression. Mr. Monro compares, for the "half personified" ὄνειδεα, Herod. vii. 160, ὄνειδεα κατιόντα ἀνθρώπῳ φιλέει ἐπαράγειν τὸν θυμὸν (though the other passage which he quotes from i. 112 seems to weaken the relevancy of this); and for the use of προθέω, ω 319, ἀνὰ ῥίνας . . . δριμύ μένος προθύψε (where μένος is rather a physical conception than a personification, cf. μένος πνεύοντες). He translates "'therefore do his revilings dash forward to be spoken?' i.e. 'is that a reason for this outburst of abuse?'" The extreme harshness of this metaphor has led most recent editors to regard προθέουσι as another form for προτιθέασιν, "do they set before him, i.e. put in his mouth, revilings for him to utter." This certainly gives a better sense, but no satisfactory analogy for the form of the verb has been given (there is a doubtful ἀνέθει in an Ionic inscription, C. I. 1195; v. Curtius, Verb. i. 213). Perhaps Bekker's suggestion, προθέωσι, deserves more consideration τὸν δ' ἄρ' ὑποβλήδην ἡμείβετο δῖος Ἀχιλλεύς·

 " ἡ γάρ κεν δειλὸς τε καὶ οὐτιδανὸς καλεόμην, εἰ δὴ σοὶ πᾶν ἔργον ὑπέλθομαι, ὅττι κεν εἴπῃς·
 295 ἄλλοισιν δὴ ταύτ' ἐπιτέλλεο, μὴ γὰρ ἐμοὶ γε [σήμαιν'· οὐ γὰρ ἐγὼ γ' ἔτι σοι πείσεσθαι ὀλώ.]
 ἄλλο δέ τοι ἐρέω, σὺ δ' ἐνὶ φρεσὶ βάλλεο σῆσιν· χερσὶ μὲν οὗ τοι ἐγὼ γε μαχήσομαι εἵνεκα κούρης οὔτε σοὶ οὔτε τῷ ἄλλῳ, ἐπεὶ μ' ἀφέλεσθέ γε δόντες· αἰψά τοι αἶμα κελαινὸν ἐρώσει περὶ δουρὶ."

 ὥς τῷ γ' ἀντιβίοισι μαχησαμένῳ ἐπέεσσιν ἀνστήτην, λῦσαν δ' ἀγορὴν παρὰ νηυσὶν Ἀχαιῶν.
 305 Πηλεΐδης μὲν ἐπὶ κλισίας καὶ νῆας εἶσας than it has received. The subjunctive might be explained as one of expectation: "are we to look for them to suggest words of insult." If this be not accepted, I see no choice but to regard the passage as hopelessly corrupted.

292. ὑποβλήδην, interrupting; cf. ὑββάλλειν, T 80: ὑποβαλὼν τὸν ἴδιον λόγον, Schol. B. Observe that Achilles begins without the usual formula of address.

294. ὑπέλθομαι, future rather than aor. subj., cf. 61. There is a slight change of attitude, as so often happens, after the opt. καλεόμην: what Achilles in 293 conceives only as a supposition he here vividly realizes as an admitted fact (this is of course the same, however we take ὑπέλθομαι).

295. (ἡ διπλή) ὅτι κουνὸν τὸ ἐπιτέλλεο καὶ ὁ γὰρ περισσός. οὕτως δὲ γίνεται περισσὸς ὁ ἐξῆς διὸ ἀθετεῖται, Ariston. (emended by Cobet). I.e. Ar. obelized 296 on the ground that σήμαινε had been added in order to supply a verb which was wrongly supposed to be required by the second clause of 295. This is a fertile source of interpolation of whole lines; e.g. Ω 558, Φ 570. For the use of μὴ without a finite verb see the instructive remarks of Lange, EI, p. 468, where for γάρ he compares αὖ γάρ in wishes.

298. χερσὶ μὲν, as though he meant to continue, "but by abstention from war I will." But in 300 the course of thought is changed, and τῶν ἄλλων is made the antithesis to κούρης.

299. ἀφέλεσθέ γε δόντες: Achilles recognizes that the γέρας is a free gift, not a matter of right, like the share of the spoil.

302. εἰ δ' ἄγε; here, as in its other uses, εἰ is what Lange calls an "adhibitive" particle as opposed to the "prohibitive" μή; it may be compared to our familiar "look here"; the speaker appropriates to himself the thought which he expresses—whether wish, supposition, or, as here, command, just as by μή he rejects it. Cf. I 46, εἰ δὲ φευγόντων. Any ellipse (as εἰ βοῦλει) is totally inadmissible.

303. ἐρώσει only in this line (= π 441) means "flow," and cannot be separated from root eru. The connexion of this with the usual sense, to hang back, and of both with the subst. έρωή, is very obscure.

306. εἶσας, a form found only in the fem. with cases of νηῦς, δοῦλις, δαῖς; in Od. only φρένας, and once besides B 765. In the last passage it clearly means ισας, but in the other cases this is by no means certain. δοῦλις πάντος ἔιση is explained as "having the rim always at an equal distance from the centre"; which seems a geometrical rather than a Homeric phrase for "round." So with δαῖς it cannot always mean "equal," but at most "well-proportioned"; see on H 320. Of ships it is commonly explained "equal on both sides," symmetrical; but here we should expect ἀμφί to be added. But no certain explanation has been given. Hesych. has εἶσας· δ' ἀγαθόν, but this may only be deduced from the considerations already given. Ahrens would derive it

from root Fix, for έισση, “seemly”; the form έισσος exists in Doric. Göbel and others refer it to Fiδ, “conspicuous, splendid”; but this sense can hardly be got from a root which means “to discern.” In this uncertainty it is perhaps best to adhere to the traditional connexion with έισος (FiσFos, Curt. Et. no. 569).

307. The story of Troy is regarded as familiar, even apart from the Ιλιάς; for Patroklos, like Agamemnon in l. 7, is first introduced by his patronymic alone.

314. Perhaps the Greeks had abstained from ablution during the plague in sign of mourning, and now typically threw off their sin, the restitution having been made. εἰς ἅλα, because θάλασσα κλύζει πάντα τὰνθρώπων κακὰ (Eur. I. T. 1193). λύματα, defilement, as in Ξ 170 (“Ἡρη”), ἀπὸ χροδὸς ἡμερόεντος λύματα πάντα κάθηνεν. Thus it is meant that they washed in the sea, not that they washed on land and threw the defiled water into the sea. Cf. καθάρματα in Aesch. Cho. 98. ἄνωγεν, an aor. form, as Ε 805. Some would write ἄνώγει in order that, as a pluperfect, it might come under the analogy of the common form ἄνωγα. But the aor. form is guaranteed by an interesting inscription in the Cyprian dialect (Collitz, p. 29). Cf. H. G. § 27.

317. περὶ καπνῶ, for περὶ meaning inside, cf. Χ 95, of a snake, ἐλισσόμενος περὶ χειρῇ, and Π 157 περὶ φρεσὶν ἄσπετος ἀλκή.

320. Both these names are legendary names of heralds generally; for the hereditary heralds of Sparta were called Talthybiadae, and Eurybates is the herald also of Odysseus, B 184.

325. ρίγιον, a comparative (cf. ρίγιωτα, Ε 873) formed directly from the substantive ρίγος, cf. κύντερος, ἐχθίω, κύδιωτα, κέρδιον.

331. ταρβήσαντε, the aor. seems to mean “struck with alarm” at his look (δεῖνός ἀνὴρ · τάχα κεν καὶ ἀναίτιον αἰτιώ-γρα, Patroklos says, A 654); while the pres. αἰδομένῳ implies their permanent respect. For the juxtaposition of the two ideas compare the favourite δεῖνός αἰδοῖός τε.

334. Διὸς ἄγγελοι, cf. Θ 517, κήρυκες δούλοιοι. The herald has no connexion with Hermes till post-Homeric times.

336. For the difference between σφῶι and σφῶιν (338) see on l. 8; H. G. § 103.

339. πρὸς, before the face of; the phrase occurs occasionally in later Greek, e.g.
 Xen. Anab. i. 6, 6, βουλευόμενος δ τι δεικνύει ἐστὶ καὶ πρὸς θεῶν καὶ πρὸς ἀνθρώπων. Hence the use in oaths and entreaties, πρὸς πατρός γινώσκειν, etc. It seems to be derived from the purely local sense, as in πρὸς ἄλδος, “in the direction of the sea”; πρὸς Διὸς εἰρύεται, 239, q.v.: cf. Z 456.

340. τοῦ βασιλῆος ἀπηνέος, him the king untoward. The order of the words shows that τοῦ is not the article. ἀπη-νής, lit. with averted face (cf. Skt. ana = mouth, face; pran = that which is under the mouth), of one who turns away from the suppliant; opposed to προσήης. εἴ ποτε δὴ αὐτε is the reading recommended by analogy; MSS. δ' αὐτε, but there is no place here for δέ. See note on 540, and H. G. § 350. αὐτε, hereafter, as in E 232, H 80, etc.

343. “To look before and after” is,
 as in Hamlet, the prerogative of reason, which argues from the past to the future.

344. ὅππως, here an adv. of manner, “how his men might fight,” clearly shewing the transition to the final use.
 μαχεοίατ' is a conj. (Barnes) for μαχέοντο of MSS., which is intolerable both because of the hiatus in this place, and because the form -οντο nowhere else occurs in Homer. Porson conj. μαχέωνται, Bek-ker μαχέονται (fut. indic., B 366); but the opt. is better, as removing the idea from the region of assertion (indic.) or expectation (subj.) to that of imagination.

350. ἐπὶ οἴνοπα, so MSS.; Ar. ἐπ' ἀπείρονα, perhaps on the ground that οἴνοπα is inconsistent with πολιῆς. But, if the epithets are to be pressed, it might be urged that there is very vivid truth in the contrast of the “purple deep” with the greenish gray of the shallow water near the shore, which is almost πολλὰ δὲ μητρὶ φίλῃ ἡρήσατο χεῖρας ὀρεγνύς·

τὴν δὲ βαρὺ στενάχων προσέφη πόδας ὠκὺς Ἀχιλλεύς· “οἶσθα· τί ἡ τοι ταῦτα ἰδυίῃ πάντ’ ἀγορεύω;

 τὴν δὲ διεπράθομέν τε καὶ ἥγομεν ἐνθάδε πάντα.”

always the meaning of δλς. Φ 59 is almost the only exception. Ameis thinks that the “infinite” sea intensifies the feeling of despair and desolation—a German rather than a Greek idea.

352. The γε and περ seem to indicate a change in the thought while it is being uttered. There is a contrast between ἔτεκες and μινυνθάδιον, as though Achilles meant, “it was you that gave me life, short though that life may be”; and μινυνθάδιον is then marked by περ as the emphatic word for what follows, the claim which he has upon Zeus. Or we may take ἔτεκες as involving the claim, the divinity of his mother being understood: “since you, a goddess, bore me, the gods should have dealt better by me.” Perhaps there is a mixture of both. In the first case περ must mean “very,” without involving the idea of “although.”

353. Here περ = at all events: “my life being short should at least be glorious.” ὄφελλεν = ὄφειλε, not to be confused with the quite distinct ὄφελω = augeo.

356. αὐτός, by his own arbitrary will, not in the name of justice. ἀπούρας = ἀπό-φρα-s, root var (Lat. vertere !), from ἀπ-αυράω, cf. ἀπο-φέρσειε, Φ 283, 329 (Curt. Et. no. 497, b.).

358. The πατήρ γέρον or ἄλιος γέρον is known to later mythology as Nereus, but is never named in Homer. (In δ Proteus also is called ἄλιος γέρον.) The nymphs are named Νηρηίδες only in a passage of doubtful authenticity, Σ 38-52.

361. κατέρεξε, stroked, so E 424, καρρέζουσα. This can hardly be connected with the ordinary sense of (φ)ρέζω; Autenrieth refers it to root reg of δ-ρέγ-ω.

366-392 were condemned by Ar. as superfluous, and contradictory of 365. The real objection is, of course, that they are not required, at least from 368, for the sake of the hearer. For Θήβη see Z 397, B 691.

It is difficult to say whether ἱερός as applied to cities retains the primitive meaning of strong (Skt. ishiras for isaras, answering to Gk. ἱερός). It seems to have this sense in II 407, ἱερός ἱχθύς; but all the derivatives, ἱερεῖς, ἱερήιον, etc., involve only the idea of “sacred.” Whatever, therefore, the origin of the epithet in these cases may have been, it can hardly have suggested the primitive meaning in Epic times; the secondary sense probably seemed natural from the fact that every town was under the patronage of some god—a relic no doubt of the feeling that such settlements were a departure from the normal pastoral life, and required a special sanction to make them possible.

367. ἥγομεν is properly used of living things; here, in spite of the neuter πάντα, Achilles is thinking mainly of the captives.

383. ἐπασσύτεροι, the Alexandrian derivation from ἀγχι is no doubt correct: it means "close upon one another"; cf. ἀσπαστέρω as compar., ρ 572, τ 506. The v is called Aeolic.

385. ἑκάτοιο, a short and almost familiar form (Kosenamen) for ἑκατηβόλος. Fick has shown that this method of shortening is one which has very largely prevailed in the formation of Greek proper names.

388. The rhythm—a single word of two spondees filling the first foot—is almost unique in Homer, and seems to give the effect of weighty displeasure.

393. εἰοῖο, so four MSS., with Zenod:

Ar. and most MSS. give ἔηος. This form is supposed to come from ἑός or ἥος, "brave"; Ar. denying that ἑός could be used of any person but the third. Brugman, however, has shewn (Ein Problem der Hom. Textkritik) that the pronominal stem sva was originally applicable to all persons and numbers, the adjectival form meaning no more than "own"—in this case "thine own." That this was the original reading here and in a number of similar cases seems almost certain, from the fact that we never find ἔηος, but always εἰοῖο, in those lines where the reference is to the third person; which would be a curious coincidence if ἔηος was the original word, as it is obviously equally applicable in all cases. It is also certain that the Alexandrine poets (Ap. Rhodius, etc.)

found various forms of the stem sva applied to other persons than the third, as they continually use them so in their imitative poetry. Brugman thinks that ἔηος was introduced by Ar. from the false analogy of ξ 505, ο 450, where it means "a lord"; from ἐεύς=ἑεύς (Lat. erus for erus!) (See for the opposite view, H. G. pp. 174-5. The passages where "ἔηος is found for εὐόε, meaning his own" there quoted—Ξ 11, Σ 71, 138—must be an oversight; in the first case ἔηος is not, according to La Roche's Apparatus criticus, found in a single MS.; in the other two it is given only by a small minority of the worst).

396. σεο must go with ἄκουσα. πατὴρ = my father's (Peleus'). Zenod. athetized 396-406, probably on the ground that it was superfluous for Achilles to tell his mother what she had done. But here of course the enlightenment of the reader is sufficient justification.

400. As the Scholiast remarks, these three divinities were the allies of the Greeks, which would be a strong argument for Thetis' prayer for help to the Trojans. For Παλλὰς Ἀθήνη Zenod. read Φοῖβος Ἀπολλών, which, as Ariston. remarks, ἀφαιρείται τοῖς πιθανόν, spoils the effectiveness of the appeal.

403. The other instances in Homer of double names in the language of men and gods are B 813, τὴν δ' ἦτοι ἄνδρες Βαττίαν κυκλήσκουσιν, ἀθάνατοι δὲ τε σῆμα πολυσκάρθμοιο Μυρίνης: Ξ 291, ὀρνίθι, ἦν τ' ἐν ὄρεσσιν χαλκίδα κυκλήσκουσι θεοί, ἄνδρες δὲ κύμνδιν: Τ 74, Ξάνθον μὲν καλέουσι θεοί, ἄνδρες δὲ Σκάμανδρον. Cf. κ 305, μῶλυ δὲ μιν καλέουσι θεοί: μ 61, Πλαγκτὰς δ' ἦ τοι τὰς γε θεοὶ μάκαρες καλέουσιν. The natural supposition would be that the "divine" words are archaic survivals, perhaps from an older race. It is sometimes said that the divine name has usually a clearer meaning than the human, which might seem to overthrow such a supposition. But this is only the case with the χαλκίς and κύμνδιν, and possibly Ξάνθος and Σκάμανδρος, which however look like different renderings of the same foreign word. μῶλυ is not a Greek form, nor is the theory borne out by isolated instances elsewhere, e.g. Diog. Laert. i. 11, 6, ἔλεγεν (ὁ Φερεκίδης) ὅτι οἱ θεοὶ τὴν τράπεζαν θυμῶν καλοῦσιν. Again the Pelasgian Hermes was called Ἴμβρος; compare with this the statement of Steph. Byzant., Ἑρμοῦ, ὃν Ἴμβρον λέγουσι μάκαρες. Both Βριάρεως and Αἰγαίων may be equally referred to Greek roots (βρι of βριαρός, βριθύς, and aiyis, cf. Αἰγαίων πελαγος). The father of Briareus was, according to the legend, Poseidon, who himself was sometimes called Αἰγαίων or Αἰγαῖος. Zenod. read here ὁ γὰρ αὖτε βίη πολὺ φέρτατος ἦεν τῶν ὀπίσσοι (so Bentley, MS. φέρτατος ἀπάντων ὀπίσσοι) ναίουσ' ὑπὸ τάρταρον εὐρώεντα. The legend is one of a number referring to revolts against the Olympian gods, as of the Titans, Prometheus, etc. αὖτε, "again"; as Poseidon, in union with the other gods, was stronger than Zeus, so his son again was stronger than he. For βίη Ar. read βίην.

405. γαίων occurs only in this phrase, E 906 of Ares, Θ 51 and Α 81 of Zeus. The line in E was rejected by Ar. on the ground that Ares could hardly be said to "rejoice in his glory" immediately after his ignominious defeat by a mortal.

τὸν καὶ ὑπέδεισαν μάκαρες θεοὶ οὐδέ τ' ἔδησαν.
 τῶν νῦν μιν μνήσασα παρέξο καὶ λαβὲ γούνων, γνῶ δὲ καὶ Ἀτρεΐδης εὐρὺ κρείων Ἀγαμέμνων ἦν ἄτην, ὃ τ' ἄριστον Ἀχαιῶν οὐδὲν ἔτισεν."

 τὸν δ' ἡμείβετ' ἔπειτα Θέτις κατὰ δάκρυ χέουσα·
 "ὦ μοι, τέκνον ἐμόν, τί νύ σ' ἔτρεφον αἰνὰ τεκούσα; αἶθ' ὄφελες παρὰ νηυσὶν ἀδάκρυτος καὶ ἀπῆμυν 415
 ἦσθαι, ἐπεὶ νύ τοι αἶσα μίνυνθά περ, οὐ τι μάλα δὴν· νῦν δ' ἅμα τ' ὠκύμορος καὶ οἰζυρὸς περὶ πάντων ἀλλὰ σὺ μὲν νῦν νηυσὶ παρήμενος ὠκυπόροισιν μήνι' Ἀχαιοῖσιν, πολέμου δ' ἀποπαύεο πάμπαν·

 Ζεὺς γὰρ ἐς Ὠκεανὸν μετ' ἀμύμονας Αἰθιοπίας

But Hentze suggests that κύδος may refer rather to the outward splendour of a divinity (cf. κυδαίνω, E 448), so that the phrase means "brilliant with splendour."

406. οὐδέ τ' ἔδησαν, perhaps for οὐδέ F ἔδησαν. For the loss of F = ε, him, cf. O 154.

409. ἀμφ' ἄλα, round the bay, where the ships were drawn up. Ἐλσαι, from εἰλω, Curt. Et. no. 660. κατὰ, as Φ 225, Τρώας ἔλσαι κατὰ ἄστυ, "in the region of" the sterns, which were drawn up towards the land.

410. ἐπαύρωνται is generally taken to be ironical, "that they may have profit of their king." Buttman however shows (Lexil. s.v.) that it is a neutral word, not necessarily implying profit, but meaning rather "that they may have experience of their king?"—may get what they shall get. The Attic ἐπαυρεῖν means simply "to reach, attain."

412. The Homeric idea of ἄτη is best explained by Agamemnon himself in T 85-114. Nauck would restore the old form ἄ(F)ἄτη to Homer throughout (cf. Pind. αὔατη); but this is impossible in T 88, O 28; and the contracted forms of the verb ἄσαστο T 95, ἄσε λ 61, are opposed to it. ἔ τ' = ὅτι τε, see H. G. § 269 (3).

414. αἰνέ, adv., "cursed in my child-

416. The omission of the substantive verb with an adverb is perhaps unique. For the use of adverbs with εἰμι see Z 131 δὴν ἦν, H 424 διαγινῶναι χαλεπῶς ἦν, I 551 Κουρήτεσι κακῶς ἦν, and cf. Δ 466, μίνυνθα δέ οἱ γένεθ' ὀρμή.

418. κακῇ αἴσῃ must have the same sense as αἶσα above, and therefore mean "to an evil fate"; cf. X 477 ἰὴ ἄρα γεινόμεθ' αἴσῃ, H 218 προκαλέσσατο χάρμη, and perhaps II 203 χόλῳ ἄρα σ' ἔτρεφε μήτηρ. αἶσα is one of the Homeric words which the Cyprian inscriptions have shown us yet alive in the primitive sense of measure; τῷ Διὶ τῷ Φοῖβῳ αἶσα ἐτι γ' ἔχες (Collitz, no. 78). τῷ, not τῶ, is the reading of A in all passages where it means "therefore"; and with this grammatical tradition agrees. It seems to be a genuine relic of the old instrumental; compare πῶ with πῶς, and perhaps οὕτω with οὕτως.

423. For the theories which have been founded on the absence of the gods here as compared with 222, see the Introduction. For the journey of the gods to the Aethiopians, compare α 22-26, where Poseidon alone is entertained by them. They dwell on the extreme limits of the world, on the stream of Ocean.

424. κατὰ Ar., μετὰ MSS. κατὰ means "in the matter of a banquet," cf. H. G. § 212 (3); μετὰ would be "to look for" a banquet, which is a somewhat undignified expression as used of a god. For ἔποντο Ar. read ἔπονται, apparently meaning "are following him to day." But ἔπεσθαι in Greek always means "to accompany," or some immediately related notion. It never means "to follow" at an interval.

430. On the question of the genuineness of this episode (to 489) see Introduction. βίη ἀέκοντος seems to be a pleonastic expression, "in spite of him unwilling." We cannot construe ἀέκοντος with ἀπηύρων, as verbs of robbing take a double acc.

432. For ἐντὸς Ar. read ἐγγύς, but this is not necessary, as ὄρμον in 435 is the mooring-place inside the harbour, and is not identical with λιμὴν, as he probably considered.

433. στεῖλαντο, the mid. may mean "furled their sails," but in this sense it occurs only here. στεῖλάν τε has been conjectured.

434. The ἰστοδόκη was a crutch, a forked piece of wood at the stern of the ship, into which the mast was lowered by slackening the forestays. See the diagram and Excursus in Merry and Riddle's Odyssey, pp. 541-3.

435. προέρεσαν Ar., with three old editions (ἢ Ἀργολικὴ καὶ ἢ Σιωπηλικὴ καὶ ἢ Σωσιγένης); MSS. προέρυσσαν, which is clearly wrong.

436. The ἐναὶ are heavy stones with hawsers thrown out to moor the bows of the ship, while the stern is secured by the stern ropes (πρυμνήσια) to moorings on shore, probably to a stone with a hole set up for the purpose (τρητὸς λίθος, p. 77).

438. This is the only case in Homer where the F of Ἐκηβόλος is neglected.

449. χερνύψαντο, a ἄπαξ λεγόμενον which is unique in form among Greek compounds. οὐλοχύτας, barley grains which were to be sprinkled upon the victim's head (see 458), so οὐλαί, γ 441. They appear to have been merely bruised—a relic, such as often appears in ritual, of a forgotten time before grinding was invented. The intention seems merely to have been to make the feast more savoury to the gods; just as barley is sprinkled over the ox which is being cooked in Σ 560. ἀνέλοντο, "took up in their hands from the basket." Compare the whole description of the sacrifice in γ 430-463.

453. ἡμὲν . . . ἦδ', here "as . . . so."

454. τίμησας, an "explicative" asyndeton, merely expanding the sense of ἔκλυες. Bekker would read τιμήσας, which however is not necessary. ἱψαιο, didst smite: Lat. ic-ere, cf. ἱπούμενος, crushed down, Aesch. P. V. 365. So ἱψεται, B 193.

459. ἀνέρυσαν, probably for ἀν-φέρυσαν by assimilation from ἀν-φέρ, "they lifted up," perhaps in sign of dedication to the heavenly gods. Most MSS. give αὐ έρυσαν, which cannot be right, as αὐ never = κατόπισθε.

460. μηρούς, the thigh bones with the flesh adhering. These are covered with a layer of fat doubled over them, and pieces of flesh from other parts of the body are laid upon them (ὠμοθετεῖν, cf. ξ 427) in order to symbolise an offering of the whole animal. μῆρα in 464 seems to be identical with μηρούς, but, like the commoner μηρία, is only used in the sacrificial sense: so B 427, μ 364, γ 179, ν 26.

462-3. Cf. γ 459, where the lines are certainly more appropriate, as the νέοι there are Nestor's sons, who help him with the sacrifice. Here the idea of young men is not in place. The πεμπώβολα are very ancient implements of ritual; an illustration will be found in Helbig, Hom. Epos, pp. 257-8. Eustathius says that the use of five prongs was peculiar to Kyme in Aeolis, other Greeks using only the three-pronged form. The use of such a fork is more obvious where the sacrifice was boiled (as in 1 Sam. ii. 13) than where, as in the heroic ages, it was only roasted.

464. For μῆρα there is a curious old variant—said to have been approved by Ar.—μῆρε, a supposed metaplastic form for μήρω. The "tasting" of the entrails at this stage seems to have been symbolical—unless it means simply that they were more rapidly cooked than the other parts, and thus formed a "first course."

465. ἀμφί seems to be an adverb; they pierced them with spits on both sides, i.e. so as to make the spit project on both sides.

468. For εἰσης see on 306.

470. ἐπεστέψαντο here retains the original meaning of the root, "to fill full"; cf. Lat. stipo, our stuff: Curt. Et. no. 224. It was thus a misinterpretation which led to Virgil's socii cratera coronant, and the actual crowning of the goblet with flowers.

471. ἐπαρξέσθαι denotes the libation of a few drops taken by a ladle from the mixing bowl, κρητήρ, and poured into the drinking cups (δεπάεσσιν being a locative dat.) ἀρξέσθαι is particularly used of ritual acts of all sorts, and ἐπὶ implies "going round" the guests. They first poured out these drops to the gods and then had their cups filled to drink. (See Buttmann, Lexil. p. 169, and Riddle and Merry on γ 340.) The difficulty here is that the libation is mentioned when the drinking is ended (πόσιος, 469), contrary to the rule. The whole passage from 450 to 486 entirely consists of lines appearing elsewhere, except 456, 472, 474, 478; and it seems to be betrayed by this oversight as an unskillfully made cento—unless, with Düntzer, it be preferred to reject 469-474 altogether. Bekker rejects 473 only, and the two participles, with κούροι

Ἀχαιῶν interposed, are certainly awkward. In 472 πανημέριοι must = "all the rest of the day" in which the assembly and voyage to Chryse have already happened. For this use compare παννυχίη, β 434 (with 388).

473. παιήονα, a hymn of rejoicing, not necessarily to Apollo, see X 391. τὸ καλὸν ἀντὶ τοῦ καλῶς, Ariston., rightly.

474. ἑκάεργον, here apparently Aer-runcus, the "keeper afar" of pestilence; the opposite and complementary function to that of Ἐκηβόλος, and fitly mentioned now that his anger is appeased.

477. ἡριγένεια, "early-born"; according to Fick ἥρι is a locative, conn. with Goth. air = ear-ly, Zend ayar = day; whence ἀρ-ιστον, the early meal. See Curtius, Et. no. 613.

479. ἔκμενον, either from root ix, as (1) a wind that goes with the ship, secundus; or (2) a wind that has come to the sailors' prayer, "wel-come"; or perhaps better, with L. Meyer, from Skt. ik to wish (only here in Il.)

480. στήσαντο, like στελάντο, 433. Here we could equally read στήσαν τ'.

481. πρῆσεν: the root pra means to puff, spirit out, blow, and is used (1), as here, of air; (2) of fire, πυρί or πυρὶς being generally added in Homer; (3) of fluids, e.g. II 350 αἷμα . . . ἀνὰ στόμα πρῆσε χανών.

482. στεῖρην, the stem; the solid beam which had to take the shock when the vessel was beached. πορφύρεον, a word which seems to be properly used, as here, of the dark colour of disturbed waves: cf. πορφύρω (so La Roche).

483. διαπρήσσουσα here, with the addition of κέλευθον, shews the transition from the primary meaning "to pass over" (root πρ of περά-ω etc.) to that of "accomplishing."

486. ἔρματα, "shores," either large stones or beams of wood, set so as to keep the ship upright. The line seems to be from Hymn. Ap. ii. 329.

489. υἱός as an iambus, see P 575: MSS. (except two) Πηλέος; the synizesis is not found in similar cases, as the old form was Πηλέφος.

490. κυδιάνειραν, elsewhere an epithet of μάχη only; cf. I 441, ἀγορέων ἵνα τ' ἄνδρες ἀμπεπῆτες τελέθουσιν. These assemblies and battles must be taken as falling within the twelve days after the quarrel.

491. φίλον in this and similar phrases simply = his own, ἑόν; see on 167.

493. ἐκ τοιοῦ, sc. from the interview with Thetis. This vague reference becomes far more intelligible if we omit 430-489.

497. ἡερίῃ either = ἡύτ' ὁμήχλη (359), or perhaps better "in the early morning," conn. with ἡρ of ἡριγένεια (for ἄγερ, see 477).

498. It has been debated from old times whether εὐρύοπα is from Εὐρύς, voice, or from root ὄρ to see. The former would of course express the far-reaching voice of the thunder. In favour of this it may be said that the compounds of ὄρ make -ωπα, not -οπα, cf. ἐλικῶπις, εὐώπιδα, etc.; and there can be no doubt of the derivation from Εὐρύς in Pindar's Κρονίδαυ βαρύνταν στεροπῶν πρότανυ, P. vi. 24. The word is generally a nom. On the analogy of βαρύνταν we ought perhaps to read εὐρύοπαν for the accus. Otherwise we must assume a second nom. * εὐρύον.

500. αὐτοῖο, cf. αὐτοῦ in 47. For the suppliant's attitude cf. Θ, 371, γούνατ' ἔκυσσε καὶ ἔλλαβε χεῖρ γυνείου: in K 454 the touching of the chin only is mentioned. This act perhaps symbolises the last resource of the disarmed and fallen warrior, who can only clasp his enemy's legs to hamper him, and turn aside his face so that he cannot see to aim the final blow, until he has at least heard the prayer for mercy.

 ἢ δὲ καὶ αὐτὼς μ' αἰὲν ἐν ἀθανάτοισι θεοῖσιν νεικεῖ, καὶ τέ μέ φησι μάχῃ Τρώεσσιν ἀρήγειν.”

501. On the analogy of Θ 371 ἔλλαβε χειρὶ γυνέλου, it would seem that ἐπὶ is here an adverb, “taking him by the chin beneath.”

505. The μοι long in thesi can hardly be right. Nauck. conj. υἱά μοι τίμησον, Menrad τίμησόν σύ μοι υἱόν. For ἄλλων after the superlative cf. Soph. Ant. 100 κάλλιστον τῶν προτέρων φάος, and 1191 δυστυχέστατον κέλυσθον ἔργῳ τῶν παρελθουσῶν ὁδῶν. The gen. means “doomed to swiftest death as compared with all others”: it is ablative, and “expresses the point from which the higher (here the highest) degree of a quality is separated,” H. G. § 152.

506. ἔπλετο, “he was made before . . . but now in addition.”

510. ὀφέλλωσι τιμῇ, generally translated augeant eum honore, “exalt him with honour”; but Hentze suggests that τιμῇ is rather the fine paid; so that the words mean “make him rich with recompense.” This is a thoroughly Homeric idea, see note on 158. ὀφείλαν is not elsewhere used with a personal object.

512. ὥς . . . ὥς “as she had embraced him, so she clung to him.” Theokritos' ὥς ἴδον, ὥς ἐμάρνῃν, Virgil's Uti uidi ut perii, seem to rest on a misunderstanding.

513. ἐμπεφυυῖα, a hyperbolic expression for “clinging close,” as in ἐν δ' ἄρα οἱ φῶ χειρὶ, and so περιφύς, τ 416 προσφύς, μ 433.

515. δέος, no reason to fear (any superior court of appeal). Cf. M 246, σοὶ δ' οὐ δέος ἔστ' ἀπολέσθαι; and θ 563.

518. λοίγια ἔργα, an exclamation, “sad work,” as we say: it is hardly necessary to supply ἔσται if we read ὃ τε with Bekker; MSS. στε, which gives a rather weaker sense. See H. G. § 269, ad fin. ὡς λοίγι' ἔσσεσθαι occurs in φ 533, ψ 310. ἐχθοδοπήσαι, ἀπαξ εἰρημένον and of obscure origin. See Curtius, Et. p. 628. Ar. is said to have put a stop after ἐφήσεις, and read “Ἥρη for “Ἥρη (but Ludwig doubts this). In any case such an order of the words would not be Homeric.

520. καὶ αὐτὼς, even as it is: compare the use of καὶ ἄλλως, “even at the best of times.”

ἀλλὰ σὺ μὲν νῦν αὖτις ἀπόστιχε, μή τι νοήσῃ

522. μή τι αἰ Ἀριστάρχου καὶ αἰ Ἀλλαι σχεδὸν πᾶσαι διορθώσεις, Didym.; the κοινή, as distinct from the διορθώσεις, was μή σε, which is given by all our MSS.

525. ἐμέθεν γε, Zeus perhaps means that he alone is not required to swear; even Hera has to take an oath (Σ 271, O 36).

526. τέκμων, see note on H 30. ἐμὸν, anything of mine (or possibly any τέκμων of mine). This use is, however, very strange; ἐμοὶ would seem more natural.
 παλινάγρετον, from ἀγρέω, which is said to be the Aeolic form of αἰρέω. For the use of "take back" = revoke compare Δ 357, πάλιν δ' ὁ γε λάξτο μῦθον.

528. ἐπι-νεύσε go together in the sense of κατανεύω above (Schol. A mentions indeed a variant ἐπινεύσομαι in 524).
 κυανέησιν can mean only "dark"; cf.
 Ω 94, κάλυμμα . . . κύνειον, τοῦ δ' οὗ τι μελάντερον ἔπλετο ἔσθος. These lines are said by Strabo to have inspired Pheidias with the conception of his famous statue of Zeus at Olympia.

530. ἐλέλιξεν, "shook," not to be confounded with ἐλελιχθέντες, "rallied," which is merely an error for Φελιχθέντες (ἐλίσσω). The root in this case seems to be ley for rag, Skt. rēg, to shake, with reduplication and prothetic

ε. So also Θ 199, X 448. In P 278, N 558, either sense would suit.

532. ἄλτο, for the form cf. Curt. Vb.
 i. p. 181, where it is taken to be for ἀ(σ)αλτο, the first ἀ representing the augment. Possibly, however, we should read ἄλτο on the analogy of ἀλμενος.

533. Ζεὺς δέ, sc. βῆ, a curious case of zeugma.

534. ἐδέων, so best MSS.; some give ἐδρέων; the words seem to be used indifferently. So also 581.

536. μιν is to be taken with ἰδοῦσα and ὅτι with ἡγνολήσεν.

539. κερτομίοισι, sc. ἐπέεσσιν (so μείλιχτοις P 431, and often), literally "with cutting words," as the root seems to be kar-, to cut; cf. Lat. car-inare, to scold. Curt. Et. no. 58.

540. τίς δ' αὖ MSS., τίς δὲ αὖ, Bekker and others. The question is a doubtful one; on the one hand we frequently have questions introduced by δέ, e.g.
 O 244, Ἐκτορ . . . τίη δὲ σὺ, κ.τ.λ., answered in 247 by τίς δὲ σὺ ἐσσί, φέριστε
 (so Ω 387, and often): cf. X 381, Ἐκτορ, ἀνδρῶν που ἐφης. On the other hand δ' must, on account of its position, represent δὴ in H 24, τίπτε σὺ δ' αὖ μεμαυῖα. On the whole, therefore, it seems best to αἰεὶ τοι φίλον ἔστιν ἐμεῦ ἀπονόσφιν ἔοντα

retain the MS. reading, while admitting the probability that it represents δη αὖ (see H. G. § 350, 378). αὖ expresses vexation, cf. αὖτε in 202.

541. It is impossible to say whether ἀπὸ νόσφιν or ἀπονόσφιν is best; here the best MSS. give the second, but the authority of grammarians is in favour of the first (cf. B 233); they took ἀπὸ with ἔοντα. For the participle in the acc., though τοι has preceded, cf. H. G. § 240; ἔοντι would give the meaning “you like when you are apart from me to decide.”

542. δικαζέμεν, to give decisions, as Θ 431. κρυπτάδια goes with φρονέοντα.

543. πρόφρων, of free will, υἱότρο. It is always used as a predicate, never as an epithet. ἔπος, “a matter,” as when used with τελέσσαι, 108.

547. ἀκούεμεν, sc. “for any one to hear.” To translate “for thee to hear” would hardly make sense in connexion with what follows. ἔπειτα, as though εἰ τινα had preceded instead of the equivalent δν.

549. ἐθέλωμι is restored by conj. (Hermann's) for ἐθέλομαι of MSS. There are some traces in other passages of the adoption of similar forms by Ar.; e.g. Didymus on Θ 23, ἐθέλωμι, Ἀρίσταρχος ἐθέλωμι. On the significance of the form, and a list of instances in H., see Curt. Vb. i. 40. In the MSS. it has almost entirely been superseded by the familiar opt. in -οιμι. Both here and in Θ 23 the opt. is, however, defensible.

550. μετὰλλα, on this word see Curt. Et. no. 661. It is not to be connected with μέταλλον, which is probably not a pure Greek word at all; nor (as Buttmann) with μετ' ἄλλα, “to go after other things.”

553. καὶ λίην, most assuredly: Θ 358, etc.

558. ὥς τιμήσεις, so one (good) MS. only; vulg. τιμήσῃς . . . ὁλέσῃς. ὥς, lit. “how” you will do honour, expressing the content of the promise. It is also possible to take it as a final conjunction, with the subj., expressing the purpose of the βουλή Διός: “you assented in order that you may honour,” etc., the subj. being used because the event contemplated is still future.

561. δαμόνιος seems to mean properly one who is under the influence of a δαίμων or unfavourable divine intelligence; that is, one whose actions are either unaccountable or ill-omened. Hence it sometimes means "fool" (δαμόνιοι, μαινεσθε, σ 406), B 200, I 40, N 448, 810, δ 774; or indicates severe remonstrance, B 190, Γ 399, Δ 31, Z 326, 521, σ 15, τ 71, and here (this shade of meaning is hardly translatable; we say colloquially "I am indeed surprised at you"); or tender remonstrance, Z 407, 486, κ 472, ψ 166, 174, 264; in Ω 194, ξ 443, it perhaps expresses pity, "ill-starred." (This is Nägelsbach's explanation, H. T. p. 75). ὀλεαί, you are always fancying, supposing; in allusion to ὄλω in 558.

562. ἀπὸ θυμοῦ, far away from my good pleasure: cf. ἐκ θυμοῦ πείσσειν Ψ 595, ἀποθύμα Ξ 261. For ἀπό=far from, cf. I 353, 437.

564. τοῦτο, sc. that of which you accuse me. μῶλα, you may be sure it will be my good pleasure: cf. the same phrase in B 116; so Φ 83, Ω 46, δ 377, σ 19. μῶλα expresses an assurance founded on knowledge that the persons or circumstances concerned are such as to bring about a certain result.

567. ἄσπον ἰόνθ', ὅτι Ζηνόδοτος γράφει ἄσπον ἰόντε. οὐκ ἔστι δὲ, ἀλλ' ἀντὶ τοῦ ἰόντος. συγγχεί δὲ καὶ τὸ δυκόν.—Ariston. That is, Zenodotus took ἰόνθ' to be for ἰόντε in the sense of ἰόντες, agreeing with θεοί. His theory was that the dual and plural were interchangeable—a theory which has been held, partly on historical grounds, by some modern philologists, and is strongly, but not quite convincingly, supported by several passages in Homer: see E 487, Θ 74. Aristarchos opposed this view, and took ἰόνθ' here for ἰόντα (sc. ἐμέ, acc. after χραίσμωσιν): ἀντὶ τοῦ ἰόντος meaning that we should have expected a gen. absolute, "when I come near," as the construction χραίσμειν τι νῦν, "to ward one person off another," is not found elsewhere, though we have χραίσμειν τι νῦν τι (e.g. H 144), which is perhaps sufficient analogy. Bentley conj. ἄσπον ἰών, while Düntzer would eject the line altogether. ἀάπτους, Aristoph. ἀέπτους, which is perhaps to be preferred; it will stand for ἀ-σπ-ρους, "not to be dealt with or handled," i.e. irresistible. It is possible however that ἄπτω, to touch, was originally from the same root αι-κ as ἐπω (as I have endeavoured to shew elsewhere); so that either form would ultimately mean the same.

572. ἐπὶ ἥρα φέρων, doing kind service to his mother: a very ancient phrase, appearing in the Vedic vāra bhāra, lit. to bring the wishes. (So in a few other standing formulae: μένος ἥν=Ved. vasu manas; δωτήρες ἐδῶν=ādātāras vānuṣāt: κλέος ἀφόντων=granas akāhīlām). Ar. read ἐπίηρα as a neut. pl., καὶ ἐπεκράτησεν ἡ Ἀριστάρχου, καίτοι (leg. καίπερ) λόγον οὐκ ἔχουσα, Schol. A; Ξ 132 ἥρα φέροντες without ἐπὶ being decisive against him: cf. also φέρειν χάριν in the same sense, I 613, etc. Ἡρα is an acc. singular, root var to choose, desire.

575. κολφόν, din; cf. κολφῶν, B 212: conn. with κολαός, “the noisy” jackdaw. It is perhaps for κολοφός (cf. Hesych. κολοῦαν θορυβεῖν), in which case we should read κολωόν with a few MSS. and the grammarian Philoxenos; the ς subscribed may have been added to support the derivation from κολαός.

576. τὰ χερεῖονα, compare τὸ κρήγγον, τὰ κακά, 106-7, for the use of the article.

577. παράφημι, to advise; else only in aor. (mid.) to prevail upon.

579. σὺν of course goes with ταράξῃ, not with ἡμῖν.

581. It is not necessary to supply any apodosis after εἰ πέρ κ’ ἐθέλῃσι: it is a supposition made interjectionally, “only suppose he wished to drive us away!”

582. καθάπτεσθαι is used here in a neutral sense, “to address”; and so β 39, κ 70; but it more generally means “to attack, revile”; cf. γ 345.

583. Ἰλαος elsewhere has ἰ (I 635, T 178), but ἄ is according to analogy of words which have -eus in Attic.

584. ἀμφικύπελλον, double-handled. This interpretation, due to Aristarchos, is decisively supported by Helbig, H. E.

pp. 260-271. He derives it from κυπέλη, conn. with κῶπη, handle, as an Aeolic form (cf. Lat. carpiulus): hence an adj. κυπελ-ιος = κυπελλος. The explanation of Aristotle, followed by Buttmann and others, that it meant “a double cup,” i.e. a quasi-cylindrical cup divided in the middle by a horizontal partition, so that each end would serve either as a foot or a cup, he shows to be quite untenable. The two-handled type is the commonest of all forms of drinking cup from the earliest times—Hissarlik and Mykenai—till the latest.

590. ἀλεξέμεναι, to keep him off, apparently in defence of Hera; the allusion seems to be the same as in O 13-24. For another different legend of the fall of Hephaistos from heaven see Σ 395.

591. Cf. ρίπτασκαν τεταγῶν ἀπὸ βηλοῦ, O 23; for τε-ταγ-ών cf. Curt. Et. no. 230, b, where it is connected with Lat. ta(n)g-o (our “take”?)

593. Lemnos was sacred to Hephaistos on account of the volcano Mosychlos. The Σίπυριες are named as inhabitants of the island by Thuc. ii. 98, 1, Hellanikos fr. 112; they are called Pelasgian, and their name is derived from their piratical habits (σίντομαι).

596. παιδός, from her son; χαρὶ, with her hand (not "at her son's hand"; the dat. is used after δέξασθαι, O 87, etc., but only of persons, being a strict dat. ethicus). For the gen. cf. Ξ 203 δεξάμενοι 'Πείης, I 632, A 124, and particularly Ω 305, κύπελλον ἐδέξατο ἥ ἀλόχοιο.

597. ἐνδέξια, going from left to right of the company; see Merry on γ 340, and φ 141.

598. οἶνοχόαι (MSS. φύνοχόαι) is applied to nectar by a slight generalisation such as is common in all languages (cf. the sailor's "in Cape Town the tops of the houses are all copper-bottomed with lead").

599. Bentley's γῆλος for γέλως is no doubt right here, and similar forms should be restored in other passages, and so with ἔρος; but as we have no evidence of the date at which the corruption took place, I have adhered to the MSS. From this passage comes the phrase "Homeric laughter."

603. οὐ μὲν is equivalent to ἀλλ' οὐδέ of prose; so 154.

604. Cf. ω 60, μοῦσαι δ' ἐννέα πᾶσαι ἀμειβόμεναι ὅτι καλῇ, where, however, the mention of nine muses is one of many proofs of the later origin of ω. For ἀμειβόμεναι cf. Vergil's "amant alterna Camenae," Ec. iii. 59.

607. ἀμφιγυῖεις, a much disputed word, generally explained "ambidextrous," or utrinque validis artibus instructus, which overlooks the fact that there is nothing in the word to express validis: and the direct derivation from γυῖον is doubtful on account of the loss of the ι. The same objection applies to the old derivation from γυῖός, "lame of both feet." I have elsewhere argued that the word really means "with a crooked limb on each side" = κυλλοποδίων; from a noun γύη* = crook (cf. γύης in Lexx.).

611. καθεῖδω occurs only here in II. See note on B 2. It is quite possible, as Christ has suggested, that the Iliad was often recited in different portions, e.g. that a rhapsode may have wished to proceed from the end of A to the beginning of A, omitting all the intermediate books, which are not needed for the story; and a line such as this would naturally be added in order to wind up A. The interpolation will then probably include 609-10 (notice the F of Fón neglected); B 1 following quite naturally after 608.

ΙΛΙΑΔΟΣ Β.

B.

THE second book falls into two parts, as indicated by the Greek title. The "Catalogue" (484-877) is so distinct that the MSS. of the Iliad generally divide it from the rest of the book by a fresh rubric. Two of the better class, D and Townl., omit altogether from 494 to the end of the book.

i. The first part of the book is difficult to the critic on account of the obvious confusion of motives. It begins with an apparent contradiction of the end of A, for which see note on line 2. But a more serious question is that of the place of the dream in the plot. It seems to have nothing to do with the development of the story. The natural result of the assurance given by Zeus would be that Agamemnon should immediately attack the Trojans with high hopes, and be wofully disappointed. Nothing of the sort happens. He proceeds to test the feeling of the army by a ruse which could only be justified, poetically as well as practically, by success. This ruse is introduced by the description of the council (53-86), which is meagre in itself, chiefly made up of repetitions (21 lines out of 34), and leads to no result; the chiefs entirely fail to carry out the instructions which Agamemnon has given them, and the intervention of Athena is necessary in order to stop the flight. Indeed, but for the two lines 143 and 194, which are quite unnecessary to the context,

The explanation which seems best to avoid these difficulties is that the story of the dream belonged to the original form of the Iliad, in which A was followed immediately by B. We thus obtain a forcible sequence of events; after the delusive promise of Zeus the arming of Agamemnon is described in all its splendour, and is followed by his brilliant ἀριστεία in a way which heightens the contrast with the wounding of the heroes and the flight of the Greeks with which the book closes. But subsequently the Iliad was enlarged—perhaps by the original poet; and by a stroke of the highest art this point is chosen in order to give us a general view of the feelings and doings of the Achaian host. To this end Agamemnon calls an assembly in which, depressed by the retirement of Achilles, he seriously advises flight—as he does on another similar occasion in the beginning of Book ix.; he is only stopped by the intervention of Athene and the higher spirit of Odysseus, as by Diomedes in l 32 ff. With this supposition the wonderful scene from 87 to 483 forms a perfectly consistent whole. But when this was introduced, the "dream" was still left in its place in order to form an introduction to A if it were desired to recite that portion of the poem immediately after A. Subsequently, in order to make a sequence possible between the dream and the rest of Book II., and to bridge over the obvious inconsistency between the despair of Agamemnon and the promise of Zeus, the council-scene was interpolated, and the serious advice of Agamemnon turned into a mere fictitious attempt to sound the feeling of the army. The idea is certainly an ingenious one; it is suggested by the words of Odysseus in 193, which are really a device worthy of their author, to save the honour of Agamemnon and undo the effect of his unfortunate speech.

The interpolation probably begins with line 42, as it will be found that A joins on perfectly to B 41; while from 42 to 52 more than half is found in other parts of the poems.

ii. There is a singular unanimity among critics in rejecting the whole Catalogue as a later interpolation. The style is different from that of the rest of the poems, though this may chiefly be due to the difference of matter. The whole Catalogue looks as though it described the fleet sailing from Aulis; phrases like ἀγε νῆας and πῆες ἐστιχόμετο are hardly suitable to ships which have been for ten years drawn up on dry land. A large proportion of the leaders named never appear in the sequel, while others who do appear are omitted in the Catalogue (see for instance Φ 154).

That the Catalogue was not composed for its present place seems therefore certain. But it does not follow that it was of late origin—nothing convincing has been urged to show this. We know from the story of Solon and the Megarians that the Catalogue was considered a canonical work, a Domesday Book of Greece, at a very early age. It agrees with the poems in being pre-Dorian (excepting only the Rhodian legend, 653-670, q.v.); and moreover is, like them, from the standpoint of a dweller on the mainland. There seems therefore to be no valid reason for doubting that it, like the bulk of the Iliad and Odyssey, was composed in Achaian times, and carried with the emigrants to the coast of Asia Minor. The only difficulty is the legend mentioned by Thucydides (i. 12), that the Boeotians were driven from Arne in Thessaly, and settled in the country which was then called Kadmeis, but afterwards took its name from them, sixty years after the fall of Troy, and only twenty years before the Doric invasion. But the value of such a tradition is very small where a number of years is the vital point.

2. There is a real inconsistency between this line and A 611, which it has been proposed to avoid by taking ἔχε to mean “did not keep hold” all night long; i.e. he awoke after going to sleep. But ἔχε implies only the presence of sleep (cf. Ψ 815), and this pregnant sense cannot be read into it in the absence of fuller expression. It is better either to assume that A 611 is a moveable line (see the note there), or to admit such a small inconsistency as would hardly be noticed at a point which forms a natural break in the narrative. K 1-4 follows I 713 in precisely the same manner, but the contradiction there is hardly noticeable, and in any case proves nothing, in view of the doubts as to the position of K in the original poem. For ἦδυμος MSS. give νῆδυμος, a word which has never been satisfactorily explained, and no doubt arose, as Buttmann saw, from the adhesion of the ν which, in seven cases out of the twelve where it occurs, ends the preceding word; a phenomenon which may be paralleled in English, e.g. a nickname for an ekename (though the converse is commoner, e.g. an orange for a norange, etc.). ἦδυμος itself was in use as a poetical word in much later times; the Schol. quotes Simonides and Antimachos as employing it, and Hesiod, Epicharmos, and Alkman are attested by others. It is also in the Hymns, iii. 241, 449; xix. 16. Ar. read νῆδυμος, it may be presumed, because of the hiatus in II 454, μ 366, ν 79; of course he could not know that νῆδυμος began with ν. His authority should not prevail against that of the poets from Homeric times till the fifth century. There is no independent evidence for the form νῆδυμος, except Hymn iv. 171. For the form ἦδυμος by ἦδύς cf. κάλλιμος by καλός, and numerous cases of adjectives formed from other adjectives by secondary suffixes without apparent differences of meaning, φαιδιμύεις, θιγλύτερος, etc. etc.

4. τιμήσει, so all MSS. for the -σει' of the vulg. which Bekker retained, conjecturing όλέσαι for -η. (A, however, gives τιμήσει, and Schol. A B say τιμήσει εὐκτικόν.) The subj. is much less natural than the opt. in a purely narrative passage, the "historic present" being a form of speech not employed by Homer. Compare however II 650, where both moods occur side by side; a passage quite sufficient to justify the subjunctive here, especially as the reminiscence of A 559 has obviously an influence in the same direction. There is also a very similar instance in T 354 and 348. See H. G. § 306, π.

6. οἶλον, here "baneful," from δλ- of δλ-λυμ, etc. It appears to be only the particular dream which is personified; there is no trace in Homer of a separate Dream-god.

8. οἶλε ὄνειρε, a case of so-called "hiatus illiciteus"; Lange and Naber (and now Christ) would read οἶλος, the vocative occasionally having the same form as the nom. in the 2d declension: cf. Δ 189, φίλος ὦ Μενέλαε.

12. For ἔλοι (Zen. and best MSS.) Aristarchos read ἔλοις, a change of person which appears needlessly harsh. The opt. is potential.

13. ἀμφίς, "on two sides," i.e. divided in counsel: N 345.

15. ἐφήπται, lit. "are fastened upon the Trojans," i.e. hang over their heads. So Z 241, H 402, Φ 513. For the second half of this line there was an old variant, δίδωμεν (or διδόμεν, infin. as imper.) δέ οι εἶχος ἀρέσθαι, quoted by Aristotle.

19. ἀμβρόσιος, "delicious," as sleep is commonly called γλυκὺς, besides being ἡδυμνος and μελιφρὺν in the compass of a few lines. So νῆξ ἀμβροσίη, because it gives men sleep, or perhaps because of the peculiar fragrance of a still warm night. Mr. Verrall has shewn that the idea of fragrance is always suitable to the use of ἀμβρόσιος, while there is no clear instance of its meaning immortal only. It is probably not a pure Greek word at all, but borrowed from the Semitic amara, ambergris, the famous perfume to which Oriental nations assign mythical miraculous properties; so that ἀμβροσία has taken the place of the old Aryan Soma. Ἀμβροτος, though in some of its uses it undoubtedly means immortal, in others is a synonym of ἀμβρόσιος, the two senses being thus from different sources and only accidentally coincident in sound (ἀμβρ. ἔλαιον θ 365, κρήδεμνον ε 347, εἶματα II 670, νῆξ ἀμβροτος λ 330, and νῆξ ἀβρότη Z 78 = νῆξ ἀμβροσίη). That the epithets are chiefly restricted to divine objects is clearly the result of a Volksetymologie.

20. Νηληϊφρὺν ἰὺ, an unusual expression, with which we may compare Τελαμώνιει παῖ, Soph. Aj. 134.

21. γερόντων, members of the royal council, without regard to age; see 53. Young men like Diomedes and Achilles belonged to the council. μιν (22) is of course acc. after προσεφώνεε.

22. οἶλος here is given by one MS., and is mentioned as a variant in A; the rest give θείος, which cannot be right, as this word, as Nauck has shewn, always has ei in thesis, i.e. it is always a trisyllable, θείος.

- “ εὔδεις, Ἀτρεὺς υἱὲ δαΐφρονος ἵπποδάμοιο·

27. This line occurs in Ω 174, and was rejected by Aristarchos here, as the “pity” seems out of place. σευ is gen. after κήδεται, not ἀνευθεν. σε is of course to be supplied to ἐλεαίρει, from σευ.

33. It is not usual for Homeric messengers to exceed the words of their message. In Θ 423-4 a similar addition is suspected for other reasons.

36. ἔμελλεν, so Zen. and MSS.: Ar. ἐμελλον. He seems to have preferred the plural wherever the choice was possible, relying on passages such as B 136, H 6, 102, and others, where the verb cannot be in the singular.

40. διὰ, either “through the whole course” of battles, as we find διὰ νύκτα in a temporal sense; or better “by means of,” like ἦν διὰ μαντοσύνην A 72, διὰ μῆτιν Ἀθήνης K 497; battles being Zeus’ instrument for working his will.

41. ἀμφέχυντο, surrounded him, i.e. rang in his ears. ὀμφή in Homer is always accompanied either with θείη or θεοῦ, θεῶν.

43. νηγάτεον occurs only here and Ξ 185 in a similar phrase. The exact meaning of the word is doubtful; it is generally derived from νέος and γα- of γίγνομαι (γέ-γα-), as meaning “newly produced”; but it may be questioned whether the root γα- is ever employed to express the production of manufactured objects, and νεη- from νέφο- never coalesces to νη-; least of all in a genuine Homeric word. Of other derivations perhaps the least unlikely is Goebel’s, from νη- priv. and ἀγατᾶσθαι = βλάπτεισθαι (Hesych.) in the sense integer, fresh, not worn (Lexil. II 588). Similarly Düntzer refers it to root αγ- of ἀγος = pollution, as meaning “undefiled.”

46. ἄφθιτον, as the work of a god (see l. 101) and the symbol of a divine authority.

49. ἐρέουσα, heralding the approach of light; so Ψ 226, ἐωσφόρος εἰσι φῶς ἐρέωσ ἐπὶ γαίαν.

53. For βουλὴν of Zenod. and MSS. Aristarchos read βουλή, taking ἔξε as intransitive, as is usual in Homer (e.g. ll. 96 and 792). The transitive use appears to recur only in Ω 553. The βουλή was composed of a small number of the most important chiefs (γέροντες) specially summoned; see K 195. From K 108-114 there would seem to have been about nine members in the absence of Achilles: viz. Agamemnon, Menelaos, Nestor, Diomedes, Odysseus, the two Aiantes, Meges, and Idomeneus.

54. Νεστορέη = Νέστωρος, as Νηληϊή, l. 20.

56 = ξ 495. ἐνύπνιον, which does not recur in Homer, is an adverbial neut. of the adj. ἐνύπνιος (like ἦλθεν ἐναΐσιμον, Z 519), and is so found in Ar. Vesp. 1218, ἐνύπνιον ἐστιώμεθα. Compare the Attic use of δναρ. In later Greek, however, ἐνύπνιον was generally used as a substantive, and accordingly Zenod. read θεῖον here.

57. μάλιστα—ἀγχιστα, rather tautological, though the two words do not perhaps mean exactly the same; μάλιστα = to Nestor more than to any other, ἀγχιστα = very closely resembled. But 58 = ζ 152, and has probably been adopted by the interpolator without due care. For φυτὴν, cf. A 115.

60-70. In place of this third repetition of the dream Zen. read—ἡρώγει σε πατὴρ ὑψίστηνος αἰθέρι ναίων
Τρώσι μαχέσασθαι προτὶ Ἴλιον. ὥς ὁ μὲν

73. The idea of tempting the army has been compared with a similar story told of Cortez: a proposal on his part to return was made merely to excite the spirits of his followers, and met with complete success.

82. The idea clearly is that the supreme king has an innate right to communications from heaven on behalf of the people at large. Nestor's silence with respect to Agamemnon's last proposition may perhaps be explained as due to disapproval of a resolution which he sees it is useless to resist. But the speech is singularly jejune and unlike the usual style of Nestor; l. 82 seems much more in place in Ω 222; and Aristarchos rejected 76-83 entirely, on the ground that it was for Agamemnon and not for Nestor to lead the way out from the council.

87. ἀδινάων (or as Aristarchos seems, from a scholium of Herodianus on this passage, to have written the word, ἀδινάων), “busy.” The word seems to express originally quick restless motion; and is thus applied to the heart (Π 481, τ 516), to sheep (α 92, δ 320), and to flies (B 469); then to vehemence of grief (Ψ 225, ω 317, and often), and to the passionate song of the Sirens (ψ 326). According to the explanation of the ancients, adopted by Buttmann, the primary sense is “dense”; but this gives a much less satisfactory chain of significations. It is then particularly hard to explain the application of the word to the heart; few will be thoroughly satisfied with the supposition that it means “composed of dense fibres,” while a more probable epithet than “busy” or “beating” could not be found. Goebel's derivation of the word from d-intens., and root di- to move (v. Curt. Et. no. 268), is at least as good as Buttmann's, who connects it with ἀδρός. It may be noticed that both ἔθνεα εἰσι (which Bentley emended ἔθνε' ἰασι), and αἱ δὲ τε ἐνθα (l. 90) are cases of hiatus illicitus; i.e. they occur at points where there is no caesura nor any tendency to a break in the line which might account for them. Of the fifty-three cases of such hiatus in Homer, twenty-three occur at the end of the second foot, and twenty-one at the end of the fifth; six are found in the first, two in the third, and only one in the fourth. A complete list will be found in Knös, De digrammo Homérico, p. 47. The hiatus is legitimate if found (1) in the trochaic caesura of the third foot; (2) in the bucolic diaeresis; (3) at the end of the first foot. (In reckoning cases of hiatus Knös omits genitives in -ao and -ia, which in his opinion do not suffer elision, and words like περ, τι, and others, which certainly do not.)

88. νέον, "in fresh supplies," as we say.

89. βοτρυδὸν naturally reminds us of the settling of a new swarm of bees, hanging down in a solid mass like a bunch of grapes. But ἄνθεσιν rather indicates that no more is meant than the thronging of them upon the flowers in the eager search for honey.

90. ἄλλης is here used in its primary sense, "in throngs," from Fal, to squeeze (Fellew, d-oll-ées, etc.); it is thus almost identical with ἱαδόν, l. 93.

93. δέδηαι; this metaphor is a favourite one with Homer, especially of battle (cf. ὡς οἱ μὲν μάραντο δέμας πυρὸς αἰθομένοιο, Σ 1; and the word δαίς); it is applied even to οἰμωγῇ in v 353. For the personification of ὅσσα, heaven-sent rumour, cf. ω 413, and see Buttmann, Lexil. s.v.

95. τετρήχει, plpf. intrans., from ταρσσω. The form recurs in H 346.

99. σπουδῇ, "with trouble," i.e. hardly. So E 893, A 562, ω 119, etc.

103. διακτόρῳ ἀργεῖφόντῃ: these names of Hermes are obscure. The former probably means "the runner," from διακ-, a lengthened form of δι-, root di to run, whence also διώκ-ω. (Goebel derives both διάκτορος and διώκω from διά and root di- to be swift; whence δίκης and δίκωνος.) Ἀργεῖφόντης is traditionally explained "slayer of Argos"; but Homer does not appear to have known this legend, which may very likely have arisen by "Volksetymologie" from the name. Goebel is therefore probably right in translating "swift appearing," a fitting name for the fleet messenger. Forms from φεν- to flee, and φαν- to shine, are often identical.

108. Argos here, from its opposition to the islands, can hardly mean less than the whole of the mainland over which the suzerainty of Agamemnon extended. See Gladstone, Juv. Mundi, p. 46, and the remarks of Thucydides, i. 9, where he calls this passage the σκῆπτρον παράδοσις. This famous line seems to have reached even the "Morte d'Arthur"; "king he was of all Ireland and of many isles," i. 24.

 τόσσον ἐγὼ φημι πλέας ἔμμεναι νῆας Ἀχαιῶν

111. μέγα, “with might”; so MSS. with Zenod. Aristarchos read μέγας, according to the explicit statement of Didymos, who expressly contradicts Aristonikos on this point. 111-118 = I 18-25, q.v. Zen. omitted 112-118 here.

113. The main idea is given by ἐκπέρσαντα: we should say, “that I should not return till I had wasted Ilios.” The acc. is the regular idiom. (Cf. A 541.)

115. δυσκλέα must be a contracted form for δυσκλέα: it would seem that we should write either δυσκλεᾶ, or more probably δυσκλεᾶ. The same question arises on I 189; v. also Ω 202; H. G. § 105, 4.

116. που μέλλει, “it must be that,” as Φ 83, μέλλω που ἀπεχθῆσθαι Διὶ πατρὶ. Bekker brackets 116-18, urging that such an appeal to Zeus as destroyer of cities contradicts what Agamemnon has just been saying. This, however, actually weakens the passage; for surely the thought that Zeus has so often “overthrown fenced cities” heightens the bitterness of the ἄτη which Agamemnon says has come upon him. For κάρηνα

125. λέξασθαι, to number themselves. ἐφέστιοι, i.e. citizens in the town, as opposed to the allies from other lands. Τρῶες Ar., MSS. Τρῶας, which would mean “to muster the Trojans.” After Τρῶες above the nom. is more natural, “the Trojans to muster themselves.” For εἰ περ . . . κε with opt. see Lange, EI, p. 195, where he shows that it differs only by a shade from the single εἰ with opt. For the sentiment compare Virg. Æn. xii. 283, Vix hostem, alterni si congregiamur, habemus.

127. ἕκαστοι, i.e. each set of ten. The MSS. all give ἕκαστον: the text, which is more idiomatic and vigorous, is apparently the old reading, as Schol. A (Didymos) mentions ἕκαστον as the reading of one Ixion.

129. πλέας, a comparative form = πλέωνας, apparently from πλε-εας = πλε-ἔσ-ας, the suffix -ἔσ- being the same as Lat. -ior. (H. G. § 121). It is an Aeolic word, and remained in common use to historical times, being found in an inscription from Mytilene¹ (Collitz,

Μ[υτιλή]ναι πλέας τ[ῶν] αἰμύσεων. The nom. πλέας is found in A 395. A similar form is χέρης, v. A 80.

130-131 were athetized by Ar. on the ground that all the "barbarians," Trojans and allies together, are elsewhere always said to be fewer than the Greeks. The objection rather is that elsewhere the Trojans always play the prominent part in the defence, while the allies are of secondary importance. See especially P 221.

131. ἐνεισιν, so one of the editions of Ar., as in E 477, ὥς τ' ἐπικούροι ἐνειμιν, and this gives a better sense than έασιν of MSS.

132. πλάζουσι, lead me astray, drive me wide of the mark: cf. πάλιν πλαγχθέντας,
A 59.

133. Ἴλιον, so MSS.: Ar. Ἴλιον. Both constructions are found; the acc. in line 501 and passim in the Catalogue, the
gen. in a 2 Τροίης ἱερὸν πτολίεθρον, o 198, etc.

135. Observe the neuter plurals followed by one verb in the sing. and the other in the plur.

143 was rejected by Aristarchos as involving unnecessary repetition; the πληθὺς of course knew nothing of the council. For a more important objection to the line see the introduction to the book. For the construction μετὰ πληθύν, where we should have expected the dative, compare I 54, π 419, and δ 652 (though in the latter passage μεθ' ἡμέας may mean "next to us"); and also μετὰ χεῖρας, Herod. vii. 16, 2, Thuc.

1, 138, etc. See H. G. § 195.

144. Aristonikos has here preserved for us the reading of Zenodotos, φῆ for ὥς of MSS.; and there can be no doubt that it is correct, though Arist. rejected it with the brief comment οὐδέποτε Ὅμηρος τὸ φῆ ἀντὶ τοῦ ὥς τέταχεν. This merely means that the word had generally dropped out of the MSS. in his day: it is found again in Z 499, δ δὲ φῆ κώδειαν ἀνασχών, where it was written φῆ, and, in defiance of Homer's idiom, translated "said." The word is doubtless for φῆ, an instrumental case, from the pronominal stem σφο-;
cf. Goth. saf=how; the σ hardened the f to ph, as in σφεις, σφός, and then disappeared (so Curt. Et. no. 601, and p.
442). Others derive it from the rel.
stem fo-, of which ὥς is possibly the abl. Or again, φῆ might be exactly= Skt. vā, "sicul." But it has not yet been proved that f can pass directly into ph.

145. Ἰκαρίοιο, so called from a small island near Samos. πόντον seems to be in apposition with θαλάσσης, as the part to the whole.

aorist: cf. also τ 201. In N 78, θ 539, it is intrans. and may be a perf. = δρορε. The usual form of the trans. aor. is of course ῶρσε.

Some edd. have taken unnecessary offence at the two similes. They seem to express rather different pictures; that of the stormy sea bringing before us the tumultuous rising of the assembly, while the cornfield expresses their sudden bending in flight all in one direction. For the multiplication of similes cf. ἑνθα, 453-488. If either is to be rejected, it is the first, 144-146; both on account of the rather awkward addition of πῶτον Ἰκαρίοιο after θαλάσσης, and also because it indicates a familiarity with the Asian shore of the Aegæan sea, which is a note of later origin.

148. ἄμει, sc. the cornfield. ἐπὶ, before the blast. For the change from subj. to indic. compare I 324, A 156.

152. διαν, here in its primitive sense, “bright.” So of the αἰθήρ, II 365, τ 540, and dawn, I 240, etc. It is twice used of the earth, Z 347, Ω 532; in the latter passage the epithet seems somewhat otiose, but in the former “bright” is obviously appropriate. In relation to men and gods it appears to mean “illustrious,” either for beauty or noble birth; but here again it becomes otiose as applied to the swineherd Eumaios in the Odyssey.

153. σφρούς, “the launching-ways,” trenches in the sand by which the ships were dragged down to the sea; ἔρματα, the prope, probably large stones, placed under the ships' sides to keep them upright, see A 486. The former word, which does not recur, is perhaps conn. with δρόσσω (Curtius, however, regards the root of δρόσσω as ρυκ, Et. p. 325).

155. ὑπέρμορα, a rhetorical expression only: nothing ever actually happens in Homer against the will of fate, as a god always interferes to prevent it. For similar expressions compare P 327, T 30, 336; and also II 698, and a 34, with Merry and Riddell's note: and for ὑπέρ=against, ὑπὲρ ὄρκια, I 299, etc.

157. ἀτρυτώνῃ, one of the obscure titles of gods, of which we cannot even say with confidence that they are of Hellenic or Aryan origin at all. The common explanation is that it means “unwearied one,” from τρίω to rub (in the sense “to wear out”). It is equally likely that it may be connected with the first element in the equally obscure Τριτογένεια, for which see note on Δ 515. (Reference may also be made to Autenrieth, App. to Nägelsbach's Hom. Theologie, ed. 3, p. 413.)

159. The punctuation of 159-162 is rather doubtful. Some edd. put one note of interrogation after αἴης, and another (or a comma, which is the same thing) after θαλάσσης: while others have no note of interrogation at all. In Z 88, O 201, 553, ε 204, οὕτω δὴ introduces an indignant question; and this certainly gives the most vigorous sense here. In δ 485, λ 348, οὕτω δὴ occurs indeed in direct statements; but there it does not stand in the emphatic position at the beginning of the sentence. On the other hand, it seems better to place a simple full stop after αἴης, because the opt. is not suited to the tone of remonstrant questioning. Thus δέ in 160 almost = our "Why!" For εὐχωλή = subject of boasting, compare X 433, δ μοι . . . εὐχωλή κατὰ δαυτ πελέσκα.

164. Ar. not without reason regarded this line as interpolated from 180: the task is more suited to Odysseus than Athene, and is entirely committed to him. Ar. equally obelized 160-162, as being in place only in 176-178. This however does not seem necessary. Zenod. cut out 157-168 bodily, reading Ἀθηναίη λαοσσόος ἦλθ' ἀπ' Οὐλύπου for Ἀθ. Ἥρη πρὸς μῦθον ἔειπεν in 156.

165. μηδὲ ἕα (so all MSS.: Bekk. after Heyne, μηδέ ῥ'); a hiatus before ἕα is several times found, viz. P 16, X 339, δ 805, κ 536, σ 420 after ε, Θ 428 after νῶι, Ψ 73 after -οιο. In seventy-nine passages however the supposition of an initial consonant is inadmissible (Knös, de dig. Hom. p. 199). The origin of the word is very obscure; and it is possible that we ought in all cases to remove the hiatus by reading εἰα, etc., though the form is nowhere actually found. ἀμφιελίσσας is a word of somewhat doubtful meaning, as it is only applied to ships. The traditional explanation, "rowed on both sides," is insufficient, as there is no ground to suppose that ἐλίσσω (Fel-) was ever used for ἐρέσσω (root ἀρ-), from which we actually have ἀμφήρης, Eur. Cycl. 15. Nor will

"rolling both ways" do, for ἐλίσσω is not = σαλεύω. The two meanings which are generally adopted are (1) curved at both ends, i.e. rising at both bow and stern (see note 8 to Butcher and Lang's Odyssey); or (2) with curved sides. Against both these it may be urged that ἐλίσσειν never seems to imply "curving," but always "turning round," "whirling," and the like, a very different idea; and further, with regard to (1) ἀμφί always means "at both sides," not "both ends." I venture to submit that the only sense consonant with the use of the word ἐλίσσω is "wheeling both ways," i.e. easily turned round, "handy." It might also be suggested that, if ἐλακῶπις = "with sparkling eyes," root σελ- of σέλας, etc., ἀμφιελίσσα might mean "sparkling on both sides," as used of the bright reflexion from the hull of a ship seen coming over the sea. This, however, seems less appropriate.

168 is omitted by all the best MSS.: Nicanor did not read it, for his scholion speaks of the asyndeton after ἀΐξασα.

175. πεσόντες implies tumultuous and disorderly flight; so Z 82, ἐν χερσὶ γυναικῶν φεύγοντας πεσέτω, et al. The phrase ἐν νηυσὶ πεσέτω is however also used of a violent attack upon the ships, and hence an ambiguity frequently arises; e.g. I 235, Δ 311 (cf. 325).

179. ἐρώει, refrain not, hold not back. The verb is generally used with the gen., πολέμιοι, χάρμης, etc.; but it occurs without a case, μ 75, X 185, Ψ 433. In N 57 it is transitive, "drive back." In a similar sense ἐρώή (πολέμιοι) is used, "cessation," II 302, P 761; but ἐρώή in its ordinary meaning of "swing, impetus," must be an entirely different word: and so also ἐρωήσσει in A 303.

186. This is the sceptre described in 46, 101-109. It is of course handed over as a sign to all that Odysseus was acting on behalf of Agamemnon. οἱ, "at his hand," a dativus ethicus. See note on παῖδες ἐδέξατο χεῖρι κύπελλον, A 596.

188. μὲν is answered by δ' αὖ, 198. The asyndeton at the beginning of a fresh stage in the narration is unusual. Hence Zenod. removed the full stop after χαλκοχιτώνων, reading βάς for ἔβη.

190. δειδίσσεσθαι is uniformly transitive in Homer, and there is no reason why it should not be so here; Odysseus actually "terrifies" the common sort into the assembly (199), but will not employ more than persuasion to the chiefs. It would be better to write οὐ σέ than οὐ σε, to emphasize this contrast; and so Herodianus thought, though the "usage" was against him (ἡ μὲν ἀκρίβεια ὀρθοῖται, ἐγκλίνει δὲ ἡ συνθήεια). The same schol. (B) adds δειδίσσεσθαι ἀντὶ τοῦ εὐλαβεῖσθαι, a wrong interpretation, which has been generally adopted. Mr. Monro (Journ. Phil. No. 21, p. 127) compares O 196, χεροὶ δὲ μή τί με πάγχυ κακὸν ὥς δειδίσσέσθω: and Δ 286, σφῶϊ μὲν οὐ γὰρ ἔοικ' ὀτρυνέμεν. Among the solecisms derided by Lucian, Pseudosoph. 554, is that of using δεδιττομαι in the sense of "fear"; πρὸς δὲ τὸν εἰπόντα, Δεδίττομαι τὸν ἄνδρα καὶ φεύγω, Σὺ, ἔφη, καὶ ὅταν τινα εὐλαβηθῇς, διώξῃ.

193. Aristarchos rejected this and the following four lines as ἀπεοικότες καὶ οὐ προτρεπτικοὶ εἰς καταστολήν—a not very convincing remark. On the other hand, he inserted here 203-5, as being evidently addressed to the kings, not to the common folk. But as spoken to chiefs the words would eminently be οὐ προτρεπτικοὶ εἰς καταστολήν, and likely rather to arouse the spirit of independence and opposition; they gain immensely in rhetorical significance if addressed to the multitude, to whom they can cause no offence.—For ἵψεται see A 454.

194. This line is probably an interpolation (see introduction). As it stands, it is commonly printed without a note of interrogation; but "by reading it as a rhetorical question" (an alternative given by Schol. B) "the connexion of the speech is considerably improved. Odysseus has begun by explaining the true purpose of Agamemnon. Then he affects to remember that he is speaking to one of the 'kings' who formed the council. 'But why need I tell you this? Did we not all—we of the council—hear what he said?'—Mr. Monro. This also suits line 143, πᾶσι μετὰ πληθύν, ὅσοι οὐ βουλῇ ἐπάκουσαν. On the other hand there is no doubt that the council is always regarded as consisting only of a small number of "kings," not as including all the chiefs. Nine persons, Agamemnon, Menelaos, Odysseus, Nestor, Achilles, the two Aiantes, Diomedes and Idomeneus, "are the only undeniable kings of the Iliad, as may be seen from comparing together B 404-9, T 309-311, and from the transactions of K 34-197. Particular phrases or passages might raise the question whether four others, Meges, Eurypylos, Patroklos, and Phoinix, were not viewed by Homer as being also kings."—Gladstone, Juv. M. p. 417-18. This is clearly too small a number to be expressed by line 188, and this consideration no doubt led to the rejection of the note of interrogation.

196. Zenod. read διοτρεφῶν βασιλῆων, and so Aristotle and others quote; Ar. (followed by the best MSS.) -εος and -ηος, which looks like an alteration made in support of his theory that ε could not be used, as Zenod. maintained, and as the practice of later poets (e.g. Hymn. Ven. 287) exemplified, for a plural (see on A 393). It is however quite possible to retain the plural used generically, and yet take ε as sing. used of a particular instance, as is proved by δ 691—

ἣ τ' ἐστὶ δίκη θείων βασιλῆων,
 ἄλλον κ' ἐχθαίρεισι βροτῶν, ἄλλον κε φιλοῖν.
 Compare Eurip. And. 421—οἰκτρά γὰρ τὰ δυστυχῇ βροτοῖς ἅπασι, κἂν θυραῖος ὦν κυρῇ.
 (Monro ut sup. and H. G. § 255). The line is quoted with the gen. pl. by Aristotle, Rhet. ii. 2, Schol. A on A 173, and elsewhere.

198. δῆμον ἄνδρα, so best MSS.; vulg. δῆμον τ' ἄνδρα: the τ' is probably inserted only to avoid the hiatus, which is rare in this place. We should rather read δῆμοι' (and so in Ψ 431, Ω 578). Numerous indications point to the conclusion that the final -ο of the gen. was readily elided in early Epic poetry. If τε be retained, it must connect ἴδοι with ἐφεύροι, or otherwise we get a false opposition between the common sort and the shouters.

202. ἐναρίθμιος, in nullo numero, "not counted."

203. οὐ μέν = Att. οὐ δῆπου, as 233: μέν is virtually = μήν, and has no adversative force here. For the neut. ἀγαθόν in the next line cf. triste lupus stabulis, Verg. Ec. iii. 80.

206 is apparently inserted in order to supply an object to δῶκε, which does not need one. For this fertile source of interpolation see on A 296. It is clumsily altered from I 99, apparently at a time when the sense of metre was dying out. It is, however, as old as the age of Trajan, for Dio Chrysostom (Or. i. p. 3) knows it. It is found only in two second-class MSS. It is hardly worth while discussing the reference of σφίσι, which may have been supposed = ὑμῖν, or simply transferred from I 99 without further consideration. If the line is to be made metrical, βουλεύῃσι would be better than Barnes's ἐμβασιλεύῃσι.

209. Ὅν ὥς ὅτε in similes v. 394.

212. Θερσίτης is apparently an Aeolic form from θράσος: cf. Θερσίλοχος P 216, Πολυθερείδης φιλοκέρτομος χ 287. ἐκολῶα, see A 575. ἀμετροεπῆς is illustrated by Soph. Phil. 442—

Θερσίτης τις ἦν

214. The infin. in this line is epexegetic, and is qualified by μᾶψ ἀτὰρ οὐ κατὰ κόσμον. For ἄκοσμά τε πολλά τε we should have in Attic πολλά τε καὶ ἄκοσμα, and for ἀτὰρ οὐ, οὐδέ. For the litotes οὐ κατὰ κόσμον cf. πληγὴς οὐ κατὰ κ. Θ 12, and οὐ κόσμω M 225. Schol. A rightly ταλλά τε καὶ ἄτακτα λέγειν ἥπιστατο, ὥστε αὐτῇ καὶ οὐ πρὸς λόγον φιλονεικεῖν τοῖς βασιλεῦσιν. In the next line we may understand λαλεῖν or the like after ἀλλά.

The Scholiasts give two curious legends about Thersites: one that he had been Homer's guardian, and in that capacity had robbed him of his inheritance, and is thus caricatured in immortal revenge; the other that he had been crippled by Meleagros, who threw him down a precipice because he skulked in the chase of the boar of Kalydon. They also point out that Homer mentions neither his father nor his country, in order to indicate his base origin. He is the only common soldier mentioned by name in the Iliad.

217. φολκός, φοξός, ψεδνός are all ἀπ. λεγόμενα in Homer, and it is impossible to be sure of their derivation and meaning. The first seems never to recur in all existing Greek literature. φολκός δὲ τὰ φάη εἰλκυσμένος δ' ἔστιν ἐστραμμένος (i.e. squinting), Schol. A. This etymology was universally accepted by antiquity, but it is of course untenable. Buttm. Lexil. p. 536, points out that the order of the adjectives clearly shews that φολκός refers to the feet or legs. He is probably right in explaining "bandy-legged," but hardly in connecting it with valgus. It goes rather with φάληκς, the rib of a ship, Lat. falx, flecto (Curt. Et. no. 115). φοξός is explained as meaning strictly "warped in burning," of pottery (φοξὰ κυρίως εἰσι τὰ πυριπραγῇ δοτράκα, Schol., who quotes Simonides, αὕτη δὲ φοξίχειλος Ἀργεῖη κύλις), and hence with a distorted head. In this sense "the works of the old physicians shew that it continued in constant use, not merely as a poetical word, but as one of daily occurrence" (Buttm. l.l.). Perhaps conn. with φώγω, baiko (Buttm., Curt.), in the sense of overbaked. ψεδνός, παρὰ τὸ ψά, ὄνομα ῥηματικῶν ψεδνός δὲ μαδαρός, Schol. L (i.e. falling away, sparse).

219. ἐπ-εν-ἦνοθε, "sprouted upon it," either from a stem ἀνοθ for ἀνθ of ἀνθος etc. (Curt. Et. no. 304, after Buttm. Lexil. pp. 110 sqq.), or rather a reduplicated perf. from ἐνέθω, perhaps "had its place upon it"; ἀνθ making ἀνῆνοθα. A 266. For συνοχωκότε of MSS. Cobet (Misc. Crit. 304) is doubtless right in reading συνοχωκότε, the only correct form from συνέχω, which is given by Heysch. λάχνη, "down," "stubble." λαχνηίς is used of swine, I 548.

222. λέγε in the strict Homeric sense, “counted out,” enumerated, débitait ses injures. τῷ is clearly Agamemnon. Thersites is at the moment the accepted spokesman of the mob, who are indignant with Agamemnon for his treatment of Achilles; and it is by a subtle piece of psychology that they are made ashamed of themselves and brought to hear reason by seeing their representative exhibited in an absurd and humiliating light, and their own sentiments caricatured till they dare not acknowledge them.

225. τέο : the gen. is the same as A 65, ἦ τ' ἄρ' ὁ γ' εὐχολῆς ἐπιμέμφεται ἦ θ' ἐκατόμβῃς. Thersites pretends that avarice is Agamemnon's only reason for wishing to continue the war.

228. εὖτ' ἂν, as often as we take any Trojan stronghold. See A 163. Thersites seems purposely to allude to Achilles' words (Autenrieth).

229. ἦ, “can it be that.” κέ with the fut. indic. here implies “if the war goes on.” Cf. A 139, 522, etc. Similarly κεν ἀγάγω, 231, “whom in that case I shall bring.”

232. γυναῖκα νένῃ is strictly co-ordinate with χρυσοῦ (229), and ought therefore to be gen. The intervening acc. in the preceding line no doubt caused the change, which is natural enough to a speaker. μίσσῃται and κατίσχαι must be subj.; but the short vowel cannot be right. Curt. Vb. ii. 72, would read -ναι in both cases, the η being metrically shortened before the vowel, as in βέβληαι A 380—unless we prefer in all cases to scan -ναι as one syllable by crasis. Christ reads μίσσῃ and κατίσχῃ.

233. οὐ μὲν as 203. Bentley conj. οὐ σε, Heyne οὐδέ, Christ οὐτι.

234. κακῶν ἐπιβασκόμεν, bring into trouble. This causal sense is probably not elsewhere found with the verb-suffix -σκ-. Cf. Θ 285, I 546, Ψ 13. Zenodotos rejected 227-8 (reading πλείαι δὲ γυναῖκων) and 231-4, apparently thinking them too comical for Epic poetry.

235. πέπνες : this word is found in H. only in the voc. It is generally a polite address, sometimes with a shade of remonstrance, such as is often expressed in our “My good sir!” It is always found in the sing. except here and N 120, and in these two passages only it has a distinctly contemptuous meaning, “weaklings.” ἐλέγχαι, an abstract noun used as a concrete. Monro (H. G. § 116) compares ὁμηλική = ὁμηλικί, X 209, δῆμον ἔοντα one of the common sort, M 213. It should be substituted for ἐλεγχέας in Δ 242, g. v. So τὰ δ' ἐλέγχεα πάντα λείπεται, Ω 260. Ἀχαιῖδες, οὐκέτ' Ἀχαιοί = H 96, imit. by Vergil, Aen. ix. 617, o vere Phrygiæ, neque enim Phryges.

236. οἵκαδὲ περ, “let us have nothing short of return home" (Monro, H. G. § 353).

237. γέρα πεσσέμεν, "to digest, gorge himself on, meeds of honour," enjoy them by himself. Cf. A 81.

238. χ' ἡμεῖς, i.e. καὶ. Some read αἱ χ' (i.e. κε). But προσαμύνομεν must be the pres. indic.; if it were aor. subj. it would mean "if we shall help him," a sense clearly precluded by the nature of Thersites' proposition. κε too is quite out of place in a general question. καὶ must be taken closely with ἡμεῖς, we also of the common sort, as well as great chiefs like Achilles. So Θ 111, εἰσεται εἰ καὶ ἐμὸν δόρυ μάλινται. The second καὶ is that commonly used to give emphasis to one of two alternatives in an indirect disjunctive question, e.g. 299. On the question of crasis in Homer see Z 260.

241. μάλ' goes with οὐκ, as in Germ. gar nicht. These two lines are an obvious allusion to the dispute in the assembly, Achilles' very words being quoted, τοῦτο πρὸς τὸ ἀτελὲς τῆς ξιφουλκίας φησὶν, Schol. B.

245. ἠνίπαπε, from ἐνίπτω, a strange reduplication, like ἠρύκακε. ἐν seems to be the preposition, and -παπ- for -πατ-, a reduplication of root ἰπ (ἵπτομαι, to hurt, oppress), with its by-form ἱαπ (ἱάπ-τω, ἱακ-ιο). The form ἐνένιπε (II 626, etc.) arises either from a misunderstanding of the preposition (Curt. Vb.

ii. 26), or a real reduplication of it, such as appears to be found in Skt. (Fritzsche, C. Sz. vi. 330).

246. ἀκριτόμυθε, see 796 ἀεὶ τοι μῦθοι φίλοι ἀκριτοὶ εἰσιν, θ 505 ἀκριτα πόλλ' ἀγορεύειν. The latter passage shows that the word means "indiscriminate," inconsistent, rather than countless; a sense which it would not be easy to derive from κρίνω. So ἀκριτόμυθοι δνειροί, τ 560, "hard to be discerned." ἀχε' ἀκριτα (Γ 412, Ω 91), ἀκριτον πενθήμεναι (σ 174, τ 120), of grief which is not brought to a determination, "endless;" ἀκριτόφυλλος B 868, with confused foliage. λιγύς is a word of praise (A 248) used ironically.

248. χερειώτερον, virtually = χερεῖονα. See A 80.

250. οὐκ ἂν ἀγορεύεις, an ironically mild request, "I would ask you not to have kings' names on your tongues." So Z 126, υ 135 (Monro, H. G. § 300, β). Or we may take τῷ as virtually a protasis, "if that were not so."

251. προφέροισ, "cast in their teeth," as Γ 64. νόστον φυλάσσοις, "be on the watch for departure." The next two lines refer to this; but they hardly seem in place here, and would come more suitably after 298. Lehrs would put 250-1 after 264. Ar. rejected 252-6. The repeated τῷ (250, 254) certainly looks rather like two readings combined in one recension.

ἢ εὖ ἦε κακῶς νοστήσομεν υἱες Ἀχαιῶν.
 τῷ νῦν Ἀτρεΐδῃ Ἀγαμέμνονι, ποιμένι λαῶν, ἦσαι ὀνειδίζων, ὅτι οἱ μάλα πολλὰ διδοῦσιν ἦρωες Δαναοί· σὺ δὲ κερτομέων ἀγορεύεις.
 ἀλλ' ἔκ τοι ἐρέω, τὸ δὲ καὶ τετελεσμένον ἔσται· εἰ κ' ἔτι σ' ἀφραίνοντα κυχήσομαι, ὥς νύ περ ὦδε, μηκέτ' ἔπειτ' Ὀδυσῇ κάρη ὤμοισιν ἐπέιη,

255. Ar. objected against this line that Theraites was standing when he spoke, and therefore the word ἦσαι could not be properly used. But it is frequently found with a participle in a weak sense, meaning no more than to "keep on" doing a thing: e.g. A 134, B 137; see also Δ 412 (comp. with 366).

258. κυχήσομαι, fut. indic. The aor. subj. is κυχέω (or -ήω), A 28. La R.'s assertion (Crit. note on P 558) that "εἰ κε apud Homerum cum indicativo futuri nusquam iungitur" is opposed to the accepted text, as well as to his own reading εἰ κε . . . τελευτήσει in o 524 (where however it would seem better to read καὶ for κε, with most MSS. See on 238). So E 212, εἰ δέ κε νοστήσω καὶ ἐσθλοῖμαι ὀφθαλμοῖσιν (where the form and construction of the sentence, with a "wishing" clause as apodosis, exactly correspond), O 213, Σ 417. The question is considerably complicated by the fact that the forms of the aor. subj. and fut. indic. are almost always either identical or interchangeable by a slight alteration of reading, which La R. adopts against MS. authority in P 558. But the construction is one which we should a priori expect to find in H., if we once admit the fut. indic. with κε in simple sentences, for the nuance of conditioned assertion of futurity which it gives is eminently suitable for use in conditional sentences. In other words κυχήσομαι κέ σ' ἀφραίνοντα would mean "in some case or other I shall catch you." The εἰ puts this qualified prophecy in the form of a supposition; "let us make this supposition—in some case I shall catch you"; and then the next clause goes on to express the wish which arises in connexion with such a thought. In subordinate relative clauses κε with the fut. is not rare in our texts, e.g. I. 229, A 175 ὃ κέ με τιμήσουσιν, X 70 ὃ κε . . . κελσονταί, etc. (all the passages will be found brought together in Ebel. L. H. i. pp. 696-7, H. G. § 328, 4).

259. The apodosis here, as in E 212 ἄρα, virtually consists of a whole conditional sentence, a second condition occurring to the mind of the speaker as he rhetorically expands the simple λαβὼν σε ἀποδώσω which would form the logical continuation. Telemachos is mentioned in the II. only here and Δ 354, γ.ν., in an equally curious phrase. οὐχ ἑαυτῷ νῦν ἀρᾶται, ἀλλὰ τῷ παιδί. καὶ ἔστω ἢ μὲν πρώτη κατὰρ κατὰ τοῦ Ὀδυσσεύς, ἢ δὲ δευτέρα κατὰ τοῦ Τηλεμάχου. εἰ γὰρ ἀπόλοιο ὁ παῖς, οὐκέτι πατήρ ἔστω Ὀδυσσεύς (Schol. A). It is possible that the origin of the expression may be more recondite, and lie in the strange but widespread use among savages of "paedonymics" instead of patronymics. E.g. "In Australia when a man's eldest child is named the father takes the name of the child, Kadlitpinna the father of Kadli; the mother is called Kadlingangki, or mother of Kadli, from ngangk a female or woman. This custom seems very general throughout the continent. In America we find the same habit. . . . In Sumatra the father in many parts of the country is distinguished by the name of his first child, and loses, in this acquired, his own proper name. . . . The women never change the name given them at the time of their birth; yet frequently they are called through courtesy, from their eldest child, 'Ma si ano,' the mother of such an one; but rather as a polite description than a name."—Lubbock, Origin of Civilization, p. 358. The same is the case among the Kaffirs (Theale, Kaffir Folk-Lore, p. 117). An Arab in his full style will also call himself "Abu Mohammad," father of Mohammad, or whatever his eldest son's name may be; and when we are on Semitic ground we are near enough to Greece to understand the possibility of the same custom obtaining even in an Aryan race. Odysseus thus means, "may I lose my proudest title." Ἀλθὰλα Μελέαργος (Ibycus, fr. 12) is another instance of a paedonymic

(quoted in Geddes, Prob. of Hom. Poems, p. 84, n. 5), but I am not aware of materials sufficient to prove that the custom was ever prevalent in Greece; or that there are any relics there of the savage's reluctance to reveal his own name, with which it is not improbably connected.

266. ἔκπεσε, so MSS.: Ar. read ἐκφυγε, on what authority we cannot tell. θαλερόν, big; apparently from the idea "well-grown," "flourishing," in which the word generally occurs (but always of men, their limbs, grief, and the like; never in the most literal sense, of growing trees).

269. ἀχρεῖον ἰδόν, with helpless look; σ 163 ἀχρεῖον δ' ἐγέλασε, "she laughed an idle unmeaning laugh," not being really gay. So here the word seems to imply a dazed "silly" expression, as though Thersites could not recover from the sudden shock and grasp the position. So Schol. B, ἀκαίρως ὑποβλέψας.

270. The assembly are vexed to see themselves humiliated in their spokesman's person, and to lose their hope of returning home; but Odysseus has gained his point by getting the laugh on his side.

271. For us as the "public opinion" of Homer reference may be made to Gladstone, J. M. p. 436. The passages are—Γ 297, 319; Δ 81, 85, 176; Ζ 459, 479;

273. ἐξάρχων elsewhere always takes the gen.; γόοιο Σ 51, etc., μοιότης Σ 606 [δ 19], and in mid. κακῆς ἐξήρχετο βουλῆς, μ 829. The acc. is quasi-cognate, depending no doubt on a reminiscence of the familiar βουλὰς βουλευέμεν: the meaning is "taking the lead in giving counsel," whereas with the gen. it means rather "beginning," "starting." We may compare ὁδὸν ἡγήσασθαι, δέθλου τοὺς ἐπειρήσαντ' Ὀδυσῆος, θ 23, and other exx. in Monro, H. G. § 186.

276. τὸ μὲν πάλιν ἐς τοῦτίσω τὸ δὲ αὖτις χρονικὸν ἐξ ὑστέρου, Schol. A. Aristarchos repeatedly insisted that πάλιν in H. never means "a second time," but always "back again," in the local sense; but it requires some forcing to make the present passage consistent with the theory. There is no doubt that the temporal grew out of the local sense, through the idea of "going back again" to a former state of things; and it is better to recognise in such phrases as this instances of the transitional use than to attempt to force an arbitrary rule on Homer. So π 456, πάλιν ποίησε γέροντα. ἀγῆνωρ may be ironical, as it is generally a word of praise. But as applied to Achilles in I 699, to Laomedon Φ 443, and perhaps to the suitors in the Odyssey, it may have conveyed a shade of blame. So Schol., αὐθαδῆς ὑβριστῆς καὶ θρασύς.

278. πτολίπορθος recurs in Il. as an epithet of Odysseus, only K 363. In Od. it is of course common, in allusion to the capture of Troy by his cunning, see χ 230, σῆ δ' ἦλω βουλῇ Πριάμου πόλιν εὐρύγεια. In Il. it is frequently applied to Achilles, and once each to Enyo E 333, Oileus B 728, Otrynteus T 384, and Ares T 152.

281. The θ' is perhaps inserted to prevent hiatus; which is in any case allowable at the end of the first foot (see on 87), without the necessity of taking αἰ for the pron. φοι, with Nauck. If θ' is to be kept, Döderlein's explanation seems the most satisfactory, viz. that there is a confusion between ἅμα τε πρῶτοι καὶ ὅσταιοι, and ἅμα πρῶτοί τε καὶ ὅ : in other words, ἅμα has, as often, attracted a τε into its neighbourhood from its proper place in the sentence, e.g. I 519, ξ 403; but the word is again repeated, just as we often find a κεν or ἀν occurring twice, once in its right place, and once following a word which it is desirable to emphasize. πρῶτοι and ὕστατοι are used in a local sense, those in front and those behind.

284. For νῦν δὲ Aristarchos seems to have read νῦν γάρ, “ἔθος δὲ αὐτῷ (sc. Ὁμήρῳ) ἀπὸ τοῦ γάρ ἀρχεσθαι” (e.g. H 327, K 61, 424, Ψ 156). In all other cases however the γάρ is either in a question or in an explanation by anticipation (H. G. § 348, 2); it is far less natural here in a principal sentence.

289. The ἡ . . . τε of MSS. is an obvious difficulty. Bentley proposed to write ει for ἡ, so that ὥς τε γὰρ ει = ὥς ει τε: but ὥς ει are never separated in H. Ameis, after Bekker, writes ἡ, as γ 348 ὥς τέ τευ ἡ παρὰ πάντων ἀνείμονος ἥδὲ πενιχροῦ, and τ 109 ὥς τέ τευ ἡ βασιλῆος, in both which passages the MSS. have ἡ, though it is clearly out of place (in the former passage MSS. also have ἡέ, not ἡδέ). But there does not seem to be any certain case of this use of ἡ in a simile—where indeed so strongly affirmative a particle seems out of place. Still it is adopted in the text as an only resource, better than taking the sequence ἡ . . . τε as a very violent anacoluthon.

290. For this pregnant use of ὀδύρομαι, cf. Ψ 75, ὀλοφύρομαι. The infin. νέεσθαι in fact stands in the place of the accus., exactly as in ε 152, ν 279 νόστον ὀδύρεσθαι, ν 219 ὁ δ' ὀδύρετο πατρίδα γαίαν.

291. The obvious sense of this line, if it stood alone, would be, “Verily it is a trouble even to return home in grief.” But this does not cohere with what follows, and the only interpretation which really suits the sense is that given by Lehrs (Ar. p. 74), and probably by Aristarchos (who noted that πόνος is used in the true Homeric sense of “labour,” not grief): “Truly here is toil to make a man depart disheartened.”

ἡ μὴν καὶ thus introduces an excuse, just as in I 57. The difficulty is the very bare use of the acc. and infin. with a violent change of subject. Lehrs compares β 284, οὐδέ τι ἴσασιν θάνατον καὶ ἄῃρα μέλαιναν | δε δὴ σφι σχεδὸν ἐστὺν, ἐπ' ἡματι πάντας δλέσθαι, a not very satisfactory parallel. Monro (Journ. Phil. xi 129, H. G. § 233) adds μοῖρ' ἐστὶν ἀλύξαι, ὥρη εὐδεν, and other similar phrases, which would explain the infin. after πῶνος ἐστὶν in the first translation given above, but not the second, which they are quoted to support. A somewhat better case may perhaps be found in Δ 510, οὐ σφι λίθος χρώς οὐδὲ σίδηρος χαλκὸν ἀσασθῆναι, where in later Greek we should look for a ὥστε. Cf. also the infin. after τοῖος, τηλικός (β 60, ρ 20, etc.), and H 239, τό μοι ἐστί ταλαύριον πολεμίζειν.

299. ἐπὶ χρόνον as ξ 193, μ 407, ο 494, etc. Zenod. ἐτι, "ἀπιθάνως" (Schol. A).

300. ἦ. So Ar.: MSS. εἰ, except A, which has ἦ with εἰ written over it. In such conflict of authorities it is impossible for us to decide absolutely in favour of either; v. 349.

302. This is the only case in H. of the use of μὴ for οὐ in a "quasi-conditional" relative clause with the indic. Cf. 338, 143, H 236, Σ 363 (Monro, H. G. § 358).

303. χθιζά τε καὶ πρωϊζά, a proverbial expression, more common in the form πρῶν τε καὶ χθές, as in Hdt. 2, 53, μέχρι οὐ πρ. τ. κ. χθές, until very lately. So Ar. Ran. 726 and Plat. There are three leading explanations: (1) The principal verb is ἐφάνη (308), but the construction of the sentence is virtually forgotten in the subordinate clause θε . . . φέρουσαι and the quasi-parentetical ἡμεῖς . . . ὕδωρ, and is resumed by ἐνθα. In this case the phrase is used to make light of the long duration of the war, "it is as it were but yesterday, when," etc. Or (2) ἦν is to be supplied after πρωϊζά, "it was a day or two after the fleets had begun to assemble in Aulis." Näg. and Aut. support this at length, comparing γ 180 τέτρατον ἡμαρ ἔην ἐν Ἀργεὶ νηῆς εἰλας | Τυδείδῳ ἔταροι Διομήδεος ἱπποδάμοιο | ἴστασαν, Φ 81 ἥως δέ μοι ἐστὶν | ἥδε δυωδεκάτῃ θρ' ἐς Ἴλιον εἰλήλουθα. The passages they quote for the omission of ἦν are insufficient, for they are all in rel. or subord. clauses. (3) Lehrs, Ar. p. 366, takes χθ. τε καὶ πρωϊζά with ἠγερ, transl. viz cum Aulida advenit eramus, tum (v. 308) portentum accidit. This is far the best; the interpretation coincides with (2); "when the ships had been gathering but a day or two in A." This omen cannot fail to recall the famous portent of the eagles and the hare in Agam. 104-105, told of the same place and time.

308. δα-φεινός: δα- = ἡ-, for δια-

intensive. φωνός, II 159, is generally referred to φων, for φωνιος, gory, i.e. blood-red. Goebel however refers it to φαf to shine, for φοf-ωο-s (Curt. Et. p. 621, divides φο-ωό-s as though he agreed with this, but cf. no. 410), in the sense of fiery red (hence φώνε, φώνιον σ 97, φωνήεις M 202).

311. Observe how the word τέκνα (and τέκε) is repeated so as to give a sort of human pathos to the passage. Cf. M 170, π 217, and Θ 248, II 265, P 183 (τέκος). νήπια especially emphasizes this association. Notice also the rhymes, 311-3-5 and 312-4. This phenomenon, though not rare in H., is so sporadic that we have no ground for supposing it to have been in any case intentional, even if it was consciously observed.

312. ὑποπεπτηώτες, st. πτα, as in Θ 136 καταπτήτην, the only form found beside the pf. part. (ν 98, ξ 354, other parts being) supplied from the secondary stem πτα-κ (πτήσσω).

314. ὀλενά, adv. with τετρυγῶτας, "cheeping in piteous fashion."

315. In the principal caesura the hiatus is "licitus"; we do not therefore need Bentley's conj. ἀμφεποτᾶν' ὀλοφυρομένη. τέκνα, acc. after ἀμφεποτᾶτο.

316. ἐλελιξάμενος (which should be ἐλεξ., see A 520), "coiling himself up for the spring." ἀμφιαχυῖαν, an anomalous form, for which see Fritzsche in Curtius St. vi. 327; for the perf. with ε as reduplicative vowel, he is inclined to compare δίζημαι (= δι-ζη-μαι). Monro, H. G. § 23, 5. The Scholion of Herodianus on the accent of πτερύγος is characteristic: παροξύτονως. καὶ ὁ μὲν κανὼν θέλει παροξύτονως, ὡς δοιδυκος. ἀλλ' ἐπειδὴ οὕτως δοκεῖ τονίζειν τῷ Ἀριστάρχῳ, περὶ ὁμοῦ αὐτῷ ὡς πάντῳ ἀρίστῳ γραμματικῷ.

318. ἀΐζηλον, st. (sc. Ar. marked the line with the διπλὴ περιεστειγμένη, because) Ζηρόδοτος γράφει ἀρίδηλον καὶ τὸν ἐχόμενον (the next line) προσέθηκεν. τὸ γὰρ ἀρίδηλον ἄγαν ἐμφανές, ὅπερ ἀπίθανον. ὁ γὰρ εἰς πλάσθαι τοῦτο ἀναιρεῖ (i.e. whatsoever a god creates, that he brings to naught again. But there seems to be some lacuna in the quotation). λέγει μέντοι γε ὅτι ὁ φήσας αὐτὸν θεὸς καὶ ἀδελφὸν ἐποίησεν (Aristonikos). It seems clear therefore that Ar. read ἀΐζηλον (or ἀΐδηλον) "invisible," athetizing 319 altogether. (But MSS. ἀρίζηλον, except Ambros. 1 man. ἀΐζ., Apoll. Lex., Et. M. in quotations, and Hesych. ἀΐζηλος ἀδελφος.) Cf. ἀΐδεια in the same sense, Hesiod, fr. 130. Cic., who translates the passage in Div. 2, 30, 63, took the word in the same way—"Qui luci ediderat genitor Saturnius, idem Abdidit."

Curt., Et. 662, takes the same view, explaining ἀΐζηλον as = ἀΐδηλον phonetically, but with pass. instead of act. signification. The question is admirably discussed at length in Buttm. Lex. 53-58, and decided in the same sense. ἀρίζηλον must be explained, "god who created him made of him an evident sign," which is comparatively weak. (Cf. however the fate of the Phaeacian ship, π 156, θείναι λίθον ἐγγύθει γαίης νηὶ ὀσπ' ἔκκελον, ἵνα θαυμάζωσιν ἅπαντες.) Cicero goes on to translate 319 also—

"Abdidit, et duro firmavit tegmina saxo"; as though the serpent were hidden away in the rock into which he is turned.

320. οἷον and similar constructions are commonly explained by the ellipse of the antecedent (H. G. § 267), or less scientifically by resolving ὅσον into ὅτι τοῖον, ὥς (c.g. Δ 157) into ὅτι οὕτως. But it is better to regard them as originally independent clauses of a quasi-interjectional nature ; "we wondered—what a thing was wrought !" The manner in which wishes introduced by εἰ gradually became the grammatical protases of conditional sentences is very similar (H. G. § 318, after L. Lange). Cf. Z 166, O 95, P 173, with X 347, δ 611, ξ 392, and often. (Näg. and Aut. ad loc.)

325. δοῦ, doubtless an error in transcription for δο, an intermediate form of the gen. which has disappeared from MSS. but may often be restored with confidence. See H. G. § 98.

329. τῷ : on this use of the article with numerals v. H. G. § 260 (c).

330. τῶς, so Ar. : MSS. θ' ὥς with Herodianus. Cf. Z 48, σ 271, where MSS. are divided. The word recurs only Γ 415, τ 234.

335. For a participle belonging to the leading clause of a sentence, after a virtual parenthesis, we may perhaps compare Δ 153, where χαλκῷ δμῶντες seems to belong to ἱππεῖς δ' ἱππῆας in 151. But the construction seems very awkward.

337. For the long α of ἀγοράασθε cf. ἀπονέεσθαι 113, 288, etc., ἀθάνατος 306, etc., δυναμένοιο α 276, Ἀπόλλωνα Δ 21, διὰ Γ 357, Δ 185, Δ 435, and other instances. It is due to the ictus. ἀγοράομαι occurs elsewhere in H. only in impf. and aor.

338. For ὅτ a later writer would probably have used μή, but the only instance in H. of such a use of μή with the rel. is in line 302 (q.v.). See H 236, Σ 363, γ 349. οὐ shews that the claim is added as a general description of a class, while in 302 μή is used to make an exception to what the speaker has already said (H. G. § 59).

339. Cf. 286, Aen. iv. 426. For ἐν πυρὶ, cf. E 215. He means of course "all our oaths are so much useless lumber."

341. ἄκρητοι, solemnised with unmixed wine, as Δ 159. See however Γ 269, with note. σπονδαί here includes both the literal meaning of "libation" and the metaphorical "ratification of agreement." δεξιά; handclasping as αὐτως γὰρ ἐπέεσσ' ἐριδαίνομεν, οὐδέ τι μῆχος εὐρέμεναι δυνάμεσθα, πολλὸν χρόνον ἐνθάδ' ἔοντες.

 Ἄτρεΐδῃ, σὺ δ' ἔθ', ὥς πρὶν, ἔχων ἀστεμφέα βουλὴν

 πρὶν τινα παρ Τρώων ἀλόχῃ κατακοιμηθῆναι, 355
 τίσασθαι δ' Ἑλένης ὀρήματά τε στοναχὰς τε.

the sign of a pledge is mentioned Z 233, Φ 286. It is of course familiar in later Greek: e.g. δεξιὰς φέρειν παρὰ τινος, to bring a pledge from a man, Xen. An. 2, 3, 11. ἐπὶπύμην, for the rather rare non-thematic plpf. see H. G. § 68.

344. ἀστεμφέα, see Curt. Et. no. 219: lit. "not to be squeezed" (στέμφυλον = pressed olives), hence "unflinching, immovable," as Γ 219. Additional force is lent to this remark if it be supposed that Agamemnon had seriously advised flight.

345. ἀρχεῖν, only here and E 200 with dat., as ἀρχων E 592, θ 107, ἡγεμονεῖν B 816, γ 386, etc., ἡγεῖσθαι A 71, X 101; always of "shewing the way."

346. Ἀχαιῶν νόσφιν, a rhetorical subterfuge, apparently, in order to separate the malcontents, by representing them as secret caballers, from the majority who were but lately in sympathy with them. τοῦσδε is sufficient to shew that Thersites is aimed at, not, as some commentators have thought, Achilles and Patroklos, for it must indicate some who are present.

347. αὐτῶν, it is hard to say whether this is masc. or neut. (sc. βουλευμάτων or the like). αὐτός is so rarely used of things in H. that the presumption is in favour of the former, which we must then understand to mean "there will be no fulfilment on their part." This clause is parenthetical, ἵεναι depending on βουλεύωσι.

349. εἴ τε . . . εἴ τε, so most and best

MSS., vulg. εἴτε . . . ἤτε; La R. would prefer ἤ τε . . . ἤτε or ἤ τε: as 238, 299, K 444, λ 492. But L. Lange (EI, pp. 227 ff.) has shewn that there is no reason for abandoning the best attested reading. εἴτε . . . οὐκ in a disjunctive indirect question is found even in Attic, e.g.

εἴτ' ἐνδον εἴτ' οὐκ ἐνδον.—Soph. Aj. 7.

(It appears however to be found only where the predicate of the first clause is repeated: see Kühner, Gr. p. 749). This instance is, as Lange remarks, virtually equivalent to εἴ with indic., where εἴ οὐ seems to be the original and more natural construction, though it was afterwards superseded by εἴ μὴ by force of analogy. See note on Δ 160, and H. G. § 816, 341. For the predicative use of ψεῦδος cf. I 115.

353. ἀστράπτων, a very natural anacoluthon, the thought in the speaker's mind being κατένευσε Κρονίων.

355. τινα as though ἕκαστον, like 382, II 209, etc.

356. A much disputed line. The χωρίζοντες of Aristarchos' time took it to mean "Helen's searchings of heart and groanings," and urged that this view of Helen's resistance to her abduction was peculiar to the Il., while the poet of the Od. represented her as going willingly with Paris. Aristarchos replied, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἐπ' αὐτῆς ὁ λόγος ἀλλ' ἐξώθεν πρόθεσιν τῆς "περὶ" δεῖ λαβεῖν, ἢ ἥ "περὶ Ἑλένης." καὶ ἔστιν ὁ λόγος, τιμωρίαν λαβεῖν ἀνθ' ὧν ἔστανάμεν καὶ ἐμεριμήσαμεν περὶ Ἑλένης.

εἰ δέ τις ἐκπάγλως ἐθέλει οἰκόνδε νέεσθαι, ἀπτέσθω ἥς νηὸς ἐνστέλμοιο μελαίνης, ὄφρα πρόσθ' ἄλλων θάνατον καὶ πότμον ἐπίσπῃ.
 ἀλλά, ἄναξ, αὐτός τ' ἐν μῆδεο πείθεό τ' ἄλλῃ. 360
 οὐ τοι ἀπόβλητον ἔπος ἔσσεται, ὅττι κεν εἴπω·

 ἦδ' ὅς κ' ἐσθλὸς ἔρσι· κατὰ σφέας γὰρ μαχέονται· γνώσεαι δ', εἰ καὶ θεσπεσίῃ πόλιν οὐκ ἀλαπάξεις ἢ ἀνδρῶν κακότητι καὶ ἀφραδίῃ πολέμοιο."
 τὸν δ' ἀπαμειβόμενος προσέφη κρείων Ἀγαμέμνων·

παρλειπτικός (fond of omitting) γὰρ προθέσειν ἔστιν ὁ ποιητής. Apart from the gratuitous insertion of the preposition there can be little doubt that his view is right. However much Helen may have been excusable by the deceit of Aphrodite, there can be no doubt that Homer represents her as having deserted her husband voluntarily as far as the outward aspect of her action went; and she could not therefore be regarded by the Greeks as a victim whose sufferings were to be avenged. The chief passages in H. are δ 145, 260, Γ 164, [ψ 218-224]. See also Mr. A. Lang's note to "Helen of Troy." For the gen. compare ἄχος ἡρώων, grief for the charioteer, Θ 124, etc., ἄχος σέθεν Δ 169, πένθος παιδὸς ἀποφθιμένοιο Σ 88, and others in H. G. § 147, 1.

357. ἐκπάγλως, cf. ἵεται αἰνῶς β 327, a curious parallel to some expressions of modern slang.

359. This line is a threat, "let him so much as touch his ship, he shall immediately be slain before the face of the rest." (The alternative explanation, "he will start homeward only to perish on the road sooner than the others," is clearly inferior. See Ameis, Anh., p. 127).

362. This tactical counsel, like the advice to build a wall round the ships in H 337-343 (q.v.) appears singularly out of place in the last year of the war; it is only poetically justifiable as intended to illustrate the position of Nestor as the leading counsellor of the Greek army. For φρήτρας cf. ἀφρήτωρ I 63: the word does not recur in H. It seems to be a relic of the patriarchal time when the family, not the tribe, was the unit.

365. After each ὅς we must apparently supply κ' ἔρσι from the next line; ἔστι would almost make Nestor call in question the existence of brave men while insisting on the presence of cowards (Ameis).

366. κατὰ σφέας, cf. μαχόμεν κατ' ἐμ' αὐτὸν ἐγώ, A 271: "they will fight each tribe on their own account," and so every man will have a motive for ambition in the glory which will accrue to his tribe or family from success. Cf. "Quodque praecipuum fortitudinis incitamentum est, non casus neque fortuita conglobatio turmam aut cuneum facit, sed familiae et propinquitates," Tac. Germ. 4; "Batavi Transrhenanique, quo discreta virtus manifestius spectaretur, sibi quaeque gens consistunt," Hist. iv. 23.

367. θεσπεσίῃ, a substantivized adj., like many others in H.; ἀμβροσίῃ ἀναγκαίῃ ἰθεὶα ἴση τραφερὴ ὑγρῇ, and cases used as here adverbially, ἀντιβίην ἀπριάτην (v. A 99) ἀμφαδίην (Ameis, Anh. to a 97). There is no need to supply any ellipse. ἀλαπάξεις, fut. in potential sense (cf. Z 71, N 260, La R.), or perhaps as taking up with some slight irony Agamemnon's despairing tone, οὐ γὰρ ἐτι Τροίην αἰρήσομεν εὐρυάγων, 141. Bekker's conj. ἀλαπάξεις is needless. et, so MSS., but edd. generally give ἦ. Considering that et and ἦ are virtually identical in use in indirect questions, so far as tradition goes, there seems to be no reason for departing from the attested reading. See on 349.

371. This formula (also Δ 288, Η 132, ΙΙ 97, and several times in Od.) gives a typical instance of the transition from “wishing-clauses,” followed by a paratactic clause expressing the result, to regular conditional sentences; if it were not for the appeal to the gods, which proves that a real wish is expressed, 371-2 might quite well form a protasis to 373-4. See L. Lange, EI, 41, sqq.

374. ὑπὸ χερσίν, this instrumental use of ὑπὸ with dat. is developed from the local by a transition which is quite easy in phrases like the present, where “subjection” or “falling prostrate” is the leading idea: in ὑπὸ δουρὶ τυπεῖς, ὑπὸ νόσφω φθίσθαι (N 667) ὑπὸ γλυκερῷ ταρπόμεθα, the local sense almost fades away, but never quite disappears. Obs. ἄλυστα, aor. of the moment of capture; περθομένη, pres. of a continuing state.

376. ἀπρήκτους, fruitless, not conducting to any result: cf. οὐ γὰρ τις πρῆξις πέλεται κρυεροῦ γόοιο Ω 524, ἀπρήκτους ὀδύνας β 79.

379. μίαν, sc. βουλῇ, to be supplied from the verb: so τῇ ταν ξ 435, supply μοῖραν from διαιμοῖράτο.

380. ἡβαιόν occurs only in this phrase, and always at the end of a line, except ι 462, ἐλθόντες δ’ ἡβαιὸν ἀπὸ σπείλους. It would seem that some of the ancients preferred to write οὐδ’ ἡ βαινὸν or οὐ δὴ βαινὸν. Sonne explains the ἡ as an instrumental of the pronoun-stem, in the sense “how” or “so” little, as we say “not ever so little.” The materials are insufficient for a decision.

381. ξυνάγωμεν Ἄρῃα, committere praelium, compare Ξ 149, 448, ΙΙ 764, for similar phrases.

382. θέσθω, not here in the later sense of “grounding arms,” but “place ready,” “bestow well,” as I 88, τίθεντο δόρυα: so εὖ θέσθαι ὄπλα, to keep armour in order, Xen. Cyr. 4, 5, 3; εἰς δὴμιν ἔθεντο ὄπλα, ap. Dem. 322, 6.

384. ἀμφίς, so MSS.; Bekk., after Heyne and Buttm. (Lex p. 104), ἀμφί, which is however found with gen. in H. only ΙΙ 825, θ 267. Monro, H. G. § 184, comp. Att. περιωῶμαι with gen. = to look round after, take thought about (Thuc. 4, 124), and also the gen. with ἀμφιμάχεσθαι ΙΙ 496, etc. ἀμφίς with gen. appears elsewhere always in the sense “aside from.”

385. κρινώμεθα, “measure ourselves,” cf. the same root in de-cern-ere, cer-tamen. From the primary idea of separation (by sifting, etc.) comes that of two parties standing in opposition. So διακρίνει, “part,” 387, cf. 362, Γ 98, π 268 μένος κρίνεται Ἄρῃος, σ 264, ω 507.

387. μένος ἀνδρῶν, a periphrasis for "brave warriors," as μένος Ἀλκινόοιο, etc.

388. τευ virtually = ἐκόςτου, at least for purposes of translation. We must in the next line supply τις as subject to καμείται. This passage may be added to those in H. G. § 186, in which it is doubtful whether περί is prep. or adv. (= exceedingly).

391. ἐθέλοντα of "the active wish, which looks forward to its accomplishment as soon as circumstances shall allow: H 364 πάντ' ἐθέλω δοῦμαι, I 120 ἀψ' ἐθέλω ἀρέσαι," Buttm. Lex. p. 194. νοήσω, in sense "perceive" νοεῖν takes a partic.; "to think over, remember," an infin. E 665, λ 62, etc.

393. ἄρκιον, "there shall be nothing on which he can rely, nothing to give him any well-grounded hope of escaping the dogs and birds," Buttm. Lex. pp. 163-4, comparing O 502 νῦν ἄρκιον ἡ ἀπολέσθαι | ἢ σωθῆναι; he deduces this sense from the verb ἀρκεῖν, through the sense "sufficient," "able to help," and thence "that on which one can rely." So K 304, μισθὸς δὲ οἱ ἄρκιος ἔσται, his reward shall be certain. The passage of course means "he shall certainly be slain and left unburied."

394. On ὥς ὅτε without a finite verb see L. Lange, Hom. Geb. d. Part. EI, p. 254, where it is compared with the similar use of ὥς εἰ in similes. He argues that there is no need to supply any ellipse; the ὅτε is really indef., "as on a time," and is strictly speaking superfluous. The construction recurs Δ 462, M 132, N 471, 571, O 362, 679, Σ 219, II 406, Ψ 712, ε 281, λ 368, τ 494. For the simile itself cf. 144 and 209.

397. ἀνέμων, for this use of the gen. cf. ἀνέμων δυσάτων μέγα κύμα ν 99, νέφεα ἀργεστάω Νότιοι Δ 305, and ρούσον Διὸς ι 411, a sickness sent from Zeus. γένωνται, sc. ἀνεμοι (but Ar. thought κύματα, and some actually wrote γένηται).

400. ἔρεζε, the F is neglected as in ἀρεκτον T 150, ἐρεζας Ψ 570, ἔρεζον ω 458. From here eleven consecutive lines have the trochaic caesura, which was in all probability originally the only caesura of the hexameter. (For the genesis of the Homeric hexameter reference may be made to a very interesting paper by F. A. Allen of Cincinnati, in Kuhn's Ztsch. xxiv. 558 (1879), where it and the Saturnian verse, as well as the typical old German measure, are traced back to a common origin still found as a metre in the Zend-Avesta.)

409. ἀδελφεός is the only Homeric form (cf. Z 61); so δένδρεον, never δένδρον.

410. περιστήσάν τε, so edd. with Bekk. for -στήσαντο of MSS.: so μ 356, and cf. Δ 532. The aor. mid. is always transitive in H. (v. A 480, β 431, etc.). Σ 533, ι 54 (στησάμενοι δ' ἐμάχοντο μάχην) are ambiguous, but no doubt are also trans., as Herod. also says στήσασθαι πολέμους. οὐλοχύτας, A 449.

412. κελαινεφές, apparently for κελαινονεφής, “god of the black cloud.” The epithet is also applied to blood, “dusky,” the significance of the second element having been weakened—a phenomenon familiar in the Tragedians but very rare in H.

413. ἐπὶ, “that the sun set not upon us,” a pregnant expression which is virtually an anticipation of the ἐπὶ immediately following, and may be compared with Eph. 4, 26, ὁ ἥλιος μὴ ἐπιδυνέτω ἐπὶ τῷ παροργισμῷ ὑμῶν. See also Θ 488, Τρωσὶν μὲν ῥ' ἀέκουσιν ἔδω φάος. Some have, without necessity, conj. ἔτ' or γ': La R. thinks that the word was inserted when it was forgotten that πρὶν was originally long by nature (for πρῶτον, the comparative of πρό). For μὴ with infin. expressing a prayer, see H. G. § 361. μὴ appears fundamentally to express the idea “away with the thought that,” “let us not suppose that,” and may thus be properly used with the infin. without the need of supplying any ellipse of δέ or the like. Cf. Γ 285, H 179, ρ 354, where the infin. expressing the mere thought indicates, by the form of interjectional utterance, a strong wish; and also the use of the infin. as an imper. The idiom is common in later Gk., e.g. ὦ θεοὶ πολῖται, μὴ με δουλείας τυχεῖν, Aesch. Supp. 235. (It is virtually a case of the use of μὴ without a verb, such as we find in A 295 and θε μὴ = “except,” see Lange, EI, p. 162 (468), where the key to the question is given.)

415. πυρός, for this use of gen. see H. G. § 151, d, where it is classed as a “quasi-partitive” use, as though the idea of material used implied a stock drawn upon: so πυρὸς μειλισσόμεν H 410, πυρὸς θέρηται, Z 331. For πρῆσαι A 481. δῆμος with πῦρ, in the lit. sense “blazing,” root δαφ, δαίω: so πῦρ κήλειον (καίω), Θ 217.

417. ῥωγαλέον, proleptic; as Π 841, αἱματόεντα. But αἰθαλόεν, 415, seems to be a standing epithet of the hall; v. χ 239.

420. ἀλίσστον Ar.: MSS. ἀμέγαρον.
421-4 = A 458-461; 427-432 = A 464-469.

426. Ἥφαίστοιο = πυρὸς, as Ἀμφιτρίτη = θάλασσα μ. 97, Ἀφροδίτη = εὐνή χ. 444, Ἀρης = πόλεμος passim. Cf. φλογὸς Ἡφ. I 468.

435. μηκέτι νῦν δὴθ' αἰθι, so MSS. and Ar., δὴ ταῦτα Zenod., δὴ νῦν αἰθι Kallistratos. Ar. explained "δηθὰ πολλὸν χρόνον, αἰθι αὐτοῦ, λεγώμεθα συναθροίσωμεθα" (Didymos ap. Schol. A.). Against Zenod.'s reading it is justly urged (Butt. Lex. 398) that the phrase μηκέτι δὴ νῦν ταῦτα λ. is always used to cut short a long conversation (N 292, T 244, ν 296, γ 240); whereas here the object is to prevent conversation beginning. λέγειν and λέγεσθαι are rarely used in Homer, except in the above-mentioned phrase, in the sense of "relating," nor do they ever occur without an object in the sense of "conversing." There seems therefore no choice but to adopt the interpretation of Aristarchos, with his reading; or with the reading of Zenod. to suppose that

μηκ. τ. λεγ. is "a customary formula for breaking off a conversation; and that when Nestor rose from table, at which there had naturally been some conversation, though the poet does not mention it, he broke it off with these words" (Butt. l.l.) Neither alternative is entirely satisfactory.

447. For the aegis see also O 308, P 598, Δ 167, E 738: it clearly symbolizes the storm-cloud, and as such belongs properly to Zeus; Apollo wields it O 818, 861, Ω 20; Athene here, E 738, Σ 204, Φ 400. The tassels round the edge seem to be mentioned rather as a majestic ornament (cf. Ξ 181) than as "a symbol of the lightning-flashes playing about the thunder-cloud." See also Herod. (iv. 189), who derives it from the leathern corselets worn by the Libyans. ἀγήραον and ἀθανάτην are co-ordinated by τε, and therefore expegetical and subordinate to ἐρίτιμον.

448. θύσανος (see Curt. Et. no. 320), from θυ-σ- (root θυ-), on account of their violent swinging; perhaps with a reminiscence of θύελλα. ἡερέθονται, so Ar. and most MSS.: Zenod. -οντο. The present is quite in place in describing the immortal gear of the gods; see a striking instance in E 726-8 compared with 729.

450. παιφάσσουσα, "dazzling," by intensive reduplication from a secondary form of root φα-, either φακ-γ or φασ-γ. The latter derivative is common in Skt. (bhāṣ-), but is doubtful in Greek.

451. ὀτρύνουσα, clearly not by words, but by her invisible presence and the supernatural power of the aegis.

455-483. The accumulation of similes has given much offence to critics, and most edd. reject one or more. But each is vivid and Homeric, and refers to a particularly striking point in the aspect of the Greek host, the gleam of their weapons (455-8), the clamour of their advance (459-466), their multitudinous unrest (469-478). Then follow two describing the leaders in general and Agamemnon in particular. The effect is that of a majestic prologue, and would be greatly enhanced if the direct action of the poem followed on immediately, and were not interrupted by the Catalogue. αἰδηλον, lit. "making invisible," ἀφανίζων, i.e. "destroying," see Curt. Et. p. 662.

456. For this use of ἕκαθεν, where we say "to a distance," see II 634. Observe the characteristic use of δέ τε in similes (456 and 463) to introduce an additional touch, often, but not always, containing the tertium comparationis.

461. Ἀσίῳ, so best MSS. with Ar., who regarded it as the gen. of a proper name Ἀσίας (for Ἀσίῳ), said to have been a king of Lydia. So Herod. iv. 45, καὶ τούτου μὲν μεταλαμβάνοντα τοῦ οὐνόματος Ἀνδοί, φάμενοι ἐπὶ Ἀσίῳ τοῦ Κρόνου τοῦ Μάνου κεκλησθαι τὴν Ἀσίαν. Virgil, on the other hand, clearly read Ἀσίῳ:

"varias pelagi volucres, et quae Asia circum

Dulcibus in stagnis rimantur prata Caystri."—(Georg. i. 383.)

"Ceu quondam nivei liquida inter nubila cyni

Cum sese e pastu referunt et longa canoros

Dant per colla modos, sonat amnis et Asia longe

Pulsat palus."—(Aen. vii. 699.)

This is the only passage in the Iliad indicating knowledge in detail of any part of the coast of Asia Minor beyond the Troad.

462. ἀγαλλόμενα, perhaps here in the primitive sense (root γαλ to shine), "preening themselves." There was an old variant ἀγαλλόμεναι, which would be perfectly good Greek but for the masc. προκαθίζόντων in the next line (Aut. Næg.) κλαγγηδὸν προκαθίζοντων, σμαραγεῖ δέ τε λειμών, ἔσπετε νῦν μοι, μούσαι Ὀλύμπια δώματ' ἔχουσαι,

463. προκαθίζόντων, a pregnant expression, "keep settling ever forwards"; the whole body moves forward by the continual advance of single birds who keep settling in front of the rest. σμαραγεῖ may here, as in the two other passages where it occurs (210, φ 199), be taken to refer either to bright light or loud noise, but the latter is generally adopted, and suits the simile best.

465. ὑπὸ must go with ποδῶν, the gen. indicating a transition from the local to the causal meaning of the preposition (La R.). Cf. Z 285 ποδῶν ὑπο with T 363 ὑπὸ ποσσίν.

469. ἀδινάων, "busy." See on 87. The simile indicates both the multitude of the Greeks and their restless eagerness for their object: cf. II 641, where line 471 also recurs. Homer has another striking simile of the fly in P 570.

474. αἰπόλοι: G. Meyer, in Curt. St. viii. 121, shows reason for deriving αἰπόλος not from αἰγ-πόλος for αἰγι-πόλος, for which there is no analogy, but from ἀφι-πόλος, where ἀφι- = Skt. anī-, dis, ovis.

It will then be used of goats by the same idiom which gives us ἵπποι βουκολέοντο T 221, βουθυτεῖν ὅν Ar. Plut. 819, etc., aided by the similarity of sound to αἰξ-πλατεῖα, because of the wide spaces over which they range.

479. ζώνην, the waist. Except A 284, where it also seems to mean the "waist" of the corselet, the word is used only of a woman's girdle.

480. ἔπλετο, for this use of the aor. in similes as virtually a present cf. H 4, etc.; and for βοὺς ταῦρος cf. οὗς κάπρος, ἱρὴς κίρκος (ν 86), ὄρνιθες αἰγυπιοί (H 59).

483. It would hardly be possible in Homeric language to join πολλοῖσι with ἠρώεσσιν: rather "preëminent in the multitude and excellent amid warriors."

484-877. The "Catalogue of the Ships," and of the Trojans and allies. The principal critical questions belonging here are briefly indicated in the introduction to the book. ἔσπετε, prob. a redupl. aor. for σέ-σπ-ετε, or else for ἐν-σπ-ετε, root sep = sak, our say. Observe the rhyme μούσαι—έχουσαι. πᾶσαντε, either

"are present at all that happens," or "stand at the poet's side." The Muses are particularly appropriate in such a place as this, for they are goddesses of Memory (Μοῦσα = Mentja, root man; see Curt. Et. no. 429), though the legend which made them daughters of Mnemosyne is post-Homeric.

488. For ἄν with aor. subj. as apodosis to a clause containing εἰ with opt. cf. A 386, and the equivalent fut. indic. ἔσσειται with ὅτε μὴ ἐμβάλοι, N 317. Possibly μυθήσομαι is fut. indic., and ὀνομήνω is independent of ἄν, as in A 262, οὐδὲ βῶμαι. ἄν here seems to enforce the contrast, see H. G. § 276, β.

490. ἦτορ, Lat. animus, primarily of vitality, as here; then, as most commonly, of the passions. Though the word probably comes from ἄω to breathe, it would be quite against all Homeric use to understand it, as some commentators have done, of the lungs.

492. μνησαίατο, made mention of; as

δ 118, ο 400. προπάσας, all from end to end: so πρῶταν ἡμαρ, etc.

494. The prominent position given to the Boeotians here, in marked contrast to their unimportance in the story, has led to the conjecture that the Catalogue was the work of the Boeotian or Hesiodic school, which was notably given to the compilation of lists of names (Lauer).

502. πολυτρήωνα, Chandler was led to the discovery of the ruins of Thisbe (near the coast of the Corinthian gulf) by the number of wild doves which haunted them.

505. Ὑποθήβας, a lower Thebes in the plain, an offshoot from the great city which we are to regard as still lying waste after its destruction by the Epigoni.

507. For Ἄρνην Zenod. read Ἀσκλην, but Ar. objected that the epithet πολυστάφυλος could not belong to Hesiod's birthplace, as he describes it as χεῖμα κακὴ, θέρει ἀργαλέη. Thuc. i. 12 also read Ἀρνη, for he says that in his day the Boeotians had been expelled from Arne by the Thessalians.

508. ἐσχατόωσαν, as lying on the Euboic sea.

511. The territory of the Minyae was afterwards part of Boeotia. For Orchomenos see I 381. We ought perhaps to read Ὀρχομενός, its own local name. There was another in Arkadia (605). Ares was the tribal god of the great tribe of the Minyae, and hence the two chiefs claim descent from him. Minyas himself was, according to one account, son of Ares.

514. αἰδοίῃ, there was no dishonour in the love of a god. ἐπερ. εἰσαν. goes with τε in the sense "conceived," as 742. Compare II 184.

518. Ἰφίτοο, a certain restoration for Ἰφίτου of MSS.; the second syllable of the name is short, see P 306; for this form of the gen. see H. G. § 98, and for lengthening of the short vowel before initial μ, § 371.

526. ἔμπλην = πλησίον: a rare form, apparently from the locative termination -ām, said to be found in Skt., and root πλ- (πέλας), and thus = "in the neighbourhood of" (Autenrieth ap. Hentze).

528 was rejected by Zenodotos, and 529-530 by Aristarchos also; partly on account of the obvious tautology, partly because of the word Πανόλληνas, used, contrary to the Homeric practice, to denote the Argive host. λινοθώρηξ agrees with the character of light infantry and bowmen which is attributed to the Lokrians in N 714, but is hardly consistent with the praise of Aias the less as a spearman; in N 712 he, as a hoplite, is separated from his followers. He does nothing in actual battle to justify the praise in 530.

535. πέρην, "over against," as Χαλκίδος πέραν, Aesch. Ag. 190. It might, however, mean "beyond," if we suppose that the poet's point of view is that of an Asiatic Greek.

537. Ἰστίαιαν, trisyllable by synizesis, as Αἰγυπτιούς I 382, δ 83.

542. ὅπιθεν κομόωντες τὰ ὀπίσω μέρη τῆς κεφαλῆς κομῶντες ἀνδρείας χάριν. Ἴδιον δὲ τοῦτο τῆς τῶν Εὐβοέων κούρᾳς, τὸ ὀπισθεν τὰς τρίχας βαθείας ἔχειν, Schol. A. So of two Libyan tribes, οἳ μὲν Μάχλυνες τὰ ὀπίσω κομόουσι τῆς κεφαλῆς οἳ δὲ Αὐσεῖς τὰ ἔμπροσθε, Herod. iv. 180. Compare Θρήικες ἀκρόκομοι, Δ 533. These seem all to indicate that part of the head was shaved according to a tribal fashion, such as is familiar to us in the case of the Chinese, whereas the usual Greek practice was to let the hair grow long all over; the κάρη κομόωντες Ἀχαιοὶ being thus distinguished from many or most of their barbarian neighbours.

547. δῆμον, here in the strict local sense, "realm." It probably comes from root δα- of δαίω and means the common land of the tribe apportioned for tillage among the tribesmen, as is still done in the Slavonic village communities; cf. on M 422. So Nausithoos ἐδάσσατ' ἀρούρας, § 10. In a still earlier stage δήμος indicates a yet more complete communism, meaning the common stock of what we should call "personal" property, e.g. δημόθεν τ 197, εἰς δῆμον A 704, and δήμιος P 250, δημοβόρος A 231, καταδημοβορῆσαι Σ 301. (Mangold, Curt. St. vi. 403-413.)

548. τέκε—ἄρουρα is of course parenthetical—an allusion to Athenian autochthony—and Ἀθήνη is the subject of εἶσε. The temples of Athene Polias and Erechtheus were always under one roof. So η 81, where Athene repairs to Athens, she δύνην Ἐρεχθίδος πυκνὴν δόμον. ζεῖδωρος, "the graingiver," from ζειδ (Skt. javas), has of course nothing to do with "life-giving" (ζα-ω from root gi- (?) ; Curt. Et. p. 491). πλόνι, sc. with offerings.

550. μιν, Erechtheus; for cows and ewes were offered to female goddesses. The festival where these offerings were made was the (annual) "lesser Panathenaea," in honour of the two founders of agriculture.

552. Πετεῶο, gen. of Πετεώς, as Πενελέωο Ξ 489. The three following lines

τῷ δ' οὐ πῶ τις ὁμοῖος ἐπιχθόνιος γένητ' ἀνὴρ κοσμήσαι ἵππους τε καὶ ἀνέρας ἀσπιδιώτας·

Νέστωρ οἷος ἔριξεν· ὁ γὰρ προγενέστερος ἦεν.

τῷ δ' ἅμα πεντήκοντα μέλαινα νῆες ἔποντο.

Αἴας δ' ἐκ Σαλαμῖνος ἄγεν δυοκαίδεκα νῆας·

οἱ δ' Ἄργος τ' εἶχον Τίρυνθά τε τειχιόεσσαν,

were rejected by Zenodotos, and they have all the appearance of an addition designed to soothe the vanity of the Athenians, which was doubtless much hurt by the small part played by their nation in the Iliad (cf. A 264). Menestheus does not afterwards appear as a distinguished general. In Δ 326-348 Agamemnon speaks of him in unflattering terms. He is mentioned again only M 331, 373, N 195, 690, O 331, when the fighting is left to the heroes of the second rank. But the lines can be traced back with certainty to the beginning of the fifth century, as they are mentioned by Herodotos (vii. 161); and Aischines (Ktes. 185) quotes an inscription as having been set up by the Athenians in honour of their countrymen's victory over the Persians at the Strymon, which begins as follows:

ἐκ ποτε τῆσδε πόλῃος ἅμ' Ἀτρεΐδῃσι Μενεσθεύς ἡγεῖτο ζάθεον Τρωικὸν ἄμ πεδίον, ὅν ποθ' Ὀμηρος ἔφη Δαναῶν πύκα χαλκοχιτώνων
κοσμητῆρα μάχης ἔξοχον ἄνδρα μολεῖν.

557-8. This celebrated couplet is said to have played an important part in the dispute between Athens and Megara for the possession of Salamis. 558 is omitted by the best MSS. The text was put forward by Solon to establish the Athenian claim before the Spartan arbitrators, but the Megarians said that the true reading was Αἴας δ' ἐκ Σ. ἄγεν νέας ἐκ τε Πολύχνης ἐκ τ' Ἀγειρούσσης Νισαίης τε Τριπόδων τε (Strabo, ix. 394), thus connecting Aias with Megarian towns, but giving no number of ships. The story is alluded to by Aristotle, Rhet. i. 15, and numerous other authorities (quoted in Hentze, Anh. ad loc.; Lehrs, Ar. p. 447), but cannot be regarded as entirely trustworthy. Some said that the line was inserted by Peisistratos. At all events it shews how, during the period of Attic literature, the Catalogue was regarded as having a canonical authority. But the passage as it stands cannot possibly be in its original form; for it would be quite alien from the spirit of the "Catalogue" to dismiss so great a hero as Aias with a single line, or even two.—ἦν in the local sense occurs here, 604, and T 478, in Il.: otherwise it is peculiar to Od.

559. τειχιόεσσαν, the "Cyclopean" walls of Tiryns as great a marvel at the present day as in the time of Homer.

560. κατεχούσας, "enfolding the deep (Saronic) gulf." The word applies of course to the territories, not the cities. There is no sufficient analogy for taking ἐχούσας by itself as intrans. = lying. It is only of Argos in the narrower sense, the city, that Diomedes was king.

564. ἀγκλειτοῦ, as one of the Seven against Thebes, Δ 404-410.

566. Ταλαϊονίδαο, son of Talaos. This is one of a number of patronymics formed with a double termination; another case of -ων + ἰδης is Ἰαπετιονίδης (Hes.) Forms like Πηληϊάδης, Φηρητιάδης, etc., are quite similar; they contain the suff. -ιο- (which itself is capable of being used for a patronymic, as Τελαμώνιος Ἀίας) + ἄδης; cf. on A 1. For the double suffix compare Κορινθ-ια-κό-ι (Angermann, C. St. i. 1). For Μῆκιστός MSS. give Μῆκιστέος or -τέως. See on A 489.

570. Aristarchos observed that when the poet speaks in his own name (here and N 664) he calls the city "Corinth"; but puts in the mouth of the hero Glaukos the older name Ἐφύρη, Z 152.

572. πρῶτα; according to the legend Adrastus had been driven from Argos, and dwelt with his grandfather in Sikyon, where he gained the royal power, but afterwards he returned and reigned in Argos.

575. Αἰγιαλόν, the N. shore of Peloponnese, afterwards called Achaia. τῶν is gen. after νηῶν, ships of these folk.

578. νόροπα is found six times in Il. and twice in Od. (ω 467, 500), always as an epithet of χαλκός. It is generally interpreted "gleaming," "shining," but the derivation of the word is quite uncertain, and of many interpretations that have been proposed none is convincing.

579. πᾶσιν δέ, so Ar.: MSS. δτι πᾶσι. Zenod. obelized this line and the next; 580 seems unnecessary and tautological.

581. κοίλῃν Δ. κητώεσσαν, "L. lying low among the rifted hills." κητώεσσαν no doubt refers to the numerous volcanic ravines which are characteristic of the Laconian mountains. See Buttm. Lexil. s.v. There was another reading, attributed to Zenod. by the Schol. on δ 1, καιερώεσσαν, which was explained as meaning "rich in καλαμνῶδες or καίετος," a herb growing abundantly in the district; but might equally mean "full of clefts," from καίετα; cf. καιάδας, the gulf into which political criminals were cast at Sparta. See Merry and R. on δ 1.

582. Μέσση = Μεσσήνη, Schol.

587. ἀπάτερθε, i.e. Menelaos' contingent was independent of that ruled by his brother. For 590 see 356.

τίσασθαι Ἑλένης ὀρμήματά τε στοναχάς τε.

591. Three cities named Pylos, on the W. coast of Peloponnesos, claimed the honour of being Nestor's home (ἔστι Πύλος πρὸ Πύλου· Πύλος γε μὲν ἔστι καὶ Ἄλλος, Aristoph. Eg. 1059, and Strabo). One was in Elis, and cannot be meant here (see 615-6). Another disappeared in very early times, and was not known to Pausanias; it was in Triphylia, and its claim was supported by Strabo, who thought that it ought to be further north than the third candidate, the famous Messenian Pylos, now Navarino, on account of the details in A 682 ff., where however see the note. There can be little doubt that the last is really Nestor's Pylos. See notes on E 397, I 149 ff.

592. Θρύον, evidently the Θρυέσσα πόλις of A 711.

595. τὸν Θρήικα, "that Thracian." Thamyris, like Orpheus, was one of the legendary Thracians who dwelt in Pieria at the foot of Olympos, and from whom the cultus of the Muses was said to come. In Rhesos, 921-925, the Muses speak of the time

οἱ ἦλθομεν γῆς χρυσόβωλον εἰς λέπας
Πάγγαιον ὀργάνοισιν ἐξησκημένοι Μοῦσαι, μεγίστην εἰς ἔριν μελωδίας δευρὶ σοφιστῇ Θρηῖκί, κάλυψάσαμεν Θάμυριν, ὅς ἡμῶν πόλλ' ἐδέννασεν τέχνην.

596. The poet evidently conceives Thamyris as a minstrel wandering from court to court. This does not seem to be the Homeric view; it is well known that minstrels are not mentioned in the Il., and in the Od. they appear all to be attached to the household of particular chiefs. For the legend of Eurytos of Oichalia (in Thessaly, 730) see θ 224 sqq., φ 13 sqq.

597. This appears to be the only case in H. of ei . . . an with opt. (it is not mentioned either in H. G. or in Ebel. Lex. s.v. ei), but it is virtually equivalent to ei ke with opt., which is not very rare; e.g. A 60, B 123, etc. (H. G. § 813). An with the opt. puts a statement in the form of a merely imaginary supposition (H. G. § 300), and ei shews that this supposed case is made the basis of a conclusion, the apodosis. The oratio recta would have been νικήσω (fut., as A 60) εἴπερ ἂν αὐταὶ μούσαι δέλοινεν. There is no necessity or other justification for saying that the opt. represents the subj. of or. recta: the subj. might have been used (Γ 25, E 225), but would have expressed a more confident tone. (L. Lange, EI, p. 209).

599. πηρός a doubtful word, traditionally explained "blind," as in Aesop, 17, ἀνὴρ πηρός, cf. ἐτυφλώσαμεν in Rhes. ut sup. Others say "maimed," deprived either of voice (so Ar.) or of the right hand: and in this general sense the word is common in later Greek. Ar. referred to θ 64 to show that blindness was no disqualification for a minstrel. Brugman explains it as παF-ros from ραν- (πα-ίω, ραν-ίω) to smite; Curt. Et. no. 356, conn. with πείρω. αὐτάρ is continuative, as 465, etc., "and moreover." ἐκλέλαθον, for this trans. use of the redupl. aor. cf. O 60, and λελαχεῖν always (H 80, X 343, etc.)

604. The Arcadians are never mentioned again in H. except H 134 in a tale of Nestor's, though their sixty ships formed one of the largest contingents to the army. The tomb of Aipyros son of Elatos is mentioned by Pausanias as being at the foot of the mountain Σηπία. See Pind. Ol. vi. 33.

612-4 were obelized by Zenodotos; but they are obviously designed to meet a possible "historic doubt," and cohere with the rest of the paragraph.

615. See A 756 for Buprasion, the Olenian rock, and Aleision, as landmarks of Elis. The four localities in 616-7 seem to be regarded as being at the four corners of the valley known as κολὴ Ἥλως. There is a slight confusion of construction in ὅσσον ἐπὶ . . . ἐντὸς ἔεργει, or in other words the object of ἔεργει is not, as we should expect, and as we find in Ω 544, ὅσσον, but Ἥλιδα, to be supplied from the previous line.

Instead of ὅσσον ἐπὶ, the usual phrase is ὅσον τ' ἐπὶ (H 451, O 358, etc.) There would seem to have been a fourfold tribal division of Elis. Ἑπειοί was the proper name for the inhabitants of Elis, A 688.

621. Ἀκτορίωνε is properly the title of Kteatos and Eurytos (not of course the same as in 596), as "sons of Aktor," at least as putative father. But the patronymic is here, as often, transferred to the grandsons; Αἰακίδης is a familiar case, and Priam is Δαρδανίδης from a yet more remote ancestor. It is better therefore to read the dual with Ar. and A, than to follow the other MSS., which give Ἀκτορίωνος, as N 185. For the curious legends about the sons of Aktor see A 709, Ψ 638.

626. αἱ, Zen. αἱ; but the analogy of ναυετάων as applied to places by a sort of personification (Δ 45, α 404, etc.) is sufficient to justify the reading of Ar.

and MSS. The Echinean islands as a matter of fact lie opposite Akarnania, a considerable distance N. of Elis; but the Homeric geography of the W. coast of Greece is apparently based on imperfect hearsay, not on knowledge. Dulichion cannot be identified. See Merry and R. Od. App. iii.

629. Phyleus had to leave his home because he bore witness against his father Augeias, who endeavoured to cheat Herakles of the reward promised him for the cleansing of the stables. See Pind. O. xi. 28. The people of Meges are called Ἐπειοί in N 692, O 519; this indicates that consciousness of their tribal unity with the inhabitants of Elis which is quite consistent with the legend that their king came to them from there.

632. For the geography of Ithaka see Merry and R.'s App., quoted above. εἰνοσίφυλλον = ἐν-φοσι-, from φοβ-, root of φόβος, etc. (Curt. Et. no. 324) "making its foliage to shake," i.e. with trembling leafage. So Hesych. κινήσιφυλλον, and cf. ἐνοσίγαιος. Νήριτον, v 351, 21.

635. ἀντιπέραια, the coast of the mainland opposite Ithaka (regarded as part of Elis). That the inhabitants of the islands had such possessions on the mainland is consistent with δ 635, where Noemon speaks of crossing over to Elis, ἐνθα μοι ἵπποι | δώδεκα θήλειαι, ἢ δ' ἡμίονοι ταλαεργοί.

637. μιλτοπάρηοι, with cheeks painted with vermillion. This does not indicate so much a personification of the ship as a literal painting of a face upon the bows, the red paint being used as a primitive approximation to the colour of flesh. So φοινικοπάρης λ 124, ψ 271. Though this practice is not expressly recorded otherwise in H., there can be little doubt that it existed then as it did, and still does, all over the world, from Chinese junks to Mediterranean and Portuguese fishing boats, to say nothing of its survival in the "figure-head." In early vase-paintings the ship of war has an animal's head for the bows, generally a pig's snout. The original idea seems to have been to give the ship eyes with which to see its way. Of course the actual painting may in Homer's ships have degenerated into a purely conventional daub; but the epithet in question shows that even in that case some consciousness of its origin had survived. Ar. remarked ἥδη ἡ ἐκ χρωμάτων μῆξις ἦν ἐπιπολάσασα πρὸς τὴν ζωγραφικὴν. Cf. Herod. iii. 58, τὸ δὲ παλαιὸν πᾶσαι αἱ νῆες ἦσαν μιληλιφέες.

641. For the Homeric legend of Oineus and Meleagros see I 529 sqq. Zenod. obelized 641-2, apparently because Meleagros alone is named of all the sons of Oineus. As the Schol. remarks, αὐτοῖς may refer either to Oineus or to Meleagros, according to the punctuation. τῷ δέ, sc. Thoas.

645. The enumeration having passed from Boiotia S. and W. through Peloponnesos and the Western islands to Aitolia, now takes a fresh start from the S. of the Aegæan Sea and passes through the islands to Thessaly. The Cretan towns named are all at the foot of Ida in the middle of the island. See τ 172-7 for the Homeric account of Crete.

646. Κνωσός, Σ 591.

647. Μίλητος, said to be the metropolis of the famous Ionic Miletos.

649. In τ 174 Crete is said to contain ninety cities; a divergence on which, as we learn from the Schol., the χωρίζοντες founded one of their arguments.

651. Ἐνναλίφ ἀνδρεΐφοντη: if this reading is right there is a violent synizesis of -φ ἀν- into one syllable. But perhaps we ought to write ἀδρεΐφοντη, where ἀδρι- is a lighter form of ἀνδρι; and so λιποῦσ' ἀδρότητα II 857, X 363, for ἀνδρότητα, like ἀβρότητα ἀμφι-βροτος, where the β has, like the δ of ἀνδρι, arisen from the nasal, which then disappeared. H. G. § 370, note.

653. The Rhodians, in spite of this elaborate panegyric, are not again mentioned in Homer: of Tlepolemos we have only the account of his death, E 628 sqq. Bergk (Gr. Lit. i. p. 559) regards that episode, as well as the present passage, as interpolated into the original Iliad by a Rhodian bard at about the time of the maritime supremacy of Rhodes, 928-905 B.C. (or possibly later). If so we have a terminus inferior for the age of the Catalogue. It is hardly possible to suppose that a Dorian colony and Herakleid hero were ever admitted to the Trojan expedition by the original legend, in which the Dorians and Herakleidae are elsewhere absolutely ignored (except τ 177); especially as the characteristic triple division of the Dorian tribes is so emphatically insisted upon. The legend of Tlepolemos is given in full in Pind. O. vii.

654. ἀγεράχων, apparently a desperate word; many derivations have been proposed, but not one carries conviction. It is applied by Homer to the Trojans, the Mysians, and once to an individual, Periklymenos, λ 286. In Homer and Pindar it seems to be a word of praise, but later writers use it to mean "overbearing," "haughty." Pindar applies it to things, N. vi. 64, O. x. 96, P. i. 96. It is common in Polybios, Plutarch, Philostratos, etc., though not found in pure Attic. I give without comment a number of proposed etymologies. (1) ἀγαν γεράχως (Ar.): (2) ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀγαν ἐπὶ γέρας ὀχεῖσθαι (Et. Mag.): (3) διὰ τὸ ἀγέλρην ὀχεῖν, τοῦτεστι τροφῇ: (4) ἀγέλρην ὀχεῖν, ὥστε swiftly gathering (Böttcher): (5) ἀγα(ν) ἐρωή (suff. -χο-), violent, impetuous (Göbel): (6) ἀγα-, ἔρα, ἔχω, having much land (Suidas): (7) ἀγαύρως ἔχειν, holding themselves proudly (Pott): (8) ἀγέρως ἔχειν, holding themselves proudly (Pott): (9) adj. ἀγέρως, root ἀγ-, to admire, hence ἀγερῶσαι (Hesych.), and ἀγέρωχος = exciting wonder (Schmalfeld): (10) = ἀγέλρην, the bull proudly leading his herd: Bergk (Gr. Lit. i. 129).

659 = O 531. This river Selleis (different of course from that mentioned 839, M 97, in Asia) was according to Ar. in Thesprotia, in the country of the Σελλοί (II 234); others said it was in Elis, and that Herakles took Astyocheia when he overthrew Augeias (so Strabo).

661. τράφη, for this intrans. use cf. E 555, Φ 279; vulg. τράφη ἐν (as Γ 201, A 222), but without MS. authority.

662. Likymnios was brother of Alkmena. See Pind. O. vii. 27. The homicide was committed in a fit of anger according to Pindar, but another legend (ap. Schol. A) made it purely accidental.

665. γὰρ οἱ MSS. with Ar.; but the neglect of the digamma in the pronoun οἱ is so rare that it is better to read γὰρ οἱ. οἱ ἄλλοι is common enough in H.; e.g. A 75, 264, 524, 540, and many other cases. V. Z 90.

670. There was a legend of a literal rain of gold sent by Zeus upon Rhodes, apparently founded upon this passage and on πολλὸν ὅτε χρυσόν, Pind. O. vii. 50. But this line, according to a Schol.

on Pindar, was obelized. There is no mention of this in Schol. A, where we find however that Ar. obelized the preceding line, taking φίληθεν to mean "they were friendly to one another in spite of the tribal division," and regarding 669 as inserted in order to give another explanation of φίληθεν. καταχέειν is very often used metaphorically, e.g. χάρυ θ 19, etc., ἐλεγχέειν Ψ 408; and Pindar's phrase is probably only a stronger form of the same metaphor, which he would not have misunderstood. The legend of the rain is only a later fiction.

671. Nireus is not mentioned again. The double epanalepsis is unique in H. For τῶν ἄλλων after a superl. cf. A 505. Zenod. obelized 673 and 675, not reading 674 at all.

676. These are small islands among the Sporades: the Cyclades are not mentioned at all. Pheidippos and Antiphos again are named only here: the mention of their Herakleid descent looks as if these lines came from the same source as the Rhodian episode above.

Δήμητρος τέμενος, Ἰωνά τε μητέρα μῆλων,

681. This line, marked by νῦν αὖ as a fresh start, stands as an introduction to the whole of the section about the Thes-salian races, down to 759, and does not belong merely to the forces of Achilles. τοὺς, as though the poet meant to continue ἔσπετε (484) or ἔρέω (493) (Schol. A). The "Pelasgian Argos" includes the whole of Thessaly, and even Dodona in the later Epeiros. For the mythical connexion between this region and the "Achaian Argos" (T 115), Paley refers to Aesch. Supp. 249 sqq., where the king enumerates among Pelasgian lands

τὴν τε Περραίωνων χθόνα Πίνδον τε τὰ Πικεῖνα, Παίωνων πέλας, ὄρη τε Δωδωναίαν.

682. These regions are all in the extreme S. of Thessaly and round the head of the Malian Gulf. The use of Ἑλλάς, as restricted to this region is regular in H. (II 595, I 395, λ 496, etc.) The name Ἕλληνες occurs here only in H. (except Πανέλληνες, 530). Cf. Thuc. i. 3.

685. According to II 170 there were fifty men in each ship, and so with Philoktetes, 719; but in 510 there are 120 on each of the Boeotian ships.

686-694 were atheized by Zenod.; and they have all the appearance of an interpolation intended to adapt to the present juncture of affairs a poem originally describing the departure of the expedition from Aulis. So 699-709, 721-728. (See introduction to Book II.)

ἐμῶντο = ἐμῶνθησκοντο. The only other pres. form from the simple stem is the part. μνώμενος, δ 106, ο 406. δυσηχέος apparently λοττίσσιος as applied to war: αἱ κακὰ ἄχη περιποιῶν, and so Doed.: but the η is then unexplained. Cf. however δυσηλεγής.

687. ἡγήσαιο, potent. opt. without ἀν, as γ 231; cf. T 321. ἐπὶ στίχας apparently "into the ranks," drawn up for battle. Similarly T 353, ἐπὶ στ. ἄλτο: but in Γ 113, ἵππους ἐρυσαν ἐπὶ στ., it means "refrained into ranks," i.e. brought them into line.

691. See Z 397, T 296. Mynes was husband of Briseia.

692. ἐγχεσιμῶρους, v. Δ 242. The anticipation of the story in 694 and 724 is not like Homer; he occasionally alludes to future events as prophetically known to his persons, but does not foreshadow them in his own words. (See Introd. to M.)

696. Ar. expressly says that Δημή- τέμενος is not in apposition with Πύρασον, but is a city called Δημήτριον. But in this case the asyndeton would be very strange; and the analogy of 506, Ποσι- δήων ἀγλαὸν ἄλσος, is strongly in favour of the more natural view. These towns lie near the W. shore of the Pagasaeon Gulf.

699. κάτεχεν as Γ 243. Protesilaos' ship plays a prominent part in the fighting later on, N 681, O 705, Π 286.

700. ἀμφιδρυφῆς, explained by A 393, τοῦ δὲ γυναικὸς μὲν τ' ἀμφιδρυφοὶ εἰσι παρειά.

701. ἡμιτελής ἦτοι ἀτεκνός ἢ ἀφηρημένος τοῦ ἐτέρου τῶν δεσποτῶν ἢ ἀτελειώτος· ἔθος γὰρ ἦν τοῖς γήμασι θάλαμον οἰκοδομῆσθαι (Schol. A). The first explanation is best; he has only half completed his household, as, though married, he has left no son. The last is founded upon Odysseus' description of his building his own marriage chamber, ψ 189 sqq. Cf. also A 227, γήμας δ' ἐκ θαλάμοιο . . . ἔκετο. But δόμος cannot mean "wedding-chamber." The Δάρδανος ἀνὴρ was variously said to have been Aineias, Euphorbos, or Hector; the latter was, according to Proklos, the name given by the "Kypria"; but Ar. held that it was certainly wrong, as Hector was not a Dardanian strictly speaking.

703. οὐδὲ μὲν οὐδ' οἱ, "yet neither were they"; an emphasis is thrown on the οἱ, which is not easily explicable for there does not seem to be any striking contrast with some other leaderless band such as the words would imply. In 726 they come naturally, as two lost chieftains have already been mentioned. The line is therefore interpolated here from 726.

707. ἅμα, so Ar.: MSS. ἄρα with Zenod. 708-9 look like a gloss intended to explain the apparently ambiguous ὁ, and filled up from previous lines so as to make two hexameters.

The towns following (711-15) lie N. and (716-17) E. of the head of the Pagasaeon Gulf.

723. ὀλοόφρων is used in Il. only of animals (O 630, P 21), in Od. only of men (α 52, κ 137, λ 322). There is no other allusion in H. to the story of Philoktetes, but it must have been perfectly familiar as an essential part of the legend of Troy. Zenod. athetized 724-6, probably on this ground. Medon appears again in N 694, but there he is leader of the Phthians with Podarkes (704).

729. There is now a jump from the S.E. to the W. of Thessaly, whence came the cultus of Asklepios, which in historical times had its chief seat in Epidauros. Homer however does not represent him as anything more than a mortal chieftain, Δ 194. κλωμακόεσσαν (ἀπ. λεγ.) τὴν τραχείαν καὶ βρῆ ἔχουσαν, Schol. B: πολλὰ ἀποκλίματα ἔχουσαν, κρημνώδη, Hesych. Der. uncertain; some would connect with κλίμαξ or κρημνός. For Eurytos cf. 596.

731. Ἀσκληπιόο, see 518. MSS. Ἀσκληπιού.

734-5. According to Strabo these were in Magnesia: if so the lines should come earlier, as we have now reached N.W. Thessaly. For κάρηνα of city walls, cf. 117, and Τροίης κρήδεμνα II 100; for the fountain Hypereia, Z 457.

738. We are now in the N. of Central Thessaly, the home of the Lapithae (M 128), near the later Larissa. Oloösson is said to be still, under the name of Ellassona, conspicuous for its white limestone rock.

742. The famous fight of the Lapiths and Centaurs at the wedding of Peirithoos and Hippodameia (τέκετο here must = conceived, v. 513) is mentioned also A 263. κλυτός fem., cf. ε 422, Σ 222, T 88, and even δλοῦτατος ὁδμή δ 442. H. G. §§ 116, 119.

744. The Aithikes apparently dwelt οὐκ οἶος, ἅμα τῷ γε Λεοντεὺς ὄζος Ἄρης, υἱὸς ὑπερθύμοιο Κορώνου Καινεῖδαο· τοῖς δ' ἅμα τεσσαράκοντα μέλαινα νῆες ἔποντο.

 ἵπποι μὲν μέγ' ἄρισται ἔσαν Φηρητιάδαο, τὰς Εὐμήλος ἔλαννε ποδώκεας ὄρνιθας ὥς, in Pindos to the W. of Thessaly. One Demokrines actually read Διθιώπεσσι, putidissime.

745. οὐκ οἶος, the verb to be supplied is of course ἡγεμόνευε (740); 741-4 being parenthetical.

749. The Peraiboi are not mentioned again in H. Their home was in the extreme N. of Thessaly, and as Dodona was in Epeiros, far away to the W., we must suppose either that the tribe had split into two parts, one living to the W. of Pindos, or that there was an older Dodona in N. Thessaly, or that the poet made an error in geography. See note on 681.

751. Τιταρήσιον, the later Europos. What idea the poet had in his mind about the meeting of the rivers it is hard to say. It is said that the Europos is a clear stream which is easily to be distinguished for some distance after it has joined the Peneios white with chalk: but ἀργυροδίνῃ is a strange epithet to use for a river if the emphasis is laid on its want of clearness. The connexion of the river with the Styx is no doubt due to the existence of some local cultus of the infernal deities of which we know nothing. ἔργα, tilth, as M 283, in a purely local sense of tilled fields. The word is of course common in Homer in the pregnant sense of agricultural labour.

755. ὄρκος here, as often, means the object sworn by, the "sanction" of the oath. Cf. O 38, τὸ κατειβόμενον Στυγὸς ὕδωρ, ὅτε μέγιστος | ὄρκος δεινότητος τε πέλει μακάρεσσι θεοῖσιν. For a god to devote himself to the river of the dead is to invoke death, which is a loss of godhead. For ἀπορρώξ cf. κ 514, Κῶκυ-τός θ', ὅς δὴ Στυγὸς ὕδατος ἔστιν ἀπορρώξ, and see Merry and R.'s note there on the rivers of the infernal regions.

760. The ships enumerated amount to 1186. For a calculation of the number of men see Thuc. i 10. If we take eighty-five as mean of the highest and lowest numbers mentioned in a ship's crew, the total will come to about 100,000.

761. For τίς τ' ἄρ see A 8.

763. Φηρητιάδαο, a patronymic applied to a grandson: Admetos, father of Eumelos (714), was son of Pheres. (Of course the horses might be called the horses of Admetos, not of Eumelos.)

765. ὄτριχας οἶτεας, the o- here represents the copulative sa-, as in o-παῖρος A 257, see Curtius, Et. no. 598. The explanation of the i in οἶτης is not clear; it appears to have arisen in some way from the F. Dialectical forms given by Hesych. are δετέα, αδερή, υέρης (Curt. Et. no. 210). Probably the right form here is oFéteas, the first syllable being lengthened by the ictus alone. σταφύλη (distinguished by accent from σταφυλή, a bunch of grapes) is explained by Schol. A as λαοζοικός διαβήτης, ὅς ἑμα πλάτος καὶ ὕψος μετρεῖ, i.e. the still familiar mason's level, consisting of a plummet hanging in a T-square. The der. is dubious, Curt. Et. 219. The sense is that the two mares were exactly of equal height at every point as measured by a level across their backs.

766. Πηρεΐη, according to the old commentators a town in Thessaly. It was early corrupted into the more familiar Πιερίη of most MSS. A gives Πηερίη, the beginning of the corruption, and the text is found only in Eustathius. Valckenaer suggested Φηρεΐη, for it was near Phrae that Apollo served his time in subjection to Admetos, a legend which is evidently alluded to here.

767. φόβον Ἄρ. φορεούσας, i.e. bringing with them battle-panic to the enemy. See the (doubtful) phrase μήστωρε φόβοι, E 272.

770 looks like an interpolation caused by a reminiscence of Ψ 276.

772. ἀπομνηύσας, the apo- here seems to be intensive, as in our vulgar phrase "raging away," giving full vent to his anger. Cf. ἀπεχθαίρειν Γ 415, ἀπαρέσασθαι T 183, ἀποειπεῖν I 309, ἀποθανύμηναι ζ 49; and Lat. desaevire, etc. Schol. Vict. on H 230 says that Ar. wrote ἐπιμνην., but this is very doubtful.

774 = δ 626. αἰγανέησιν, either from αἶξ, as a spear for hunting goats, or from αἰσσω; the former derivation is supported by ι 156, where they are actually used against goats.

777. πεπυκασμένα, wrapped up with covers, πέπλοι, as E 194, to keep them clean while not in use. In Ψ 503 the word seems to be used in a hyperbolic sense, "hidden by its ornaments."

780. We have two more short similes describing the march to battle, in addition to those of 459 agg., to be followed by others at the beginning of Γ. 780 seems to be an exaggeration of 455, and to refer to light, which is as great as if the whole earth were on fire. The idea is not the same as in μάρναντο δέμας πυρός αἰθομένοιο, A 596. νέμοιτο is pass. only here. The act. means "to deal out" or "drive to pasture" (ι 233); the mid. to feed upon (of fire, Ψ 177), to inhabit, or to possess (Z 195).

781. The connexion of Zeus τερπικέ-

παῖος with the phenomena of a volcanic district has been thought to allude to the violent electrical disturbances which often accompany eruptions. "Ἀρῖα is said to be a volcanic region in Kilikia (according to others in Mysia, Lydia, or Syria). But A., perhaps following Ar., gives Εἰναρίμοις, and so Vergil must have read, Aen. ix. 716, "durumque cubile Inarime Iovis imperiis imposita Typhoeo." The metaphor of lashing reappears in the story of the defeat of Typhoeus by Zeus in Hes. Theog. 857, where he is described as a monster with a hundred snake's heads spitting fire, the son of Gaia and Tartaros. So also Pindar, in a magnificent passage of Pyth. i., where his birthplace is given as Kilikia, but his prison as beneath Cumae and Aetna.

785. διέπρησσον πεδίλιο, for this local gen. see H. G. § 149; it "expresses a vague local relation (within, in the sphere of, etc.)." "Note that this use of the gen. is almost confined to set phrases; also that it is only found with the gen. in -οο (the archaic form)." Cf. 801, and ἡ πρὸς ὁδοῦ Ω 264, and note on Α 483.

786. We now come to the Catalogue of the Trojans and allies, introduced by a short narrative.

788. The gate of the king's palace has always been the place of justice and of audience among eastern nations; a familiar example is the "Sublime Porte."

791-5 were obelized by Ar. on good grounds: "if the advance of the Greeks was all that had to be announced, there was no need of the goddess; but if the Trojans lacked courage and had to be persuaded to advance, the goddess must appear in person. When the gods take human shape, they are wont to leave at their departure some sign by which they may be known. The message is not adapted to the tone of a son speaking to his father, but is intense (ἐπιτεταμένον) and reproachful: and the words of 802 do not suit Polites; it is Iris herself who should impose the command." On the other hand l. 798 is rather suited to a human warrior than to a goddess. But the whole passage seems forced, and out of place. 804-5 should belong to a description of the first landing of the Greeks (compare the similar advice of Nestor 362-3, and the building of the wall in H 337-343); and it has been remarked that as a matter of fact the numbers of the enemy must have been largely reduced by the tenth year of the war, especially as the Myrmidons are no longer among them.

798. The tomb of Aisyetes is not again named as a landmark; but other barrows are mentioned in a similar manner, e.g. 811, and the σημα Ἰλίου K 415, Δ 166, 371, Ω 349.

794. δέγμενος, apparently a perf. part. with irregular accent. Cobet would read δέχμενος as a syncopated pres. (a form mentioned in the Etym. M. and found as a variant on I 191 in A); comparing δρμενος P 738, etc. His objection to the text however applies only to the ordinary view that δέγμενος is an aor. form (ἐδέγμην); but δέχεται M 147 is clearly perf. For other cases of perf. without reduplication see H. G. § 23 (οἶδα, ἐρχεται, ἔσσαι, ἰέρεντο, Ω 125, and

- τῷ μιν εἰσαμένη προσέφη πόδας ὠκέα Ἴρις· 795 “ὦ γέρον, αἰεὶ τοι μῦθοι φίλοι ἄκριτοι εἰσιν, ὥς ποτ’ ἐπ’ εἰρήνης· πόλεμος δ’ ἄλλαστος ὄρωρεν.
 ἦ μὲν δὴ μάλα πολλὰ μάχας εἰσήλυθον ἀνδρῶν, ἀλλ’ οὐ πῶ τοιόνδε τοσόνδε τε λαὸν ὄπωπα·

 ἄλλη δ’ ἄλλων γλῶσσα πολυσπερέων ἀνθρώπων·

 ὧς ἔφαθ’, “Ἐκτωρ δ’ οὐ τι θεᾶς ἔπος ἡγνοίησεν, ἔστι δὲ τις προπάρειθε πόλιος αἰπεῖα κολώνη,

one or two other doubtful forms). Or δέγμενος itself might be a syncopated present; there is probably no reason for supposing that the affection of χ by μ is confined to aor. and perfect stems. ναῖσθιν, this form of ναῖς occurs only for an ablative gen., with a specially locative sense. H. G. §§ 154-8.

796. φῶλοι is pred., ἄκριτοι (unconsidered, i.e. long and untimely: see on 246) goes with μῦθοι.

801. προτὶ, so Ar., Aristoph., Zen.: MSS. περί.

802. “Ἐκτορ, σοὶ δέ, for the use of δέ cf. “Ἐφαιστε, σοὶ δέ, Aesch. Pr. V. 3.

804. Cf. Δ 437-8; and λ 364-5, οἳ τε πολλοὺς βόσκει γαῖα μέλαινα πολυσπερέας ἀνθρώπων, where the epithet is more in harmony with the metaphor of men as fed by the soil: here it means no more than “widely scattered.” But if the passage is to be saved from ludicrous weakness, we must omit both 803 and 804; the injunction then becomes, not an absurdly obvious piece of tactical advice, but a call to immediate action, such as the context requires; “let each commander give his men the word (to advance) and lead them against the enemy.”

805. For σημαινέτω cf. A 289.

806. πολιήτας, a Herodotean form not recurring in H.: πολίτης is found only O 558, X 429, η 131, ρ 206.

807. ἡγνοίησεν, “the word which led astray the interpolator of 791-5,” according to Ar., may quite well mean “did not ignore,” i.e. disobey (Schol. A).

809. πᾶσαι ἀντὶ τοῦ θαλάσσης (and so M 340) Ar., i.e. the gates were thrown wide open; because, with the doubtful exception of πύλαι Δαρδανίαι E 789, H. does not seem to have conceived Troy as having any gates except the Skaian. But in all the other phrases (A 65, N 191, 408, 548, etc., and even ε 389) to which Ar. referred to support his theory of πᾶσαι = θαλάσσης, the emphasis lies on the fact that the whole of something is affected when it might have been only a part; the difficulty here obviously is that we can hardly conceive a part of a gate being opened; πᾶσαι could at the most mean that both the σανίδες were opened, not one only, and then it would obviously be an unnatural phrase. It is better to consider the poet as conceiving Ilios, like all great towns, as many-gated, but as only naming the one gate which was specially recorded by his tradition.

811. The tomb of Myrine, like that of Aisyyetes, is not again named in the Iliad; but both names are probably traditional, and do not look like the invention of an interpolator. Myrine is said to have been one of the Amazons who invaded Phrygia (Γ 189). For the language of gods and men see A 403.

813. Βαττία = Brier hill.

816. The Trojan Catalogue is naturally shorter than the Greek, as the poet's interest is entirely on the Achaian side.
It is remarkable, however, as K. O.
Müller has pointed out, that the Kaukones and Leleges are not named, though they appear among the Trojan allies, K 429, T 96, 329: so the Kilikians Z 397. From 816 to 839 we have five Trojan tribes: then follow the allies, of whom three tribes are European (844-850) and eight Asiatic (840-3, 851-877).

818. μεμαότες, for the variation in quantity compared with μεμαότες N 40, see H. G. § 26. The partic. is used without an infin. = eager, N 40, 46 (78, "Dardanelles") see T 215 sqq.

821. Cf. E 313; and for θεὰ βροτῷ

824. These Τρῳῆς are a separate clan who had doubtless split off from the Trojans proper, and settled a short distance away to the N.E. Their country was called Lykia, see E 105, 173. The Aisepos runs into the Sea of Marmora

827. τόξον, "the bow" in the sense of skill in archery, acc. to Schol. A;
for Pandaros had acquired his bow himself, Δ 106 sqq. A similar phrase is used of Teukros, O 440.

828. These towns lie at the extreme N. of the Troad, where the Hellespont opens out into the Sea of Marmora.
Pityeia is possibly the later Lampsakos.
For λινοθώρηξ v. 529.

MSS. give οὐδ' ἐοῦς for οὐδὲ οὐς (σφοῦς).
Merops seems to have migrated from Perkote (v. 835).

835. Towns near the S. side of the Hellespont.

839. αἰθωνες, apparently "sorrel" or brown. The epithet is used to mean (a) shining, especially of iron or bronze, (b) reddish coloured or tawny, of animals (cf. fulvus from fulg-eo), especially the lion, the bull (II 488), and eagle (O 690). Others understand it to mean "of fiery courage," others (v. Ameis on σ 372) "shining" with sleek coats or feathers. It is hardly possible to decide between these; the only important argument urged is that in Θ 185, where Hector's four horses are Ξάνθος, Πόδαργος, Αἴθων, and Αἰμπος, the two first clearly refer to colour; but the last name would support Ameis's interpretation.

840. ἐγγεσιμῶρων, see on Δ 242. This Larisa seems to have lain on the coast of Mysia near Kyme. The same name is familiar in Thessaly, where it also was considered a Pelasgian town; clearly it was a name common to two branches of the Pelasgian race. Cf. P 288 and 301.

844. From here to the end of the book, as pointed out by Schwarz, the tribes named lie along four lines radiating from Troy; the nation at the extremity of each line being distinguished by τηλόθεν or τῆλε. The Thracians, Kikones, and Paiones lie N.W., in Europe: the Paphlagonians and Ali-zones N.E., along the S. shore of the Euxine; the Mysians and Phrygians S.E., and the Maionians, Karians, and Lykians S.

845. ἐντὸς ἔεργει of a boundary on one side only, see 617, M 201, and Ω 544.

846. For the Kikones see ι 39 sqq. They lived on the coast of Thrace.

848. The Paionians are elsewhere described as spearmen and charioteers, i.e. heavy-armed soldiers, not archers (except K 428). Asteropaios is not mentioned among their leaders, although, according to Φ 156, he must, by a strict reckoning of days, have been in Ilios at the time which the Catalogue is made to suit. The Axios (in Macedon, W. of the Strymon) is said to be the Vistritz, now a dirty stream. Herod. mentions the legend that the Paionians were of Trojan descent, v. 13 (vii. 20, 75, 113, 124).

851. λᾶσιον κῆρ, cf. A 189. The "wild mules" are supposed to be Jaggetais of Tartary (equus hemionus, Linn.), a species intermediate between the horse and the ass, of which some rumours must have come westward along the coast of the Euxine. The Ἑνετοί (Strabo Ἑνετοί) were, according to later tradition, the parent race of the Veneti of Venice. In Ω 278 Priam's mules are a present from the Mysians, who were neighbours of the Paphlagonians.

857. Ἀλύβη, according to Strabo, for Χαλύβη: the Chalybes in historical times were famous miners, but produced iron only, not silver; Xen. Anab. v. 5, 1, Strabo, xii. 3, 19. Armenia however, close to them, was the home of silver (v. O. Schrader, Sprachw. und Urgesch., pp. 249, 251). γενέθλη = "birthplace" only here. Paley compares ἀργύρου πηγή of the silver mines of Laurion in Aesch. Pers. 238.

861. ἐν ποταμῷ sc. Φ 15 sqq., where Ennomos is however not named (see however P 218); hence Aristarchos obelized 860-1.

865. Γυγαίῃ λίμνη, cf. T 391: according to Strabo a lake near Sardis, afterwards called Κολήη. Their mother was of course the Νηίς or nymph of the lake. Cf. Z 22, Z 444, T 384. There is perhaps no other case in H. of maternity attributed to a lake, though rivers are often fathers (e.g. Φ 159). There was an old variant λίμνη, apparently introduced to avoid this objection, by making Γυγαίῃ the name of the nymph.

867. βαρβαροφώνων seems to refer only to the harshness of the dialect, as Thuc. remarked (i. 3). H. does not make any broad distinction between Achaeans and barbarians. So Σ 292: ἀγριοφώνους, θ 294.

868. ἀκριτόφυλλον, i.e. with foliage massed together, so that the eye could not distinguish separate trees. According to the Scholia the small cones of the pine were called φθείρες from some fancied resemblance to those insects.

872. ὅς would naturally refer to Amphimachos as the last named, and so Ar. took it: but Schol. A says that Simonides held it to mean Nastes as the principal leader. But perhaps L. Müller is right in regarding 870-1 as spurious, though there is no obvious reason for their insertion. χρυσόν evidently means golden ornaments, such as Euphorbos wore, P 52. As neither of these leaders is named in the fight in the river in Φ, 874-5 must have been obelized like 860-1; there is no schol. to that effect in A, but in the text the lines are actually marked with the obelus.

Γ

The main subject of the third book is the single combat of Paris and Menelaos, into the relation of which are interwoven the episodes of the τειχοσκοπία, where Priam and Helen watch the Greek army from the walls of Troy, and the reconciliation of Helen to Paris after her momentary repentance.

Setting aside Lachmann's captious criticisms, which have been fully answered even by German scholars free from conservative prejudice, the chief objection which has been brought against the book is that it appears to belong rather to the opening than to the tenth year of the war. This is true, at least of the τειχοσκοπία, for we can hardly suppose Priam to have been surprised at the numbers of the Greeks, or not to have known their chief warriors by sight, after so many years of siege. But to the hearer or reader of the Iliad this is the opening of the war, and no further justification for the book, as an introduction to the long tale of battles, is needed from a poetical point of view than the book itself. All the principal actors whom we have not learnt to know in the first two books are, with the curious exception of Diomedes, set before us in the most artistic and natural manner: the frequent mention of earlier events, by allusion or narration, clears the ground for the continuous action upon which we are gradually launched; while the contrast of Menelaos and Paris, and the prominence given to Helen and her subservience to Aphrodite, give the moral bias which guides our sympathy to the Achaian side.

But, though the anger of Achilles is tacitly assumed in his absence from the scene, this book, like the three which follow it, makes no use of the motives of the action so fully set forth in Book I.: the promise of Zeus to Thetis is never mentioned, and bears no fruit till the beginning of Book VIII. Thus this book, with all from the second to the seventh, seems to have been added to the original poem, in which Book I. was followed by a defeat of the Greeks—either, as Grote thought, in Book VIII., or as Christ argues, I think decisively, in XI.

1. The tale is taken up from B 483. ἕκαστοι each tribe, not "Trojans as well as Greeks."

3. The simile is copied by Vergil, Aen. x. 264 sqq.—

οὐρανόθι πρό, before the face of heaven. πρό goes with the locative instead of the gen. in two other phrases, Ἰλιόθι πρό Θ 561, ἡδὲθι πρό A 50. H. G. § 225.

4. φύγον: observe the aor. in the simile—a sort of “gnomic” aor. followed by the present. For ἀθέσφατος v. Buttm. Lex., where the word is explained as a hyperbole, “such as not even a god could utter”; but such hyperbole is not Homeric. But no quite satisfactory explanation has been given of the word.

5. ἐπὶ with gen. = towards, as E 700: H. G. § 200-3. The war of cranes and pygmies (“Thumblings”) does not reappear in H.

7. ἔριδα προφέρονται, apparently our “offer battle,” so θ 210; and ἔριδα προβαλόντες A 529: cf. E 506, K 479. ἥρεια, in early morning, A 497, ι 52, though the significance of the epithet here is not very clear. Verg. Georg. i. 375, seems to have thought, perhaps rightly, that it meant “flying high in the air”; aeriae fugere grues.

8. The silence of the Achaian advance is contrasted with the Trojan clamour again, Δ 429-436, and is one of the very few signs by which H. appears to mark a national difference between the two enemies, who are always represented as speaking the same language.

10. εὖτ' ὄρεος: so MSS. (except ὡς τ' ὄρεος G) with Ar.: ἦντε ὄρεος was read by the editions of Chios and Massilia and others, according to Didymos (Schol. A); this must be an error for ἦντ' ὄρεος. Aristarchus' objection to the latter, that H. does not use the contracted form of this gen., is not convincing, for we might read ἦντ' ὄρεος (disyll. by synizesis), as πόλιος B 811, etc., and the contracted form is actually found in Ἐρέβεν, θάρσεν, θέρεν, θάμβεν (H. G. § 105, 1). In any case εἶτε must here = ἦντε, a particle of comparison, and so it is found again in T 386, but nowhere else. Some commentators, both ancient and modern, have taken εἶτε to mean “when,” making line 12 the apodosis; but this would be a form of expression quite unparalleled in H. ἦντε and εἶτε are indeed doubtless forms of the same word; and though the differentiation in use is general, it does not follow that it is universal. So we use “as” in a temporal sense as well as to express a comparison.

12. τε . . . τε, as often, indicate merely the correlation of clauses. The ἐπὶ, which regularly follows τόσσον and ὅσον (v. on B 616), is construed with it; but according to the canon of Ar. does not throw back the accent on account of the intervening particle (v. Lehrs, Qu. Ep. 75-78). Most MSS. (but not A) read ἐπικλεῖσσει.

13. ἀελλῆς, a ἀπ. λεγ. = rolling together, dense; virtually the same as δολλῆς (ἀ = sa, together: and εἰλεω, root Feλ of ποι-ν-ο). According to Schol. B, Aristophanes read κονίσταλον ὄρνυτ' ἀελλῆς, but there is no analogy for such a substantive as ἀελλῆς.

19-20 were obelized by Ar. (and Zenod. included 18 also) on the ground that a warrior would not be arrayed with a bow and panther-skin if he were challenging heavily-armed foes to combat. But this objection would equally apply to προμά-χισεν above. Ar. and most of the other ancient critics also omitted the δ in 18, but Didymos for once ventures to disagree, remarking that Homer frequently employs phrases like ὁ δέ, etc., without any change of subject. He quotes α. 378, which is not a very happy instance: more appropriate would be A 191 (g. v.) or II 466 (Schol. B).

 Observe that Paris is not challenging to a duel properly speaking, but only to a combat in the midst of the general engagement; for this is the only admissible sense of δηιότης.

23. σώματι, μεγάλῳ ζῶν ἐπιτυχών· νεκροῦ γὰρ φασὶ σώματος μὴ ἄπτεσθαι λέοντα, Schol. A. This is aimed against a dictum of Ar. that H. always uses σῶμα of a dead body; it is better to side with Ar. and consider that H. was ignorant of the habits of the lion to which the Schol. refers, for it cannot be supposed that in such a phrase H. would use σῶμα by itself to mean "animal." πεινῶν, in the emphatic position, may mean that the lion is driven by stress of hunger to this unusual repast. The idea seems to be that a lion lights upon a deer just killed by the hunters, and eats it in spite of them.

25. μάλα, i. e. "greedily," referring to πεινῶν. εἰ περ, "although," as often,
 e. g. B 598.

26. αἰζηοί, a word of doubtful origin, used of men and youths in the prime of life. Benfey derives from αἰλι-ζῆνα (ju-venis, ἦβη, etc.); al. αἰ = ἀν- and ζῆ-, the stem of ζῆν.

28. τίσεσθαι, so A and one other MS.: vulg. τίσασθαι. The fut. is clearly more suitable here, but cf. 112, 366.

33. παλινόρσος, only here in H.; on account of the σ it seems distinct from root ὀρ of παλινδρόμος (or πάλιν δ.) A 326; Curt. conn. with root ὀρ-, Lat.
 err-o: so ἀψορρος (Eli. p. 556).

36. For ἀγερῶχων see B 654.

38. αἰσχροῖσι τοῖς αἰσχύνῃν ἐνεγκῆν δυναμένοις, Hesych. So Ψ 473, αἰσχροῖς ἐνέτιπεν.

39. Cf. A 385. Δύσπαρι, so μήτηρ

 cf. Ἴπρος ἄριος σ 73, Κακοῖλιον, τ 260,

40. ἄγονος should mean "childless," and so Augustus understood the line when he applied it to his daughter Julia; but this sense does not suit the passage, for it was not through his offspring that Paris harmed the Trojans; indeed we hear of no child of his by Helen except in an obscure tradition mentioned by Schol. A, and even that is inconsistent with δ 12. The only good sense that could be got out of the word would be "cursed by heaven" (with sterility) as I 454, which is too weak and indirect to suit the context. The only alternative is to translate "unborn"; and so Eur. Phoen. 1598—

καὶ πρὶν ἐς φῶς μητρὸς ἐκ γονῆς μολεῖν ἄγονον Ἀπόλλων Λαίῳ μ' ἐθέσπισεν φονέα γενέσθαι πατρός.

For τε . . . τε we should rather have expected ἦ . . . ἦ: but as neither wish is possible of fulfilment there is a certain gain of rhetorical force, with the loss of logical accuracy, in combining both into one vehement wish.

42. ὑπόψιον, an object of contempt or hatred, lit. "looked at from below," i.e. with the feelings intimidated by the familiar ὑπόδρα. Aristoph. ὑπόψιον, i.e. publicly, in the sight of all men. For a similar formation cf. πανόψιος, φ 397.

44. Apparently ἀριστῆα is subj., πρόμον predicate; "saying that a prince is our champion (only) because a fair favour is his." Else it must be "deeming

(i.e. having at the first moment deemed) that it was a princely champion (whom they saw)." πρόμος = primus, a superl. of πρό: in use it = πρόμαχος. καλόν seems really to be a predicate, but we can only translate it as an epithet. 45 may represent the words of the Achaeans.

46. ἦ, not ἦ, is the reading of the best MSS., with Herodian and Nikanor; but there is no opposition with what precedes. The question in 52 goes closely with that in 46-51: "can it be that thou couldst bring . . . ? and now canst not thou dare?" 53 then expresses the result, "then wouldst thou find." τοιόσδε ἐὼν, hiatus illicitus, cf. B 8, E 118, T 288, Ψ 263, γ 480, ζ 151, τ 185. ταούτος is an obvious conjecture.

49. ἀπῆς, v. A 270. Observe the alliteration in the next line. In Greek poetry, unlike Latin, this phenomenon is sporadic and apparently accidental: some of the most marked instances in Homer occur in places where no particular effect is produced, e.g. Σ 285, T 217.

51. Cf. P 636, ζ 185; and for κατηφείην, Π 498.

54. The correlation of subj. and opt. is the same as in A 386-7—

εἰ μὲν δὴ ἀντίβιον σὺν τεύχεσι περηθείης οὐκ ἂν τοι χραίσμοις βίος καὶ ταρφέες ἴοι.

In both there is an apparent logical inconsistency, for the subj. expresses confident anticipation (H. G. § 276), which is however based upon a con-

ἦ τε κόμη τό τε εἶδος, ὅτ' ἐν κονίησι μυγέλης. 55
 ἀλλὰ μάλα Τρῶες δειδήμονες· ἦ τέ κεν ἦδη

 τὸν δ' αὖτε προσέειπεν Ἀλέξανδρος θεοειδής·
 "Ἐκτορ, ἐπεὶ με κατ' αἶσαν ἐνέεικας οὐδ' ὑπὲρ αἶσαν, ὀππότερος δέ κε νικήσῃ κρείσσων τε γένηται,

dition considered as purely imaginary: we are accustomed to observe the strict rule of thought, and to make the conclusion as supposititious as the condition on which it is based. But the confidence expressed in these two passages is relative rather than absolute; if the condition be once granted, then the result is certain. So also X 42, q.v. As far as the lines before us are concerned, indeed, we might say that Hector, though he chooses to put the case of Paris' fall as hypothetical only, yet at any rate for rhetorical purposes clearly means to intimate that he does expect it; but this explanation would not apply so well to A 386.

57. Cf. 453. It is pretty clear from the context that the "robe of stone" indicates public execution by stoning, such as the Chorus fear for Aias, πεφύβημαι λιθόλευστον Ἄρη in Soph. Aj. 253. The phrase itself is precisely similar to one which is common in later poetry, but only as a euphemism for burial; e.g. Pind. Nem. xi. 21. Cf.—

τριώματι τῶν Ἰηρῶν ὁ δεύτερος πολλὰν ἀνῶθεν, τὴν κάτω γὰρ οὐ λέγω, χθοῦς τριμυρον χλαῖναν ἐξηύχει λαβῶν, ἀπαξ ἐκάστῳ κατθανὼν μορφώματι.
 Ag. 870-3.

Observe ἔσσο without reduplication, and F neglected (MSS. give λαβον as a dissyllable, which Heyne thinks right).

59. The thought is, "Since thy rebuke is just, I will say no more than this—Cast not in my teeth the gifts of the gods" (64): 60-63 are parenthetical.

61. ὅτ' ἀνέρος, as though εἰς were a passive verb; as often with πίπτειν, etc.

62. The subject of ὀφείλει is of course πέλεκυς. ἐρωή, "effort," as N 590. Paris clearly speaks partly in anger and partly in admiration of Hector's straightforwardness, which thrusts aside without relenting (ἀτάρβητος) all conventional obstacles.

64. πρόφερε as B 251. So Herod. i. 3 τὴν Μηδείης ἀρπαγὴν σφί προφέρειν, iii. 120 εἰπεῖν τινα προφέροντα = to speak tauntingly.

65. ἀπόβλητος = abiectus, contemptible, as B 361.

66. ἐκὼν, even if he would, lit. "by wishing for them" (or rather "as a matter of choice," Mr. Monro); the original participial meaning of the word survives in this phrase, Curt. Et. no. 19.

72. ἔε seems to go with the verb, "aright," i.e. δικαίως. Paley quotes Aesch. Supp. 73, 528, ἀλευσον ἀνδρῶν ὕβριν εἰ στυγῆσας. Some however take it with πάντα as though μάλα πάντα, quite all. There certainly seems to have been a tendency to join ἐν πάντες together, but there is no case in H. where we cannot take ἐν with the verb: in φ 369 we must (τάχ' οὐκ ἐν πᾶσι πιθήσεις, "thou wilt not do well to obey the multitude").

73. The sentence begins as if οἱ μὲν or ὑμεῖς μὲν . . . οἱ δὲ were to follow in distributive apposition; but the change made is a very natural one. ω 483 is precisely similar. φιλότητα goes with ταμόντες by a rather violent zeugma.

74. ναίοντε, either a concessive opt., admitting a possibility (v. H. G. § 299 f), or a real opt. expressing a wish.

78. Apparently interpolated from H 56, as it is omitted by A. Hector holds his spear horizontally in order to press back the advancing ranks. For the "quasipartitive" gen. δουρὸς, see H. G. § 151 a.

80. The construction passes from the partic. to the finite verb, as though not to include stone-throwing under the general head of ἐπιτοξάζεσθαι.

83. στεύεται, has set himself to say something. See on Σ 191.

86. κέκλυτέ μεν μῦθον: this construction is used only here in the sense "hear from me"; κλύειν τι = hear (a sound); Δ 455, etc. The ordinary phrase is κέκλυτέ μεν μύθων, κ 189, 311, etc. We also have κλύειν τινι ἀρῆς, δ 767, where the dat. is ethical.

98. φρονέω may be taken in two ways: (1) "I am of the mind that Arg. and Tr. be at once separated," i.e. I desire to see them separated; (2) "I deem that they are already separated," i.e. I accept the challenge, and think that an end has thereby been put to the war. Of these the former best suits the simplicity of Homeric expression and the ἐπεὶ of the next line; for the use of φρῶνεν, virtually = to hope, cf. P 286, φρῶνεν δὲ μάχιστα | δοῦν ποτὶ σφέτερον ἐρύειν καὶ κύδος ἀρέσθαι.

99. πέπασθε, so A and Ar., for πέπαθε, see H. G. § 22, 5, and compare the participle πεπαυῖα, ρ 556: vulg. πέπασθε, which Curtius takes to be for πέ-παωθ-τε (Vb. ii. 165).

100. ἀρχῆς, the original offence, the beginning of trouble; a pregnant sense, for which compare Herod. viii. 142, περὶ τῆς ὑμετέρης ἀρχῆς ὁ ἀγὼν ἐγένετο. Zenod. ἀτης, to which Ar. objected ἔσται ἀπολογούμενος Μενέλαος διὰ τῇ περιέπεσεν ὁ Ἀλεξάνδρος. ἀτη however is often = sin, and regarded as deserving moral condemnation; see e.g. I 510-12; and certainly Achilles is not "apologising" for Agamemnon in A 412. In Ω 28 Ar. himself read ἀτης (though there was a variant ἀρχῆς), and so Z 356. A more serious objection however is that ἀτη is for δῖ᾽ ἀτην, and that the uncontracted form can be restored everywhere in Homer except T 88, the first syllable being always in thesis.

102. τέθναθι, "may he lie dead," as τέθναθι X 365, spoken to the dead Hector. Compare τεθναῖς, Z 164. Both optatives are "pure," expressing a wish.

103. οἴσετε and ἄξετε (105) are aor. imper. For the sigmatic aor. with the thematic vowel see H. G. § 41. The cases are enumerated in Curt. Vb. ii. 282-4, and explained as due to the analogy of the non-sigmatic (strong) aorists, which prevail in Epic Greek. In Alexandrian times the converse phenomenon is found, as the non-sigmatic aorists constantly take a as thematic vowel (ἤνεγκα, εἶπα, etc.) on the analogy of the sigmatic aorists, which by that time were far commonest.

ἄρν' is probably for ἀρνε, but it may be for ἀρνα. Observe the difference of gender, the male offering to the male god, the female to the female. So also the white ram suits the bright sun, the black ewe the dark earth: cf. λ 33.

108. ἡερέθονται lit. "flutter," are blown about by the wind (B 448), i.e. cannot be trusted. Cf. Φ 386. Ar. obelized this line and the two following: the only reason given is that ἀπολογία ἐστὶν αὕτη ὑπὲρ τῶν παραβάτων Πριάμωδων. This of course is insufficient: the lines quite suit the eminently courteous character of Menelaos. οἷς (109) is left without a very accurate reference by the change of subject to ὁ γέρων (which seems to be employed in a generic sense, not for Priam only).

112. παύσασθαι vulg., but all good authorities read παύσασθαι. The question has been warmly debated, some (e.g. La Roche, Ameis) maintaining that the aor. infin. can be used "apart from the idea of time and duration, to indicate the inception (Eintreten) of an action, even in the future." Later usage of the Greek language hardly bears out this view; and Cobet (Misc. Crit. p. 328) argues that the future can in every case be restored in place of the aor. or pres. infinitive. In one passage at least it is clear that all MSS. are corrupt, for in II 830 ἄξειν shows that we must read κεραϊζέμεν for κεραϊζόμεν. See H. G. § 238, where it is said that "no similar correction can be made in Π. xiii. 666-8, Od. xv. 214." In the latter of these cases the infin. is ἰέναι, which may be a future; in the former it has been suggested that 666 may be parenthetical, and φθίσθαι expegetical of κῆρα. But in δ 254, which is not mentioned either by Cobet or Monro, we appear to have an irreducible case, ῥωσοι . . . μὴ μὲν ἀναφῆναι. This is sufficient to establish the possibility of the use of the aor. infin.; and this once admitted, there is no sufficient reason to read παύσεσθαι here against all authority. Unfortunately MSS. are by no means consistent; A gives τίσεσθαι in 28, τίσασθαι in the precisely similar 366. There is still the possibility of translating "hoping that they had now got to an end"; but this is hardly simple enough for Homer: compare φρονέω διακρωθήμεναι above (98).

115. ἀλλήλων refers to τεύχεα, and ἀμφὶς means "there was but little ground (uncovered) between the heaps of arms." (This interpretation is clearly established by Buttm. Lex. s.v. ἀμφὶς, as against the tradition that ἀλλήλων referred to Trojans and Achaeans, so that ἄρουρα meant the μεταίχμιον between the armies.) See also note on H 342.

120. οἰσέμεναι, aor. as 103. La R. strangely makes it fut., saying that the infin. of these aor. forms is not used; a very unwarrantable assertion in the face of Ψ 111, 564, Ω 663, and four or five other passages. He seems hardly to be conscious of any distinction in sense between the fut. and aor. infin.

121. Iris is introduced as acting on her own mere motion, against the usual rule that she only goes at the bidding of the gods. But cf. Ψ 199, B 786.

124. Cf. Z 252. Λαοδίκην, acc. for dat. by attraction to the case of the relative.

126. δίπλακα, apparently "large enough to be worn double": cf. K 134, Ω 230, ν 224, τ 226. ἐνέπασσεν must mean "embroidered," and cannot be simultaneous with the weaving, though the expression, which is not very exact, seems to imply it; but the Jacquard loom was not invented in Homeric times. For other instances of similar work compare Z 179, X 441 (where there is, as here, a variant μαρμαρέην for πορφυρέην). Helbig (Hom. Ep. p. 153) shows that the use of richly embroidered garments belongs to the early period, while Greece was still under the influence of Asiatic arts, and ceased in the fifth century. One cannot but be reminded of the Bayeux tapestry, on which the ladies of Normandy embroidered their duke's victories.

128. ἔθεν: orthotone, not enclitic, because it refers to the subject of the principal sentence, αὐτὴν αἰτία.

130. νύμφα is the name by which to this day a Greek woman calls her brother's wife. It is no doubt an Aeolic form (see Hinrichs, Aeol. p. 93); the statement of Schol. A, Ἰωνικὰ νύμφα τόλμα, is not borne out by tradition as far as the former word is concerned. Compare δ 743 with Merry and Riddell's note, and H. G. § 92. It appears to be the only fem. α- stem in Homer which forms the voc. differently from the nom. θέσκελα, a word of uncertain derivation. Curtius refers it to root sek, sek, say (θέ-σκ-ελα), comparing θεσφατος (or rather θεσπέσιος). The old derivation θεαῖς ἱκελος (root fik) is obviously impossible.

132. The first οἷ is relative, the second (134) demonstrative. Observe the rhyme in 133, a “Leonine” verse. For the form ἕεται v. Curt. Vb. i. 97: it is for ἕσ-αται = ἕσ-νται*: ἕατο occurs H 414, cf. ἦντο, 153.

138. κε is very rarely found with a partic. in H.: this is probably the only case (except 255), and even here it might possibly go with κεκλήσῃ, but only by violence. Mr. Monro takes it so, however, and says that “the use” (of κεν, or of ἄν only?) “with the participle is wholly post-Homeric,” H. G. § 362, 8.

140. τοκῆων, Leda and Tyndareos, though the latter was only her putative father, v. 199, 426, δ 184: the legends vary as to the paternity of the children of Leda, v. λ 298 (Merry and R.'s note).

141. ὀθόνη, linen veil; v. Σ 595. καλυψαμένη, this reflexive use of the middle, in which the agent is the direct object of the action, is comparatively rare: H. G. § 8 (2).

142. τέρεν, round: Lat. ter-es. The word is used by H. (1) of flesh, Δ 237, N 553, Ξ 406; (2) of tears, Γ 142, Π 11, T 323, π 332; (3) of leaves, N 180, μ 357; (4) ἀνθεα ποίης, i. 449. The ordinary explanation, “tender,” does not suit either (1) or (2), for the flesh to which it is applied is always that of stalwart warriors, not of women or children: it rather indicates the firm rounded muscles (cf. Lat. tor-us). As applied to leaves and bloom it means “swelling with sap,” full of fresh life (so Goebel, Lexil. ii. 406).

144. Aithre daughter of Pittheus was, according to the legend, mother of Theseus. But it is impossible to suppose that she is meant here: ἀπιθανὸν γὰρ ἔστιν Ἑλένης ἀμφίπολον εἶναι τὴν οὕτως ὑπεραρχαίαν, ἣν οὐκ ἐκποιεῖ (it is not possible) ζῆν διὰ τὸ μῆκος τοῦ χρόνου (Schol. A). A legend is quoted from Hellanikos that Peirithoos and Theseus stole Helen when a child; and that in return for the outrage her two brothers captured Aithre and made her a slave. But this may have only been manufactured to suit the present passage, and the coincidence of names must be regarded as purely accidental, unless, which is equally likely, this line is interpolated in allusion to the legend: so Ar., who athetized it. βόωντις is elsewhere applied only to Hera, except in H 10 and Σ 40, of which the latter is a doubtful passage; it arose no doubt at first in the time when the gods had animal shape, Hera being a cow-goddess. Hence the use of the epithet for a mortal woman marks a time when the old tradition had quite died out.

149. Döderlein argues that Ukalegon and Antenor were the two δημογέροντες, “quasi tribuni plebis,” appointed to wait upon Priam and his suite as representatives of the popular party. Antenor certainly appears as an opponent of the royal power in H 347; but such an idea is quite unsupported by any other passage, and implies political development far beyond that of the Iliad. It is more reasonable to suppose that of ἀμφὶ Πρ. κ.τ.λ. means “the party consisting of” Priam and the others, so that Panthoos, etc., are all included among the δημογέροντες, and that the last two names are for the sake of variety put grammatically in the nominative case, in which logically all the preceding may be considered to be. The idiom by which a man is thus included among of ἀμφὶ him is of course familiar in Attic prose, and is found in H. also, B 445, Z 436, Δ 295, O 301, etc. Indeed in later Greek of ἀμφὶ Πρίαμον might = Πρίαμος, and even in Herod. of ἀμφὶ Μεγαρέας = οἱ Μεγαρεῖς (9, 69). δημογέροντες recurs only Δ 372, and there it is used of a king.

152. λειριόεσσαν: it is hard to say how a voice can be “lily-like.” Commentators generally are content to say that the idea of delicacy is transferred from the flower to the sound. The Schol. explain ἐπιθυμητήν, ἡδέαν. It is true that the Greeks felt particular pleasure in the voice of the cicada; but here, instead of such epithets, we should rather expect one meaning “shrill” or “incessant.” The word is applied to the skin in N 830, but the lily is not elsewhere mentioned by H. It looks as though some archaic word had been corrupted into a more familiar form; but it is hardly safe to trust to the gloss of Hesych., who explains λειρός by λοχρός (Paley). Later poets frequently apply the epithet to sound, but that is probably only a reminiscence of this passage. For δενδρέφ Zen. read δένδρει, which Christ accepts, cf. the Attic δένδρεσι, but δένδρεων is established in N 437, δ 458. δένδρεα and δενδρέων, the only other forms, are ambiguous.

153. ἦντο, a unique form for εἶατο, or rather ἦατο, v. Curt. Vb. 97, who says “it is perhaps one of the criteria for the later origin of the τευχόσκοπία” (why?).

Lessing, in a well-known passage of the Laokoön (ch. xxi.), quotes the admiration of the old men as a supreme instance of the manner in which poetry can convey the idea of exceeding personal beauty without any attempt to describe a single feature.

158. οὐ νέμεσις, “there is no place

so νεμεσσητὸν Γ 410, etc.

160. λίπιτο, remain, as I 437. πῆμα, in apposition, as 51, etc.

162. The order is δεῦρο ἐλθούσα ἵζευ πάροιθ' ἐμείο, and ὥς (166) is co-ordinated with ῥφρα Σ 164-5 being parenthetical.
πηούς, kinsfolk by marriage, explained by θ 582, γαμβρός ἢ πενθερός, οἱ
τε μάλιστα | κήδυσται τελέθουσι μεθ' αἰμά τε καὶ γένος αὐτῶν. It may mean “acquainted relations” (πέταμαι).

168. καὶ μείζονες ἄλλοι go together, “also others taller, and that by a

170. γεραρόν, majestic, only here and 211 : see Curt. Et. 129 b.

172. φῶς (σφ) κυρῆ, cf. B 831.

173. θάνατος . . . ἄδειν, a curious phrase apparently founded on the familiar ἥρδανε βουλή. The neglect of the F of ἄδειν (scad-) is very rare (με Fadein, Bentley ; με ἐλεῖν, Nauck).

175. παιδα, sc. Hermione, δ 14. τηλυ- γέτην : the explanation of this much disputed word which now seems to be the most generally accepted is that given by Savelsberg in the Rhein. Mus., 1853,

p. 441. It is explained at length by Merry and R. on δ 11. The conclusion there arrived at is that the word means adolescens, lit. “grown big,” from “τῆλυς = great, and that it indicates an age of from thirteen to twenty or thereabouts. This suits the statement of Sophokles as quoted by the Schol. on δ
4, and Eustath., who say that Hermione was given in marriage while Helen was in Troy, so that she could not have been very young when her mother left her.

178. οὗτος is “anaphoric” not “deictic”; in other words it means “he of whom you ask,” not “this warrior whom you see.”

179. This was a favourite line of Alexander's. ἁμφότερον, exactly our idiom, “both a good king and.”

 τὸν δ' ἡμείβετ' ἔπειθ' Ἑλένη Διὸς ἐκγεγαυῖα·

180. εἴ ποτ' ἔην γε, this phrase occurs in five other places, viz. A 762, Ω 426, ο 268, τ 315, ω 289. It is always, except in Ω and ω, preceded by some form of εἶναι. The meaning seems to be "if indeed it is not all a dream," si unquam fuit quod non est amplius, i.e. si recte dici potest fuisse quod ita sui factum est dissimile ut fuisse nunquam credas, G. Hermann. The doubt expressed is of course only a rhetorical way of emphasizing the bitter contrast between the past and the present. It is perhaps a case of the interjectional use of ei, as in ei δ' ἄγε, "well, I suppose he was!" Curtius' objections to this explanation (Stud. i. 2, 286) are therefore unfounded, and we need not follow him in altering the phrase to ἦ ποτ' ἔην γε, "surely once he was."

182. μοιρηγενές, "child of fortune," born to a happy fate. Döderlein explains "born for destruction (of enemies)," on the ground that μοῖρα means evil fate. But this is only the case in phrases like μοῖραι θανάτου and others; in ν 76 it is opposed to ἀμμορῆ, and clearly means "good fortune": μολῆ γενόμενος would answer to the κακῇ αἰσῇ τέκον of A 418.

183. δεδμήατο, i.e. "are, as I now see, subject to you"; the plpf. being used like the imperf. in ἡμελλον, ἦν (ἄρα), etc.

185. The rhythm shows that Φρύγας ἀνέρας go closely together. αἰολοπώλους, cf. πόδας αἰόλος ἵππος T 404, with nimble horses. πλείστους is predicate, with ἴδον.

188. ἐλέχθην, either "was numbered among them" (λεχ-) or "lay down (bivouacked) among them" (λεχ-). The same ambiguity is found in Θ 519, I 67. H. mentions the Amazons once again, Z 186.

196. κτάλος, the ram who leads the flock, "bell wether": the simile is given again, at full length, in N 492. In later Greek the word seems to be used only as an adj. = tame; its origin is doubtful. See Curt. Et. no. 78. It is better not to mention Bentley's unfortunate emendation of this line.

197. πηγεσιμάλλῃ, thick-fleeced; cf. πηγός of horses and waves, I 124, ε 388. The formation of the word is hard to explain; the analogy of τανυσίπτερος, ἐλκεσίπτερος, ταμείχρως, ἀεσιπόδες, and many others, shows that it must be derived from the verb-stem πηγ-, not from πηγός. H. G. § 124 c.

201. Δῆμος, “realm” in local sense, r. B 547. πρὸς, the idea seems to be, “poor though the soil of Ithaca be, yet it has succeeded in producing a great man.” Cf. § 605.

206. ἀγγελίης ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀγγελος, Ar., a much disputed doctrine. In the present passage we may perfectly well take ἀγγ. as governed by ἐνεκα (as π 384, τῆς αὐτῆς ἐνεκ’ ἀγγελίης) and σεῦ as an objective gen. after it (as κ 245, ἀγγελίην ἐτάρων ἐρέω). So Δ 384, ἀγγελίην ἐπὶ Τυδῇ στεῖλαν Ἀχαιοί, is ambiguous, for we may read ἐπὶ for ἐπὶ: and Δ 140, Μενέλαον . . . ἀγγελίην ἐλθόντα, with the analogy of ἐξοίην ἐλθόντι Ω 235, φ 20. But in N 252, ἡ τευ ἀγγελίης μετ’ ἐμ’ ἤλυθες; U 640, δς Εὐρύσθῃος ἀνακτος ἀγγελίης ἀχρεσκε βίη Ἡρακλεῖη, we must either make the word a nom. with Ar., or read ἀγγελίην with Zenod., or extend the “causal” use of the genitive beyond all analogy, even in the freedom of Homeric usage. The termination -ης for -ας after a vowel in masculines is very rare in H. (cf. Τειρεσίας Αἰγέας, etc.): ταμίης is perhaps the only instance; this also has the fem. ταμίη, only in the concrete sense, not abstract like ἀγγελίη. Nor is there in H. any other instance of the appellative termination -ας, common though it was afterwards. It may be said therefore that the evidence is insufficient for a positive decision, but is on the whole against the Aristarchean doctrine. It is of course possible that the nom. may have been formed by a misunderstanding of the ambiguous passages or similar phrases, but in the case of a word which was so familiar in all periods of the Greek language this is in the highest degree improbable.

209. ἀγρομένοισι, sc. when they first made their appearance in the ἀγορά.

210. στάντων seems to refer to the whole multitude; the dignity of Odysseus is emphasized by his being more stately, when they sat down, even than the man whose shoulders stood out not only above his, but above all the Trojans. ὑπείρεχεν is here intrans., with gen., as ἥλιος ὑπερέσχεθε γαίης Δ 735: ὑπέρχεην in the trans. sense means “to hold over,” e.g. B 426, a sense which does not suit this passage.

211. There is an anacoluthon here; the construction is just like K 224, σὺν τε δὴ ἐρχομένω καὶ τε πρὸ τοῦ ἐνόησεν. In both cases the sentence begins as if ἀμφω (δύο) were to be continued in distributive apposition (ἀπὸ δλου εἰς μέρη) by an ὁ μὲν . . . ὁ δὲ (as σ 95, δὴ τότε ἀνασχομένω ὁ μὲν ἤλασε δεξιὸν ὤμον | Ἴρος, ὁ δ’ αὖχρην ἔλασσαν). But here the second member is forgotten altogether; in K the two are run together into πρὸ ὁ τοῦ. Cf. also μ 73, οἱ δὲ δύν σκοπέλοι ὁ μὲν . . . followed by τὸν δ’ ἕτερον 101. Zenod. read ἐξομένω, apparently regarding ἀμφω as indeclinable (it is not found in H. except in nom. and acc.)

213. ἐπιτροχάδην, fluently (as σ 26), not stumbling for want of words; it is explained by the whole of what follows, παῦρα being taken up by οὐ πολὺ μῦθος, and λιγῶς (which seems to mean clear

- παῦρα μέν, ἀλλὰ μάλα λυγέως, ἐπεὶ οὐ πολὺμυθος, in utterance) by οὐδ' ἀφαμαρτοεπής, "no stumbler in words either" (cf. λ 511, οὐχ ἡμάρτανε μύθων, and N 824, ἀμαρτοεπής). I.e. Menelaos spoke concisely, but what he did say he said clearly and without stumbling.

215. εἰ καὶ, most MSS.; but A has ἥ, and the Aristarcheans seem only to have hesitated between ἥ and ἡ: their testimony is however of less importance because they considered ἥ as virtually identical with εἰ, and the MSS. continually confuse the two words. But ἡ is justified by X 280, ἡ τοι ἔφησ γέ, "yet surely thou saidst so"; so also II 61, H 393. See H. G. § 338.

216. ἀναΐξαν, whenever he rose to speak, στάσκειν being iterative. ὑπαί = "down" only here: the original sense seems to have been "upwards." (H. G. § 201: "even in II. 3, 217 it is the face that is bent downwards; cp. II. 19, 17," which is hardly clear, seeing his eyes are "fixed upon the ground"; ὑπὸ βλεφάρων, "from under the eyelids," is quite different.) For κατὰ with gen. = down upon, cf. II 123, and H. G. § 213.

220. ζάκοτον: the idea seems to be what we call "sulky"; κότος implies resentment rather than open anger, and is thus contrasted with χόλος in A 82. Odysseus, by not employing the outward signs of appeal and persuasion, looks like a man who in deep resentment chooses to hold aloof from his fellows. For φαίης κε = diceret, crederet, cf. 392, Δ 429, O 697, etc. αὐτως, a mere simpleton: A 133.

221. εἶη, so best MSS. (εἶη A, an obvious slip): αἰ. ia, but the opt. is supported by ἀναΐξειεν above.

224 comes in awkwardly here. It must mean "then we no longer thought of being surprised at the meanness of his appearance." Gieseke would put it after 220, interpreting "then we did not so much admire his aspect." The double neglect of the F is suspicious, especially in root Fiδ.

227. τε καὶ, so Ar. MSS. ἡδ'. See Ahrens, Beitr. i. 732; he would read καὶ simply, the length being preserved by the bucolic diaeresis.

228. τανύπεπλος, as a comparison of the other compounds of τανυ- shews, cannot mean "with long robes." It may mean either "with thin robes" and refer to fineness of material as in Lat. leui-is; or, as Helbig argues (Hom. Ep. pp. 132 ff.), "with straight (stretched) robes," thus alluding to the straight lines and smooth surfaces which distinguished early Greek drapery, as he shews, from the flowing curves and folds of the classical period. Cf. note οαῖ ἐκταδίη, K 134.

230. It is remarkable that Aias should be dismissed in one line, and Diomedes altogether omitted: the name of the latter indeed does not occur at all before Δ 365, except in the Catalogue, B 563, 567, and he drops entirely out of the action after A, except in the games in Ψ and one speech in Ξ (109 sqq.). It is not impossible that Idomeneus was introduced into the Iliad after the first draft, and has here supplanted the description of the more famous warriors.

235. γνοίην, "I could recognise and name," a sort of assimilation of the first clause to the second, for "whom I recognise and could name" (Mr. Monro).

237. For another (post-Homeric?) legend of Kastor and Polydeukes v. λ 360 sqq., the only other place where they are mentioned in H. That passage is clearly inconsistent with 243-4, as they are said to have shared immortality after death by alternate days.

238. αὐτοκασινγῆτω according to the grammarians means "whole brothers"; we have not evidence enough of the early forms of the Dioskuri myth to say if Homer regarded them both as children of Zeus; in λ they are distinctly made sons of Tyndareos, and it is probable that Helen herself may have been to H. really his daughter, and only in a more distant degree descended from Zeus. But see on 140. μῖα = ἡ ἀντὶ as T 293: μοι goes with it, "the same as me."

240. δεῦρ' only here for δεῦρο; the quantity of the last syllable is however merely due to the ictus, and we should write δεῦρο. Cf. δύω by δύω. If we write ἦ—ἦ with Nikanor, the two suppositions take the form of alternative assertions; Herodianus preferred ἦ—ἦ when we must put a note of interrogation after ἔστιν. See H. G. § 340.

241. αἶθε = δέ, αὐτάρ, A 237, etc.

242. αἴσχεα, ὀνειδέα, in objective sense, the insults and revilings of men.

243. Observe the way—to our idea inappropriate—in which the conventional epithet φυσίζοος is introduced.

244. αἶθε, "there," i.e. in their own place. For φῶλη Zenod. read ἐπ', "their," which was probably rejected by Ar. on the ground that ἐπ' could not be used for the 3d pers. plural. See on A 393.

245. ὄρκια here and 269, "oath-offerings," including wine as well as victims; in the phrase ὄρκια τάμνειν, 252, the victims alone are signified, properly speaking; but the original signification of the phrase became so conventional that ultimately ὄρκια = a treaty, e.g. Δ 269, and even the sing. ὄρκιον is found, Δ 158. Buttmann has an excellent article on the Greek conception of oaths (Lexil. s.v.).

κῆρυξ Ἰδαῖος ἥδ' ἐ χρύσεια κύπελλα·

257. ναλοῖμεν, as ναλοῖτε 74; but for that line we might, with Faesi, supply κε from 255, unless indeed it goes with the participle (v. 138). νέονται in fut. sense.

259. ἑταίροις, so Ar. and Zenod. with best MSS.: al. -οις. The construction with dat. is common in H., and is found also in Attic: Thuc. 8, 38, etc. The rarity however of the short form of the dative, except when elided, is in favour of the accusative.

261. τεῖνεν, drew back so as to tighten them; they were tied to the front rail when there was no one in the car, E 262, etc.

262. Didymos (Schol. A) says προκρίνει μὲν τὴν διὰ τοῦ ε' γραφὴν βήσετο (MS. βήσετο), πλὴν οὐ μετατίθησι ἀλλὰ διὰ τοῦ α' γράφει ὁ Ἀρίσταρχος (see also on I 222). There is no doubt that βήσετο is right; see on 103. It is possible that Ar.'s hesitation may have arisen from a doubt whether βήσατο might not here be used transitively like the active, in the sense “drove the chariot,” and not from overdue regard to his authorities.

263. Σκαιῶν without πυλῶν only here. ἔχον, “drove,” as often.

264. μετὰ, simply “to the place where they were.”

265. ἐξ ἵππων, out of the chariot. ἵπποι is continually used in this sense, even with adjectives which properly apply only to the horses; e.g. P 504, ἐπ' Ἀχιλλῆος καλλιτέρχῃ βήμεναι ἵππω.

270. The wine used in treaties was not mingled with water (v. B 341, Δ 159). The Schol. explain that here the Trojan and the Achaean wine is all mixed in one bowl, and the obvious typical significance of such an act renders the explanation most probable. Compare the scene of the oath in Verg. Aen. xii. 161 sqq.

Ἄτρεϊδης δὲ ἐρυσσάμενος χεῖρεσσι μάχαιραν, ἣ οἱ πὰρ ξίφους μέγα κουλεὸν αἰὲν ἄωρτο, τοῖσιν δ' Ἄτρεϊδης μεγάλ' εὐχέτο χεῖρας ἀνασχών· 275 “Ζεῦ πάτερ, Ἰδθηθεν μεδέων, κύδιστε μέγιστε, ἥελιός θ', ὃς πάντ' ἐφορᾷς καὶ πάντ' ἐπακούεις, καὶ ποταμοὶ καὶ γαῖα, καὶ οἱ ὑπένερθε καμόντας ἀνθρώπους τίνυσθον, ὅτις κ' ἐπλόρκον ὁμόσση,

271. μάχαιρα, the sacrificial knife, never mentioned by H. as a weapon, and not to be confused with the sword, ξίφος or φάσγανον. See note on Σ 597.

272. ἄωρτο, for this form see Curt. Vb. ii. 219. It is from ἀείρω (for ἀφέρω, root var, to lift up, Et. no. 504), and is the only certain instance in the perf. pass. of the development of the e-sound into the o-sound, which is so common in the active, unless ἐδήδοται, χ 56, is genuine. For the sense “hung, dangled,” cf. παρήρηθη, Π 341, and δορήθη, Α 31, etc.

273. This cutting off a lock of hair from the victims' heads is called τρίχας ἀπαρχεσθαι in the parallel pass., T 254; cf. ξ 422, ἀπαρχόμενος κεφαλῆς τρίχας ἐν πυρὶ βάλλειν. The hair is regarded as a foretaste of the victim, and was no doubt a devotion of the whole body to the gods (see 310). It is not burnt here, because no fire is used in the oath-sacrifice, the victims being buried. Every one of the chieftains takes a portion of the hair in order to participate in the sacrifice.

276. Ζεῦ . . . ἥελιός, according to the rule, which is found in Sanskrit also, that “where two persons are addressed connected by τε, the second name is put in the nominative,” H. G. § 164. But τ 406 is an exception, if the text is right, γαμβρός ἐμὸς θύγατερ τε. For the oath compare T 258. Here Zeus is named the god of Ida, and the Rivers, which are local divinities, are included, no doubt because the Trojans are parties.

278. καμόντας used to be explained “those that have passed through the toil of life,” as though κεκμηκότες, laboribus functi; or “men outworn,” ἀμνηροί, of the feeble shadows of the dead; Nägelsbach, “those that endured ill in life” = δειλοί βροτοί as opposed to the happy gods. But Classen explains “those that grew weary, succumbed to the toils of life” = θανόντες. This best suits the aor. part., and is now generally accepted; v. Merry on λ 476. The phrase recurs also Ψ 72, ω 14. οἱ . . . τίνυσθον must mean Zeús τε καταχθόνιος καὶ ἑπαινή Περσεφόνεια (I 457). We should have expected the Ἐρινύες, as in the parallel passage, T 259, Ἐρινύες αἱ θ' ὑπὸ γαίαν ἀνθρώπους τίνυσται, ὅ τις κ' ἐπλόρκον ὁμόσση. Zenod., who regarded the dual and plural as identical, said that the avengers were Minos, Rhadamanthos, and Aiaikos, but this is certainly not Homeric. And even if, with some modern philologists, we hold that the plural was originally developed from the dual, and that in Homer there still are traces of their primitive identity, we should still have to read οἱ for αἱ if the Erinyes are to be brought in. (La Roche and Nauck would read τίνυσθε, holding that the change was needlessly made in order to avoid the hiatus, which is allowable in the caesura.) Nitzsch, in his note on λ (p. 184 sqq.), raises a more serious question as to this present passage. He says that the idea of punishment after death is entirely alien to Homer's conception of the underworld; vengeance for sins is taken by the gods in this life only. The punishments of Tityos, Tantalos, and Sisyphos (λ 576-600) occur in an interpolated passage. The two oaths (here and in T) are the only inconsistent places; and in T he would take ὑπὸ γαίαν with αἱ τε, not with the verb, “Ye that, dwelling beneath the earth (for which see I 568), punish men,” a possible construction, though a very harsh one. If this be so, it follows that καμόντας in this passage cannot be right. I do not see how the force of these objections can be either denied or explained away, and can only leave the problem unsolved.

285. Τρῶας ἀποδοῦναι, usually explained by an ellipse of δοτε, a very unscientific resource. It is clearly a case of “the infin. for the imperative,” however we explain that. This is one of the few cases where this infin. occurs for an imper. of the 3d person; in the 2d pers. the subject is put in the nom., E 124 θαρσύνων νῦν . . . μάχεσθαι, X 259 ὥς δὲ σὺ ρέξῃς. We also have in the 3d pers. ἦ δὲ . . . θεῖναι Z 87-92, but this is after an interval of several lines. (In Ψ 247, quoted in H. G. § 291, λίπησθε shews that the 2d person is in the speaker's mind.) We must therefore either suppose that the accus. is employed when the 3d pers. is signified, or, which is not improbable, that Τρῶες is the right reading here, altered to suit the more familiar construction. But it may be remarked that a person directly addressed is vividly present to the speaker's mind as the subject of the verb, and hence naturally is in the nominative; but when he is only spoken of indirectly in a prayer, he becomes in a sense the object of the prayer; thus the Trojans here are regarded virtually as objects in relation to the gods of the oath, who are called upon to be the active parties.

The accus. may thus to some extent be accounted for, and a certain sense is given to the “ellipse of δοτε.” Cf. also B 413, H 179, with η 312, ω 376 (1st pers.); and T 258 αἶψα.

287. πέληται goes closely with μετά, lit. “go about among men.” Cf. κλαγγὴ πέλει οὐρανὸν πρό, Γ 3; σέο δ' ἐκ τάδε πάντα πέλονται, N 632; αἰσχος λῶβη τε μετ' ἀνθρώποισι πέλοντο, σ 225, where the nouns are subjects, as here, not predicates. For the pure subj. in a relative final clause see H. G. § 232.

289. Observe the very rare use of ὅ after εἰ ἂν with subjunctive; the negative appears to go very closely with the verb, as οὐκ εἰδῶσι, T 139. H. G. § 316 ad fin. Ἀλεξάνδροιο πεσόντος does not seem to be quite a gen. absolute, though it nearly passes into one; it depends on τιμῇ, though the connexion is rather loose, “pay me the price arising from the fall of A.”

295. ἀφυσσόμενοι, so Ar.: αἰ. -άμενοι: but the pres. (imperf.) participle better expresses the continued repetition of the act by many people. They take the wine in small cups from the κρητῆρ of 269.

299. ὑπὲρ ὄρκια, by transgressing the oaths (cf. ὑπερβάσις, 107, and ὑπὲρ αἰσῶν): πημήνεια, the object is seen to be "the other party," from Δ 86, Ἀχαιοὺς ὑπὲρ ὄρκια δηλήσασθαι: so also Δ 236. MSS. here and in Δ give ὑπερὸρκια as an adv.; but this is not a likely compound, in spite of the analogy of ὑπέρμωρα. The opt. shews that the infraction of the treaty is regarded as a purely imaginary case (or possibly there may be an attraction to the following opt. ῥέει, the prayer being the uppermost thought in the speaker's mind. Cf. ὡς ἀπόλοιτο καὶ ἄλλος τις τοιαυτὰ γε βέροι, α 47; and Z 59).

300. The original symbolism of the libation was merely that of drink given to the gods to please them, e.g. H 480. The occasion here suggests a different thought, which however we can hardly suppose to have been inherent in the libation at an oath. Cf. however Liv. i. 24, si prior defecit publico consilio dolo malo, tu illo die Iuppiter populum Romanum sic ferito ut ego hunc porcum hic hodie feriam (quoted by Näg.).

301. αὐτῶν after σφι, as λ 75, μοι—ὕδρις δυστήναια. The construction is common with participles, e.g. Z 26, § 157 (with M. and R.'s note). (See H. G. § 240 n, which does not take sufficient account of these constructions.) For the dat. ἄλλοισι with the pass. verb, H. G. § 148 n, 5.

305. On ἡνεμόεσσαν Prof. Virchow

(App. to Schliemann's Ilios, p. 682) makes the following comment: "Our wooden huts (at Hissarlik) which had been put up at the foot of the hill, well below the level of the old city, looked straight down upon the plain from a height of at least 60 feet, and the winds blew about us with such force that we often felt as if our whole settlement might be hurled down the precipice." For ἡνεμόεσσαν we should doubtless read ἀνεμόεσσαν, the α being lengthened by the ictus, as in ἀθάνατος, ἀπονέεσθαι, etc.

306. οὐ πῶ = οὐ πως, in no wise. The two forms were of course originally identical (cf. οὐτω by οὐως), and their differentiation is not complete in Homer. It is only by great violence that the sense "not yet" can be brought in. Cf. also M 270, i 102, etc. (Some would always read πως in this sense.)

310. The taking away of the victims is strange: the Schol. says ἔθος ἦν τὰ ἐπὶ τοῖς ὄρκοις γιγνόμενα ιερεῖα τοῖς μὲν ἐγχώριοις γῇ περιστέλλειν, τοῖς δὲ ἐπὶ ἑλκας εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν ῥίπτειν. This is probably only a deduction from the present passage and T 267, g.v. Perhaps the victims were supposed to carry with them the power of vengeance, and were kept at hand to watch over the fulfilment of the oath.

311. Observe ἔβαινε here compared with ἔβη 261 and βήσετο 312. It seems hypercritical to attempt to draw a distinction here between the two tenses.

313. The schol. on this line is a delicious specimen of the spirit in which Porphyrius and his school invented and solved their “Homeric problems.” διὰ τί χωρίζεται ὁ Πρίαμος; καὶ οἱ μὲν φασιν ὅτι ἵνα ἀφ' ὧν κρείσσον θεωρήσῃ ἀπὸ τῆς πώλεως τὴν μονομαχίαν, οἱ δὲ, ἵνα φυλάξῃ τὰ τεύχη. 316. πάλλον, the actual shaking up of the lots, which is always done by one person, comes in 324; hence it has been proposed to read βάλλον from H 176, but there is no authority for the change, which is not necessary. The line is in fact a formal one, recurring Ψ 861, κ 206.

317. ἀφείη seems to represent a deliberative subj. of the or. recta. We might be inclined to read here ἀφείη or ἀφῆη, but for ι 331, πεπαλάχθαι ἄνωγον | ὅς τις πολμήσειεν.

318. Nikanor and two or three MSS. read ἠρήσαντο θεοῖς, idē, but only the frivolous reason is given that the text would imply that they were praying to others than the gods to whom they lift their hands: ὡς ἑτέροις ἔσονται θεοῖς ἀνατείνοντες τὰς χεῖρας.

325. Πάριος, the only instance of a case from this stem except nom. and acc.; the gen. and dat. are elsewhere always Ἀλεξάνδρου -ψ.

326. ἐκάστου, so Ar.: MSS. ἐκάστῳ.

327. ἔκειτο belongs to τεύχεα only, both in syntax and sense; with ἵπποι supply ἦσαν. Cf. K 407 τοῦ δὲ οἱ ἵπποι, Φ 611, ξ 291, etc., and see note on E 356.

330 sqq. Cf. A 17 sqq., Π 131 sqq., T 369 sqq. The six pieces of armour are always mentioned in the same order, in which they would naturally be put on, except that we should expect the helmet to be donned before the shield was taken on the arm. The ἐπισφύρια were either plates covering the ankle, attached to the lower edge of the greaves, or more probably a clasp fastening them round the ankle. Unfortunately the monuments of archaic art do not give any illustration of such clasps, and the greaves which survive shew no sign of any fastening beyond the natural elasticity of the metal clasping the leg.

333. Lykaon's cuirass, because Paris himself is always light-armed; v. 17. ἥρμοσε probably trans.; “he made it fit

There is a variant here, read by Zenodotos : κρατὶ δ' ἐπ' ἰφθίμῳ κυνέην εὐτυκτον ἔθηκεν ἵππουριν, δεινὸν δὲ λόφος καθύπερθεν ἔνευεν· εἵλετο δ' ἄλκιμον ἔγχος [δ' οἱ παλάμηφιν ἀρήρει] ἀμφὶ δ' ἄρ' ὤμοισιν βάλετ' ἀσπίδα τετραπέσσαν (i.e. θυσανέσσαν). The order here is the more natural, the shield coming last.

336. κυνέην, simply "a helmet," nothing being implied as to the material: v. on K 335, J. H. S. iv. p. 298.

340. ἐκάτερθεν, explained by the glossaries ἐξ ἐκατέρου μέρους, ἐκατέρωθεν, on either side of the throng, i.e. either combatant retiring to the rear of his own army.

346. δολιχόσκιον: Autenrieth quotes from a German review of an edition of the Makamat-al-Hariri, "the Arabs declare that the shadow of the lance is the longest shadow. Before the first morning light the Arabian horseman rides forth, and returns with the last ray of evening: so in the treeless level of the desert the shadow of his lance appears to him all day through as the longest shadow." This is obviously less applicable to the Greek soldier, but still affords sufficient justification for the ordinary explanation of the epithet, which has recently been disputed by Düntzer, who proposes to derive it from δοχος, as = with long shaft. But δοχος (which does not occur in H.) means a young shoot, tendril, not a branch, much less a shaft.

347. πάντοσ' εἶσιν, commonly explained "circular." There are supposed to have been two sorts of shields, one small and circular, the other large and oval, to cover the whole body, ἀμφιβρότη or ποθηνετής. But this very shield is called μέγα τε στιβαρόν τε a few lines above, and that of Aeneas in T is πάντοσ' εἶσιν in 274, ἀμφιβρότη in 281. So N 405, Idomeneus κρύφθη ὑπ' ἀσπίδι παντός' εἶσιν. It is absurd to suppose that even Homeric heroes carried a circular shield five feet or more in diameter. There is therefore something to be said for Döderlein's derivation of εἶσιν from root Fiδ, ε-Fiδ-σ-η, "conspicuous from every side," i.e. brilliant from the shining metal (see note on A 306). It thus = φαεινός, a common epithet of the shield; cf. χαλκῷ παμφαῖνον Z 11, and perhaps πανόψιον ἔγχος Φ 397. So also φρένες ἐνδον εἶσαι, λ 337, etc. = the mind bright within a man.

348. χαλκός, so A with Ar., al. χαλκόν. The same is the case in the repetitions of the phrase, H 259, P 44. H. always uses χαλκός of weapons of offence, not of the shield; and the following αἰ requires an expressed subject to refer to (La Roche).

- 'Ατρείδης Μενέλαος, ἐπευξάμενος Διὶ πατρί· 350

352. Obelized by Ar. on the ground that it is not necessary, and that Menelaos should not apply the word δῖον to his foe. But the epithet is purely conventional, v. X 393, Z 160, γ 266, and cf. ἀμύμων α 29. For δάμασσον Ar. read δαμῆναι, which Ameis supports mainly on the ground that it gives more force to M.'s words that he should pray to be himself the conqueror, not a mere tool in the hands of Zeus.

357. διὰ, the lengthening of the ι is due to the ictus; cf. Πριαμίδης, συβότα (A 679), etc.; see H. G. § 386.

358. ἡρήρειστο, forced its way. ἐρείδεν properly = to press; the sense “to lean” one thing upon another is secondary.

362. ἀνασχόμενος, lifting his hand; so X 34 κεφαλὴν δ' ὃ γε κόψατο χερσὶν | ὑψόσ' ἀνασχόμενος, and of two boxers “squaring up,” Ψ 660 πύξ μάλ' ἀνασχομένη, and Ψ 686. φάλον. In J. H. S. iv. 293 I have endeavoured to prove that the φάλοι were metal projections, originally representing the horns and ears of the wild beast's scalp, out of which, as there is reason to believe, the Greek helmet was originally developed. These projections took various forms, sometimes becoming an upright excrescence immediately over the forehead, and such we must suppose to be the case here; cf. K 258. The explanation of Buttman, that the φάλος was the ridge on the helmet into which the crest was fixed, fails to explain the epithet τετράφαλος. Autenrieth thinks that this may mean a ridge composed of four layers of metal; but the evidence for this is weak, and the peculiarity hardly seems important enough to supply an epithet. See also Helbig, Hom. Epos, pp. 207 ff., where Buttman's view is further, but I think not sufficiently, defended. MSS. αὐτῷ: if this is right it ought in Homeric usage to mean Menelaos and not the φάλος. But Ar., and according to Schol. V, αἱ χαριέστεραι καὶ πλεονες (sc. editions, ἐκδόσεις) read αὐτῇ; this would mean the body of the κόρυς as opposed to the φάλος, and thus removes the difficulty.

365. For similar chiding of the gods in momentary ill-temper cf. M 164, N 681, v 201; and for ὀλωότερος = more baneful, mischievous, ἐβλαψάς μ', ἐπέεργε, θεῶν ὀλωότετε πάντων, X 15.

366. τίσασθαι, here Cobet would read τίσεσθαι (v. on 112), but the fut. sense is not absolutely necessary; Menelaos may mean “I thought (when I had the opportunity to give the blow) that I had gotten my vengeance.”

367. Observe ἄγη beside ἐάγη. Possibly ἤϊχθη παλάμηφιν ἐτώσιον, οὐδ' ἔβαλόν μιν."

ἡ καὶ ἐπαίξας κόρυθος λάβεν ἵπποδασείης, ἔλκε δ' ἐπιστρέψας μετ' ἐυκνήμιδας Ἀχαιοῦς· 370

the latter word contains a double augment like the post-Homeric ἔαλων. Autenrieth (in Ameis, Apheg) suggests that there may have been a nasalized form of the root (F)αγγ beside Fαγ, and that ἐάγη comes from the former with compensatory lengthening.

368. παλάμηφι after ἐκ, cf. οὐρανόθι τρώ, I. 3, and H. G. § 156. οὐδ' ἔβαλόν μιν, so MSS.: Ar. οὐδ' ἐδάμασσα, on the ground that βάλλω was used only of a blow with a missile.

369. κόρυθος, by the helmet: cf. II 406, ἔλκε δὲ δούρος ἐλάων.

371. πολέκεστος for πολέκεντος "ὁ πολέκεντος· ἐκ δὲ τούτου ὁ ποικίλος δηλοῦται (leg. δηλονότι) διὰ τὰς ῥαφάς," Aristeon. Cf. κεστός of the girdle of Aphrodite, Z 214; and ἡέστας Z 94.

372. τρυφαλείης, properly an adj., sc. κόρυθος. Generally explained as = having a peak pierced for the eyes, a sort of fixed vizor. Autenrieth (Dict. s.v.) thinks it means that the φάλος was pierced with holes to receive the tufts of which the crest was formed. But Fick is probably right in explaining it as = τερνυφάλεια, where τερνυ- = quadrū; the first syllable being dropped as in τράπεζα = τετράπεζα.

373. For ἦρατο Cobet (M. C. p. 400) would read ἦρετο, this being the regular form in H. So also Z 510, Σ 165, X 393, δ 107, etc.

375. Ἰφι κταμένοιο, because such leather would be better than that of an animal which had died of disease. "Hence in Hes. Opp. 541 shoes are ordered to be made of the hide βοὸς Ἰφι κταμένοιο" (Paley). Ἰφι looks like an instrumental of ἴς = vis; but the stem in Greek seems to be iv- (plur. ives). It may therefore be the neut. of an adj. Ἰφίς, occurring else only in the phrase Ἰφια μήλα.

380. ἔγχεϊ, apparently a second spear (cf. I. 18), though only one is named in the arming of Paris, 338: but see A 43.

381. ὥς τε θεός, as being a goddess, as may be expected of a goddess. Cf. Σ 518.

382. κηώνεντι; apparently from *κῆφος = incense (kalō), i.e. fragrant, cf. κηώδης, Z 483. But the tautology ἐνώδεϊ, κηώνεντι has led some to derive it from *καφος = cavus, as if = "vaulted."

388. ἦσκειν, so Ar. apparently; but τῇ μιν εἰσαμένη προσεφώνεε δι' Ἀφροδίτη· “δεῦρ' ἴθ', Ἀλέξανδρός σε καλεῖ οἰκόνδε νέεσθαι.

there is no other case in H. of the parag. in the contracted form of the third sing. imperf. It is frequently found, however, in MSS. in the analogous third sing. plupf., e.g. E 661, 899. But doubtless the original reading was ἦσκεε Felra. There is no certain trace of the F in this root in H., but we know it existed; Knös, de Dig. Hom. p. 98, Curt. Et. no. 496. The subject of φιλέσκειν is Helen, not γραιῖς.

391. κείνος, as though pointing to him; T 344, etc. δινωτοῖσι, cf. τ 56, κλισίην δινωτὴν ἐλέφαντι καὶ ἀργύρῳ. Ariston. explains ἦτοι διὰ τὸ τετορνεύσθαι (turned in a lathe) τοὺς πόδας, ἣ διὰ τὴν ἐντασιν τῶν ἰμάντων (i.e. apparently, that the leathern straps—for which see ψ 201—were tightened by twisting or winding them). But this latter does not suit the chair in τ, while the idea of “turning” is not easily connected with ivory and silver ornament. In N 407 a shield is ῥινοῖσι βοῶν καὶ νύροσι χαλκῷ | δινωτῇ where the circular plates of the shield are meant. The most probable explanation of the word here is “adorned with circles or spirals” of silver or the like, inlaid. This pattern is of high antiquity, being found e.g. by Dr. Schliemann at Mykenai in profusion. See the illustrations in Murray, Hist. Gr. Sculpt. pp. 38-40, “the forms which most naturally arise from copper working are spirals and circles, into either of which a thread of this metal when released at once casts itself.” The use of ἀμφιδεδνηται is similar in θ 405, ψ 562.

396. Aristarchus rejected 396-418 on the grounds (1) that the goddess could not in the person of an old woman have the outward beauty described in 396-7, (2) that 406-7 are βλάσφημα, (3) that 414 is εὐτελής κατὰ τὴν δianoian, beneath the dignity of the goddess. These arguments are not weighty enough to prevail against lines which are spirited and thoroughly Homeric. With regard to (1) it may be remarked that the goddess takes a disguise primarily in order to remain unknown to the bystanders, not to Helen; the gods in such cases often give some sign which reveals them to those to whom they speak, see N 72, ἀργύρωτο δὲ θεᾷ περ, where Poseidon has appeared in the character of Kalchas.

399. For the double acc. with ἡπεροπεύειν cf. Xen. Anab. v. 7, 6, τοῦτο ὑμᾶς ἐξαπατήσαι, ὥς.

400. πολλῶν may be a partitive gen. after πῇ, but it is more in accordance with Homeric use to take it in the vague local sense, lit. “lead me any farther on in the region of cities, whether of Phrygia or Maionia.” These regions of course are mentioned as being farther eastward, away from home.

400-405. The punctuation is that of Lehrs and Ameis. Most editors put notes of interrogation after ἀνθρώπων and παρέσσης, and a comma after ἀγεσθαι. But οὐνεκα regularly follows the clause of which it gives the explanation; Lehrs (Ar. p. 57 a) denies that two clauses correlated by οὐνεκα-τοῦνεκα occur in Homer; he would also put a full stop after ἔργα in N 727-9, q.v. and cf. A 21-3. αὶ by itself with indic. also appears not to occur in an interrog. sentence (Hentze, Anh.) Thus the victory of ἄξεις ἢ Φρυγίης ἢ Μηονίης ἐρατεινῆς, εἴ τίς τοι καὶ κεῖθι φίλος μερόπων ἀνθρώπων, οὐνεκα δὴ νῦν δῖον Ἀλέξανδρον Μενέλαος νικήσας ἐθέλει στυγερὴν ἐμὲ οἴκαδ' ἄγεσθαι· τούνεκα δὴ νῦν δεῦρο δολοφρονέουσα παρέσθης. 405 ἦσο παρ' αὐτὸν ἰούσα, θεῶν δ' ἀπόεικε κελεύθου, μηδ' ἔτι σοῖσι πόδεσσιν ὑποστρέψειας Ὀλυμπον, ἀλλ' αἰεὶ περὶ κείνον δίζυε καὶ ἐφύλασσε, εἰς ὃ κέ σ' ἢ ἄλοχον ποιήσεται ἢ ὃ γε δούλην.

 κείσε δ' ἐγὼν οὐκ εἰμι, νεμεσσητὸν δέ κεν εἴη, 410 κείνου πορσανέουσα λέχος· Τρωαὶ δέ μ' ὀπίσσω πᾶσαι μωμήσονται, ἔχω δ' ἄχ' ἄκριτα θυμῷ."
 τὴν δὲ χολωσαμένη προσεφώνεε δι' Ἀφροδίτῃ·
 "μή μ' ἔρεθε, σχετλίη, μὴ χωσαμένη σε μεθείω, τῶς δέ σ' ἀπεχθῆρω, ὥς νῦν ἔκπαγλα φίλησα, 415
 μέσσω δ' ἀμφοτέρων μητίσσομαι ἔχθεα λυγρά, Τρώων καὶ Δαναῶν, σὺ δέ κεν κακὸν οἶτον ὀλῃαι."
 ὧς ἔφατ', ἔδεισεν δ' Ἑλένη Διὸς ἐκγεγαυῖα, βῆ δὲ κατασχομένη ἐαυτῷ ἀργῇτι φαεινῷ σιγῇ, πᾶσας δὲ Τρῳὰς λάθην· ἦρχε δὲ δαίμων. 420

Menelaos is made a reason for supposing that Aphrodite will immediately wish to take further measures for removing Helen. As Lehrs says, after the removal of the notes of interrogation, nullo acerbior evadit ironia.

406. All MSS. give ἀπόειπε κελεύθους, "renounce the paths of the gods." But a Schol. of Didymos says ἀπόειπε οὐτε ἐν ταῖς Ἀρισταρχείois οὐτε ἐν ἐτέρῃ τῶν γούν μετρίων ἐπιφερόμενον πέφυκεν. καὶ οὐ μόνον ἐν ταῖς ἐκδόσεσιν ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν τοῖς συγγράμμασιν (the dissertations of Ar.) ἀπαξάπαντες οὕτως ἐκτίθενται. If this very vehement assertion is true it is hard to see how ἀπόειπε can have been universally accepted by the vulg., and still harder to guess why Aristonikos should have quoted it in his schol. on 396.

407. ὑποστρέψειας, intrans., as M 71, θ 301, etc. "Ὀλυμπον, acc. of the terminus ad quem, H. G. § 140, 4.

408. δίζυε κακοπάθει ταλαίπῳρει, Schol. D: i.e. suffer anxiety. So ἦς (Τροίης) εἶναι δίζυομεν κακὰ πολλὰ E 89, and δ 152, ψ 307.

409. ὃ γε might seem to emphasize the second clause, "or even his slave." But in other passages it merely resumes the original subject, as β 327, ἡ τινας ἐκ Πύλου ἄξει . . . ἡ δ' γε καὶ Σπάρτηθεν: so γ 214, M 239, etc.; "nunc dextra ingeminans ictus, nunc ille sinistra," Verg. Aen. v. 457.

411. πορσανέουσα, so best MSS. and Ar.: al. πορσυνέουσα, and πορσύνειν is the usual form. For the phrase v. M. and R.'s note on γ 403, where the origin of it is deduced from the fact that "no one but the wife had free access to the husband's chamber, and so she actually 'prepares' his bed for the night's rest." Of course it passed into the sense of "sharing" the bed.

417. σὺ δὲ κεν κ.τ.λ., an independent clause, the κεν showing its original force, "and in that case thou wilt perish." Aphrodite means that she will embitter the strife between Trojans and Achaeans, so that Helen, "Troiae et patriae communis Erinnyes," will become intolerable to those around her.

419. κατασχομένη, covering herself, like καλυψαμένη 141, and cf. ἡμέρι γὰρ κατέχονται = are hidden, P 644.

420. δαίμων, only here of a feminine goddess: nor does it appear to be used anywhere else of a definite god present in his own person. The plur. is used as = θεοί in general, A 222, Z 115, Ψ 595; in T 188 we have the phrase πρὸς δαίμονος ἐπιορκήσω, and similarly ο 261, ε 396 (where no god has been specified); and in all other cases it is used either in the yet more general sense of "the will of heaven" or "fate" (cf. δαίμονα δώσω, Θ 166), or in the metaphor ἐπέσσοντο δαίμονι ἴσος. See M. and R. on β 134, where however the singularity of the present passage is not brought out. If it were not for the presence of Aphrodite in the following lines, it would indeed, by Homeric usage, be necessary to translate "her destiny, the divine power, led her on," as in ἀγάγοι δέ εἰ δαίμων, φ 201.

423-6. Zenodotos rejected these lines, writing instead "αὐτὴ δ' ἀντίον ἵξεν Ἀλεξάνδροιο ἀνακτος"· ἀπρεπὲς γὰρ αὐτῷ ἐφαίνετο τὸ τῇ Ἑλένῃ τὴν Ἀφροδίτῃν δῖφρον βαστάζειν. ἐπιλέλησται δὲ ὅτι γρατὴ εἰκασταί, καὶ ταύτῃ τῇ μορφῇ τὰ προσήκοντα ἐπιτηδεύει, Ariston. Cobet has an amusing chapter on the question of propriety as it appeared to the Alexandrian critics, Misc. Crit. 225-239. (Schol. V quotes τ 34, where Athene carries a lamp for Odysseus).

427. ὄσσε πάλιν κλίνασα, the aversa tuetur of Aen. iv. 362. This is a most instructive piece of Homeric psychology, showing the struggle of the weak human mind against the overpowering will of the gods. From the outward point of view, as distinct from the presentation of such secret springs of action, Helen is presented to us, as Nägelsbach says, as the counterpart of Paris,—vacillating between repentance and love, as he between sensuality and courage. 432-6 were obelized by Ar. as πεῖστέροι καὶ τοῖς νοήμασι ψυχροὶ καὶ ἀκατάλληλοι (inconsistent). But the sudden transition marked by ἀλλὰ σ' ἐγὼ γε is the key to the whole passage, as marking the point at which the unwonted fit of penitence breaks down, and the old habitual love resumes its way; surely a profoundly true conception of a woman's character.

435. ἀντίβιον by Homeric use must be an adverbial neut., not agreeing with σέ or πόλεμον.

436. La R. considers that ἐπὶ goes with δουρὶ, αὐτοῦ being simply "his," comparing ἐμῷ ὑπὸ δουρὶ δαμῆναι, E 653, etc. But this use of αὐτοῦ as a simple possess. gen. is very rare (see II 405), and it is more natural to construe "by him with his spear."

438. ἐνίπτεται always takes a person as object elsewhere, except υ 17, κραδίην ἡνίπαπε μύθῳ. The word really means "hurt," v. B 245.

νῦν μὲν γὰρ Μενέλαος ἐνίκησεν σὺν Ἀθήνῃ, οὐ μὲν γὰρ φιλότῃτι γ' ἐκεύθανον, εἴ τις ἴδοιτο·

440. αὖτις, "some day," sc. νύκτωρ.

441. τραπέλομεν, metathesis from τραπέλομεν, let us take our pleasure. So Σ 314, θ 292 λέκτρονδε· τραπέλομεν εὐνηθέντες, where see M. and R. A converse metath. seems to take place in τερπικέρανος, from τρέπω. Other instances are abundant, e.g. καρδίη κραδίη, καρτερὸς κρατερὸς, θάρσος θρασός, etc.

442. ἔρος, MSS. ἔρως, and so Σ 294; but we must read ἔρος in Σ 315, and as the cases are always formed from this stem (ἔρω σ 212, ἔρον passim) there can be little doubt that Bothe and Heyne are right in restoring it here after Eustath. The earliest trace of ἔρος seems to be the acc. ἔρωτα in the Homeric Hymn. Merc. 449. γ' is evidently interpolated on account of the hiatus, which is allowable here.

445. Κρανῇ according to Pausanias lay in the Laconic gulf opposite Gytheion. Others made it Kythera, as the dwelling of Aphrodite.

448. τρητοῖσι, see M. and R. on α 440, where it is explained to mean "morticed," on the strength of Plat. Pol. 279, τῶν δὲ συνθετῶν τὰ μὲν τρητά, τὰ δὲ ἀνευ τρήσεως σύνδετα. But Plato can hardly be quoted as a decisive authority on Homeric archaeology; and the following passage from ψ 196-201 is strongly in favour either of the interpretation "pierced with holes through which straps were passed to support the bedding," or still better "pierced with holes by which to rivet on the ornamental plates or disks" (v. on δινωτοῖσι, 391):—

453. αἱ τις ἴδοιτο, a phrase discussed at length by L. Lange, EI, p. 400. He regards it as one of a class where εἰ with the opt. expresses a wish which is "naïvely" appropriated by the speaker from the ψυχικὴ διάθεσις of another person. Here οὐκ ἐκεύθανον involves the thought ἐμελλον δεῖξαι, with which is combined the wish "if one could but see him!" The phrase is thus similar to P 679, ὅσσε φαεινὴ | πάντοσε διελίσθη . . . εἰ που Νέστορος ὕδν ἐτι ζῶντα ἴδοιτο, "his eyes searched everywhere, (with the thought) 'would he could see.'" It is parallel also with εἰ που ἑσαθρήσειεν above (450); "Atreides ranged through the host—(with the thought) would he could set eyes on A.!" Under the same category come all cases where εἰ with opt. implies "trying whether" and the like, e.g. after πειρᾶσθαι T 384, δίζημαι Δ 88, etc. This view, which no doubt is right, far-fetched though it may seem, requires for its full exposition more than can be compressed into a note: the student should refer to Lange's original work, which is well worth the fullest study.

457. φαίνεται, with gen. as we say “is declared for M.” The construction with the gen. is essentially the same as with adjectives (ἀρίστη φαίνεται βουλή, etc.)

459. For ἀποτινέμεν Zen. read ἀποτινέτεον, on his theory of “dual for plural.” We might easily read ἀποτίετε, as the hiatus is “licitus” in the bucolic diaeresis; but see A 20.

This book falls naturally into three parts: (i.) the treacherous wounding of Menelaos by Pandaros (1-219); (ii.) the ἐπιπώλησις, or review of the army by Agamemnon (220-421); (iii.) the beginning of the general engagement (422-544). The critical difficulties are mostly external, involving the relation of these parts to one another and to the general plan of the poem.

The opening scene in Olympus entirely ignores the promise of Zeus to Thetis, and indeed appears to regard the future course of the war as an open question. The device by which the general engagement is brought about—a base violation of the truce at the instigation of the gods—is strange; the more so because, though the heinous nature of the offence is insisted upon at the time, it has no effect whatever upon the future development of the story, and is indeed barely alluded to in a few lines which are themselves gravely suspected (see on E 206-8, H 69, 351, 411). This silence is particularly strange in the account of the death of Pandaros (E 286-296), an occasion which would seem imperatively to demand some allusion to his recent crime, which so shortly preceded what we should suppose to be its fitting punishment.

The ἐπιπώλησις also has difficulties of its own. It comes in as a retarding episode at a point where the action seems to demand rapidity; delay is out of place at a moment when the Trojans, face to face with the Greeks, are about, we should imagine, to follow up their treacherous stroke by a sudden attack. The speeches are so prolix as to emphasize this retardation beyond all measure; and the gratuitous insults with which Agamemnon assails Odysseus and Diomedes are out of keeping with his character, as well as with the services which the former hero has so recently (B 169 ff., 278 ff.) rendered to his chief. On the other hand the strong touches with which the modesty of Diomedes is drawn are in the best style, and form an admirable introduction to his ἀριστεία in the next book. The words of Agamemnon to him (370-400) are also clearly alluded to in Book ix. (34-36), so that the interpolation, if such it be, cannot be later than that book.

The beginning of the battle is what we should have expected after the account of the arming in B; 422, as Lachmann observed, can follow B 483 or 780-785 without a break of any sort being discoverable. This was, in my belief, the actual sequence in one point of the evolution of the Iliad from the original germ. The episode of the duel, Γ 1-Δ 222, was inserted in one piece, and more happily begun than completed. The ἐπιπώλησις may have been originally in place before Δ 422, but this also, I am inclined to suppose, was a later introduction, possibly by the poet of I, who, though of unsurpassed rhetorical power and fond of long speeches, was, as we shall again have reason to suspect, comparatively weak in the art of narrating the episodes by which his speeches are introduced.

1. ἡγορόωντο, held assembly, as B 337 παισὶν εὐκότεις ἀγοράσθε: Ar. ἡγορίζοντο, but it implies debate as well as mere gathering together.

2. Ἥβῃ reappears only in E 722, 905, and the post-homeric passage λ 603, where, as in the later legends, she is the wife of Herakles.

3. δουνοχόει (έFου) is clearly the right reading, v. A 598: Zenod. ἐφνοχόει, MSS. ἐφνοχόει, and so apparently Ar., on the analogy of the false form ἐφνδανει.

4. δαιδέχατο from δαίκνυμαι, v. I 196 δεικνύμενος (H. G. § 24, 3, and Curt. Vb. ii. 218), “pledging”; apparently a secondary sense derived from the custom of pointing to the person whose health is to be drunk. Cf. δεικνάνασθαι, O 86.

6. παραβλήδην, variously explained “maliciously” (with a side meaning); “by way of retort” (so Ap. Rhod. ii. 450, seems to have taken it); “by way of invidious comparison” between Aphrodite and the two goddesses. None of these is satisfactory; I would suggest “by way of exposing himself to her” (“drawing her fire” in modern metaphor), i.e. wilfully tempting her to retort upon himself. This sense of παραβάλλεσθαι is (with the exception of the purely literal meaning) the only one which occurs in H. (see I 322), and remained attached to the word throughout Greek literature (v. L. and S. s.v.)

8. Ἀλαλκομενηὶς: it is hard to say whether the local or attributive sense prevails in this title. Pausanias testifies to a cultus of Athene at Alalkomenai, near the Tritonian lake in Boiotia, down to the times of Sulla; but the word is evidently also significant, “the guardian” (we hear also of Ζεὺς Ἀλαλκομενέως in the Et. Mag.) Probably the name of the town was either taken from the title of the goddess or adapted to it from an older name similar in form, or was itself the cause of the adoption of the cultus; a local adjective being then formed with a distinct consciousness of its original significance. It is very probable that the goddess Ἀθήνη and the town Ἀθήναι were equally brought into relationship by the similarity of name, the adjectival form Ἀθηναίη offering a further analogy to Ἀλαλκομενηὶς. So perhaps with the worship of Apollo λυκαγενῆς or λύκειος in Lykia; see note on 101.

11. παρμέμβλωκε = παρμέμλωκε from (μ)βλώσκω (μολ = μολ, Curt. Et. p. 538). αὐτοῦ, the usual construction of ἀμύνει is τί τινα, not τινος. But M 402, Ζεὺς κῆρας ἀμύνει | παιδὸς ἐοῦ. And the cases where ἀπό is added are essentially similar, ρεῶν ἀπο λαιγῶν ἀμύναι, II 80, etc. H. G. § 152.

17. αἶψα, so Ar.: MSS. with Aristoph. αὐτως (or αὐτως). Ar. read πέλαιτο for γέναιτο.

18. οἰκέοιτο . . . ἀγοῖτο, potential optatives, but illustrating how the “wishing” opt. passes into this sense without αὖ; ναίκατε, Γ 74, in the mouth of one who desires peace, is a shade nearer the pure idea of “wish.” We exactly express the ambiguity in translating "then may the city of P. be a habitation." Zeus is here not expressing a wish, but only putting as a supposition the result of his second alternative in l. 16 (L. Lange, Et. p. 371)

20. μέγαν, to "mutter," "murmur," a family of words derived onomatopoeically from an imitation of the sound of the voice when the lips are closed.

22. ἀκέων is indeclinable here and Θ 459, and φ 89 ἀκέων δαίνυνθε καθήμενοι. Elsewhere it is always declined like a participle, and it is hard to see what else it can be. Of course ἀκέουσ' could easily be restored here, but there is nothing to explain how such a corruption could have originated.

23. κακὰ, accusative "in apposition to the sentence," as it is generally called; i.e. "expressing the sum or result of an action" (H. G. § 136, 4); so l. 207, ὃν τις ἔβαλεν . . . τῷ μὲν κλέος ἄμμι δὲ πένθος : Ω 735, μίψει χεῖρὸς ἑλὼν ἀπὸ πύργου, λυγρὸν δλεθρον. The construction is only found after a verb governing an accus. "of the external object" either expressed or implied, and may be regarded as an extension of the construction ῥέζειν τινα τι.

29. πάντες is the emphatic word. It is indifferent as to the sense whether we take ἐπαινέομεν as fut. or pres.; but it must be the latter according to Cobet's canon, that in verbs where ε is not changed to η, if the antepenult. is longa, the fut. takes σ, but where the antepenult. is short the σ always disappears (M. C. p. 307).

32. ὅ τε implies "as I must conclude they do, because," etc. ἀσπερχές, apparently for ἀσπερχες, σπέρχω "to press," lit. hastening, pressing on (so Curt. Et. no. 176 b, and Clemm in C. St. viii. 95).

35. For similar expressions v. X 347, Ω 212, and the words of Xenophon to his soldiers, Αναβ. iv. 8, 14, τούτους, ἦν πως δινωμέθα, καὶ ὠμοὶ δεῖ καταφαγεῖν. βεβρόθοις seems to be a perf. in -θα like ἐγρηγόρασι, v. H. G. § 22, 7 b.

43. ἀκὼν ἀέκοντί γε θυμῷ, not under compulsion, but yet not of my own liking, as the Schol. explain: πολλὰ παρὰ προαίρεσιν τῆς ψυχῆς πράττομεν πρὸς τὸ κεχαρισμένον τῶν πέλας.

45. ναϊετάουσι, "have their place," see B 626.

46. περὶ κῆρι: on this disputed phrase see H. G. § 186, 2, where the evidence is fully given. Mr. Monro takes the dat. as a locative, "in the heart"; and with much hesitation περὶ as = exceedingly; "περὶ κῆρι may have been meant in the literal sense,—the feeling (fear, anger, etc.) being thought of as filling or covering the heart. On the whole, however, the evidence is against this view—unless indeed we explain περὶ κῆρι as a traditional phrase used without a distinct sense of its original meaning." The sense "exceedingly" is obviously suitable here, but less so in 53.

47. ἐνμμελίῳ, "with good spear of ash," τοῦ εἰ ποτε τῇ μελίᾳ χρῶσασθαι, πολεμικοῦ, Schol.; a somewhat strange epithet to apply to Priam, who is not represented as a warrior in Homer (except Γ 188); the word is also applied to the sons of Euphorbos in P (9, 23, 59), and to Peisistratos, γ 400.

53. In this line many have seen an allusion—the only allusion in H.—to the Dorian conquest. But this is very doubtful, for that invasion made Sparta more prominent, and certainly did not ruin Argos; while we have positive evidence that Mykene was only destroyed by the Argives so late as 468 B.C. (Diod. Sic. xi. 65. Mr. Mahaffy has however thrown some doubt upon this date; see Schliemann's Tiryns, pp. 35-44). For the almost complete absence of allusion to the Dorians see on B 653.

55. φθονέω and εἰῶ are taken by Ameis as subj.; he compares α 167, οὐδέ τις ἡμῖν | θαλπωρή, εἰ πέρ τις ἐπιχθονίων ἀνθρώπων | φῆσιν ἐλεύσεσθαι, but this is essentially different, as it refers to a repetition of anticipated cases: so Δ 261, εἰ περ γὰρ τ' ἄλλοι . . . δαιτὸν πίρωσιν. Hera is here stating a fact which she admits, in order to base another statement upon it, and for this the indic. is the proper mood; cf. H 117, εἰ περ ἀδείης τ' ἐστί. It is also more natural to find οὐ after εἰ with the indic. than the subj.: H. G. § 216, and v. on B 349, Δ 160, though it is true that we do find εἰ οὐ with subj., e.g. T 139, οὐκ εἰῶσι. In the next line ἀνέω may be either pres. or fut. 55-6 were obelized by Ar., ὅτι τὴν χάριν ἀναλόουσι, εἰ καὶ μὴ προδεηθεῖς δύναται τοῦτ' ἔχειν, i.e. Hera is not doing Zeus a favour if Zeus can work his will without asking her. But this ground is quite insufficient; the turn of thought is natural enough, "have your way; you know I cannot prevent it." The ἀλλά in the next line also clearly refers to 56, "though you are more mighty, yet I am not to count for nothing."

59. πρεσβυτάτην, "senior" in dignity, not age; so πρέσβη always (generally of Hera), and other words from the same stem, when the connotation of honour or respect is rarely quite absent. Cf. also γέρων, seigneur, as titles. Curt. (Est. p. 479) connects with Lat. prius, and refers it to a stem preis* = Skt. pra-jas, a compar. of pra = pro, so that the idea of priority is fundamental, whether it be of place or time.

60. ἀμφοτέρων, v. Γ 179. γενεῇ, parentage, not necessarily age. σὺ δὲ is added paratactically to the second clause only, to emphasize the importance implied in the word σὴ. Ameis compares Z 128-7.

66. ὑπερκύδαντας, probably an adj. like ἀκάμας ἀδάμας, from stem κυδ (not κυθεσ) like κυδ-ρός. It does not occur anywhere else.

67. See Γ 299. It is clear here that ὄρκια is governed by ὑπὲρ, not by δηλήσασθαι. Here also MSS. give ὕπερ ὄρκια.

75. ἀστέρα ἦκε, so MSS.: Bekker after Bentley ἀστέρ' ἦκε. The hiatus has been explained as due to the fact that ἦκε originally began with j, but this is very uncertain, and the place, just before the caesura κατὰ τρίτον τροχαῖον, is the most unlikely for an hiatus, so that the conjecture is almost certainly right. See B 87. It is not easy to make out exactly what the people saw and marvelled at (79); the metaphor clearly indicates more than the mere swiftness of descent, and implies at least a visible flash, though we cannot suppose that Athene actually changed herself into a "fire-ball" or meteorite; but on the other hand Homeric gods are not in the habit of appearing to multitudes in their own person. Of course the sparks in 77 are merely part of the description of such a meteor, and do not belong to the comparison. A very similar passage is P 547 sqq., which describes the descent of the same goddess clothed in a cloud like a rainbow, spread by Zeus τέρας ἐμμεναι ἢ πολέμοιο ἢ καὶ χειμῶνος. 82 shows that the people did not know what had happened, but only expected some divine interference in a decisive way, whether for good or ill. The edd. compare Hym. Apoll. 362—

84 = T 224. For the genitive ἀνθρώπων cf. A 28, τέρας ἀνθρώπων, a portent in the eyes of men. It would thus seem to depend on ταμὴς, not πολέμοιο. But cf. E 332, ἀνδρῶν πόλεμος.

86. Observe the long ι of ἀνδρὶ: this is probably the primitive quantity of the dat. sing.; v. H. G. § 373.

88. εἴ που ἐφεύροι, a wish-clause expressing the thought of the goddess, “would she might find him” (see on Γ 453). Zenod. was offended at the doubt which he thought was expressed as to the certainty of the goddess finding him, and wrote εὖρε δὲ τόνδε, omitting 89 altogether. εὖρε is commonly found beginning a sentence asyndetically, e.g. B 169, Δ 327, E 169, 355, A 197, 473. For 91 cf. B 825.

93. The question here implies a wish, the opt. being potential; lit. “might you not listen to me?” This wish is made a condition of the following clause, and is thus exactly like εἴ μοι τι πίθοιο,

H 28. It thus illustrates the origin of conditional sentences from the primitive form of a wish followed by a clause dependent on it (L. Lange, EÍ, p. 381). We have the same form in H 48 and with the addition of κε, σ 357, but οὐκ ἄν is more usual, K 204, Γ 52, χ 132.

94. ἐπὶ προέμεν Ar., ἐπιπροέμεν MSS. Cf. χ 8, ἐπ' Ἀντιφῷ ἰθύνετο. Ameis considers that by connecting ἐπὶ with the subst. the idea of hostile intent is more vividly brought out: the double compound ἐπιπροέμεν is used in the simple sense of “sending forth in a certain direction,” I 520, P 708, Σ 58, ο 299.

95. Τρώεσσι, at the hands of the Trojans, apparently a locative sense (H. G. § 145, 4). So I 303 ἡ γὰρ κέν σφι μάλα μέγα κῦδος ἄροιο, X 217 ὁλοσθαι μέγα κῦδος Ἀχαιοῖσιν, compared with κλέος ἔσθλῳ ἐνὶ Τρώεσσιν ἀρέσθαι, P 16.

97. The simplest construction of παρὰ is with τοῦ, but the rhythm is in favour of joining the participle with the verb, as the line is otherwise divided into two equal halves (for which however Fäsi ἐπ' ἀλγέα τε στοναχὰς τε).

99. ἐπιβάντα, cf. I 546, πολλοὺς δὲ πυρῆς ἐπέβητο ἀλεγεινῆς. The expression is very natural, even as used of the dead.

101. λυκηγενῆς. This and similar epithets of Apollo had at least a double connotation to the Greeks, that of Lykia and of wolves. To these etymologists have added a third, that of light; Apollo being the sun-god. (This explanation is as old as Macrobius; see Sat. I. xvii. 36-41, pp. 96-7. J. A. P.) The two former meanings were inextricably interwoven in ancient mythology. Apollo is worshipped as λυκοκτόνος (cf. Σμυνθεύς, A 39) and also in Lykia. Modern anthropologists are inclined to make a wolf-god of him; "according to one myth, Leto the mother of Apollo was changed into a wolf, thus he was wolf-born (Aelian, H. A. x. 26)" (A. Lang). For the possible interaction of such local and mythological titles see on l. 8 sup. (If the name of Lykia is implied, it is here the Trojan Lykia beneath Ida, not the more famous country of Sarpedon, B 824.)

102. πρωτογόνων, apparently "first-lings," the first-born of the year, the πρόγονοι of l. 221. The word however suggests the Hebrew custom of offering the first offspring of every animal.

105. ἐσύλα, "stripped" the bow of its covering; in 116 "stripped the lid off the quiver," the object in one case being the thing uncovered, in the other the covering itself. The two uses of καλύπτειν are exactly similar. For the bow-case (γωνιότης) see φ 54. It is not clear if ἱξάλου is an adj. (of the wild goat, cf. ξ 50, λονθάδος ἀγρίου αἰγὸς) or a specific name, as in βοῦς ταῦρος, etc. It is pretty certain that the animal meant is the ibex or steinbock, an animal still found in the Alps, though it seems doubtful if it continues to inhabit Greece (Buchholz, H. R., I, ii. 163).

 It was however in historical times an inhabitant of Crete; and Milchhöfer has published (Arch. Zeit. 1880, p. 213) a bronze plate from that island representing two huntsmen, one of whom bears on his neck an ibex, while the other carries a bow evidently made of ibex-horns; it clearly shows the rings, see next note. ὑπὸ στέρνοιο τυχήσας is added parenthetically, and ὃν is governed by βεβλήκει, for τυχεῖν is not found in H. with an acc. of the object hit, as in later writers. Cf. E 579, M 189, 394, etc.

109. κέρα, perhaps rather κέρα' for κέραια or κέραιε. ἐκκαϊδεκάδωρα, δῶρον καλεῖται ὁ παλαιστής, ὃ ἐστὶν ἑκτασι τῶν τῆς χειρὸς τεσσάρων δακτύλων, i.e. a palm, four fingers' breadth, or about three inches.
 The horns would then be four feet long, which appears to be beyond the recorded size of the horns of the ibex (but see Paley's note); hence either H. is exaggerating, or he means that the united length of the two was sixteen palms.
δῶρον in this sense seems not to recur;
 some have suggested that it may mean the rings on the horns, by which the animal's age is known. For derivation see Curt. Et. no. 367.

110. ἀσκήσας is used of any artificial preparation, e.g. wool Γ 388, a mixingbowl Ψ 748, etc. ἥρα, joined with a handle (πῆχυς) in the middle. The κορώνη is the tip with a notch, into which the loop is slipped in stringing. At the other end there must have been another κορώνη into which the string was permanently fastened, or else a hole through the horn.

112. εὖ κατέθηκε, laid it carefully down, in order to take out the arrow. ποτὶ γαίῃ ἀγκλίνας seem to go together, "having strung it by resting the lower end upon the ground" against his foot. ἀγκλίνας is thus subordinate to τανυσσάμενος.

117. ἀβλήτα, never before shot. ἔρμα, a well-known crux. Various untenable explanations have been given, the favourite is that which compares it with ἔρμα πόλις, "a pillar of the state" (II 549, etc.), as if "a support, bearer, of pangs," on which pangs rest. But Curt., Et. no. 502, connects it with ὄρμη, Skt. ar to run, flow, śarmas streaming; so that it may literally be translated "a spring, source, of woes," i.e. that which sets pangs flowing, the later ἀφ' ὁρμῆς. This appears satisfactory, but for the fact that ἔρμα is not an uncommon word in other senses, and that there is no other kindred form to ὄρμη which has the ε. The German editors compare Tell's words to his arrow, in Schiller, "komm du hervor, du Bringer bitterer Schmerzen." Another explanation is given by Ameis, who takes ἔρμα as = chain, or pendant; he thinks it is used of the arrow regarded as hanging from the hand at the moment it is lifted from the quiver. But this, like all the explanations except that of Curtius, is far too artificial.

122. γλυφίδας, the notch: so φ 419, ἔλκεν νευρὴν γλυφίδας τε. The plural possibly indicates that in addition to the notch at the end which received the string there was another in the side of the shaft, made so as to give the fingers a hold in drawing the arrow back (so Am. Anh. to φ 419, after Rüstow and Köchly). νεῦρα only here = νευρή, bowstring made of a bull's sinew; see 151 for a different sense.

123. σίδηρον, the point of the arrow, which was fastened to the shaft by a thong, 151.

124. κυκλοτερὲς is predicate, bent into a (semi) circle. Zenod. inverted the order of this line and 123, but not well.

125. λίγξε seems to be an imitative word: it does not occur again in Greek. Notice the personification of the weapons, ἴαχεν, ἄλτο, μενεαίνων.

128. πρώτη, as if an affirmative had preceded, "remembered," instead of ἥ τοι πρόσθε στᾶσα βέλος ἔχεπενκὲς ἄμυνεν.

 ἡ δὲ τόσον μὲν ἔργεν ἀπὸ χροός, ὥς δτε μήτηρ 130

 αὐτίκα δ' ἔρρεεν αἷμα κελαινεφὲς ἐξ ὠτειλῆς. 140

"forgot not." ἀγελείη, "she who leads the spoil" (ἀγω, λεία) as goddess of forays. This traditional interpretation is supported by the epithet Ἀγέτις, κ 460. The word is used only of Athene.

129. ἔχεπενκὲς, lit. "having sharpness" (πικ as piung-o, etc.: Curt. Et. no. 100), like ἐχέφρων. For these "objective" compounds v. H. G. § 126.

130. τόσον, "just a little," see on X 322, Ψ 454. The word is not correlative with ὥς, for the point of the simile is the watchful affection, not the distance to which the arrow or the fly is driven away.

131. λέξεται, subj., root λεχ.

132. For this couplet see on T 414, and J. H. S. iv. p. 79. The arrow lights on the very point where the armour is thickest; the two plates of the cuirass overlap at the side, and are held together by the belt clasped over them, while the upper edge of the "mitra" (137) inside reaches as high as this, being fastened round the waist. ἦντετο, either "met the shot" or "met the belt."

135-6. Cf. Γ 357-8.

137. μήτηρ, apparently a metal girdle worn round the waist and protecting the lower part of the abdomen, where the breastplate, which was rather short, did not cover it. It is a piece of archaic and even pre-hellenic armour; it has been found in Euboea, but most examples come from the oldest tombs in Italy. (This explanation, from Helbig, H. E. p. 200, seems satisfactory; I had originally regarded it as a leathern apron or "taelet," set with plates of metal, J. H. S. iv. p. 75; but this does not adequately account for the phrase τῇ χαλκῆς κάμον ἄνδρες, 216.) ἔρυμα, so Ar.: cf. Xen. Oyr. iv. 3, 9, θώρακας ἐρύματα σωμάτων. But Aristoph. and Zenod. read ἐλυμα, "ὀλῶναι ἐλυμα" (a wrap, covering, § 179) Didym.; and as this form does not recur it is likely to be the original reading altered to the familiar ἔρυμα; there is no obvious reason for the contrary change.

138. ἔρυτο with dat. like ἀμύνειν τινί (τι), but there is no other instance of this construction. We find the acc. of the person N 555 Νέστορος υἱὸν ἔρυτο, of the thing ἡ δ' οὐκ ἔγχος ἔρυτο E 538, etc.; without an object expressed ἀλλ' Ἥφαιστος ἔρυτο E 23 (La R.). Here we may supply ὀιστόν as object. εἴσατο: this form, with the fut. εἴσομαι, occurs sixteen times in Homer. Of these seven show signs of an initial consonant (ἐπιείσατο, εἴσατο, etc.); four are doubtful, as the bucolic caesura may account for the hiatus, as here; two are indifferent, as the word begins the line; and only three (N 90, Ω 462, ο 213) reject the consonant. Hence Ahrens (Beiträge, p. 112) separates these forms from εἶμι (root i-) and refers them to the Skt. root vi-, to go. Curtius (Et. p. 581) prefers to see in these facts the effect of a false analogy with the similar forms from root fiδ, but this appears a less probable explanation.

139. For ἄρ' ὀιστός Zenod. read ἄρα χαλκός, which Ar. rejected on the ground that the point of the arrow was of iron (123). Ar. also obelized 140, because ἀρελή ought to mean a wound given not by a shot, but by a thrust or cut, to which senses the verb οὐτάω is limited. So also 149. This however is surely hypercritical.

141. μίῃν, imitated by Verg. Aen. xii. 67—

"Indum sanguineo veluti violaverit ostro Si quis ebur."

So φθέρω is used of mixing colours.

142. ἵππων, so Ar. and MSS.: Bekk. ἱππῳ. This was perhaps the reading of Aristoph.; but the Schol. (of Didymos) is corrupt, and possibly we ought to ascribe ἱππων, not ἱππῳ, to him; the dual suits the Homeric use of horses in pairs rather than in threes or fours.

143. θαλάμῳ, of the treasure chamber, β 337, Z 288, etc.

145. ἐλατῆρι in H. is used only of the driver in a chariot race, A 702, Ψ 369; the connotation of the word is thus very appropriate to an ornament which would be used for purposes of display rather than of warfare.

146. μῖανθην, an isolated form, "in all probability the regular 3d dual of a simple non-thematic aor. of μαίνω, for ἐ-μῖαν-σθην (like πεφάνθαι for πεφάνσθαι)" H. G. App. p. 320 (so Buttmann). Curtius however (Vb. ii. 322) doubts this, and prefers to write μῖανθεν (or μῖανθεν ?) with Ahrens, and to regard the scansion as a relic of the original length of the final syllable (from -εντ).

Of this other traces are found in the Doric accentuation of the 3d pl., e.g. ἐλέγον (Vb. i. 73).

151. νεῦρον, by which the base of the tip was "whipped" to the shaft. ὄγκους, barbs (uncos): there were probably three such, the point having three edges: Helbig, H. E. p. 245: v. ὁσπῶ τριγλῶχιν E 393, A 507. Only the actual point has penetrated the flesh, the rest of the tip remains in the armour.

155. φίλῃ, a trochee, as E 359, Φ 308, and so φίλῃ, φίλατο. If φίλος is for (σ)φε-ίλος (from stem σφε, σφuis, etc.), as appears to be the case, the lengthening is accounted for by the contraction. (Curtius, in St. vi. p. 430.) But the ictus would be a sufficient explanation, as in the case of διδ. θάνατον, the acc. is parallel to σὺ τι ψεύδος ἐμὰς ἀσας κατέλεξας I 115, ταῦτά τοι . . . ἀληθείην κατέλεξα η 297, where it expresses an attribute of the action, and is thus a case of the "accusative of the internal object" (H. G. § 136 (2)).

157. ὧς = ὅτι οὕτως; this is of course really a case of parataxis; "hinc the Trojans have smitten thee!" Cf. Z 109.

158. ὄρκιον, sing. only here, "an oath-sacrifice" generically. 159 = B 341.

160. εἴ . . . οὐκ. This is clearly a case like O 162, T 129, Ω 296, etc., where the negative does not coalesce with the verb into a negative word, but applies to the whole sentence. The use of οὐκ with the indic. seems to be primitive, and only to have been ousted by μή through analogy. The use of εἰ with the indic. is to place a statement in the form of a supposition merely to the intellect, i.e. without any indication of wish or purpose on the part of the speaker; whereas μή appears originally to have indicated a "mood" in the strictest sense, i.e. the active putting aside of a thought (prohibition); so that εἰ μή with the indic. was at first impossible. We find μή with the indic. without εἰ in the phrase μή ὄφελον, and also O 41, T 261 (?), K 330, (H. G. § 358) where the speaker not only denies a fact, but repudiates the thought of it: a categorical expression not suited for hypothetical clauses. (See the notes there.) H. G. §§ 316, 328 (4), 359 c. In the latter § the rule is given that "with εἰ and the indicative οὐ is used when the clause with εἰ precedes the principal clause," except in ι 410. The custom is probably due to the fact that this is the older order, and the more primitive expression of thought, and is thus associated with the older construction; εἰ μή with indic. is a use which grew up later by analogy, and was employed in the more artificial order of ideas.

161. τε, Bekk. conj. δέ; but this is probably a case of the primitive use of τε . . . τε to express mere correlation, not conjunction, precisely as in the similar sentence in A 81, q.v. (see von Christ's dissertation on the particle τε, Munich, 1880). It might be referred also to the gnomic use of τε, H. G. § 332, but it is hardly possible to separate the τε in the apodosis from that in the protasis. The conjunction of the present τολαῖ with the gnomic aor. ἀπέτισαν is not unnatural. The subject to ἀπέτισαν is general, "transgressors"; but Zenod. read τίσουσιν, and made it refer to the Trojans. (The Schol. says he read τελέσει also, but this must only mean that he took τελεῖ as a future, while Ar. held it to be a present.)

163-5 = Z 448-450. Some critics consider the lines interpolated here, but the supposition is quite gratuitous. Appian says that Scipio, at the sight of the ruins of Carthage, used these words with reference to Rome (La R.) For the construction of 164 cf. Θ 373. The subjunctive expresses confident prediction, and "the use of δὲ gives definiteness to the prediction, as though a particular time were contemplated." H. G. § 289, 1 b.

166. ὑψίζυγος ἡ μεταφορὰ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐν ναυσὶ ζυγῶν, ἐφ' ὧν καθέζονται οἱ ἐρέσσοντες, Schol. A.

170. πότμον, so Ar.: MSS. μοῖραν, cf. Δ 263 πότμον ἀναπλήσαντες, Θ 34 κακὸν οἶτον ἀναπλήσαντες, O 132 κακὰ πολλὰ ἀναπ., ε 207 κῆδεα. We use precisely the same metaphor, "to fulfil one's destiny."

171. πολυδίψιον; this epithet caused some trouble to the old commentators, as Argos was a well-watered land (and hence ἡπιοβότον). They were inclined to explain it πολυπόθῃτων, much thirsted after, or to read πολυψίον = destructive (so Strabo), διὰ τοὺς πολέμους. Some preferred however to explain it by a legend (found also in a fragment of Hesiod) that Argos was waterless till Danaos came with his daughters; and that Poseidon or Athene provided it with wells. With this explanation we must be content, supposing it to refer to the introduction of some system of irrigation.

καὶ δέ κεν εὐχωλὴν Πριάμφ καὶ Τρωσὶ λίποιμεν

173. See B 160.

175. ἀτελευτήτῳ ἐπὶ ἔργῳ, so π 111, ἀνηρόστῳ ἐπὶ ἔργῳ, and 178 below, ἐπὶ πᾶσι "in all cases." This use of ἐπὶ is more common in Attic, e.g. ἐπ' εὐπραξίᾳ μέμνησθέ μου, Soph. O. C. 1554, ἐπ' ἀρρήτοις λόγοις "with words unsaid," Eur. Ion. 228 ἐπ' ἀσφάκτοις μήλοις (Paley). ἐπ' ἀρωγῇ, Ψ 574, is similar.

178. αἶθ, whatever its derivation, gives much the same idea as our "Would to God," i.e. a sort of hopeless despairing wish. Thus its use here, in a phrase which really expresses a triumphant taunt, intensely emphasizes the bitter irony of the imaginary words (L. Lange, EI 343).

184. πω = πως, v. Γ 306.

185. καιρίῳ, a deadly spot. The sense of καιρός is quite clear in H.; it is always used in the phrase (τὸ) καιρῶν as here (Θ 84, 326, Δ 439 f.); but the traditional derivation from καιρός appears highly unsatisfactory. In the first place neither καιρός nor any other derivative occurs in H.; in the second, a transition from "opportune" to "fatal" seems quite alien from the directness of Homeric language. Indeed even "opportunity" is not the original signification of καιρός, for in Hesiod, Opp. 692, and Theognis, 401, where it makes its first appearance, it means only "due proportion," in the proverb καιρός δ' ἐπὶ πᾶσι ἀριστος. These two considerations taken together are to me convincing; for the transition of meaning, though not quite incredible in itself, could be excused only if the word were quite familiar in its primitive use. We need not go far for a more satisfactory etymology. The exact sense required is given by the word κῆρ (Curt. Et. no. 53, p. 148), "Skt. kar to kill, kāras death-blow." Homer himself supplies us with the negative adj. in κῆριος, "unharméd," μ 98, ψ 328. Possibly therefore we ought in H. to write κῆριον, not καιριον, the word being confused with the adjective καιρός = timely only in later Greek. Indeed were it not for a single passage which possibly stands in the way (οὐ γὰρ ἐς καιρὸν τυπεῖς ἐτόγχευε, Eur. Andr. 1120), κῆριος might be written for καιριος, I believe, at least in all the tragedians and Pindar, whenever it occurs in the sense "deadly."

πάροιθεν in temporal sense "before it got so far." Others take it locally, with ζωστήρ, "the belt, etc. in front of (i.e. protecting) my flesh." It does not stand in opposition to ὑπένερθεν, which is added independently, as in the phrase πῶδες καὶ χεῖρες ὑπέρθεν; this is clear from 215.

187. The archaic Greek cuirass, unlike that of the classical period, was finished off at the bottom by a projecting rim, which formed a "waist" holding in its place the belt (ζωστήρ). This waist is the ζῶμα, "the part girt down," the proper correlative of the form ζωστήρ. We thus see how it is that in the enumeration of the different layers of the armour here as compared with 185-187 ζῶμα, the part, takes the place of ὅλης, the whole. For a full discussion of the question see J. H. S. iv. 73, and also Helbig, H. E. 201-203, where the same conclusion is arrived at. Aristarchos seems to have held the same opinion, but the traditional explanation makes ζῶμα the pendent fringe of strips of leather (περὶγυν), which, though common in classical times, is quite unknown in archaic armour, and moreover does not suit the present passage.

191. With παύσῃσι we must of course supply σε as object; the constr. παύειν τινά τινας occurs in B 595, etc.

194. φῶτα and υἱόν in apposition as Φ 546, cf. φ 26 φῶθ' Ἡρακλῆα, δ 247 φῶτι δέκτρῃ, the latter of which passages shows clearly that the addition of φῶς does not imply anything like "manly" or

"heroic." ἀνὴρ is used in just the same way, cf. ἀνδρα Βήτορα A 92, E 649; and so ὄωρον ἀνδρὸς Ἐκτορος, Soph. Aj. 817. It is needless to say that Pausanias (2, 26) is wrong in taking it to mean "human son" as opposed to his divine father. See on B 781.

195-7 were marked by Ar. with "obelos and asterisk," as being wrongly interpolated here from 205-7 ἱητῆρα. This however is not likely.

197. The Lykians are doubtless here named as the chief allies of the Trojans, Sarpedon's army, not the followers of Pandaros from Zeleia. κλέος, acc. "in apposition with the sentence," v. l. 28.

204. ὄρσος, i.e. ὄρ-ος, from the non-sigmatic aor. *ὀρόμην; while ὄρσεν 264 is ὄρσ-εν, from the sigmatic aor. *ὀρσόμεν; cf. λέξο by λέξω.

205. ἴδῃ, so best MSS. and Ar.: vulg. ἴδῃς, which certainly seems more natural after the act. in 195. Possibly this was one reason why Ar. condemned 195. ἀρχὸν Ἀχαιῶν, al. Ἀτρεὺς υἱόν as 195; the MSS. are very irregularly divided, only two of La Roche's giving ἀρχὸν Ἀχ. in both places, one giving Ἀτρεὺς υἱόν twice, and the rest varying.

212. For κυκλός Ar. strangely read κύκλος as = κύκλος γενόμενοι, comparing ἀγρόμενοι πᾶς δῆμος, T 166. But, as Herodianus remarks, this is a quite insufficient analogy, as κύκλος is not a noun of multitude like δῆμος. He therefore supported Nikias and Ptolemy of Askalon in reading κυκλός. Cf. P 392. ἰσόθεος φώς is more naturally taken to mean Machaon than Menelaos: παρίστατο as usual signifying “came up,” and the apodosis beginning with ὁ δέ.

214. πάλιν may be taken with ἐξελκομένοιο, “drawn back the way it had entered”; or with ἄγεν, “were broken backwards.” The barbs of course stick in the hard armour. They have to be cut out of the flesh in the case of Eurypylos, A 844.

219. οἱ . . . πατρὶ, as P 196, δὲ οἱ θεοὶ οὐρανίωνες | πατρὶ φίλῳ ἔπορον. Cheiron is mentioned again as having taught medicine to Peleus in A 832, and as having given him the “Pelian spear,” II 143, T 390, but none of the other legends about him are alluded to by Homer.

222. χάρμης, generally explained “the battle-joy,” and this is supported by N

82, χάρμη γηθόνου τὴν σφιν θεὸς ἐμβαλε θυμῷ. But it is very remarkable that Homer never represents his heroes as taking any delight in battle, except by the direct interposition of a god, as in the above passage, B 453, A 13. On the contrary, he lavishes all epithets of hatred upon war, λυγρός, πολυδάκρυος, δυσηλεγής, δυσηχής, αἰνός, etc., and in E 891 (A 177) fondness for battle appears as a severe reproach. It seems therefore most unlikely that he should have made one of his commonest names for it out of a word which originally meant “joy,” but which has entirely lost its connotation except in a single passage. Curtius therefore (Et. no. 185) would recur to the primitive meaning of root ghar, and explain it as “the glow, burning flame” of battle, like daiz from daio; compare the expression μάρναντο δέμας πυρὸς αἰθόμενοι. We could then explain N 82 as meaning “the glow, the fire, which the god had put in them.” (For another explanation see Mr. Postgate in Amer. Journal of Philology, iii. 337.)

223. οὐκ ἂν ὦοις expresses potentiality in the past, like οὐ κε φαίης Γ 393, Δ 429, etc.

228. Eurymedon is Agamemnon's charioteer here only in H.; but the later tradition accepted the name, for Pausanias says that he was slain with Agamemnon. Eurymedon is also Nestor's charioteer, Θ 114, Δ 620.

229. παρισχέμεν, to have his horses at hand. For the subj. λάβῃ after an imperf. ῥ. H. G. § 298; it is used because “the action expressed by the subordinate clause is still future at the time of speaking”; but this differs from the passages there quoted in that they all give the actual words of a speaker to whom the subordinate action is really future; but here the poet himself is the speaker, and to him the action is necessarily past, so that he has to put himself in imagination into the place of Agamemnon giving the order. I gather that Mr. Monro would prefer to read λάβω with two MSS. (“M Harl.” La R.); but I do not see the necessity for the change. See however on B 4.

231. For ἐπεπωλεῖτο cf. Γ 196, of Odysseus, κρίλος ὡς ἐπιπωλεῖται στίχας ἀνδρῶν.

234. πῶ here again = πως, as 184, Γ 306.

235. ψευδέσσι (ψευδῆς) Ar.: ψεύδεσσι (ψεύδος) Hermippas, on which a late Schol. makes the characteristic remark, μᾶλλον πειστέον Ἀριστάρχῳ ἢ τῷ Ἑρμαπίῳ, εἰ καὶ δοκεῖ ἀληθεύειν. There is not much to choose between the two. H. does elsewhere use ψεύστης, not ψευδῆς, though he has φιλοψευδῆς and ἀψευδῆς, but this argument is not of great weight. If we read ψεύδεσσιν we must understand it to mean “in case of, in connexion with, lies,” as 175.

236. See Γ 299, and for τέρων Γ 142.

238. ἡμεῖς αὐτ', so Ar.: MSS. δ' αὐτ'. For this use of αὐτε as a conjunction v. Γ 241. Observe ἀλόχους contrasted with αὐτῶν, the men themselves.

239. ἄξομεν, carry off as captives, Z 426, and the phrase ἀγειν καὶ φέρειν.

240. The neglect of the F of Φίλας suggests that we should read ὄντινα δ' αὖ μεθίνοντα, as M 268, N 229.

242. ἰόμωροι, a word of uncertain sense and derivation recurring only Z 479. We have ἐγχεσίμωρος B 692, γ 188, etc., ὑλακίμωροι of dogs ξ 29, and σινάμωρος in Herod. and Attic. (1) The analogy of ἐγχεσίμωρος makes it probable that the first element of the word is ίος, an arrow, though this always has ι in H.: we find however ιολέαιρα in Pindar (P. ii. 9) (ίος is prob. for ιός, Skt. ishus, so that we may compare Att. ίος by ίος from FlasFos). (2) Others refer it to λά, λή, voice, a rare word found in an oracle in Herod. (i. 85) and once or twice in Trag. (so Goebel, Ameis, Gladstone). (3) Döb. ίον, of the dark colour of the hair, comparing ισπλόκαμος, but this is improbable. The second element is equally uncertain; the derivations suggested are (a) σπᾶρ, μερ, to think of, cf. μῆσαντο δὲ χάρις, "thinking of arrows," i.e. devoted to fighting with the bow. To call a hoplite an archer was to accuse him of cowardice, see the taunt of Diomedes to Paris, A 385-7, cf. also N 718-721. For the vowel cf. δῶμα by δέμω. Curt. compares for the weakened sense of the root the compounds of φρήν, μελίφρων, etc. (b) μαρ of μάρναμαι, "fighting with arrows," or, "with shouts"; but this hardly suits either ἱλακόμωρος or σινάμωρος. (c) μαρ, to glitter, μαρμαίρω, etc. So Ameis and Goebel with (2), "eminent in shouting" (and nothing else). (d) Skt. māras, stormy, eager, earnest (Fick, and so Brugman, C. St. iv. 161), for μορ-ρος, conn. with Latin mon-eo (see also μῶρος, Curt. Et. no. 484), "eager with arrows." This latter sense appears to suit all uses best, if the Skt. analogy can be relied upon, which is far from certain. Δεγχεές, MSS., but the correct form is certainly ἐλέγχεα, B 235, Ω 260, and so we should read in Ω 239, E 787; in the last passage indeed it is necessary, as Feīdos follows. ἐλέγχεές is apparently a mere fiction invented to avoid a hiatus which is perfectly legitimate in the bucolic diaeresis. See however H. G. § 116 (4).

243. ἔστητε, so Ptolemaios, and most MSS.: ἔστητε, Ar. A. The former is supported by T 178, Alveia, τί νυ τόσσον ὁμίλου πολλὸν ἐπελθὼν ἔστης; and cf. B 323, τίπτ' ἀνεω ἐγένεσθε; κ 64, πῶς ἦλθες, Ὀδυσσεύ; (H. G. § 76). There is no analogy for the lengthening of the vowel in perf. (cf. ἔστᾶτε Δ 340, T 354). Bekk. compares ἐπίστανται II 243 by ἐπίστανται (but that is probably a subj.) βάτην by ἐβήτην, and some other forms which however prove nothing. (H. B. 95, 11.) The difficulty is to see how the idea of a point of time, such as the aor. seems to imply, can be introduced. In the passages quoted above, B 323, T 178, κ 64, such a point is easily understood, viz. the sudden silence of the Greeks before the portent, the appearance of Aineias to Achilles, the appearance of Odysseus. But we may perhaps compare the Attic use of ἦσθην, ἀπέπτυσσα, etc. Mr. Monro regards the aor. as characteristic of "impatient questions."

249. For the metaphor cf. E 438, I 420 (where we have the gen. ἐθέν instead of the dat., and so Ω 374).

253. There is a slight anacoluthon, as Ἰδομενεὺς has no verb, which can however easily be supplied from the following clause, e.g. πρώτας ᾤτρυνε φάλαγγας. For the Homeric idea of the boar's courage see P 21.

257. περὶ is here just on the boundary line between an adverb and preposition, as in A 258; cf. βουλῇ περικύβηται ἄλλων N 728, with περὶ πάντων ἔμμεναι A 287. It is unimportant which we call it, though its position rather separates it from the gen., which in any case is a

gen. of comparison (ablative), not partitive.

259. γερούσιον, i.e. at the assembly of the counsellors. So ν 8, ὅσοι . . . γερούσιον αἶθοπα οἶνον αἰεὶ πίνετε.

260. κρητῆρι, so Ar.: MSS. κρητῆρισι, but there would be only one mixing bowl at the feast. κέρωνται, "have the wine mingled"; Bekker writes κερῶνται, on the analogy of κεράσθε γ 332, κερῶντο ο 500. The text would imply a present κέραμαι (cf. δύνωμαι from δύναιμι), not elsewhere found (see Curt. Vb. i. 178): it is expressly supported by Schol. L.

262. δαιτρὸν, an allotted portion. For the custom of honouring a guest by keeping his cup full cf. Θ 161, περὶ μὲν σε πῶν Δαναοὶ ταχύπλοοι | ἔδρη τε κρέαςιν τε ἰδὲ πλείους δεπέσσιν", and so M 311. Compare "Benjamin's mess."

263. ἀνώγη, so La R. for ἀνώγοι of MSS. with variant ἀνώγει. The authority of MSS. is of little weight in such a matter, and the subj. is more natural, but, as Mr. Monro remarks, the opt. might stand as expressing "the remoter event, depending on πῖεῖν which is an inf. of purpose." H. G. § 308 (1) n. Cf. θ 70 (Θ 189 ?), a reminiscence of which passages may have misled the rhapsodists.

264. For πάρος with the pres. of a state of things continuing up to the time of speaking, cf. A 553; and for the pregnant use of ὅσος, II 557.

269. The γε belongs to the whole sentence; cf. A 352.

273. The Aiantes are always represented as fighting side by side, N 701 sqq.

274. νέφος, for this simile cf. II 66, P 755, Ψ 133.

276. ἰωή is again used of the blowing of wind in A 308, and of the rushing of flame II 127; in K 139, ρ 261 (ἰωή φόρμιγγος), of sound. The root seems to be να to blow, Skt. vā-me, ā-fṛ-ṃ, etc.; ἰωή = i-fw-ḥ, or rather fi-fw-ḥ; for the vowel cf. ἰωγή from Fay. (Knös, Dig. Hom. p. 191). Curt. now (Et. 588 b, ed. 5) refers the word however to αἶω, for i-ωf-ḥ, and understands it of noise only, though the present passage requires the F.

277. ἐόντι, ἰόντι MSS. with Zenod.; but the ἐόντι of Ar. is clearly preferable. μελάντερον ἤτε πῖσσα, blacker than pitch. This is the only instance of the use of ἥτε in this sense; probably we ought to read ἡ τε, as Bekker suggested, on the analogy of π 216, κλαῖον δὲ λεγέως, ἀδινώτερον ἢ τ' ὀλῶναι (where Buttmann would read ἡ τε). It is not possible to get a natural sense if we take ἥτε in its regular meaning; we can only make it mean "growing blacker and blacker, like pitch," or else "all the blacker because of its distance" (so Ameis and Fäsi); neither of which alternatives is satisfactory. But Ap. Rhodius seems to have taken the passage in this way, i. 269, κλαῖονσ' ἀδινώτερον, ἥτε κούρη . . . μόρεται. The meanings "as" and "than" are so closely allied that we need not be surprised to find a word capable of taking both, like the German wie, als, Latin quam. Hentze objects that "blacker than pitch" is merely hyperbolic and therefore un-Homeric; but cf. λευκότεροι χιῶνος, κ 364. Besides, a heavy thunder cloud may seem really blacker, because dead in hue, than pitch, which always has its darkness relieved by bright reflexions from its surface.

278. φαίνεται' = φαίνεται, not φαίνο as Buttm. Lez.

282. For κυάναι Zenod. read ἡρώων, feeling no doubt that blackness is not a physical attribute of an army marching to war. The comparison with the thunder-cloud is justified less by the external appearance than by the moral terror of ruthless onset produced by the blackness of the approaching storm. For πεφρικυῖαι Ar. in one edition had βεβρικυῖαι.

286. For the anticipatory use of γάρ see H. G. § 348.

288-291, see B 371-374.

299. ἔλασεν, Didymus mentions an old variant ἔεργεν. The κακοί it is to be presumed are a section of the πεζοί, of whom the best are kept as a reserve. There does not seem to be any other allusion to a formation in more than a single line. The Schol. accordingly explains that πρῶτα means "on the right wing," ἐξόπιθε "on the left," and says that "one κακός is placed between two ἀνδρείοι," not a very likely thing (ἐπὶ

300. πολεμίζοι: many MSS. -ζῆ, see on 263.

301. The μὲν implies that some advice to the foot-soldiers is to follow; but this never appears.

302. ἐχέμεν here evidently “to hold in hand,” not “to drive,” as usual. κλονέεσθαι, to be entangled.

303. This sudden change from oratio obliqua to recta is very strange, the only parallel in H. being Ψ 855, a very weak authority. There seems to be something wrong about the present passage, as 308-9 refer apparently to siege operations, and should be addressed rather to the πείροι than the ἱππῆες. The whole passage 297-310 is weak and out of place, and looks like an inopportune attempt to glorify Nestor, as in B 360-368. Lines 304-5 are perhaps adapted from P 357-359, where the same advice is given to foot-soldiers.

306. ἀπὸ ὧν ὀχέων, i.e. from his own chariot, standing in its proper place in the ranks, he is at liberty to attack anyone within the range of his spear. ἵκηται, can reach an enemy's chariot. The expression of the thought is far from clear.

308. οἱ πρότεροι only here for the usual πρότεροι ἄνθρωποι; it looks like a later use. The next line is weak and tautological.

315. ὁμοῖον: this form is elsewhere always used of strife or battle, except θάνατος γ 236. Nauck would in every case read ὁλοῖος. The sense of “common to all” (which itself is not very appropriate as a general epithet of war in spite of ξυνὸς Ἐννάλιος, Σ 309) is not supported by any use of ὁμοῖος. Pind. Nem. x. 107, which is quoted, is not in point, for there πότμον ὁμοῖον obviously means “the same fate” for the two brothers (like ὁμοῖον γαῖαν ἐρεῦσαι Σ 329), and is explained by the following lines. There is therefore an undoubted case against ὁμοῖος, which anyhow ought to be separated in the lexicons from ὁμοῖος. Indeed Aristonikos says that the γλωσσογράφος explained ὁμοῖον = τὸ κακόν. But there is no obvious reason why it should have displaced a word so clear in meaning as ὁλοῖος. Christ conj. that the right form may be ὁμῖσιον, conn. with Skt. amīva = aerumna, and ὁμός.

318. μὲν τοι all good MSS.; μὲν κεν vulg. For the opt. without κε cf. H. G. § 299 (f). It is concessive, “I admit that I could wish." To the instances quoted by Mr. Monro may be added K 557, O 45, η 314, in all of which however, as in the present passage, κε may be introduced by a very slight alteration of the text.

319. For Nestor's story of the slaying of Ereuthalion see H 136-156. The next line was marked by Ar. with "obelos and asterisk," as wrongly inserted from N 729, where in our texts the reading is different.

321. αὐτε is here a conjunction, the two clauses being co-ordinate, as εἰ clearly does not express a condition, but retains something of its interjectional force, calling up for consideration a certain state of things, as in ὣς ἔον, εἰ ποτ' ἔον γε (v. Γ 180). It thus is almost "Well, I suppose I was a young man then; but now," etc. A 280, q.v., is precisely similar. ὀπάξει, so Ar.: MSS. ἰκάνει. ἔα, the length of the α is probably primitive, as the word is never found with short α. The form ῥα possibly depends on metathesis of quantity. (Hartel, Hom. St. p. 73; Curtius, Vb. i. 177.)

324. αἰχμᾶσσουσι, to wield the spear, only here in H. The word is used in a similar but not quite identical sense in Soph. Aj. 97, Trach. 355, and Aesch. Pers. 756; v. Lexica.

327. For the asyndeton cf. 89; and for Menestheus B 552 sqq.

328. μῆστωρες αὐτῆς, lit. devisers of the battle-shout, usually applied to individual heroes, N 93, 479, Π 759. Cf. on μῆστωρι φόβοιο E 272.

331. ἀκούετο, the only case in H. of the middle form in the present or imperf. It is possible that this implies a conscious listening rather than a mere physical hearing; if they were not attending to the battle-cry, there is more ground for Agamemnon's rebuke than if they had not yet heard it. There seems to be a similar distinction in many cases between ὁρῶ and ὁρῶμαι, though they are often identical (cf. 205 above). Cf. H. G. § 8.

334. ὀππότε goes with μένοντες, "waiting till." So after ποτιδέγμενοι H 415, etc. H. G. § 308 (2). These object clauses appear to be essentially similar to those with εἰ after verbs of seeking, etc., for which see Γ 450, 453; the primitive train of thought being, "awaiting (with the thought in their minds) 'at some time another column might set upon the Trojans.'" πύργος seems to be precisely our word "column" as a metaphor of a military formation. Cf. 347. The word does not recur in this sense. Aristarchos strangely enough wished to make Τρώων depend on πύργος and Ἀχαιῶν on ὁρμ., "waiting till a column of Trojans should attack the Achaeans," because he thought that the delay of the Athenians ought to be due to their wish to see the Trojans put still further in the wrong by beginning the general engagement. On this ground he was inclined to prefer the variant κέν τις ἐναντίον for πύργος Ἀχαιῶν, and ἀρξαιεν for -ειαν.

338. νιὲ, the lengthening of ε in voc. is not uncommon; v. Hartel, Hom. St. 64, where it is suggested that it may be due to the interjectional nature of the voc., which admits of being dwelt upon by the voice. But the ictus has probably at least an equal share. Cf. Δ 155, E 359, Φ 474, and Αἴαν Ψ 493.

339. κεκασμένη, cf. τ 395 (Ἀντόλυκος) ὅς ἀνθρώπους ἐκέκαστο | κλεπτοσύνην θ' ὄρετο τε.

341. μὲν τ': here μὲν seems to answer to νῦν δέ in 347. The exact sense of τε is not so obvious; it perhaps emphasizes this clause as general, whereas νῦν δέ takes a particular instance (H. G. § 332). Observe ἔοντας in spite of the dat. σφῶν, as A 541, τοῖ . . . ἔοντα: H. G. § 240.

342. καυστείρης recurs only in M 316; it is the feminine of καυστήρ*. The grammarians wrongly accented καυστειρῆς, and held that it came from καυστειρός, a supposed dialectical form of καυστηρός.

343. The sense of this line is clear, but the syntax hopeless. The gen. after verbs of hearing expresses—“(1) the person from whom sound comes; (2) the person about whom something is heard; (3) the sound heard,” H. G. § 151 d. δαιτὸς cannot be brought under any of these heads. κέκλυτέ μιν μύθων is clearly different, being a sort of “whole and part” construction. The only possible explanation is, “you hear me about a banquet,” which is without analogy, and only gives the required sense by violence. This however is the explanation of Ar., πρῶτῳ μου ἀκούετε περὶ δαιτὸς. It may be added that “to hear from a person,” in the sense of receiving a message, is a modern but not a Greek idiom. Besides, ἀκουάζεσθαι, in the two other passages of Homer where it occurs (ι 7, ν 9) means “to listen to,” as we might suppose from its form, which suggests a frequentative sense. Hence even Nauck's trenchant conjecture, καλέοντος for καὶ δαιτὸς, does not entirely meet the case. An additional difficulty is that Menestheus, who even in this scene is a κωφὸν πρόσωπον, never appears among the γέροντες (see on B 53; and for feasts given to them, Δ 259 and B 404 sqq.).

345. φῶλα, sc. ἐστί, as B 796. This line and the next ἐν τοῖς ὑπομνήμασιν (commentaries of Ar.) οὐκ ἀθεοῦνται, ἀπαιτῶνται δὲ αὐτοῦς οἱ ἡμέτεροι (i.e. modern taste) ὡς ἀπρεπῶς . . . ἀνεκδίζοντος τοῦ Ἀγαμέμνονος, Schol. A; and see Cobet's amusing commentary, M. C. 231. If they were omitted, the point of the passage, the contrast of φῶλα . . . φίλως, would be lost.

347. The clause with εἰ is here the object of ὀρόφτε: this is not common in Homer, but is analogous to the ὅππότε-clause in 333. See Lange, EI, p. 473.

351. The punctuation given is mentioned by Nikanor, who prefers an alternative in which the note of interrogation is put after μεθιέμεν, and a comma after Ἄρηα. μεθιέμεν refers to Odysseus and Menestheus in particular, while in ἐγείρομεν Odysseus speaks as one of the army at large, meaning “every case in which we fight” (aor. subj.). It is unusual in Homer to begin an entirely fresh sentence of several lines in the middle of a line (ξ 217 is the only case quoted); but still the punctuation of Nikanor gives a more pointed sense, and there is not much to choose between the asyndeton before ὅππότε and at the beginning of 353 (which recurs in I 359 as the continuation of a long sentence).

354. For the phrase “father of Telemachos” see on B 260. Here it is clearly impossible to give any appropriate reason for the introduction of Telemachos except as a title of honour. Aristonikos mentions that Ar. noticed this “foreshadowing of the Odyssey” as a sign that it was by the author of the Iliad.

357. γινῶ with gen., as φ 36, ψ 109. This is common in the participle of οἶδα in the sense “to be skilled in,” e.g. μάχης, ἀλγῆς, etc., but rare in the finite verb. Ψ 452 is possibly another case. See H. G. § 151 d. πάλιν λάξετο, just our idiom “took back his words.” Cf. πάλιν ἐρέει I 56. The phrase recurs v 254 in a slightly different sense (took back what he was about to say).

361. ἥπια δῆνεα οἶδε, i.e. is well disposed towards me, as II 78, εἰ μοι κρείων Ἀγαμέμνων ἥπια εἶδεη. δῆνεα, counsels, apparently from δαῖναι.

362. ἀρεσσόμεθα, atone for; but where an object is expressed it is elsewhere always a person, “conciliate.” Cf. the act. ἀψ ἀρεσαι I 120, T 138.

363. μεταμώνια occurs elsewhere only in Od. (β 98, etc.). The derivation is quite uncertain.

366. ἵπποισιν here as often = chariot, and goes with ἄρμασι by hendiadya. 419 shews that Diomedes is standing in the car, not merely amid the horses and chariots.

371. πολέμοιο γεφύρας: this phrase recurs Θ 378, 553, Δ 160, Γ 427. From E 88-9 and O 357 (cf. Φ 245) it appears that γεφύρα implies a dam or causeway rather than what we should call a bridge. It is explained by the Schol. τὰς διόδους τῶν φάλαγγων, the lines of open ground between the moving masses of men, who are perhaps likened to flowing water. It is especially used of the space between the hostile armies. ὀπιπεύεις, "eye," in a contemptuous sense, implying hesitation to advance.

374. ὥς, so Ameis with two MSS., for vulg. ὡς with comma after μάχεσθαι. The regular use in Homer of ὡς ἔφη, etc., is to refer back to a completed expression of opinion; there is no other case of ὡς ἔφη = as he said. πονέμενον in special sense of fighting, as πόνος, 456, B 420 and often, of the toil of battle.

378. οἳ, Tydeus and Polyneikes; the change from the sing. is abrupt. ἐστρατόωντο (also Γ 187) strictly must mean, "were on a campaign against." The present is either στρατάεσθαι or στρατόεσθαι: the latter is found in Aesch. Ag. 132, the former does not occur anywhere else in Greek. For the form -όωντο from an o-verb we may compare δηϊόωντο N 675, θηϊόωντο δ 226, ἀρόωντο ι 108, which all follow the analogy of stems in a. Cf. also H. G. § 55 (γ).

380. οἳ, Thyestes and the people of Mykenai. ἐκέλευον, Tydeus and Polyneikes.

381. ἔτρεψε, changed their minds. παραΐσια only here, ἐξαισιος is more common.

382. πρό is here an adv., and ὁδοῦ a local genitive, lit. "forward on the way." Cf. on πρὸ φόβοιο P 667. For λεχεποῖν cf. B 697.

384. ἐπὶ, so MSS. and Ar., thus connecting it with the verb, and making ἀγγελίην a masc. in apposition with Τυδῇ, see note on Γ 206. Or we may take ἀγγελίην as fem., a cognate acc. with ἐπιστείλαν, like ἐξεσίην ἐλθεῖν. Others read ἐπι, and understand ἐπ' ἀγγελίην = "for an embassy." Nauck reads Τυδῇ ἐστείλαν, omitting ἐπὶ, as Τυδῇ seems to be an Attic form. The following story is repeated in E 802-808, where the phrase used is ἦλυθε νόσφιν Ἀχαιῶν ἀγγελος ἐς Θήβας.

387. ξείνους must here mean "a stranger," i.e. virtually under the circumstances an enemy, whereas in 377 it means a friend. But the word never acquired in Greek the connotation of the Latin hostis, and in ordinary cases to be a ξείνος in any sense was a reason for expecting friendly treatment, not treachery.

390. ἐπὶ ῥροθος (here and Ψ 770 only in H.) is, like the synonymous ἐπιτάρροθος used in the parallel line E 808, a word of obscure origin. Döderlein refers it to ἐπιρρύζειν, used of hounding on dogs. Eustath. ὁ μετὰ ῥόθον βοηθῶν. Goebel compares among other words ἐ-ρέθ-ω, which is plausible, but it is impossible to accept the whole of his explanation, and the two words still remain, as he says, "Schmerzenskinder der Etymologie."

392. ἀναερχομένη, so A and several of the best MSS.: ἀναερχομένη caeteri; most editors write ἀψ' ἄρ' (Bentl.) or ἀψ' οἱ (Barnes) ἀναερχ., the former on the analogy of the similar line, Z 187; but ἀρα has no sense here. For the hiatus cf. ἐπιβόμαι I 167, κατατρεχεται ι 122, ἀποαίνυμαι N 262, ἐπισοσσομένῳ P 381. These almost all occur in parts of the line where hiatus is allowable, of which the end of the first foot is one (v. on B 87) (Ameis). πυκινόν, lit. dense, i.e. consisting of a large number, as in πυκινὰ φάλαγγες, etc. This sense does not suit λ 525, but that line is interpolated. εἶσαν ἄγοντες, "took and set," ἀγ. being pleonastic. εἶσαν, from ἔζω, A 311.

394. The three names, Αἰμονίδης, Αὐτόφορος, Πολυφόντης, are evidently meant to have a murderous ring (Fäsi). Μαίων is probably a traditional name, not one invented for the purpose: according to Statius he was an augur and priest of Apollo, which would explain θεῶν τεράεσσι (398).

399. For τόν, here used in a possessive sense, Brugman would restore όν, I believe rightly. On this question however see H. G. § 261, 255, ad fin.

400. χερεῖα, on this word see A 80. It is here clearly a comparative. The best MSS. follow Ar. in writing χερεῖα and χερεῖος, but χέρης, χέρη. ἀμείνων, sc. ἐστί, so A with Ar.: ἀμείνω caet. The reading of Ar. seems best, for δέ τε frequently introduces a clause added paratactically, with a construction of its own. Σ 106 is exactly parallel, ἐν πολέμῳ· ἀγορῇ δέ τ' ἀμείνονές εἰσι καὶ ἄλλοι.

404. σάφα, if taken with εἰπείν, must mean "truly" (ψεύδε' being then ψεύδεο), but this is not the usual Homeric sense. The word is always used with verbs of knowing, except three times in Od. with εἰπείν, always in the sense "giving a clear, certain report about Odysseus." The two senses are however nearly allied (Paley quotes Soph. Trach. 387), and it is on the whole better to translate "truly" here than with Fäsi to do violence to the order by joining μὴ ψεύδεα εἰπείν, ἐπιστάμενος σάφα (that they are so). This expression is one of the many peculiarities of the ἐπιπώλησις.

406. καὶ is expressed by the emphasis in "we did take," i.e. we did not merely besiege. This is the only mention in H. of the war of the Epigoni; that of the "Seven" is rarely alluded to.

407. ἀγαγόνθ', dual, as he is thinking only of Diomedes and himself. ἄρειον is taken by the Schol. as comparative, viz. τοῦ ἐν Τρῳαί; for the sake of the antithesis it should rather mean "a stronger wall than our fathers found," as though Thebes had been strengthened in the interval. Cf. O 736, "a stronger wall" than that which is now being taken. There is no Homeric instance of ἀρειος = ἄριστος, and in any case that would weaken the point of the line. Ar. obelized 407-9 on the ground that if the fathers were defeated by their own madness and the sons conquered only by obeying the gods, there is no ground for concluding that the sons are better warriors than the fathers were.

409. The ἀτασθαλίαι may be illustrated from Aesch. Sept. 423 sqq., where it is said of Kapaneus

θεοῦ τε γὰρ θέλοντος ἐκπέσειν πόλιν καὶ μὴ θέλοντός φησιν, κ.τ.λ.

410. Observe the very rare use of μή with aor. imper. : so Σ 134 μήπω κατα-δύσσο, ω 248 μή . . ἐνθεο. Schol. A quotes μή φεύσον, ω Ζεῦ, Aristoph. Thesm. 870. See on this H. G. § 328.

412. τέττα, a ἀπ. λεγ. which divided the opinions of the ancient critics, some taking it as a προσφώνησις φιλεταιρική, others as an ἐπίρηγμα σχελιαστικόν. It is probably like ἄττα (I 607, q. v.), a term of affection, perhaps borrowed from the language of infancy. "A friendly or respectful address of youths to their elders," L. & S.; but there is no ground for supposing Sthenelos to be older than Diomedes. ἦσο, simply "continue," as often.

421. ὑπό, explained by Am. and La R. of fear seizing the knees, as Γ 34, ὑπὸ δὲ τρόμος ἔλλαβε γυῖα. But it is better to translate, with Fäsi, "thereat," as though = under the influence of the noise. This is common in composition, c.g. ὑποτρέω, to tremble at a thing; so ὑπαὶ δέ τε κόμπος ὀδόντων γίγνεται, Δ 417. ταλασίφρονα, cf. Φόβος . . . ὅς τ' ἐφόβησε ταλαίφρονά περ πολεμαστήν, N 300; and for the introduction of a supposed spectator, Δ 539, etc.

422. κύμα is used collectively, as is shewn by ἐπασσύτερον (for which see A 383). This latter word contains the point of comparison, v. 427.

πόντῳ μὲν τε πρῶτα κορύσσεται, αὐτὰρ ἔπειτα χέρσῳ ῥηγνύμενον μεγάλα βρέμει, ἀμφὶ δέ τ' ἄκρας 425

 ἥ τ' ὀλίγη μὲν πρῶτα κορύσσεται, αὐτὰρ ἔπειτα

424. μὲν τε, so A and one or two other MSS., vulg. μὲν τὰ. But La R. remarks that τὰ πρῶτα always means "primum," "at the first," i.e. once for all, e.g. A 6, Z 489, etc.; when followed by ἔπειτα or δεύτερον it is always πρῶτα alone: cf. 442 below. The use of τε in similes is very common, v. H. G. § 332; La R. quotes sixteen instances in books B-E alone.

426. ἰόν, so Ar.: La R. έόν with MSS., but this is far less vigorous and picturesque.

428. νωλεμέως, a word of uncertain origin. L. Meyer derives from root ram, to rest (ἡρέμα, etc.; v. Curt. Et. no. 454); but there is no instance of the r of this root passing into l in any cognate language. Düntzer refers it to root dl, as if from an adj. δλεμος, in sense "not to be destroyed," imperishable; but this hardly suits the sense, "unceasingly."

433. For the pointed contrast between the silence of the Greeks and the clamour of the Trojans cf. Γ 1-9. Τρῶες is not followed by any verb, the sentence being interrupted by the simile, and taken up in an altered form in 436. We have a similar case in ν 81-4, ἥ δ' ὥς τ' . . . ὥς ἄρα τῆς. πολυπάμονος, so A; all other authorities give πολυπάμμοτος, which Hinrichs considers an Aeolic form, derived from root pa (πάτ-νια, etc.), for πάτμων: -παμονος, he says, would be Doric, and therefore out of place in H. But πάομαι regularly has ā in its derivatives, πέπαιμα, etc.

435. ἀζηχῆς, according to Döderlein, and Clemm in C. St. viii. 46, for δ-διηχῆς "very piercing," of sound. So in O 658, P 741. But in σ 8 and probably O 25 it means "incessant," as though from δ-διεχῆς. Döderlein thinks that the two words have got confused.

437. Compare B 804. The origin of the form τα (with masc. τω only Z 422) is very doubtful; it does not seem possible to connect it with μία (for σμία, σεμ-ια). See Curt. Gr. Et. no. 599 and p. 594.

438. πολύκλητοι, like the more common πολυηγεῖες, called together from many parts.

440. The three half-personified spirits of battle must not be regarded as siding with either party, but as arousing alike τοὺς μὲν and τοὺς δέ. Cf. A 73, N 299, O 119, Σ 535, in none of which are they actual persons in the war.

442. Cf. 424, and the well-known imitation of the lines by Verg. Aen. iv. 173 agg., especially "Ingrediturque solo et caput inter nubila condit."

443. Notice the aor. ἐστήριξε and pres. βαίνει side by side, of momentary and continuous action as usual.

444. For ὁμοίον see 315.

448. ὀμφαλόεσσαι, see on A 34. The ἀσπίδες are merely a repetition of ῥινούς above.

449. ἐπληντο, "met," from πλα- = τελ-, the only pres. forms being τελάω and τελάω (Hym. Hom.). The perf. πεπλημένος is found in μ 108.

450. Observe the chiasmus οἰμωγὴ . . . εὐχολὴ . . . ὀλλύντων . . . ὀλλυμένων.

452. ὄρεσφι, locative, with κατὰ as with πρό, Γ 3.

453. μισγάγκειαν, "watersmeet," place where two valleys (ἀγχεα) join their streams (ἀτ. λεγ.).

454. κρουνῶν ἐκ μεγάλων seems simply to denote the great body of water "fed from mighty springs." The χαράδρη will be the ravine leading down to the μισγάγκεια. The simile is imitated in Verg. Aen. ii. 307, xii. 523.

455. τηλόσε, the use of the terminus ad quem instead of a quo is regular in cases like this; the reaching to a distance is regarded as a property of the power of hearing, not of the sound, II 515 δύνασαι δὲ σὺ πάντος' ἀκούειν, cf. A 21, πεύθετο γὰρ Κύπρονδε μέγα κλέος.

456. πόνος, Ar. for φόβος of MSS., because he held that φόβος in H. always mean "flight" not "fear," and in the present case flight has not yet begun on either side. So Lehrs, Ar. p. 76.

457. Antilochos the son of Nestor has not before been mentioned. ἔλεν, in pregnant sense, as very often in Il., "slew"; see note on A 328. κορυστὴν, in full armour, on the analogy of θωρηκτής, ἀσπιστής, αἰχμητής (on this formation see H. G. § 116, 2). In the compound ἵπποκορυστής however the termination -της seems to have the usual transitive force, "arrayer of chariots," and Paley suggests that the simple form may here mean "an officer, one who marshals, κορύσσει, his troops."

459-461 = Z 9-11. πῆξε, he plunged the spear—the active πῆγνυμι is not intrans. in H. except in the perf. πέπηγε. For φάλος see note on Γ 362.

462. On ὥς ὅτε without a finite verb see B 394.

464 = B 541.

465. ὄφρα is perhaps to be taken with λελιμένος, compare E. 690 λελιμένος ὄφρα τάχιστα ὥσαι· Ἀργεῖους, cf. τ 367 ἀρώμενος εἰς ἱκοιο· cf. also Z 361, II 653. In the second case however, as well as in the present passage, it is possible to make λελιμένος = eagerly (as M 106, II 552, βάν ῥ' ἰθὺς Δαναῶν λελιμένοι), ὄφρα going with the principal verb. Compare also note on A 133, and on the other side H. G. § 307.

467. γάρ, so best MSS., vulg. γάρ ῥ', which is at best a clumsy compound (though it is found a few times) and not required by either sense or metre; for ἐρύοντα originally began with F, and the caesura alone in this part of the line would suffice to lengthen the short syllable. The same omission should be made in B 342, though with only one MS.

468. πλευρά, neut. only here, and probably A 437, elsewhere πλευρά. Cf. Δ 122, νεῦρα by νευρή (bowstring). παρ' ἀσπίδος, were exposed beside his shield.

470. αὐτῷ, the body, as opposed to the departed θυμός: see on A 4.

472. ἐδνοπάλιζεν, "shook," an obscure word recurring only ξ 512, τὰ σὰ ῥάκεα δνοπαλλίζει, apparently "thou shalt flutter, flaunt thy rags," al. "shalt clothe thee." Neither interpretation throws much light on the present passage. No convincing derivation has been suggested; perhaps it is connected with γνέφαλλον (cf. δνόφος by γνόφος and κνέφας) in Alkman, frag. 34 = κνέφαλλον, Aristoph. frag. 84, which are related to κνάπτω, "wool torn off in carding cloth" (Hayman on ξ 512). But the connexion in sense is by no means obvious.

474. With Σιμοεῖσιος cf. Σάττιος, a contracted form for Σαττιοεῖσιος Z 443, and Σκαμάνδριος Z 402, all proper names of Trojans derived from rivers.

478. Cf. P 302. θρέπτρα, recompense for rearing him: compare the πλόκαμος Ἰνάχω θρεπτήριος of Aesch. Cho. 6.

479. For ὅπ' Αἴαντος δουρὶ see Γ 436.

480. πρῶτον, here local, in the forefront.

483. εἰαμένη, lowland, apparently from root ās, h₂s, to sit, for h₂samenē, cf. h₂ménē ἐν χώρῳ, Theok. xiii. 40. (Curt. Et. no. 568.) πεφύκη is Hermann's conjecture for πεφύκει of all MSS.; the pluperf. is entirely out of place in a simile, and of course the authority of MSS. as between α and η is nil. La R. quotes a number of instances where the perf. subj. has been thus corrupted into the plup., P 435, Π 633, Α 477, α 316, σ 133, χ 469. Διογ., cf. p 208, αἰγείρων ὑδατοτρεφέων.

484. Mure quotes "the practice, still common in Southern Europe, of trimming up the stem of the poplar to within a few feet of the top, which, left untouched, preserves the appearance of a bushy tuft," so that the comparison is between this tuft and the warrior's plume.

485. The use of so soft and weak a wood as poplar for the felloe of a wheel is certainly curious. The wood is suited to the purpose however by its flexibility and elasticity (Buchholz, H. R. i. 2, 240). Ameis suggests that the bronze tire (εἰσσωτρὸν) would supply the requisite hardness. Probably the Homeric carpenter had not learned to bend tough wood by the aid of steam, and was therefore driven to the use of the weaker kinds for purposes such as the present.

489. αἰολοθώρηξ, like κορυθαίολος, implies the quick flashing of the metallic surface. The idea of flexibility or easy motion (Buttm. Lexil. p. 66) does not suit the solid plates of the Homeric cuirass.

492. βεβλήκει, the plup. implies violent hitting; it is an intensive imperfect, not a pluperfect in our sense; see Delbrück, E. F. iv. 85. ἐτέρωσι, "to the other side," from Antiphos' point of view.

497. κεκάδοντο from χάζομαι: the χ of the pres. is not organic, but merely an affection of κ produced by the s of root skad (lit. to cut, sever oneself: cf. Lat. cedo).

498. ἀνδρός is a causal genitive (cf. τοῦ ἀποκταμένοιο 494).

500. ἵππων: apparently Priam kept a stud-farm at Abydos. His horses were of the famous breed of Tros, for which see E 265-7, T 221-230. It would be simpler to understand "beside his chariot," like παρ' ἀσπίδος above (468; so Mr. Monro); but the order of the words is against this.

508. Πέργamos, the citadel of Troy, where was the temple of Apollo, E 446: afterwards called τὸ Πέργαμον (cf. Ἰλῖον by Homer's Ἰλῖος) or τὰ Πέργαμα. The tragedians use it in its primitive sense as a common name, “citadel”; it is doubtless conn. with πύργος.

515. τριτογένεια, also Θ 39, X 183, γ 378: derived by the Greeks from a river Triton, variously located in Boiotia or Thessaly, or from the lake Tritonis in Libya. All these words are no doubt connected with a stem τριτο-, meaning water, which appears in τριτών, Ἀμφιτρίτη, Skt. trita (Fick). Ameis suggests that this may contain an allusion to the myth that all the gods were children of Okeanos and Tethys (Ξ 201); Athene has no special connexion with water. Another derivation (Eustath.) from an alleged Cretan word τριτώ=head (i.e. born from the head of Zeus) lacks all trustworthy confirmation. (See note 10 in Butcher and Lang's Odyssey, p. 415.) The original significance of the name is however not now to be discovered. See note on Ἀτρυτώνη, B 157.

517. πέδησεν, i.e. prevented his escape; X 5, “Ἐκτορα δ' αὐτοῦ μέναι ὁλοή μοῖρα πέδησεν.”

521. τένοντε: Homer generally uses this word in the dual, only twice in plur., apparently from a belief that the tendons always went in pairs. πάντα τὰ τεταμένα νεῦρα τένοντας Ὀμηρος λέγει, Ar. on T 478; cf. X 396. ἀναιδής, relentless, i.e. stubborn; cf. N 189 (where however there is no intimation of the stone doing any harm to a human being), and the famous description of the stone of Sisyphos, λ 598. Aristotle (Rhet. iii. 11) mentions this as a case of the attribution of human qualities to lifeless objects.

522. ἄχρῃς recurs II 324, P 599, in all cases in description of wounds (the form ἄχρῃ as a preposition with gen. σ 370 only). It must mean “utterly,” though this creates some difficulty in the explanation of P 599, γ v.

524. ῥ' evidently represents a lost F' = ἐ, him.

527. ἀπεσσύμενον, Ar., vulg. ἐπεσσ. with most and best MSS.: the advance of Peiroos is completed in 524, so it is more natural to suppose with Ar. that he was now retreating. There was also a variant ἐπεσσύμενος.

533. ἀκρόκομοι, cf. B 542 ἄβαντες ὀπιθεν κομῶντες, and note there. The ἡψιχαῖται ἀνδρες of Pind. P. iv. 172 perhaps mean the same thing.

535. πελεμήχθη, "staggered," was shaken by the attack, probably conn. with pello, πάλλω.

539. For οὐκέτι there was a curious variant οὐ κέ τι; it is not quite clear from the Scholia whether Ar. adopted it or not. If so, he probably did it on the analogy of ἀν κεν in N 127. The repetition of κεν would be quite un-Homeric, and οὐκέτι gives a perfectly good sense, viz. "it had now come to this, that none could make light," as might conceivably have happened before. See I 164 and note. μετελθών, entering the fight.

540. ἄβλητος by missiles, ἀνούτατος by thrust, as usual.

542. ἐλοῦσα, ἀτάρ, so La R. with one

MS.: A has ἐλοῦσ', ἀτάρ, one ἐλοῦσα αὐτάρ, and the majority ἐλοῦσ' αὐτάρ. But αὐτάρ elsewhere always has the first syllable in the arsis; and it is very common to find a hiatus before ἀτάρ. La R. quotes Θ 503, Δ 732, Ψ 694, ι 83, φ 229, for the hiatus, and compares E 287 (ἐρυχεσ ἀτάρ), E 485, for the lengthening of a preceding short syllable. All these cases occur after a stop in the principal caesura, and there is therefore no reason to suppose that ἀτάρ ever began with a consonant. ἐρωήν, the rush, impetus; cf. Γ 62.

543. Bentley and Heyne, followed by Nauck and others, consider the last two lines of the book as spurious. The words ἡματι κείνῳ, in combination with the plupf. τέταντο, certainly look as though they belonged to the end, not to the beginning of a day's fighting, and may therefore have been a rhapsodist's "tag," meant to wind up the end of a day's recitation, and omitted when Δ was immediately followed by E.

Ε

This book contains the first of the ἀριστείαι, or victorious careers of individual heroes. All others, whether Greek or Trojan, are subordinated to Diomedes, who is the central figure down to the middle of the next book. Hence Herodotos (ii. 116) quotes Z 289-292 as occurring ἐν Διομήδους ἀριστείῃ.

The book falls into three main parts: (i.) 1-430, Diomedes makes havoc of the Trojans, and though wounded by Pandaros returns to the fight, and wounds Aphrodite by the help of Athene; (ii.) 431-710, Ares and Apollo rally the Trojans, and Diomedes has to retreat; Sarpedon kills Tlepolemos; (iii.) 711-909, Hera and Athene come to help the Greeks, and Athene and Diomedes wound Ares, and drive him to Olympus.

The critical difficulties of this book (with which we must include Z 1-311), unlike those which have preceded it, are internal rather than external. The most serious of all is to be found in the speech of Diomedes to Glaukos, where he speaks of the danger of a mortal fighting against a god (Z 128). This is quite unintelligible in the mouth of a hero fresh from victory over Aphrodite and Ares; while the very doubt as to whether Glaukos be not a god is inconsistent with the faculty bestowed on Diomedes in E 127-8 of discerning gods from men. Again the passage in which Athene takes Ares out of the battle (E 27-36) is most abruptly introduced without connexion at the beginning or end. The words of Athene to Diomedes (E 124-132) evidently imply that she means to leave the battlefield, and that Diomedes is to rely upon himself; yet in 290 she is there to guide his dart, though in 418 we find her in Olympus. There is therefore good ground for the supposition that the whole incident of the wounding of Aphrodite is an addition to the original narrative.

This is still more the case with the wounding of Ares at the end of the book. This seems like an attempt to outbid the wounding of Aphrodite, and is accordingly not free from traces of exaggeration. The episode of the fight between Sarpedon and Tlepolemos is most probably of much later origin than the greater portion of the Iliad. See note on B 652. With these exceptions however, and a few of smaller compass mentioned in the notes, there is no reason to suppose that any part of the book is to be ascribed to any period after the bloom of Epic poetry, nor any difficulty in supposing it to have been inserted into the original plan of the poem by the original author or an immediate successor.

In fact the oldest part of the ἀριστεία must in all probability have been the earliest of such insertions between A and Λ, and forms the necessary foundation for the last part of Z, which is no doubt contemporary with it. It is likely however that the introduction of the wounding of the gods has dislocated the original framework, as it is hardly possible to leave a satisfactory continuous narrative when these are omitted; even as the book stands there are several points in which the description lacks clearness.

The action is in the highest degree rapid and varied. The numerous myths and legends of the gods which are peculiar to the book do not betray any other sign of late origin; and the merit of scenes like the wounding of Aphrodite and even of Ares cannot be better exhibited than by contrast with such a specimen of the work of the decadence as the Θεομαχία in Φ.

4. δαῖε οἱ is added epexegetically to δῶκε, and hence without a conjunction, as ε 234, etc. The very old Ambrosian MS. reads δαῖε δέ οἱ ἐκ κόρυθος, which may point to an older δαῖε δέ οἱ κόρ. For the idea cf. Σ 206-214 and X 134-5.

5. This fine simile is essentially like that of X 26-29, whence we see that the star of summer is Seirios, "the dog of Orion." For ὀπωρινός, which hence must mean the "dog-days," the time of the heliacal rising of Seirios, rather than what we call autumn, cf. also II 385, Φ 346, λ 192 (τεθαλίῃα, as the season of fruit). The Homeric division of the year is into spring, early summer (θέρος), late summer (ὀπώρη), and winter, and corresponds with the fact that the transition from the heat of summer to the cold of winter is in Greece extremely rapid. Hence there is good reason for connecting the syllable ὀπ- with root ὀπ, found in ὀπρός; it will mean "the ripening time," in which sense the Lat.

coquo is also used. The scansion ὀπωρινός, though invariable in H., is hard to explain. The suffix is perhaps to be compared with -ενο- (*ποθ-ενο-*s, etc., H. G. § 118) and -ενο- (*ἀργ-ενο-*s, *ἐρεβ-ενο-*s) rather than with the -νο- of *φήγ-νο-*s, *εἰδρ-νο-*s; and this supposition, it will be observed, is supported by the difference of accent. For the elision of -ι of the dat. cf. H. G. § 376 (8).

6. λελουμένος, as Σ 489, λοτρῶν Ὀκεάνοιο. For the gen. cf. Z 508, etc. For παμφαίνῃσι some MSS. give παμφαίνῃσι, which is doubtless an older form of this subjunctive. Some edd. have taken it for an indic., but this is not possible, as the non-thematic present is found only with vowel-stems, as δάμνησι, 746. The derived form παμφανῶσα proves nothing.

7. Schol. A on this line is interesting as giving one of the few extant specimens of the method of Zoilos, the famous Ὀμηρομάστιξ—"Ζῶϊλος ὁ Ἐφέσιος κατηγορεῖ τοῦ τόπου τοῦτου, καὶ μέμφεται τῷ ποιητῇ διὰ τὴν γελῶτως πεποίηκεν ἐκ τῶν ὤμων τοῦ Διομήδους καίμενον πῦρ· ἐκινδύνευσεν γὰρ ἂν καταφλεχθῆναι ὁ ἦρως." The strokes of the lash do not seem to have been very formidable.

9. For this exordium cf. P 575.

10. Hephaistos, like Athene, though represented as allied with the Greeks, is worshipped in Troy. ἦστην, here only.

12. ἀποκρινθέντε, separating themselves from the throng. οἱ, for the dat. after ἐναντίος cf. I 190, Δ 67, but it is only here used of hostile meeting, in which sense the gen. is commoner.

53. Zenod. here had the remarkable reading χραῖσμεν θανάτοιο πέλωρα, which he can hardly have invented; for a somewhat similar use of πέλωρα we might compare B 321, δεσὰ πέλωρα θεῶν, "dire portents," and as the word in H. is always used of living creatures it may be paralleled by κῆρες θανάτοιο, B 302. It is a serious question if this is not a case where "faciliori lectioni prae-stat difficilior."

57. Omitted (or supplied by a later hand) in the best MSS.

59. Τέκτονος seems to be a proper name derived from its owner's calling, like Τυχίος H 220, Δαίδαλος, Βουκολίων Z 22, Φήμιος Τερπιάδης the minstrel, χ 330. So the name of the father Ἀρμων means the joiner. In θ 114 we have the patronymic Τεκτονίδης. δς in 60 and 62 no doubt refers to the principal person, Pherekleos; so that the craft is represented as hereditary in three generations.

60. δαίδαλα, always a subst. in H., the adj. being δαίδαλος.

63. Herodotos was obviously thinking of this line when he said of the ships which the Athenians sent at the request of Aristagoras to help the Ionians against the Persians, αἱ αἱ νῆες ἀρχὴ κακῶν ἐγένοντο Ἕλλησι τε καὶ βαρβάρουσιν, v. 97.

64. Schol. A, ἀθετεῖται, ὅτι οὐχ ἰγίως ἐξενήνοχεν, αἱ πᾶσι κακὸν Τρώεσσι γέγοντο αὐτῷ τε. ἔδει γὰρ αὐτῷ τε. ἡ δὲ ὁ ὀρθο- τονεῖται νῦν διὰ τὴν ἀρχήν. This scholion contains two different views: the first—down to αὐτῷ τε—is that of Aristonikos and Ar., that ὁ standing at the beginning of the line must be orthotone and therefore reflexive; but that the reflexive sense is inadmissible here, because the subject of the clause is νῆες; hence the line must be spurious. The second opinion is probably that of Herodianus, that the ὁ is really anaphoric, not reflexive (= αὐτῷ, not αὐτῶν), but that it is orthotone because it stands at the beginning of the line (διὰ τὴν ἀρχήν). The latter view is taken by La Roche (H. U. 141). It is however possible to take ὁ αὐτῷ as reflexive = ἑαυτῷ, i.e. to Pherekleos, who is the subject of the principal sentence though not of the relative clause. This view is that taken in H. G. § 253, q.v. Schol. A says, Ἑλλάνικὸς φησι χρησμὸν δοθῆναι τοῖς Τρωσὶν ἀπέχεσθαι μὲν ναυτίας, γεωργίᾳ δὲ προσέχειν, μὴ τῇ θαλάσῃ χρώμενοι ἀπολέ- σωσιν αὐτοῦς τε καὶ τὴν πόλιν. Observe that θεῶν ἐκ goes closely with θέσφατα.

70. Θεανῶ, see Z 298, A 224. Paley compares Eur. Andr. 224, καὶ μαστὸν

73. ἰνίον, the great tendon at the back of the neck which holds the head upright; Z 495. The blow was thus given from behind.

74. ἐπὶ τάμει, cut away at the root.

77. ὅς, Dolopion, not Hypsenor; for the priests do not appear ever to fight in H. ἄρητῆρ, cf. Φ 131 for the worship paid to the river-god Skamandros.

81. χεῖρα = arm, as often.

83. πορφύρεος, dark; used of what we call the "cold" colours, from blue to violet. Cf. T 418, νεφέλῃ δὲ μιν ἀμφεκάλυψε κυανέῃ. Thus the metaphor may be taken from the approach of a thunder-cloud.

85. οὐκ ἂν γνολίης, cf. Γ 220.

88. χεῖμαρρῳ, explained by Ameis to mean "flowing from snow," i.e. at the melting of the snow on the mountains. For ἐκέδασσε Naber and Nauck conj. ἐκέασσε, which certainly seems more in place, though the former may be used of a stream carrying away the fragments of the causeways.

89. ἐεργμέναι, (so MSS.) "fenced close," drawn so as to make a fence to the stream. The γέφυραι are evidently here embankments along the sides of the torrents; and this, not "bridge," seems to be the regular meaning of the word in H. This is Fäsi's explanation, and it is sufficiently defended, perhaps, by II 481, φρένες ἔρχαται ἀμφ' ἀδὺν κῆρ, the midriff forms a fence about the heart. Compare also Vergil, Aen. ii. 497 "oppositas evicit gurgite moles (spumeous amnis)". Most editors have adopted Ar.'s reading ἐεργμένα, which is explained either "joined together in long lines," or "bound" in the sense of πυκνῶς ἀραρυῖαι. Neither of these is very satisfactory; ἔρω always means "to connect together by a rope or string" (cf. ο 460, σ 296 ὄρμον χρύσειον, ἡλέκτροισιν ἐεργμένον, "strung with amber beads"), and the transition from this to the sense required for the text is not very simple. There is still another alternative, to read ἐεργμεναι (with at least one MS., the Codex Mori, though this is of no importance), as an infin.; "the dams do not hold it back, so as to keep it within bounds."

100. διέσχε, held on its way through, cf. N 519, δι' ὤμου δ' ὄβριμον ἔγχοι ἔσχε.

105. Λυκίῃθεν, see B 824, Δ 103, 119. The occurrence of the name Lykia on the Hellespont side by side with the more famous country in the S., is one of numerous cases where the same tribe name is found in widely separated districts; the presence of Gauls in Asia Minor is an instance where we happen to know the explanation. The only strange thing here is that the Trojan Lykians disappear at the end of the episode of Pandaros (296) to be succeeded by those of Sarpedon in 471, without any note of the change, unless it be in 479, τοῦ γὰρ Λυκίῃ Ξάνθῳ ἐπὶ διήεντι, which may be meant to distinguish the two countries. It is possible, as Gieseke has supposed, that the only Lykians of the original tale of Troy were those of Pandaros, and that the occurrence of the name gave an opportunity for the introduction of famous heroes like Sarpedon and Glaukos; but the supposition is incapable of proof.

109. πέπον is here evidently not a term of reproach (v. B 235), but merely a form of courteous address. Cf. Z 55, I 252. καταβήσεο, cf. 46.

112. διαμπερές, right through the wound, in order not to have to pull the barbs backwards; the shaft of the arrow is of course cut off. Cf. Δ 213 for the opposite process; the barbs not being buried in the flesh the arrow is pulled out backwards. It is not clear whether Sthenelos took off the back-plate of the θώρηξ, or whether, as is perhaps more probable, the back and front plates did not exactly correspond, so that an arrow piercing the front of the cuirass might yet not meet the back-plate.

113. στρεπτοῖο χιτῶνος; in the Journal of Hell. Studies, iv. p. 81, I have endeavoured to show that this means a pleated doublet; i.e. a sort of shirt made thick, like a Highlander's kilt, in order to save the skin from the hard metal θώραξ. It is quite natural that the spirting up of the blood through this, and not through the hole in the breastplate, should be mentioned, though of course both are meant; for the χιτών would be the first obstacle that would tend to stop the stream, and also the most effective, as it would act as a sort of bandage. Hence it is mentioned to show the violence of the bleeding which passed even through this. According to the old interpreters στρεπτός meant either "woven"—a sense which cannot be got out of the word or its use—or else, and this was apparently the view of Aristarchos, a "coat of mail," chain or scale armour; but this is untenable, as not only is such armour not mentioned in H. at all, but in this passage the γυῖα implies the very opposite, a cuirass made of solid plates of metal. The latter objection is also fatal to Ameis-Hentze's theory, that it was a shoulder-piece of leather covered with pieces of metal, if indeed such a shoulder-piece could be called χιτών at all. Cf. also § 31.

115. μοι, so best MSS., and in a few other passages, K 278, etc.: La R. μεν on the analogy of A 37, etc. But the ethic dat. may be defended by Ω 335 ἐκλυες ᾧ κ' ἐθέλησθα, Π 516 ἀκούειν ἀνέρι κηδομένῳ, and in Theog. 4, 18, Solon 13, 2: all cases of a god hearkening to prayer. ἀτρυτῶνη, B 157.

117. φίλαι: this middle aor. is only used of the love shown to mortals by gods, see 61, K 280, T 304. There were variants φίλαι and φίλε', but the text is clearly better.

118. δὸς δέ τέ μ' appears to be the reading of all MSS.: but Schol. A mentions a variant apparently accepted by Herodianus (and possibly also Ar., v. Schol. A on O 119), τόνδε τέ μ'. This is accepted by Fäsi and Am.-H. on the ground that δὸς is a gloss to explain the construction of the acc. and infin., which is sufficiently supported by B 413. θλεῖν ("to kill" as usual) is put first by a slight "prothysteron": cf. A 261, τράφεν ἡδ' ἐγένοντο. The change of subject in ἐλθεῖν is rather violent: hence van Herwerden thinks, plausibly enough, that the original form of the line was ἐς ὄρμην ἔ' (i.e. ἐ) ἔγχεος.

126. σακέσπαλος is proparoxytone though the verbal element of the compound is employed in a transitive sense: the converse is the case with μαυφόνος.

128. The subj. γινώσκῃς is undoubtedly right after ἔλον, because the object of the past action is still future: H. G. § 298, 2. The MS. authority, which in such a question is of little weight, is in favour of γινώσκας.

129. πειρώμενος, making trial of thee, 220, etc.

 ἀλλὰ κατὰ σταθμούς δύεται, τὰ δ' ἐρήμα φοβεῖται· 140
 αἱ μὲν τ' ἀγχιστῖναι ἐπ' ἀλλήλησι κέχυνται,

130. ἀντικρὺ is found with the last syllable short only here and 819, and may be counted among the linguistic peculiarities of the passages dealing with the wounding of the gods.

132. For οὐτάμεν (present infin.) Zenod. read οὐτάσαι, the aor. infin.

135. μεμαῶς, a nominativus pendens, the construction being changed in the following line, cf. Z 510. καί is here probably not "and," but is to be taken closely with περ, as elsewhere when the two words occur together; the line being thus added asyndetically in explanation of 134. For καὶ . . . περ at the beginning of a sentence see ν 271, καὶ χαλεπὸν περ ἔντα δεχόμεθα μῦθον, Ἀχαιοί. In all other instances καὶ περ follows the principal verb. Hence many edd. place the comma after ἐμίχθη, and the colon after μάχεσθαι, so that μεμαῶς agrees with Τυδεΐδης in 134. But this gives an entirely false antithesis; Diomedes does not return to the battle although, but because, he was eager before.

137. ἀγρῷ, i.e. away from the habitations of men.

138. χραύσῃ, conn. with χρά(φ)ω, ε 396, Π 352, Φ 369. The exact relations of the word are doubtful, but it is perhaps allied to Skt. gharsh, which implies a root ghar, to prick, tear, scratch, whence χαράσσω, χηραῖος, and others; a discussion of the family by Prof. Postgate will be found in Amer. Journal of Phil. iii. p. 335, where however this word is not mentioned. Ahrens (Beitr. zur Gr. und Lat. Etym. i. 7) would separate χραύω from ἐχραε altogether, and explains it to mean "struck," comparing Herod. vi. 76, ἐνέχραυεν ἐς τὸ πρόσωπον τὸ σκήπτρον, and Hesych. χραύσῃ· καταξύσῃ, πλήξῃ. αὐλῆς here = the wall of the steading; from 140 it would seem that the stalls are regarded as arranged, with the shepherds' huts, around a courtyard: cf. Σ 589, from which it is clear that such a "sheep-station" must have been rather extensive.

140. As the line stands τὰ must be the subject, "they (the sheep) are put to flight, being left alone." The change from the fem. δεσσιν to the neuter, and then immediately back to the fem. αἱ, is however very harsh, far more so than in the passages which are quoted as parallel: Π 353 μῆλων . . . αἱ τε, Λ 244 χίλια . . . αἶγας ὁμοῦ καὶ δὲς, τὰ δ' ὀσπετα ποιμαίνοντο, Φ 167 τῷ δ' ἐτέρῳ . . . ἡ δέ. H. moreover elsewhere uses ἐρήμος (this is the traditional Epic accentuation) only of places. If we neglected the canon of Ar., that φοβεῖσθαι means fugere not timere, we might translate "the desert places are afraid" at the sound of the onset, but this is not a Homeric thought. Others (e.g. Döderlein) make the shepherd subject of φοβεῖται, "he flies from the open places," i.e. the courtyard; but this sense of ἐρήμος is unnatural, and the construction of φοβεῖσθαι is hardly supported by the only other passage in which it is used of flying from a pursuer, X 250, οὐ σ' ἐτι, Πηλεὺς υἱέ, φοβήσομαι.

141. ἀγχιστῖναι, elsewhere only with ἐπιπτον (P 361, χ 118, ω 181, 449), are thrown down in heaps. The MSS. read ἀγχισθῖναι perhaps on the analogy of προμησθῖναι, λ 235, but the word is evidently a secondary formation from ἀγχιστος.

142. ἐμμεμαῶς answers to μεμαῶς in 135: the lion, like Diomedes, is only the more aroused by the wound, cf. P 735. Bentley, feeling some difficulty in the conjunction of ἐμμεμαῶς with the retreat implied in ἐξάλλεται, conj. ἐμματαίως, cf. 836; but the inconsistency, which is not perhaps very serious, lies in the word ἐξάλλεται, as the simile depends entirely on μεμαῶς. βαθέης: we should use the converse "high," as ε 239, βαθείης ἐνδοθεν αὐλῆς.

147. πληξ, a change from the participial construction, as Γ 80. ἐέργαθεν, so A 437.

150. This line is susceptible of two different interpretations: (a) "the old man interpreted no dreams for them when they were coming (to Troy)," i.e. had he foreseen their fate he would have kept them from the war; (b) "they came not back for the old man to interpret dreams for them." Though the second has little doubt defenders, yet there can be little doubt that the first is preferable. The use of ἐρχόμενος is exactly the same as in 198; and the sense is quite what is wanted, though the next line is added in a way which is not usual in Homer, as we should have expected to find it explicitly stated, "if he had they would not have been killed." But in the second alternative the mention of the discerning of dreams seems quite otiose, unless we are prepared to suppose that the old man thought that a specimen of his peculiar skill would be the best welcome for his returning sons. A third possibility is given by the Schol. A, "their father prophesied to them that they would not come back." But even if such a construction of the participle could be admitted it would still remain a fatal objection that we should want a future, not a present.

153. τηλυγέτω, see Γ 175; it is obvious here that the word cannot mean "only child."

158. Cf. Hes. Theog. 606, ἀποφθιμένον δὲ διὰ κτῆσιν δατέοντα χηρωσταί. The general meaning of the word χηρωσταί is sufficiently evident from the context, "inheritors of the bereaved," i.e. the next-of-kin, οἱ μακρόθεν συγγενεῖς (Hesych.). The form of the word however is not so easily explicable; it should have an active sense, perhaps originally "those who divided up the estate of the bereaved" for distribution among the tribe at large. But we have no evidence whether in Homeric days the reversion of property (i.e. chattels, not land) belonged to the family or the tribe; nor does the word itself recur, except in the two passages named, and in Qu. Smyrnaeus.

162. For ἡ Bentley conj. ἡδέ, on the ground that the point of the simile lies in the double slaughter, and hence the plural βοσκομενέων, which must be partitive if we read ἡ, “from a herd feeding.” Zenod. read βουκόλων for πόρτιος, which is not plausible.

164. κακῶς seems to go closely with ἀέκοντας, as 698 κακῶς κεκαφηῖτα θυμῶν, β 266 κακῶς ὑπερηγορόεντες.

168-9. See Δ 88-9.

170. η 68a, only here with double accus., which is however often found with προσηύδα and προσέειπε. We have Ἑρμείαν ἀντίον ἤδα, ε 28.

171. ποῦ τοι τόξον, cf. O 440, ποῦ νύ τοι ἰώ; in the next line ᾧ may refer either to τόξον or to κλέος in the sense of “famous skill.”

175. 68a, predicative = here: cf. T 117 Αἰνεΐας δδ' ἔβη, α 185 νῆπι δέ μοι ἦδ' ἔστηκεν.

177. εἰ μὴ, “I suppose it is not a god,” i.e. provided it be not a god.

εὐχολῆς ἐπιμέμφεται εἰ θ' ἐκατόμβης, A 65, q.v. The exact connexion of the clause χαλεπὴ . . . μῆνις is not clear: it may mean “the wrath of a god weighs heavy upon men,” or it may go with the preceding, “and the wrath of the god be heavy upon us.” The former will give a reason why, if this enemy be a god, it is not well to provoke him further, the latter will explain why a god should condescend to such slaughter. But Ameis-Hentze read, with Ar., ἐπιμήνις, taking ἐπι to indicate wrath aimed in a particular direction; on the ground that in all other cases where ἐπι = ἐπεστι it is used of the actual presence of something with a distinct relation to some person. This is a strong argument against taking the clause as a general reflexion; but it leaves untouched the alternative of taking it closely with the preceding εἰ-clause, and perhaps this is the most probable explanation, as ἐπιμήνις is a compound which can hardly be supported by analogy.

182. There is no distinct trace in H. of the devices borne on shields which play so prominent a part in the Septem of Aeschylus, and are frequently represented on vase-paintings; nor of course can the mention of the helmet be taken to indicate anything like the mediaeval crest. But every chieftain would be sure to adopt some peculiarity in the shape of his shield and helmet, in order to be known by his men when his face was concealed. Cf. A 526, εἰ δὲ μιν ἐγνων, εἰρὴ γὰρ ἀμφ' ὦμοισιν ἔχει σάκος. For αὐλώπιδις and τρυφάλεια, see J. H. S. iv. p. 297-8. The former word seems to indicate the helmet with an αὐλός (breathing-hole) in the front. As to τρυφάλεια, its exact signification can hardly be determined. It may possibly be another form of τετράφαλος, from τετρυ- = quadru-, the first syllable being dropped as in τράπεζα for τετράπεζα. If the explanation of the φάλος given in the paper above quoted is accepted, it will hardly be possible to derive the first syllable from τρυ- to pierce; which is indeed sufficiently improbable on account of the quantity of the υ. Others again take it to mean "with three φάλοι," as if τρυφάλεια, but we should then have to assume a very improbable mistake in the tradition, as τρυ- never becomes τρυ- in compounds.

183. εἰ θεός ἐστιν, we say "if he is not a god"; the words imply a slight disposition to accept the affirmative. Cf. τίς δ' οἶδ' εἰ κε ποτὲ σφί βλας ἀποπίσσειται ἐλθών, γ 216. Ar. needlessly athetized the line, on the ground that Pandaros has really no doubt. But the very next words obviously imply at least a rhetorical uncertainty.

187. (ἡ διπλῇ περιεστικμένῃ) ὅτι Ζηνόδοτος ἠθέτηκεν αὐτόν. οὐ γὰρ ἐτράπετο ἄλλῃ τὸ βέλος, ἀλλ' ἐτυχεν αὐτοῦ. οὐ λέγει δὲ ὅτι καθόλου ἀπέτυχεν, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐπὶ καίριον τόπον φερόμενον παρέτρεψεν. But this explanation seems forced, and most odd. agree with Zenod. in rejecting the line. Nor is it a satisfactory resource to take ἐτραπεν ἄλλῃ as = brought to naught; such a derived sense of ἄλλος is rather Attic than Homeric, and is not sufficiently supported by A 120. For the gen. τούτου, "away from him," we may compare πάλιν τράπεθ' υἱος ἐοῖο, Σ 138. κιχήμενον, just as it was reaching him.

190. Ἀιδωνῇ προιάψειν, as Ἀιδι προιάψειν, A 3. The form occurs again only T 61; it is not Pindaric, but appears rather to be a word of the tragedians, as Mr. Paley says. This line may belong to the interpolations of which this speech seems to have suffered several.

194. πρωτοπαγεῖς, generally explained "joined together for the first time," i.e. newly made. Cf. Ω 267. In θ 35 we have νῆα πρωτόπλοον, which is also translated "making her first voyage." But this is a doubtful compliment to a ship; the alternative, "a first-rate sailor," suits the context better, and so here "of first-rate build," primarie compacti (Döderl.), avoids the awkward tautology with νεοτευχές which made Zenod. athetize the line. Unfortunately neither the simple πρῶτος nor any of its compounds seems to involve the pregnant meaning of primarius; so that we have to acquiesce in the ordinary explanation. The same ambiguity is found in πρωτόπλου, Eur. Hel. 1531. (Compounds of πρῶτος are very uncommon in classical Greek.)

195. For the practice of covering chariots with cloths, when not in use, cf. B 777.

200. For the name Τρῶες as belonging to the people of Pandaros see B 826, and for the dat. B 345.

202. For the crowding within the city walls compare Σ 286-7.

203. ἄδην only here with αἰ, though we have ἀδῆσαι, ἀδῆκότες, etc. This may probably be an instance of the power of the ictus alone to lengthen a syllable. Hence the old variant ἀδδην. Al. ἄδην.

208. ἀτρεκές: this simple form recurs in H. only π 245, ὅτ' ἄρ' δεκάς ἀτρεκές ὅσπερ δὲ οἶαι, where it is an adverb; the form ἀτρεκής is of course familiar. The original meaning of the word is not certain; if it be conn. with τρέπω (Curt. Gr. Et. no. 633) and mean "directly," "not swerving from the straight line," it can here hardly be an epithet of αἶμα. On the other hand it cannot be taken with βαλὼν, which is too far off, and does not require an adv. to qualify it, as of itself it implies "hitting the mark." (ὅτι τρώσας, καὶ οὐ βίψας ἀπλῶς τὸ βέλος.)

We must therefore take it with ἔσσενα, "I truly, surely, brought forth blood." So Schol. B, ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀτρεκής εἶδον αὐτὸ, οὐκ ἠπάτημαι. But 206-8, which contain a feeble repetition of 188-191, are almost certainly interpolated for the sake of the allusion to the Ὀρκίων σύγχυσις, an episode which is evidently unknown to the author of this book, who otherwise could not have failed to allude to it again (see introduction to Δ).

209. κακῇ αἴσῃ, A 418. ἀπὸ πασσάλου, cf. φ 53, Penelope ἐνθεν ὀρεξάμενη ἀπὸ πασσάλου αὐτοῦ τόξον.

212-216 are to be compared with π 99-103, where 214 is not only repeated, but stands also in exactly the same position, as an apodosis with τινὸς protases, one preceding, the other following. The former (εἰ κε with fut. indic.) makes an assumption, "I assume that I shall return." The second, εἰ with opt., is concessive, "admitting I did not burn my bow." There is no "attraction" of the mood to that of the wish, though we might have equally had the second condition stated as an assumption, not as a concession, cf. B 259 (q. v.), μηκέτι . . . εἴην, εἰ μὴ . . . δόσω. See Lange, EI, p. 461. Some take νοστήσω and ἐσόφομαι as aor. subjunctives, referring, for another instance of an aor.

form ὠφόμεν, to Ω 704, where ὄψεσθε is rather more natural if it be taken as aor. imper. than as fut. ind. ἀλλότριος: a foreigner is of course an inferior, and therefore defeat from such is the deepest degradation.

218. οὐκ ἔσσεται ἄλλως, no change will be made, nothing will be effected, till, etc. ἄλλως has the connotation “better” in θ 176, and υ 211, and cf. also Α 391. The euphemism by which ἄλλως = κακῶς is not Homeric.

222. Τρώιοι, the breed of Troas. Cf. 265, τ 230, Α 597, ψ 291, 377.

227. ἐπιβήσομαι is the reading of Zenod.: Ar. followed by best MSS. ἀποβήσομαι, ὅσον τῆς τῶν ἵππων φροντίδος, which cannot be right. Ar. no doubt felt a difficulty from the fact that he supposed Aineias to be already on the chariot; but 239 shows that this is not the case. The only question is which of the two shall drive and which be παραβάτης, not whether either shall fight on foot; and in fact Pandaros does attack from the chariot, see 294. Aineias is at the moment on foot, with his chariot as usual in close attendance. There is no antithesis between ἥνια δέξαι and ἵππων ἐπιβήσομαι, δέ meaning only “and.”

230. ἔχε goes with both ἥνια and ἵππους by a slight zeugma, hold the reins and drive the horses. Compare the difference in the sense of δέξαι = take, and δέδεξο = await the attack, above.

232. φεβώμεθα, flee from, cf. 223.

233. ματήσεται, grow wild, “lose their heads,” as we say: cf. II 474. In ψ 510 it means “lost no time.” Compare also Aesch. Sept. 37, P. V. 57.

236. μώνυχας, a word of doubtful origin. It is commonly explained as = μονῶνυξ, “with single, undivided hoof,” formed like κελαινεφῆς for κελαι(νο)-νεφῆς, ἄρμα(το)τροχική, and some later words. Ameis (Anhang to ο 46) objects, among other reasons, that Homer has no compounds of μόνος, which appears only in the form μόνιος; that μόνιος is not a synonym of εἰς in Homer; that the later form μονῶνυξ is found only in scientific descriptions, not as a poetical epithet; that it is used in Homer as an epithet of individual horses, whereas the single hoof is common to all; nor is it a peculiarity of horses. He therefore prefers to derive it from ΜΑΩ, μεμαῶτας ὄνυχας ἔχων, and urges that it is only used of high-bred horses, otherwise described as fleet, and only when they are in action, or kept at rest against their will.

247. Cf. πατὴρ δ' ἐξ ἀγαθοῦ γένος εἴχεται ἐμμεναι υἱός, φ 335, for the use of ἐκγεγάμεν.

249. δοκεῖ Ζηνοδότος τοῦτον καὶ τὸν ἐξῆς ἠθετηκέναι, Ariston.; an important remark, as it shows that the later Aristarchean school knew Zenodotos only at second hand. ἐφ' ἵππων, ὅτι Ἀττικῶς ἐξενήροχεν ἀπὸ τοῦ ὡς ἐπὶ τοῖς ἵπποις (in the direction of the chariot), ibid. For the Attic use compare ἐπ' οἴκου = homewards, ἢ ἐπὶ Βαβυλῶνος ὁδοῖς, Xen. Cyr. 5, 3, 45, etc. It occurs also in H., e.g. E 700, Γ 5. But it is hardly possible that this should be the sense here, for we cannot suppose that Sthenelos, whose function is that of charioteer, can have left the horses so far as to advise Diomedes to retreat in their direction. We must therefore take it in the ordinary sense, "retreat υποπ the chariot" (as Ω 356), which seems especially to have been used for this very purpose, as the Homeric hero had a decided preference for doing his serious fighting on foot, and keeps his chariot at hand as a resource in case of need; compare M 84-5.

252. φόβονδ' ἀγόρευε: for this pregnant use we may compare II 697, φύγαδ' ἐμῶνόντα. It is easily derived from the literal sense which we have in Θ 139, φόβονδ' ἔχε μόνυχας ἵππους, and may be compared with such phrases as εἰπεῖν, μυθεῖσθαι εἰς ἀγαθόν, I 102, Ψ 305; thus it means "say nothing in the direction of, tending to, flight." φόβος is of course an exaggeration, as Sthenelos merely meant him to fight in the throng, not among the πρόμαχοι. So ἄλυσκάζοντι and καταπτώσαν are invidious names for retirement to the δμῶς, where an individual was protected by numbers. So Idomeneus says, N 262, οὐ γὰρ δέω ἀνδρῶν δυσμενέων ἐκάς ἰστάμενος πολεμίζειν. οὐδέ σε, so La R., with Ptol. Ask.: Herod. οὐδέ σε, not even thee. But it is more Homeric to take οὐδέ with the whole clause, "for neither wilt thou persuade me."

253. γενναῖον, a δπ. λεγ. in Homer; nor does he use γέννα or γεννάω: σημειοῦνται τινες ὅτι οὕτως εἰρηται ἐγγενές, πάτριον, Schol. A. It is practically indifferent whether we explain the word thus, "it is not in my blood," or in the later sense "it is not honourable for me to shirk"; this sense is immediately derived from the former, as with our word "high-bred," worthy of a man of family. To a chieftain whatever is hereditary is honourable as a matter of course. τὸ γενναῖον ἐστὶ τὸ μὴ ἐξιστάμενον ἐκ τῆς αὐτοῦ φύσεως, Aristot. H. A. i. 1. 32.

256. ἔῃ scanned as one syllable does not look at all like an early form for ἔδει (synizesis in this verb is found elsewhere only K 344, φ 233), nor perhaps does τρεῖν. Herodianus read ἔα (imperf. "forbade me") and so A. Ahrens conj. τρεῖν (τρεῖμεν, Nauck) μ' οὐκ εἶα Ἀθήνη, Menrad τρεῖν μ' οὐκ ἔδει γὰρ Ἀθήνη. The distich may be interpolated, "255-258 spurii!" Nauck.

258. For the double γε cf. II 30, μὴ ἐμέ γ' οὐν οὕτως γε λάβοι χόλος. 287-8 and X 266 are doubtful cases. Schol. A (Didymos) remarks, οὕτως γοῦν διὰ τοῦ γ' Ἀρίσταρχος: this perhaps indicates the existence of a variant εἰ γ' οὐν, as in 260, which is at least unobjectionable, perhaps preferable, and is conjectured by Nauck, after Akers.

261. τούσδε, pointing to his own horses, which must therefore be close at hand; an additional argument in favour of the explanation adopted in 249.

262. It is not uncommon in vase-pictures of a chariot about to start to see the reins fastened to the front of the ἀντὺξ or rail which ran round the front of the car and formed a handle behind by which the riders could mount. This again seems clearly to shew that Sthenelos at the moment is in the car and holding the reins.

263. The construction is probably ἐπαῖξαι, μεμν. ἵππων Αἰν., dart forward, thinking only of the horses. ἐπαίσσειν is generally used thus absolutely. But it sometimes takes the dat. (κ 322, ξ 281, Ψ 64 ?) and acc. (M 308, H 240); and may also take the gen., like other verbs expressing "aiming at," cf. N 687, ἐπαίσσοντα νεῶν; H. G. § 151 c. μεμνημένος may then go with ἵππων, "make straight for Aineias, thinking only of the horses"; or perhaps it is added independently, "make straight, without forgetting, for the horses of Aineias." For this use of μεμνημένος compare T 153. But this does not suit l. 323.

265. ἥς, an ablative gen., expressing the source, as Z 211, ταύτης τοι γενεῆς τε καὶ αἵματος εἶχομαι εἶναι, and τῆς γενεῆς ἔκλεψε, below. The attraction ἥς for ἣν assumed by some is not Homeric, Hesiodic, or Pindaric. Bekker (H. B. ii. 12), instead of supplying εἰς after γενεῆς takes it with ἔκλεψε in 268, regarding γενεῆς there as a mere resumption after the parenthetical ἥς . . . ἡελιόν τε, and putting a comma at the end of 267. He would also read ἣν for ἥς, but this seems needless.

266. οὐνεκα, "because." For Ganymede see T 231-5.

269. λάβρη Λαομέδοντος, Ω 72. θήλεας, as θήλυς ἐέρση ε 467, "Ἡρὴ θήλυς ἐοῦσα" T 97. Others read θηλέας for θηλέας, with the Doric ā of the acc. plur. fem.; but this is not an epic form.

270. γενέθλη a stock, stud.

272. μήστωρι, Ar. and all MSS. but one of the second class; but the variant μήστωρι has been accepted by Bekker, Nauck, Christ, and others; it was read by Plato, Lach. 191 B; καὶ αὐτὸν τὸν Αἰνείαν κατὰ τοῦτ' ἐνεκωμίασε, κατὰ τὴν τοῦ φόβου ἐπιστήμην, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτὸν εἶναι μήστωρα φόβοιο. There can be no doubt that Homeric usage is on the same side, for μήστωρα φόβοιο is always used of heroes (Z 97, 278, M 39, Ψ 16, cf. μήστωρα δύτης N 93, etc.), except in the parallel passage Θ 108, where even the MS. authority is divided. Indeed the application of such a phrase to horses is in the highest degree exaggerated and un-Homeric: it is hard to conceive what can have induced Aristarchos to accept it. The nearest Homeric analogy is in the late passage B 767, φόβον Ἀργὸς φορεύσας, of the horses of Eumelos.

273. For κε (here and Θ 196) most edd. (including Nauck and Christ) follow Bekker in his conj. γε; but L. Lange, EI, p. 188 (494), has shown that this is wrong, by a comparison of I 141, 283, μ 345. See H. G. § 313.

274. On this line see note on 421.

278. Schol. A mixes up in his note two interpretations, according to one of which we should read ἦ as a particle of asseveration; the other would take ἦ ἀντὶ τοῦ εἰ. Though the former view is doubtless right, yet it may be said that the parataxis of the two clauses shews exactly how the use of εἰ with the indicative arose, to express a concession made unconditionally.

279. τύχωμι A, cael. τύχοιμι. There is no case of εἰ κεν with opt. used in what Lange has named "subsecutive" clauses—those, that is, which we translate by "to see if," "to try whether," etc. The opt. in these always expresses a wish felt by the speaker (see on Γ 450, 453), and κε is not compatible with a wish. It is therefore better to accept the reading of A, and explain it as arising from an assumption, "in which case (κε) I suppose I shall hit you." See L. Lange, EI, p. 199 (505) and 80 (386). Cf. Φ 225, T 70, where κεν with the subj. only is found. See also H 243.

281. For τῆς δέ La B. suggests (and Nauck and Christ adopt) ἦ δέ, comparing E 66, H 260, T 276. This is no doubt right, as ἦ δέ would be likely to be changed, in order to avoid the (perfectly normal) hiatus in the bucolic diaeresis.

288. This is the only case in Homer of πρὶν with infin. after a negative clause. Bekker, offended by the fourfold repetition of γε, wrote πρὶν ἀποκ., πρὶν ἢ. As πρὶν seems to be contracted from πρόιον, a compar. of πρό, it may well have been long by nature originally. Though it has been pointed out that πρὶν has a special affinity for γε, the combination occurring nearly thirty times in Homer, see Z 465 (1), O 74, α 210, δ 255, η 196, σ 289 are the only passages where γε is not elided; this very small proportion and the preponderance of passages in the Odyssey are in favour of Bekker's view. See Hartel, H. S. 109, La Roche, H. U. 256. πρὶν is found in the thesis of the third foot without γ' Z 81, I 403, etc. The MSS. are divided between ἀποπαύσεσθαι and -σασθαι, the majority giving the aor.: A has α with ε above. On this question compare Γ 112, and H. G. § 238.

289. For ταλαύρινος see note on H 239.

291. The course of the dart has given great trouble to critics ancient and modern. Some thought that the dart being miraculously guided need not pursue a natural course; others, that Pandaros was leaning forward to see the effect of his shot; others, that the plain was not level, and that the chariots ran on the lower ground while the footmen fought from the heights (1). None of them seem to have hit on the absurdly simple explanation that Pandaros may have attempted to “duck,” bending his head forward a moment too late. The result would obviously be what Homer describes.

293. ἐξελύθη, A and other MSS. with Ar., who explained τῆς ὀρμῆς ἐπαύσατο, which the word cannot mean: cael. with Zenod. ἐξεσῶθη, “issued forth.” But there can be little doubt that Ahrens and Christ are right in restoring ἐξέλυθε = ἐξῆλθε. (The form with ε for η is not elsewhere found, but has very likely been sometimes suppressed in favour of the more familiar ἦλθον.) This is an interesting, because evidently accidental, proof that in the oldest form of the Epic poems the ictus sufficed to lengthen a short syllable without the aid of the ν ἐφέλκυστικόν, and justifies Fick in omitting the ν except where it is required to prevent hiatus.

295. παρέτρεσσαν, swerved aside. For the canon of Ar. that in H. τρέψιν means “fugere, non timere,” see Lehrs, Ar. 77 sqq. Hence Aineias leaps down, because his horses are running away.

301. τοῦ γ' ἀντίος, cf. P 8; the expression is very strange, and might easily be emended to ἀντίος, the hiatus being normal in the bucolic diaeresis. As it stands, τοῦ must mean “the dead man.”

303. μέγα ἔργον, "a great feat," added parenthetically, "in apposition to the sentence," as it is usually called, though it really forms part of the complement of the verb λάβε. We may compare A 294, πῶν ἔργον ὑποείκομαι, and similar usages which will be found in H. G. § 136, 2-4. There is nothing in Homeric usage to justify us in taking ἔργον in apposition with χειρμάδιον, as though = a great thing; or in comparing such Herodotean usages as μέγα χρήμα ὄς. φέροιεν: for this "concessive" or potential opt. without ἄν see H. G. § 304, where reference is made to the similar use in a principal clause, βεῖα θεὸς γ' ἐθέλων καὶ τηλόθεν ἄνδρα σῶσαι.

304. οἶοι νῦν βροτοὶ εἰσι, compare A 272. The phrase occurs four times in the Iliad, but not in the Odyssey.

306. κοτύλη, the acetabulum of Roman and modern anatomy; the socket, sufficiently like a shallow cup, by which the head of the femur is articulated to the pelvis. Compare the use of κοτυληδών of the cuttle-fish's suckers in ε 433 (also of the acetabulum in Ar. Vesp. 1495).

309. ἐρείσατο, propped himself up.

310. γαίης, the local or rather "quasi-partitive" gen., H. G. § 151 a. For ἄμφι δὲ ὅσσε van Herwerden and Nauck conj. ἄμφι δὲ F ὅσσε, which is undoubtedly right, as the hiatus in this place is not permissible. Eustathius mentions the reading δὲ αἱ ὅσσε, which looks as though some echo of the truth had survived even to his day.

311. ἀπόλοιτο, for the ἀπώλετο of later Greek; so 388, P 70. The optative simply puts an imaginary case, without implying that it is past, present, or future: this information is sufficiently given by the context. Cf. Delbrück, S. F. i. 211.

313. τέκε, conceived: cf. B 714, 820.

314. ἐχεύατο, cf. π 214, ἀμφιχυθεὶς πατέρ' ἐσθλόν.

315. κάλυψεν, put as a covering: so P 132, X 313.

320. For the position of τάων cf. 332 and β 119. For συνθεσιάνων, "agreement," cf. B 339, πῇ δὲ συνθεσίου;

323. See note on 263.

326. For the phrase ἄρτια ἦδη cf. II 72, εἰ μοι κρείων Ἀγαμέμνων ἥπια εἶδελθ. ἄρτιος seems to be the opposite of ἀν-ἀρσ-ιος, and to mean "friendly," agreeing with his wishes. But in Ξ 92, θ 240, ἄρτια βάσειν means "to speak suitably, to the point," and so it might be here; οἱ would then be an ethic dative, "because he found him have apt knowledge." But this is a less Homeric use of εἶδέναι.

327. For the dat. instead of the acc. after verbs of motion cf. the common phrase ἐπ' ἀλλήλοισιν ὠντες, and others. H. G. § 198 ad fin.

329. μέθεπεν with a double accus. only here: in II 724 we have Πατρόκλῳ ἔφεπε κρατ. ἵππους. The word ἔπειν, from its primary sense "handle," came to be used often of "handling" or managing a team of horses. But it is not necessary to follow von Christ in reading μέθ' ἔπει: the constr. "drove the horses after T." may be fully justified by such common constructions as μετέναι τινα and the like. Hence we have in Θ 126 ἥφιλον μέθεπε θρασύν, "drove in quest of a charioteer," where the direct object ἵππους is omitted in Greek as in English. It is quite needless to follow Nauck who conjectures Τυδείδῃ ἔπεχε: while the reading of Zenod., κρατερώνυχας ἵπποις, is doubtful on account of the late form ἵπποις for ἵπποισι at the end of a line.

330. The name Κύπρις is used only in this episode (422, 458, 760, 883), and the Cyprian worship of Aphrodite is not elsewhere alluded to in the Iliad. It appears however in the probably late passage θ 362, which in several respects may be compared with the adventures of the gods recorded in the present book.

332. Compare E 824, μάχην ἀνα κοιρανέοντα, and Γ 241 μάχην ἀνδρῶν, θ 183 ἀνδρῶν πολέμους, from which it is clear that ἀνδρῶν here is gen. after πόλεμον, not after κοιρανέουσιν.

334. ὀπάζων, cf. Θ 341 ὡς ἔκτωρ ὠπαγε κάρη κομόωντας Ἀχαιοὺς, and P 462. The word seems to be closely conn. with ἔπειν (compare the use of ἐφέπειν), and means "pressing hard." It recurs in this sense in the metaphorical phrase γῆρας ὀπάζει, Δ 321, Θ 103: else it is always causal, "to cause to attend upon," i.e. to attach to.

337. Two sheets of A are lost here, including 337-635. ἀβληχρήν, conn. with ἀμαλός and μαλακός, cf. βλάξ. Herodianus on Θ 178 mentions a form βληχρός in the same sense. ἀντετόρησεν may be either ἀν-τετόρησεν or ἀντ-ετόρησεν, probably the former. The reduplicated τετορεῖν is given by Hesych., and ἀντι- seems to have no particular force here. Cf. ἀμ-πεπαλόν, and see K 267.

338. The very rare neglect of the F of Φοι led Heyne to conj. δ for δν, though πέπλον as neuter is not found in H., nor indeed anywhere except in the form πέπλα in very late authors. Another easy correction, made by Nauck and others, is αἰ for αἰ. But in a fragment of the Kypría we find εἰματα μὲν χρὸς ἔστο τὰ οἱ Χάρμις τε καὶ Ὀραὶ πόησαι,

- πρυμνὸν ὑπερ θένaros. ῥέε δ' ἄμβροτον αἶμα θεοῖο, ἰχώρ, οἷός πέρ τε ῥέει μακάρεσσι θεοῖσιν. 340
 οὐ γὰρ σίτον ἔδουσ', οὐ πίνουσ' αἰθοπα οἶνον· τούνεκ' ἀναίμονές εἰσι καὶ ἀθάνατοι καλέονται.
 ἡ δὲ μέγα ἰάχουσα ἀπὸ ἔο κάββαλεν υἱόν· καὶ τὸν μὲν μετὰ χερσὶν ἐρύσατο Φοῖβος Ἀπόλλων κυανέη νεφέλῃ, μή τις Δαναῶν ταχυνώλων 345 χαλκὸν ἐνὶ στήθεσσι βαλὼν ἐκ θυμὸν ἔλοιτο· τῇ δ' ἐπὶ μακρὸν ἄυσε βοὴν ἀγαθὸς Διομήδης·
 "εἶκε, Διὸς θυγάτερ, πολέμου καὶ δημοτῆτος· ἡ οὐχ ἄλλis, ὅττι γυναικάs ἀνάλκιδας ἡπεροπτεύεις ; εἰ δὲ σύ γ' ἐς πόλεμον πωλήσῃαι, ἡ τέ σ' ὅλω 350 ῥιγῇσιν πόλεμόν γε, καὶ εἰ χ' ἐτέρωθι πύθῃαι."
 ὧς ἔφαθ', ἡ δ' ἀλύουσ' ἀπεβήσετο, τείρετο δ' αἰνῶς.
 τὴν μὲν ἄρ' Ἴρις ἐλούσα ποδὴνemos ἔξαγ' ὀμίλου ἀχθομένην ὀδύνησι, μελαινετο δὲ χροά καλόν.
 εὔρεν ἔπειτα μάχης ἐπ' ἀριστερὰ θούρον Ἄρηα 355 and this is certainly the more Homeric construction, cf. Ξ 178, ἀμβρόσιον ἑάνον ἔσαθ', ὃν οἱ Ἀθήνη ἔξυν' ἀσκήσασα. This line is perhaps the only one in the Iliad, therefore, in which there is no easy emendation which will restore the F to ol. The line is superfluous, and as we should not expect the garment to cover the πρυμνὸν θένaros, it may well be interpolated.

339. πρυμνὸν ὑπερ θένaros must be the same as χεῖρ' ἐπὶ καρπῷ, 458. θένar appears to mean "the palm of the hand," v. Curt. Gr. Et. no. 312, and L. and S. πρυμνόν is only here used as a substantive, the "root of the palm."

340-2 appear to be a very poor interpolation. ἰχώρ is mentioned again only in 416 in an anomalous form. It is used by Aesch. Ag. 1480 in the sense of "blood" simply: in later writers it means the serum of the animal juices of all sorts, including blood. Thus the appropriation of it to the divine blood, which is not adopted by any later poets, seems due to a mistaken attempt to reconcile 416 with 339 by this interpolation. 342 is quite meaningless and absurd; and with it 341 must be condemned.

344. ἐρύσατο, best MSS.: ἐρύσσατο, Buttm. Lexil. 308 (q.v.). This is one of the ambiguous cases which may be referred either to φέρω, to draw, or (σ)φέρωμαι, to preserve; but it belongs more naturally to the latter. See A 216.

350. The two clauses beginning with ei are evidently not co-ordinate or even consistent. The train of thought is, "if you mean to frequent (cf. A 490) the battle-field, you will (be taught to) dread the battle if you so much as hear the sound of it anywhere"; which is quite natural, and does not involve any discontinuity of idea. πυθέσθαι is probably used of direct hearing, not in the sense of "hearing battle talked about," cf. O 379 ἐπύθοντο κτύπον, 224 μάχης ἐπύθοντο.

354. μελαινετο, i.e. was stained by the μέλαν αἷμα.

355. ἐπ' ἀριστερά: it seems most natural to suppose that the Greek poet always looks at the battle from the Greek side. The left would then mean the part of the battle most distant from the Skamander, on the right bank of which the fighting must, according to the actual geography, have taken place. But this will be inconsistent with l. 36, where Ares is left beside Skamander. But it has been shown by Hercher that it is impossible to reconcile Homer's geographical statements either with themselves or with the reality. The Skamander in particular is an arbitrary quantity, sometimes treated as running transversely between the city and the ships, ἦμενον, ἥερι δ' ἔγχος ἐκέκλιτο καὶ ταχέ' ἵππῳ·

 λίην ἄχθομαι ἔλκος, ὃ με βροτὸς οὐτάσεν ἀνὴρ, ὣς φάτο, τῇ δ' ἄρ' Ἀρης δῶκε χρυσάμπυκας ἵππους.

sometimes as lying alongside the field, and often forgotten altogether (Hom. Aufsätze, pp. 50 sqq.; cf. Ribbeck in Rhein. Mus. 35, 610).

356. "ἐκέκλιτο vitiosum," Nauck, perhaps rightly: for in the first place the idea of a spear leaning upon mist is quite un-Homeric; and in the second it can only apply to ἵππῳ by a violent zeugma, for which support can hardly be found in Γ 327, ἵπποι ἀερσιπόδες καὶ ποικίλα τεύχε' ἔκειτο (see note).

357. κασιγνήτοιο is of course to be taken with ἵππους, not with ἦτεεν, which would require an accusative. λισσομένη: this verb always lengthens a preceding vowel in the Iliad (except Π 46, 47), apparently because it once began with another consonant, probably γ, of which however no trace has remained; the cognate languages afford no information. Cf. note on A 15.

359. ὥς τε, Barnes and most following edd. with one MS. only: caet. ὥς δέ. The collocation of τε and δέ is not very rare in H.: a very similar instance is Ω 430, αὐτὸν τε ῥύσαι, πέμψον δέ με σὺν γε θεοῖσιν; so also Ψ 178, π 432, and (according to best MSS.) π 140; and Ω 368, οὐτε . . . δέ. This seems sufficient defence for the traditional reading here. The δέ makes the second clause more emphatic, because it is contrasted, instead of being co-ordinated, with the first; there is a slight anacoluthon, but vigour of expression is gained (see Hentze, Anh. ad loc.).

361. ἔλκος, the accus. of a subst. is found only here with ἀχθομαι, but we have a neut. pronoun in Z 523, I 77; and the accusative of a participle N 352. We might compare also E 767, οὐ νεμεσίῃ Ἀρη τὰδε καρτερὰ ἔργα. Perhaps however in this case it is to be regarded rather as an accusative of the part affected. See H. G. §§ 136-7.

370. Dione appears only here in Homer: she is named incidentally, among other daughters of Okeanos and Tethys, in Hesiod, Theog. 353, and as present at the childbearing of Leto, Hym. Apol. 93. Her cult seems to have been Thesprotian and connected with that of Zeus at Dodona. The name itself is probably connected with Lat. Diana, and in formation it resembles Διώνυσος.

374. ἐνωπῇ only here (and Φ 510!); it evidently means "openly," in the sight of all. Schol. B mentions a variant ἐνιπῇ, which can hardly be right, perhaps he means ἐνωπί, which is given by another Schol.

- τὴν δ' ἡμέλβει' ἔπειτα φιλομμειδῆς Ἀφροδίτῃ· 375

 τλῇ δ' Ἡρη, ὅτε μιν κρατερός πάϊς Ἀμφιτρύωνος

383. The sense is the same as 873. τλήμεν, with the usual punctuation after ἐξ ἀνδρῶν, is here used absolutely; but this is hardly to be paralleled in H., the expression τλήτε, φίλοι, B 299, being rather different. It would perhaps be better, as suggested by Heyne, to take ἀλγεα as the object of τλήμεν as well as of ἐπιτιθέντες. For the use of the latter verb cf. B 39. Fulda (Unters. über die Sprache der Hom. Ged. 224) says that ἀλγος was originally used of mental pain only, and that the three passages in which it is used of bodily pain (here, 895, B 721) are of late origin. He might have added λ 582.

385. For the legend of Otos and Ephialtes, the youthful giants who piled Pelion upon Ossa, see λ 308 sqq. The traditional explanation makes them a personification of the triumph of agricultural pursuits ('Αλωεὺς from ἀλωή) over warlike passions. τοὺς Ἀλωείδας φασὶ καταπαθεῖν τὸν πόλεμον καὶ τὰς ἐς αὐτὸν παρασκευάς, καὶ ἐν εἰρήνῃ ποιῆσαι βιοτεύειν τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, Schol. D on λ 308. Other legends, as well as some tedious moralising by Porphyrios, will be found in Schol. B here.

387. The κέραμος reminds us of the enormous jars, quite large enough to hold a man comfortably, found by Dr. Schliemann at Hissarlik; see the illustrations to Ilios, pp. 33, 378, 589. These jars are of course of earthenware. The epithet χάλκεος is added in accordance with the usual practice of describing the utensils of the gods as made of the more valuable metals, while men used baser materials: cf. 724 sqq. Eurystheus, according to the legend, of which representations on archaic vases are not uncommon, lived in a brazen κέραμος sunk in the ground, for fear of Herakles.

388. For the construction see 311.

389. μητρυνή, of the sons of Aloeus, apparently; but according to others, of Hermes. But it is evidently meant that the step-mother does what she can to thwart her step-sons. Their mother is called Iphimedeia in λ 305.

391. ἐδάμνα, rather ἐδάμνη, as Nauck suggests, from δάμνημι (898). Cf. however ηῦδα, which, as Fick has remarked, is an analogous form from αἶδημι (Aeol. ? αἶδαμι), not a contracted imperfect.

393-400 seem to belong to the legend of the campaign of Herakles against Pylos, which recurs, but without the divine elements, in Δ 690, where the Schol. says, Ἡρακλῆς παρεγένετο εἰς Πύλον βεβλήκει· τότε καί μιν ἀνήκεστον λάβεν ἄλγος. τλῆ δ' Ἀΐδης ἐν τοῖσι πελώριος ὠκὺν ὀιστόν, 395

 συνεμάχουν δὲ τῷ μὲν Νηλεῖ τρεῖς θεοί, Ποσειδῶν Ἡρα Αἰδωνεύς, τῷ δὲ Ἡρακλεῖ δῶα Ἀθηνᾶ καὶ Ζεὺς. According to Hesiod, Scut. Her. 859-867, Ares was among the victims on the same occasion:
 ἦδ' ἐν τῇ ἐφ' ἡμῶν καὶ ἄλλοτε πειρηθῆναι ἔγχεος ἡμετέρου, δδ' ὑπὲρ Πύλου ἡμαθῆντος ἄντιος ἔστη ἐμεῖο, μάχης ἀμοτον μενεαίνων.
 So also Pind. Ol. ix. 29-35, where Herakles ἐμφὶ Πύλον σταθεὶς ἤριδε Ποσειδῶν, ἥριδεν δὲ μιν ἀργυρέῳ τόξῳ πελεμίζων

 Φαίβος, οὐδ' Ἀΐδας ἀκινήταν ἔχε βαβδόν.

(Cf. Apollod. 2, 7, 3, and Pausanias, vi. 25, 3). The legend no doubt belongs to the journey to Hades, to recover
 Alkestis or to bring back Kerberos.
 There was clearly some primitive idea that Pylos was the gate of the underworld; a special cultus of Hades there is mentioned by Pausanias, i.e., as being founded on the gratitude of the Pylians for his alliance with them against Herakles on this occasion.
 This is probably the explanation of the statement made by Schol. V that Aristarchos took πύλῳ in 397 to be another form of πύλῃ, meaning simply "in the gate of hell" (for which idea compare 646, I 312, and the epithet πυλάργης applied to Hades). But seeing that the legend was so definitely localized at Pylos, it is much more likely that Aristarchos explained the name Πύλος to mean "the gate of hell," and was misunderstood by his followers, than that he assumed a synonym of πύλῃ which is not found elsewhere in Greek (H. uses only the plural πύλαι). ἐν νεκύεσσι would most naturally mean "in the country of the dead," and this would agree with such a double sense of Πύλῳ, but there is no strong reason why it should not be the same as ἐν νεκάδεσσι, 886. In any case it can hardly go with βαλὼν, which means "hitting him"; for there is no Homeric analogy for translating it "casting him among the dead."

401. Παιήων is only mentioned again by Homer in 899 and 923, where he is the progenitor of the race of physicians, see Solon, fr. 13, 57, and Pindar, P. iv. 270, ἐσσι δ' ἱατρὴ ἐπικαιρότατος, Παιῶν δὲ σοὶ τιμὰ φάος. He is apparently not identical with Apollo, who in Homer has no healing function (cf. however II 514-529).
 So Schol. on 923, διαφέρει δὲ Παιήων Ἀπόλλωνος ὡς καὶ Ἡσίοδος μαρτυρεῖ, "εἰ μὴ Ἀπολλῶν Φαίβος ὑπὲρ θανάτου σώσας, ἢ καὶ Παιήων, δς ἀπάντων φάρμακα οἶδεν."

403-4. These lines, or at all events the second, can hardly be in place here, though the nominative in an exclamation is quite regular; v. A 231 and νήπιος just below. But in all such cases the adj. immediately follows the mention of the person referred to, whereas here
 Herakles has not been mentioned since 397. Christ is therefore perhaps right in putting them (in brackets) before 398.
 For ὀβριμοεργός Ar. seems to have read αἰσυλοεργός, which does not go well with the αἷσυλα immediately following.

ὅττι μάλ' οὐ δηναίος, δς ἀθανάτοισι μάχεται, οὐδὲ τί μιν παῖδες ποτὶ γούνασι παππάζουσιν ἐλθόντ' ἐκ πολέμοιο καὶ αἰνῆς δημοτῆτος.

ἡ μάλα δὴ τινα Κύπρις Ἀχαιιάδων ἀνιείσα Τρῳσὶν ἅμα σπέσθαι, τοὺς νῦν ἔκπαγλα φίλησεν,

407. Cf. Z 130. μάλα goes with the whole clause, "of a surety." Cf. B 241.

408. παππάζουσιν, so Nausikaa calls her father πάππα, ζ 57; compare also μ 42, and for the addition of the participle in the next line the similar Z 480.

412. Aigialeia, wife of Diomedes, was the youngest daughter of Adrestos, and aunt of her husband; for Tydeus had married her elder sister Deipyle, see Z 121. So in A 226 Iphidamas is married to his maternal aunt. This seems to shew that relationship through the mother only ceased to be recognized in Greece at an early date; though Mr. M'Lennan thought that traces of it existed till historic times, and that the change to the recognition of paternal kinship is recorded in the trial scene in the Eumenides. If this be the case, it must have been a peculiar instance of survival in Attica. It may be said generally that in Homer the idea of kinship is almost the same as our own, though relationship through the mother is not quite so close as with us. δὴν must go with γοῶσα, "with long lament"; but this is not very appropriate. Perhaps the original reading was δὴν ῥ, lamenting him.

412. For the feminine patronymic Ἀδρηστίνη cf. I 557 Εὐρήνην, Z 319 Ἀκρισιώνη.

415. This line seems to be an interpolation, and out of place, like 403-4 above. If it is to be accepted at all it evidently ought to come after 412. For ἰφθίμη cf. A 3: as used of women it is an Odyssean word, except T 116.

416. MSS. are divided between ἰχώ, ἰχώρ, and ἰχώρ. As the word is masculine in 340 and elsewhere in Greek, the first form is preferable, on the analogy—not very close, however—of ἰδρῶ (A 621). For χειρὸς Zen. read χερσίν. Barnes conj. ἀμφοτέρησ' ἰχώρ' ἀπὸ χειρὸς.

418. The return of Athene from the battle-field to Olympus has not been mentioned: see 510. The "taunt"—which almost descends, it must be admitted, to the level of "chaff"—looks like a conscious allusion to Δ 7-12. For 421 cf. E 762, α 158.

423. The MSS. are divided between ἅμα σπέσθαι and ἅμ' ἐσπέσθαι: the latter would be a reduplicated aor. for σε-σπέσθαι, and to this the breathing of ἐσπόμεν would seem to point. So we have ἐσπώνται μ 349, ἐσπόμεν τ 579, φ 77, ἐσπέσθω M 350, 363; but σπέω K 285, σπέσθαι here and δ 38 with a var. lect., χ 324 all MSS.; ἐσπόμενος M 395, N 570, K 246. Of these we may observe that the initial ε is in no case needed, being always preceded by an elision; in K 285, χ 324, it cannot be inserted. Bekker and Nauck are therefore probably right in reading ἅμα σπέσθαι here, and τῶν τινα καρρέζουσα Ἀχαιάδων ἐνπέπλων πρὸς χρυσῇ περόνῃ καταμύζατο χεῖρα ἀραιήν." 425

ὥς φάτο, μείδησεν δὲ πατὴρ ἀνδρῶν τε θεῶν τε, καὶ ῥα καλεσσάμενος προσέφη χρυσῇν Ἀφροδίτην· ἀλλὰ σύ γ' ἱμερόεντα μετέρχεο ἔργα γάμοιο, ταῦτα δ' Ἀρηι βοῶ καὶ Ἀθήνη πάντα μελήσει." 430 ὥς οἱ μὲν τοιαῦτα πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀγόρευον, ὥς φάτο, Τυδεΐδης δ' ἀνεχάζετο τυτθὸν ὀπίσσω, analogous forms in all the other passages. It is significant that in Hym. Hom. xix. 12 two MSS. give τ' ἔσπεσθε, not θ'. So we have μετασπόμενος, and in the compounds the later Greek MSS. always give the shorter forms, ἐπισπένθαι, etc. (see Hayman on δ 38). τοὺς νῦν ἔκπαγλα φάησεν, cf. Γ 415.

424. τῶν τινα takes up τινα Ἀχαιάδων above. Fäsi has remarked that the speech seems to shew something of the freedom of familiar conversation.

425. ἀραιήν Ar., ἀραιήν vulgo. The word must once have begun with a consonant, probably F, on account of the hiatus here and Σ 411, Τ 37; the two other places where it occurs, Π 161, κ 90, prove nothing. No plausible etymology has been suggested. The soft breathing probably arose from the idea that the word meant destructive, and came from ἀρή or ῥαίω; but this is not tenable.

431. This line appears to be a "tag" by which a return is often made from an interpolation to the original narrative. It is especially common after scenes in Olympus of doubtful authenticity: H 464, Θ 212, Σ 368, Φ 514. It occurs also E 274, N 81, Π 101, and sixteen times in the Odyssey. (So La Roche.) It is clear that 432 originally followed 352. The myths, of which the intervening lines are full, are almost totally distinct from those of other parts of Homer, and the quasi-comic scene in Olympus is nearly allied to others where we have good reasons for suspecting a later hand. Several peculiarities of diction have also been pointed out in the notes.

436 sqq. Cf. II 784-786, which seem to be modelled on this passage; so also II 703-707.

440. The very marked assonance is curiously overlooked by Bekker in the very full list of similar phenomena given in H. B. i. 185-195.

441. For ἴσα φρονεῖν compare A 187, ἴσων ἐμοὶ φάσθαι.

442. χαμαὶ ἐρχομένων go closely together in the sense of ἐπιχθονίων, hence the position of τε: so Ω 250 βοὴν ἀγαθὸν τε. Compare also phrases like Ἀρηι κτάμενος, which are commonly written as a single word. For the thought cf. P 447, ὅσσα τε γαίαν ἐπὶ πνέει τε καὶ ἔρπει.

446. The γε here seems quite out of place, and was no doubt inserted into the original νηὸς ἐτέτυκτο from ignorance of the fact that the ictus was sufficient to lengthen a short syllable. Apollo, as often, shares a temple with his mother and sister.

448. It is remarkable that the word ἄδυντον occurs only here and in 512, nor is there any other trace in Homer of a holy place “not to be approached” by the profane. κῆδαινον, they not only healed him, but made him even more glorious than before. This is worthy of gods when they tend a favourite. Compare T 33, ἔσται χρῶς ἐμπεδος ἡ καὶ ἀρείων. It is not necessary to adopt Herwerden's conj. κῆδενον or κῆδαινον (Hesych. κῆδαινε, μεριμνᾷ).

449. The mention of the “wraith” is not like Homer, nor does it appear on other occasions when a hero is snatched away by a god. It plays no further part in the action, nor does there seem to be the least surprise shown at the reappearance of the original Aineias in the field, l. 514. Thus 449-453 are probably interpolated; the last two lines come bodily from M 425-6.

452. βοείας is the genus, ἀσπίδας and λαισιῖα the species, as both are made of hides. The epithet εὐκύκλος seems to refer to the concentric circles of the wooden framework which formed the foundation of the shield. λαισιῖα were probably aprons of leather, with the hair left on (λάσιος), which hung down from the lowest part of the shield in order to protect the legs from arrows. See a discussion at length in J. H. S. iv. pp. 285-288.

453. πτερόεντα, fluttering. The epithet is elsewhere applied only to arrows and ἔρεα. The old explanation that it meant κοῦφα, ελαφρά, and that λαισιῖα were therefore a lighter sort of buckler, is quite untenable.

455 = 31, which is also followed by οὐκ ἂν δὴ.

461. Τρῶας, so La Roche: al. Τρῶα, but this form could not be a fem. adj. The variant Τρώων which is found in MSS. of the second class is evidently a gloss, to explain that Τρῶας is an adj. See Cobet, M. C. 337.

462. Ἄρες, the god of the Thracians, naturally assumes the form of a Thracian chief: see N 301.

“ὦ υἱεῖς Πριάμοιο διοτρεφέος βασιλῆος,

465. For the dat. after κτείνεσθαι we may compare the similar construction after δάμασθαι (Θ 244), ὑποκλονέεσθαι, φ 556, etc.

466. ἐνποιήτοισι Ar., -τροσι Zenod. The testimony of the MSS. is divided, but is rather in favour of the reading of Zen.; and in Π 636 we have ἐνποιητῶν, while in γ 434 the MSS. all give ἐνπολητων. It is apparently not possible to introduce uniformity into the practice of the Epic language in this respect.

471. This is the first entry in the story (excepting of course in the Catalogue B 876) of Sarpedon and his southern Lykians, who henceforth supplant the Lykians of Pandaros. See note on 105.

473. MSS. are divided between φῆς and φῆς; Ar. read the former which he explained to be the imperf. = ἐφήσθα, while φῆς is the present, according to the tradition.

477. δῆ, so five MSS. and Schol. A on

B 131: the vulg. δ' αὖ is merely a needless attempt to help the metre.

478. ἴκω, so Bekk. and La R., MSS. ἦκω; but the old tradition is unanimous in favour of the form with ι; v. La R. Textk. p. 288. ἦκω has crept into the vulgate in three other passages, Σ 406, ν 325, ο 329, but with little MS. authority.

481. καδ δῆ, as though κατέλιπον had preceded. Precisely similar cases will be found in Γ 268, Η 168, Ψ 755. Sarpedon means of course that he has left his wealth, forgetful of the protection which it would need against the raids of his needy neighbours.

484. Observe the effect of the “bucolic diaeresis” in preserving the length of the last syllable of Ἀχαιοὶ before a vowel.

487. The use of the dual here is hard to explain, unless it refer to the wives mentioned in the preceding line, and mean “caught in pairs, man and wife”; which seems highly improbable (so ἀνδράσι δυσμενέεσσιν ἔλωρ καὶ κύρμα γένησθε· αὐτίκα δ' ἐξ ὀχέων σὺν τεύχεσιν ἄλτο χαμᾶζε, πάλλων δ' ὀξέα δοῦρε κατὰ στρατὸν ὄχετο πάντα 495

Schol. B ὕμεις καὶ αἱ γυναῖκες, see H. G. § 170). Others make it = σὺ καὶ ὁ λαός: others explain it as a relic of the primitive origin of the plural from the dual, of which however the traces in Homer are doubtful, see note on A 567. Mr. Monro suggests that a line alluding to the absence of Paris may have dropped out, so that δλῶτε may mean "you and Paris." But there is no single case in Homer where the loss of a line can be assumed with reasonable probability; the tradition was wonderfully tenacious of all it had got, as well as acquisitive of new matter. Again the length of the α in Φαλῶτε is almost without analogy; it is true we have ἔδλων in Attic, but that is simply a case of double augment, like ἔδρων. We find however δλῶναι with α in Hipponax, fr. 74, 1. Knös (de Dig. p. 75) suggests that the long α may be due to the preceding F as in ἀ-αγές λ 575, ὄλαμός for Φολαμός, and, perhaps ἑάγη, see on Γ 367. But in all these cases the long vowel is in arsi, which makes a great difference. Bentley's conjecture, λῖνον πανάγροιο Φαλῶτες, removes both difficulties; but there is no trace of a tradition to support it, nor any obvious reason why it should have been altered to the text; and there is no other case in Homer of a short vowel before γρ, though it might be argued that the analogy of βρ and δρ would justify this. Unfortunately, owing to the lacuna in A, we have no evidence as to the Alexandrian view of the passage. Tryphiodorus however seems to have read it as it stands, for he writes (674) ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν δέδμητο λῖνῳ θανάτοιο πανάγρῳ (J. A. P.). It may be observed that the emendation λῖνοιο for λῖνου, though it removes the difficulty of the quantity, introduces what is equally objectionable, an un-Homeric rhythm. H. G. § 367 (2).

Fishing with a net is mentioned again only in the simile in χ 383 sqq., nor does fishing with an angle, which is several times mentioned in the Odyssey (δ 368, μ 251, 332) occur in the Iliad, except in Ω 80. This all seems in favour of supposing that at all events the lines 487-9, if not the whole speech of Sarpedon, do not belong to the oldest part of the Iliad. It cannot perhaps be proved, but it will I believe be felt that the periphrase λῖνον πανάγρον does not sound like a genuine Homeric name for a net; it is very different from the simple δίκτυον πολύπτον of χ 385, and reminds us rather of the Hesiodic style, in which periphrases are so common; or even of the tragedians. Compare Aesch. Cho. 507, τὸν ἐκ θυβοῦ κλωστήρα σώζοντες λῖνου: and of the net cast over Troy, Agam. 357-361, στεγανὸν δίκτυον . . . μέγα δουλείας γάγγαμον, ἄτης παλαιῶτον. The word ἀψίς is ἀπ. λεγ. in Homer, and, in the sense of mesh, in all Greek till we come to Oppian.

489. ἐκπέρσουσ', al. -ωσ', but the reversion to the principal construction is more Epic.

492. ἐνιπὴ is here, as always, reproach as felt by him to whom it is addressed, cf. Δ 402, Ξ 104, κ 448. Hector is urged to "put away, remove from himself," the reproach which is laid upon him by the allies. The expression is the converse of μῶμον ἀνάψαι β 86, ἐλεγχέειν ἀναθήσει X 100. It is therefore quite needless to follow Nauck in reading ὑποδέχθαι, "accept their rebuke." The MSS. vary between χαλεπήν and κρατερήν: the latter is given by the best. Paley compares Hes. Opp. 762, φήμη—ἀργαλή φέρειν χαλεπήν δ' ἀποθέσθαι, which shews the evident origin of the variation. The interpretation of the Schol., that Hector is urged "to give up the habit of severe rebuke" towards his allies, is on every ground untenable.

495. δοῦρε, so Bekker for δοῦρα of MSS.; no doubt rightly; cf. Γ 18, Δ 43, etc.

ὀτρύνων μαχέσασθαι, ἔγειρε δὲ φύλοπιν αἰνὴν.
οἱ δ' ἐλελήχθησαν καὶ ἐναντίοι ἔσταν Ἀχαιῶν·

499. ἱεράς, consecrated to Demeter: cf. A 631, ἀφ' οὗ τοῦ ἱεροῦ ἀκτῆρ. ἀλῶας, here and N 588, T 496, "threshing floor," generally "orchard." But the former meaning seems to be the oldest, cf. ἀλέω, ἀλῶω, ἀλωε, and many kindred forms from root Feλ, which will be found in Curt. Gr. Et. no. 527. The question whether the right form is ἀλῶη or ἀλῶη is doubtful; we have a similar variation between ἀλῶω and ἀλῶωω, but the α in any case does not seem to be primitive, and it is therefore best to follow the MSS. in reading ἀλῶας, though La Roche prefers ἀλῶας, on the strength of the tradition of the grammarians. For another elaborate simile taken from the process of winnowing cf. N 588 sqq. It is not clear whether the wind used is created by a fan, or whether they took advantage of the natural wind; but the probability seems in favour of the former, so that ἐπειγομένων will be a passive.

503. ἑαυτῶν, through the men (as opposed to the horses), i.e. the πρόμαχοι fighting in front of their chariots.

504. πολύχαλκον, as γ 2; cf. χάλκεος P 425, σιδήρεος, ο 329. For the thematic pluperfect ἐπέπληγον cf. H. G. § 27.

505. ἐπιμισγομένων seems to apply to the whole of the combatants, not to ἵππων, as generally thought. ἐπέστρεφον, kept wheeling about, as the line of πρόμαχοι on whom they attended swayed backwards and forwards. Cf. 581.

506. For μένος χειρῶν ἰθὺς φέρον we may compare σὺν ῥ' ἔβαλον . . . μένε' ἀνδρῶν Δ 447, and ἐρίδα προφέρονται Γ 7.

507. μάχῃ may go either with the preceding or the following words. The rhythm and the analogy of A 521 are in favour of the second alternative, while Π 567 speaks for the first, and the omission of the object around which the darkness is cast produces a rather bare effect. Perhaps μάχῃ may be regarded as performing a double function, going both with ἐκάλυψε and ἀρήγων.

508. For the ἐφετμαί in question see 455.

509. The epithet χρυσάορος recurs only in O 256, and has caused some surprise, since the sword is not the weapon of Phoebus. So in the Hymn. Cer. 4 even Demeter is called χρυσάορος, and according to the Schol. on O 256, Πίνδαρος χρυσάορα Ὀρφέα φησίν. Hence some of the old grammarians explained ἄορα as having meant originally "implement," ὄπλον, in the widest sense, to include both the winnowing-fan of Demeter and the lyre of Apollo. But there is no trace in Homer of such a wide meaning of the word ἄορα, which is probably the same as ensis (for n-sor; Schrader, S. und U. p. 315). We can only say that this seems to be one of the archaic epithets of gods, of which we cannot understand the full significance.

511. οἰχομένην, somewhere between 290 and 418: see note on the latter line. But the lines 508-511 are almost certainly an interpolation, as was shewn by M. Haupt, for they are not all consistent with the content of 455-459, to which they refer. Besides in 461-470 Ares has been doing precisely what he is now said to have been bidden to do. The repetition of ἀρήγων in the form ἀρηγῶν is clumsy, and αὐτός 512 is not clear; it seems to have supplanted an original Φοῖβος.

516-518 look like an interpolation to explain what some prosaic rhapsode seems to have felt as a lack of historical probability. πόνος ἄλλος is not a Homeric phrase: we can only explain it to mean "toil of different sort," i.e. war as opposed to curiosity. Heyne has remarked that for ἄλλος we should rather expect an epithet such as αἰπός. ἀργυρότοξος is not elsewhere used as a substantive, but we may compare γλαυκῶπις Θ 373, etc., ἡριγένεια χ 197. The last half of 518 is from Δ 440. It may further be observed that Ἔρις in the other passages where she is mentioned (Δ 440, Λ 3, 73, Τ 48) always appears in the introduction to a fight, never casually, as here, in the course of it.

521. ἰωκάς, apparently conn. with διώκω: Curtius explained it as passing through the form διώκω, and losing the δ; but in the last edition of his Gr. Et. he appears to have abandoned this. Cf. E 740, Δ 601.

523. νηνεμῆς: for this genitive of time see H. G. § 150. We may also compare the use of the gen. with ἐνί in Attic.

525. ζαχρειῶν, MSS.: the original form must have been ζαχρεῖων. Ahrens (Beitr. i. 4) derives the word as ζαχρεῖων from χειρ (stem χερφ), applied properly to warriors, "strong-handed"; and then by metaphor to wind and horses (N 684), "strong" simply. This seems more natural than the ordinary derivation from χραῦω, χραῖον (on which see 138).

529. ἄλκιμον ἦτορ ἔλεσθε only here: but cf. ἄλκιμον ἦτορ ἔχων, II 209, 264. The phrase has a superficial resemblance to our "take heart." In the repetition of these lines O 561-564 we have αἰδῶ θέσθ' ἐνὶ θυμῷ. For the Homeric conception of αἰδῶς see Nägelsbach, Hom. Theol. 323. Most MSS. give δ' after αἰδομένων, but Ar. omitted it, and it is not necessary.

538. See on Δ 138.

539. νεαίρη, only in this phrase, conn. with νεάτος, νεόθι, in the sense "lowest" (root ni, which is found in Skt. in the sense "down"). The ordinary derivation from νέ(φ)ος is untenable; as the local sense of νέος is not to be established from a few casual uses of Lat. novissimus, when it does not occur in all Greek, much less in Homer. νεάτος it is true is used occasionally in Attic Greek = νεώτατος, but this is likely enough to happen, as a word in universal use is always apt to attract to itself sporadic archaic forms which resemble it. Thus Curtius' objections to Fick's and Ebel's explanation (Gr. Et. no. 431) seem quite inadequate. For the fem. suffix -ειρα cf. λοχέαιρα, τιέαιρα. διδ ζωστήρος, and therefore also through the lower part, or ζώμα, of the θώρηξ. See on Δ 187.

543. Φηρή, also in plur. Φηραί, in Messenia; see I 151, γ 488, ο 186: it is the modern Kalamata.

553. ἀρνυμένο, cf. note on A 159.

554. ὦα τῷ γε as it stands must be for τῷ γε, ὦα, by a violent hyperbaton, the phrase being thus an anticipation of τοῖω τῷ in 559; or else it must mean "even as they, were two lions bred." Neither alternative is agreeable, the second perhaps being the worst, as there is no case in H. where a simile is thus introduced as a direct statement, the relation of the thing illustrated and the instance illustrating it being reversed. "θῆρε?" Nauck, for τῷ γε; but then the corruption is inexplicable. The same may be said of Heyne's ὦα τ' αἶρε, and Förstemann's τῷ ὦα τε. ὦα αἰθωνε conj. Düntzer, when the synzesis might explain the corruption but is itself unparalleled. The evil is probably past remedy, τῷ γε representing some adjective which was thrust out because it was unintelligible and forgotten. As to the dual Schol. B mentions the legend that two lion's cubs were always born at one birth, and that the lioness never had more.

555. For the intransitive use of ἐτραφον cf. B 661.

556. ἴφια: this adjective occurs only in the phrase ἴφια μῆλα. The nom. may be Ἰφίος or Ἰφίς: if the latter, Ἰφί may be a neuter used adverbially rather than a case of Ἰς = vis. But this last view is supported by the analogy of Ἰφί κτάμενος to Ἄρηι (dat) κτάμενος. It might be supposed that ἴφια was formed by a mistake from Ἰφί, wrongly supposed to be a neuter; but this is highly improbable in view of the fact that the adj. occurs only in a single stereotyped phrase, which therefore presumably is a part of the original furniture of Epic poetry. The whole question is however difficult; see Curtius, Gr. Et. no. 592.

567. ἀποσφῆλκει, ἀποτυχεῖν ποιήσειεν, Schol. B. For the word cf. γ 320, ὅντινα πρῶτον ἀποσφῆλῃσιν ἀελλαι ἐς πέλαιος μέγα τοῖον: and for the thought Δ 172. πάθοι, two MSS.: σπῆ. πάθη. The former is preferable though not perhaps absolutely necessary: see H. G. § 298. σφῆς is found only here, elsewhere σφέας. Ahrens conj. σφε.

574. δειλῶ: for this phrase, which is not so much an expression of a sense of pathos on the poet's part as a euphemism for "dead" (so Döderlein), cf. Ψ 65, ι 65, with X 76.

576. ἔλετην, in accordance with Homeric usage, can only mean "slew." In N 658 this same Pylaimenes is alive, and weeping at the bier of his son. This inconsistency has caused infinite searching of heart to critics for hundreds of years, and is one of the foundation-stones of Lachmann's "Kleinlieders-jäger" school: even Christ is greatly exercised by it. (He thinks that N 658-9 may have been an epilogue added to furnish a fitting close to N 330-655 when recited as a separate poem, and subsequently adopted into the Iliad on account of their intrinsic beauty.) But it is really just such a slip as might be made even by a poet who wrote; in works which must at first have been recorded as well as conceived by the brain alone, it is only strange that more such errors are not found. Zenod. seems to have written the name Κυλαίμενης in N.

581. The charioteer was following close behind his master, and seeing him slain was beginning to turn for flight.

582. τυχῶν takes the genitive: hence ἀγκῶνα must be construed with βάλε above, τυχῶν being used absolutely, "not missing him." See H. G. § 151 c.

583. ἐλέφαντι: for the use of ivory in adorning harness see Δ 141.

586. κύμβαχος and βρεχμός are ἀπαξ λεγόμενα in Homer. The former recurs however in the sense of "helmet" in O 536. Düntzer connects the two by explaining the adj. here to mean "in a curve," and the substantive "the curved," i.e. vaulted part of the helmet; cf. κύπτω. The Gramm. quote a doubtful κύβη = the head, whence also κυβιστῶν II 795, Σ 605. Instead of βρεχμός the forms βρεγμός, βρέγμα, βρέγμα, are found in later Greek.

587. The manner in which Mydon falls is not very obvious. The most probable event would be that he would fall out of the back of the car; for in any other direction the rail and framework of the car would support him. He might then lie with his feet still in the car, and his head and shoulders upon the ground. But then it is hard to see how the horses could be said to kick him; and the Homeric chariot was hardly large enough to hold the whole of the legs and part of the trunk of a man in a reclining position. It would seem therefore that he was standing sideways in the car, so as to look at his enemy while he wheeled; and when wounded fell backwards over the side of the car, his knees hooking over the ἀντιξ. The "soft sand" explains why the car was brought for a while to a standstill; it would be absurd to suppose, as some commentators have done, that his head dug a hole in the sand so as to keep him fixed. γὰρ ἀμάθοιο is the reading of several MSS.: vulg. γὰρ β', a mere attempt to improve the metre, which was good enough before. γὰρ ψαμάθοιο is another conj. with the same object. In 589 Bekker reads τοὺς δ', but the MSS. give τοὺς only, which must be the relative, though this does not sound quite like Homer. Nauck is perhaps right in marking the line "spurious?" especially as the next begins with the same word.

592-3 again look like an interpolation. For Ἐννώ see 333, the only other passage where she is named. κυδοίμους seems to be another personification, as in Σ 535, Hes. Scut. Her. 156, Ar. Pax 255; compare Ἀλήη and Ἰωκή E 740, and perhaps Φύγα I 2. ἔχουσα then means "having as her attendant." But comparing Δ 4, Ἐριδα . . . πολέμοιο τέρας μετὰ χερσὶν ἔχουσαν, it is quite possible that κυδοιμός may be an attribute of Enyo, which she is regarded as carrying in her hand. The epithet ἀναιδής, which is sometimes applied to inanimate objects, decides nothing.

597. ἀπάλαμνος, which occurs only here, may very likely mean, as suggested by Autenrieth, "unable to swim," sine palmis. It is generally understood to be "shiftless," without resource.

601. οἷον, neuter, used as an exclamation, "how," i.e. how wrongly. θαυμάζομεν is probably an imperfect.

603. πάρα εἰς: the hiatus here can hardly be right; van Herw. conj. πάρ' ἄρ' εἰς, Bentley πάρα τίς γε, Nauck πάρ' εἰς, a form which is found in Hesiod, Theog. 145 (a suspected passage however), and would support Benfey's comparison with Skt. ἔνανα rather than Curtius' derivation from root sam (see Gr. Et. 599).

604. κεῖνος, "there"; Γ 391, cf. E 175, K 341, 477.

606. MSS. μενεαινέμεν, Ahrens and Heyne μενεαίνετε Ἴφι. Nauck conjectures θεῷ for θεοῖς, on his principle that the shorter form of the dat. plur. is to be expelled from Homer.

612. Παισῷ, this would seem to be the same as Ἀπαισός in B 828. Of course we might read ἐν Ἀπαισῷ here. But the shorter form is supported not only by the MSS., but by Strabo as well as Herod. and the Et. Magn. For 614 compare B 834: it is evident that the composer of the lines in B had this passage before him, though there Amphios is called son of Merops.

623. ἀμφίβασιν, only here (but cf. πρόσβασιν β 75). It clearly means the defence of the fallen body by the Trojans : cf. the use of the verb in A 37, ι 198, E 299, ζ 477, P 4, etc. Döderlein is therefore wrong in taking it to mean "he feared to be surrounded by the Trojans."

625-6 = Δ 584-5, q.v.

627. We now come to an episode (627-698) which is doubtless a later addition, probably by the same hand to which we owe the insertion of the Rhodians in the Catalogue ; see note on B 655. Not only can the passage be cut out here without being missed, but it is not alluded to in any way whatever in any other part of the Iliad. Von Christ seems to regard it as having furnished a model for the fight of Patroklos and Sarpedon in II, but the connexion is in any case not close, and the converse might equally be the case, as 674 evidently assumes the later story. The treatment of the subject is excellent, and shows that the composition must at least date from an age when Epic poetry was still in its bloom.

632. It has been pointed out by Ameis that this is the only passage where the apodosis to the formal 630 contains a καί.

636. From this line on A is again written by the first hand (see on 337).

638. ἄλλ' οἶον MSS. with Ar. and Aristophanes : ἄλλ' οἶον (?) Nikias and Parmenio : ἄλλοιόν Tyrannio, followed by Bekker, Nauck, and Christ. The first reading may be taken in two ways : (1) exclamative, "but what a man do they say was H. !" (2) "But (those sons of Zeus were) such as." (2) involves an awkward ellipse, and in (1) the presence of ἄλλὰ is hardly consistent with the sense assumed. ὅς when used exclamatively always begins a clause, e.g. 601, α 32, etc., and in the phrases ὡ πόποι . . . οἶον εἶπες H 455, cf. O 286, etc. In δ 242, λ 519, where ἄλλ' οἶον begins a line, it is evidently subordinate to a preceding verb (though it is no doubt true that this subordinate use originally grew out of a primitive parataxis where ὅς was an exclamation). Thus ἄλλοιόν seems to be decidedly the best reading. The objections of Ameis, (a) that ἄλλοιός τις are not elsewhere found together, (b) that ἄλλοιός is not elsewhere in H. used of purely mental qualities, are only weak special pleading. The latter indeed is hardly true in the case of τ 265. Finally it is urged that ἀλλοῖόν τινα is too weak an expression in this speech. The question is one which, in the almost equal balance of authorities, must be left to each reader to decide for himself. Of course in a case like this MS. authority has no independent value. For the masculine adj. with βῆν cf. A 690, etc. (H. G. § 166, 1).

639. θρασυμένονα, here and λ 267 only, probably to be referred rather to μένος (μέμονα) than μένειν. Cf. Ἀγαμέμνων.

641. For the legend that Herakles had saved Hesione, the daughter of Laomedon, from a sea-monster, and had then destroyed the city because defrauded of his recompense, the famous mares of the stock of Tros, cf. T 145. For οἷης σὺν one good MS. reads οἷσιν, which is to be preferred as giving the longer form of the dative. With 646 compare Ψ 71.

653. τεύξεσθαι, in passive signification, as θάνατος καὶ μοῖρα τέτυκται, Γ 101: τάχα τῇδε τετεύχεται αἰπὴς θάνατος, M 345, and many similar instances. Ameis-Hentze strangely deny the possibility of the use of τεύξεσθαι in this way, and say that it must be from τυγχάνειν; but the only analogy which can be quoted is far from close: A 684, ξ 231, τύχε (τύχαι) πολλά. But the question is one of comparatively small importance, as τεύχω and τυγχάνω are simply different forms of the same verb, the intrans. forms ἐτυχον ἐτύχησα τετύχηκα being said to "come from" one present, the transitive ἔτευξα τεύξω, and the passive τετεύχομαι, τέτυγμαι from the other. The present phrase shews exactly where the point of contact between the two lies.

654. The epithet κλυτοπόλος may perhaps mean only that Hades, like an earthly king, has splendid horses as a sign of regal magnificence. But as it is used of no other god it is possible that it indicates the connexion of the horse with the under-world. There is no other trace in Homer of such an idea; but the god of death is commonly associated with the horse in Etruscan art, and the modern Greek death-god Charos is always in the popular imagination conceived as riding. So too the horse always has his place in the story of the rape of Persephone. For the bearing of this on the vexed question of the significance of the horse in sepulchral monuments see Prof. P. Gardner's paper in J. H. S. v. 114. It is probable that we have here a trace of [the religious ideas, not of the Greeks strictly speaking, but of the earlier non-Aryan population whom they subdued.

666. ἁμαρτῇ MSS., ἁμαρτῇ Ar., who held it to be syncopated from ἁμαρτήδην. This is of course wrong, but very probably the omission of the ι may be a genuine tradition of the fact that the adverb was originally not a dative but an instrumental. The accent should then be ἁμαρτῇ.

661. μαιμώωσα: for this personification of the spear cf. λυαίόμενα A 574, O 317, and Δ 126.

662. ἔτι, like 674 a hint of the future death of Sarpedon at the hands of Patroklos. ἐγχριμφθεῖσα, grazing: the word is always used of close contact in Homer: κ 516, Ψ 334, 338, N 146, P 405, 413, H 272. For a full discussion of this and cognate verbs see Ahrens, Beiträge, p. 12 sqq.

668. ἐπιβαίη, stand on his feet, cf. μ 434, οὐτε στηρίξαι ποσὶν ἐμπεδον οὐτ' ἐπιβῆναι. The phrase however is a curious one, and Nauck and others are perhaps right in rejecting the line as a gloss.

667. ἀμφιέποντες, dealing with him, lit. "handling him"; they had too much to do with the work of carrying and protecting him.

670. μαίμησε here evidently indicates violent rushing, as 661: cf. Θ 413, μάλνευται ἦτορ.

673. τῶν πλεόνων Λυκίων, see H. G. § 264, "the article marks contrast, but not definition, or should take the lives of more Lykians instead. Here οἱ πλέονες does not mean 'the greater number' but 'a greater number,' in contrast to the person mentioned."

683. On account of Fétos Bentley interchanged Διὸς υἱὸς and προσιόντι. But the violation of the digamma may be due to the later origin of the episode. For the constr. χάρη οἱ, see H. G. § 145, note 4.

685. κεῖσθαι, the long αἰ in thesi is excused by the strong diaeresis at the end of the first foot. Cf. A 39, B 209, etc. H. G. § 380.

690. For the construction of λελημένος see note on Δ 465.

693. φηγῷ: this can hardly be the same as the oak which formed a landmark close to the Skaian gate (Z 237, H 22, 60, I 354, A 170, Φ 549), as there is no hint that the fighting is near the walls. Any oak was equally sacred to Zeus.

694. θύραζε simply = out, as II 408, φ 422, ε 410, etc. It can hardly be meant that the spear is thrust through like the arrow in I 12.

697. ἐμπνύθη, La R.; it appears from Schol. A on X 475 that this was the reading of Ar.; MSS. ἀμπνύθη, but this word is properly used of a panting warrior recovering his breath, A 327, X 222, etc., ἐμπνύθη, of one who has fainted “coming to.” See La R., H. T. 190. Van Herwerden has pointed out that the correct form must be -πνύθη, as there is no trace of a ν in any other form. The Townl. gives ἀμπνύθη: A has ἀμπνύθη with ν added above. Hesych. ἐμπνύθη, ἐν ἑαυτῷ ἐγένετο, καὶ ἐφρόνησεν.

698. ζώγρει perhaps here from ζῶη and ἀγείρειν (or ἐγείρειν), and thus a different verb from the commoner ζώγρειν = to take prisoner (ζῶς-ἀγρεῖν). θυμόν is object of κεκαφηότα, as is clear from ε 468, μή με . . . δαμάσθω κεκαφηότα θυμόν. Compare X 467, ἀπὸ ψυχῆν ἐκάπυσσεν. The verb means “having breathed out”; cf. Hesych. κέκηφε, τέθνηκε, and κεκαφηότα, ἐκπεπνευκότα. Curtius, Gr. Et. no. 36, and p. 511.

707. αἰολομήτρην, having a sparkling μίτρη, or metal waist-band, which was visible below the thorax. See note on Δ 137. Butmann, Lexil. p. 66, explains it to mean “with flexible μίτρη,” which he takes to be a band worn under the ζωστήρ and invisible; but, as Ar. rightly observed, “Homer does not make epithets ἀπὸ τῶν ἀφανῶν,” and this interpretation is therefore untenable.
 αἰόλος is regularly used of the glancing of light on metallic surfaces, as in κορυθαίολος, αἰολοδωρήξ. The δωρήξ being made of two solid plates of metal could certainly not be called in any sense flexible.

708. Ἰλῇ with ὕ also H 221, but ὕ in B 500: Zenod. Ἰδῇ, but the name of the Boeotian town was certainly Hyle:
 a Lydian Ἰδῇ is mentioned in T 385.
 μεμηλώς with gen. only here and N 297, 469. The use may be classed with those mentioned in H. G. § 151, c, d. So Aesch. Sept. 178, μέλασθ' ὅ' ἱερῶν δμίων.

709. κεκλιμένος, “on the shore of,”
 cf. O 740 πόντῳ κεκλιμένοι, II 68 ῥήγμινι θαλάσσης κεκλιῖται. The word seems properly to be used of land sloping to the water's edge, δ 608, ν 235, ἀκτὴν κείθ' ἄλλ κεκλιμένη. The Kephisian lake seems to be the Copais as in Pind. P. xii 27;
 see Pausan. ix. 38, 5.

710. δῆμον here evidently has the purely local sense, “territory”: for which see on B 547.

711. The following section, down to the end of the book, is rejected by the school of Lachmann, following Haupt.

 The most serious objection to it seems to be that the long and pompous description of the equipment of the two goddesses is out of proportion to the effect they produce on the battle-field, and that the wounding of Ares, which does not seem to be contemplated in 130-2, is an exaggerated attempt to outbid the wounding of Aphrodite. 753-4 seem also to be borrowed, not very appropriately, from A 498-9, and, as von Christ has remarked, 791 from N 107. So also 719-721 = Θ 381-3, 733-737 = Θ 384-388, 745-752 = Θ 389-396. It can hardly be said positively that either passage is older than the other, so far as the evidence of borrowing goes; but the general character of Θ would lead us to believe that the lines are originally in place here. Again 711-712 = H 17-18, 713 = Δ 69, 714 = B 157, 716 = B 113,
 738 = B 45, 743 = A 41, 769 = Θ 46,
 775-6 = 368-9, 782-3 = H 256-7, 787 =
 Θ 228. This is certainly a suspicious proportion of borrowed lines; but on the other hand the style of the passage is spirited, and does not shew any weakness of imagination.

715. For the use of the cognate accusative with ὑποστήναι cf. B 286, κ 483; and see H. G. § 136 (3). τόν is here demonstrative, “that.” We do not hear elsewhere of any such promise made by the goddesses to Menelaos.

722. For a general account of the Homeric chariot see Helbig, H. E. pp. 88-110. The body of the car was very light, and when not in use was taken to pieces and put upon a stand; see Θ 441, ἄρματα δ' ἄμ βωμοῖσι τίθει, κατὰ λίθα πετάσσας. Hence the first thing to be done in making it ready was to put on the wheels, as is done here. For ὀχέεσσι most MSS. read ὀχέεσφι, one ὀχεσφι, which is perhaps right.

723. χάλκεα, so MSS.; Bentley conj. χάλκει', but the hiatus is legitimate after the first foot. The usual number of spokes in the early Greek monuments, as well as in the Assyrian and Egyptian, is six or four; but eight are found in the archaic sarcophagus from Klazomenae published in the J. H. S. vol. iv. In any case, as Eust. remarks, the largest number possible would be attributed to the divine chariot, which has all the parts made of metal which in the human car were of wood, even straps of gold and silver instead of leather. For ἵτυς (felloe) = Lat. vitulus, see Curtius, Gr. Et. no. 593; and cf. Δ 486.

725. ἐπίσσωτρον, "tire," from σῶτρον, another name for the felloe, according to Pollux: cf. ἐύσσωτρος Ω 578: the der. is uncertain.

726. πλήμνη, "nave," Gr. Et. no. 866, where Pictet's explanation "le plein de la roue" is accepted. περιδρομος is used here in a slightly different sense from 728, though we can translate both by "running round." Here it evidently means "rotating," while in 728 it means "surrounding"; B 812 gives yet a third meaning. Hesych. περιδρομοὶ· περιφερεῖς, στρογγύλοι, no doubt applies to 726, but does not give so good a sense. ἀμφοτέρωθεν, on both sides of the car.

727. δίφρος, here in the narrower sense of the platform of the car on which the riders stood. (Hence the breastwork which surrounded it in front and at both sides is called ἐπιδικρις, K 475. ὄχρα, which is always used in the plural, implies the whole complex body of the chariot, including axle, pole, etc.). This platform is composed of straps strained tight, and interwoven, which formed a springy surface such as would save the charioteer from the jolting of rough ground. This device is known to have been employed in Egyptian chariots, and gives a simple explanation of the phrase ἐντέταται which has puzzled commentators (cf. also K 263, τ 577, ψ 201 ἐν δ' ἐτάσσουσ' ἱμάτια βοῶς, to form a springy bed). See Wilkinson, Ancient Egyptians, i. p. 227, J. H. S. v. 192.

728. δοιαί, apparently because the ἀντι ran symmetrically round the car, forming a handle behind on both sides. There is no reason to suppose that there were two rails one above the other.

729. πάλιν: the transition from the descriptive to the narrative tense is made one step earlier than we should have expected. Hence Bentley conj. πέλει. But, as Hentze has remarked, the imperfect is justified by the fact that the pole was not an immovable part of the chariot, but was put in when the chariot was made ready; so that the word really belongs to the narration, not to the description. πάλιν is not simply = ἤν, but means "stood out."

730. δῆσε: for the details of the process by which the yoke was attached to the pole see Ω 265-280, and a full discussion of the question in J. H. S. vol. v. The usual explanation will be found in Autenrieth, s.v. ζυγόν. Λάπαδνα, broad leather breastbands by which the horses were attached to the yoke. Traces seem only to have been used for the σειραφόρος.

734. ἑάνον, "pliant," as elsewhere when it is used as an adj. with αἰ: it is not to be confused with the substantive ἑ(σ)ᾶνός (Γ 385, etc.) "garment," and should perhaps be written ἑάνός, as it may be derived from ἑᾶω, in the sense of "yielding." (See Buttmann, Lexil. s.v.).

736. The χιτῶν I take to be the στρεπτός χιτῶν, a stout pleated doublet designed to shield the body from the pressure of the γύαλα (see on E 113). Hence the adjective ἑάνός is fitly used to contrast with this martial garb the soft robe which Athene wears; and there is no need to follow Ar. in joining Διὸς with τεύχεσιν instead of χιτῶνα. It may be mentioned that Zenod. rejected 734-736 here, holding them to be borrowed from Θ 385-7, while Ar. maintained the converse.

738. On the aegis cf. B 448. It is conceived by Homer as a shield of the ordinary sort, made of metal, as is clear from O 309, where it is said to have been made by Hephaistos the χαλκεύς. The later idea of a goatskin seems to have arisen from a false etymology, combined perhaps with the influence of some non-Hellenic cult such as is described by Herodotus, iv. 189. The word ἐστεφάνωνται is used in the description of Agamemnon's shield, Δ 36, where the Gorgoneion is the object in question. It is hard to say exactly what it means here, as if there was an actual allegorical representation of Φόβος it can hardly have extended all round the rim; neither can it have been a central ornament, for that position must have been occupied by the Gorgoneion. It is probable therefore that Homer meant only vaguely to express that Rout followed wherever the shield was turned. But even so we must admit a curious discrepancy with Δ 36, where an actual representation is undoubtedly meant. The Gorgoneion itself was probably in its origin a device meant to terrify the enemy, like the hideous faces which Chinese warriors carry on their shields. From this it came in more civilised times to be regarded merely as an ἀποτρόπαιον or charm to avert the evil eye and other dangers. The expression Διὸς τέρας implies this further stage.

743. ἀμφίφαλον with φάλας (or φάλας, as the gender is uncertain) on both sides. I have endeavoured to shew (J. H. S. iv. p. 294) that the φάλας were metallic projections, survivals of the horns which formed an ornament of the helmet of the primitive peoples of the coasts of the Mediterranean. τετραφάλῃρος is a word of doubtful meaning; it may perhaps mean "having four ornaments affixed to the φάλας," such as are depicted in J. H. S. l.c. fig. 15. The word ἀμφίφαλος does not exclude the possibility of four φάλας: it only means that they were placed at the sides of the helmet, not, as was often the case, in front.

744. The exact meaning of this line

ἐς δ' ὄχρα φλόγεα ποσὶ βήσεται, λάξετο δ' ἔγχος βριθὺ μέγα στιβαρόν, τῷ δάμνησι στίχας ἀνδρῶν ἡρώων, τοῖσιν τε κοτέσσεται ὀβριμοπάτρη.

is not clear. ἀραρυῖαν has been explained "fitting the warriors of a hundred cities," i.e. big enough for a hundred armies to wear. But this is too absurdly grotesque for Homer. The alternative is to make it = "fitted with," i.e. adorned with representations of the warriors of a hundred cities; that is perhaps with a battle-scene between two armies and their allies on a vast and supernatural scale. So a battle-scene was depicted by Pheidias on the shield of his Athene Parthenos; but then it as a Gigantomachia in which Athene took a prominent part; nothing of the sort is indicated here, nor does ἀραρυῖα seem a likely word to express the metallic adornment of the Homeric age, which consisted of inlaid work. With the ζώνη ἑκατὸν θυσάνους ἀραρυῖα Ξ 181, the πόλις πύργους ἀραρυῖα Ο 737, and the ἀπὴρ ὑπερτερὴν ἀραρυῖα ζ 70, the case is evidently different, though they shew that ἀραρυῖα can mean "provided with." πρυλῆς is itself a word of doubtful origin and meaning: it recurs Δ 49, Μ 77, Ο 517, Φ 90, and may mean either "footmen," as opposed to ἱππῆες, or "champions." It is possibly connected with πρύλις, the Cretan word for the wardance, and may therefore have once meant champions who danced in front of the army to provoke the enemy. Hermann and others have seen a further allusion to the hundred cities of Crete; and the line may therefore be one of the passages which seem to have a special connexion with that island. See on Σ 590.

745. φλόγεα: this adj. recurs only in the parallel Θ 389: it probably means "sparkling like fire" with the bright metal. Homeric gods do not go, like the Semitic, with flames of fire about them.

746. δάμνησι, so most MSS.: Α δάμ-νησι with Ar.: but the subjunctive is out of place in a direct statement as to the use of the spear; in other words we have here a particular statement, although the present implies iteration, not a general statement as in a simile, or as in the next line, where the subj. κοτέσσεται implies "with whomsoever she is wroth."

749. Observe the freedom of the imagery by which the gate, though said to be a cloud in 751, is made to creak.

750. ἐπιτέτραπται, so MSS.: ἐπιτεράφαται Bergk, from Athenæus (iv. 134); but the singular is quite defensible, as οὐρανός and Οὐλυμπός if not identical are at least closely connected. For the construction of the following infin. see H. G. § 234 (1).

752. κεντρηνεκέας, only here and in the identical passage in Θ. It seems to come from ἐνεγκεῖν, "enduring the goad." It is a question as to what this κέντρον really was. It would naturally mean a sharp-pointed rod, such as is used by the charioteer represented in the Burgon amphora. But a comparison of Ψ 430 and Ψ 582 seems to shew that it was identical with the ῥάσθη, which can be nothing but a leathern thong. Whether this thong had a sharp point at the end or not it is beyond our power to say. Cf. also Δ 391, Καδμεία, κέντρος ἱππων.

753-4 = Δ 498-9. The mention of the ἀκροτάτη κορυφή seems out of place here, as the goddesses are on their way to earth. It almost looks as though there were a confusion between heaven and Olympus in 749-50; but as Aristarchos carefully pointed out, Homer always means the actual mountain when he speaks of Olympus, not any aerial dwelling of the gods, at least in the Iliad. Ar. explained ἀκροτάτη as = ἀκρῇ, "very high," which is most unnatural.

757. καρτερὰ ἔργα, so most and best MSS.: ἐργ' ἀδῆλα Schol. A and Apoll. Lex. For the constr. of the acc. H. G. § 136 (13). For Ἄρει the best MSS. give Ἄρη, but this is not a form of the Homeric declension of the name.

758. ὅσσάτιον, only here: the later Epics have τοσσάτιον. Cf. μεσσήτιος in Callimachos, and ιστάτιος by ιστατος.

759. ἐμοὶ δ' ἄχος, either an accus. in apposition with the sentence, or, perhaps more simply, we may supply ἔστι. ἔκτηλοι, ironical.

765. ἄγρει seems to be a stronger word than ἄγε, though the two are probably connected: see Curt. Gr. Et. 117. Others refer it to ἀλγέω. It is used only in the imperative; the plur. is found only in v 149.

770. ἡεροειδὲς, an adj. almost confined to the Od., especially as an epithet of the sea; sometimes of ἄντρον or σπέος, and once of πέτρῃ μ 233, where it clearly means “the rock so distant as to be like mist.” When used of the sea it seems to express the vague colour of the distant water, which the haze of distance almost melts into the semblance of the sky. So here “so far as a man sees in the haze of distance,” i.e. up to the utmost limit of human vision. As to construction, the neuter seems to be used attributively, agreeing with ὅσσον, and the accus. expresses extension.

772. ὑψηχέες, compare Vergil's fremit alte. Nauck and van Herwerden however would read ὑψαύχες, on account of the digamma of Ψηχή: this is possibly indicated as a variant by Hesych., ἀπὸ τοῦ εἰς ὕψος ἔχειν τοὺς τραχήλους, ὡς ὑψαύχες; Suidas ὑψηχῆς ὁ ὑψαύχην. Two MSS. give ὑψαυχέες, one ὑψηυχέες. The word recurs in Ψ 27, but without these variants.

774. The only other places where Simoeis and Scamander are distinguished are Z 4, M 22, Φ 307. Of these the two latter are almost certainly of late origin, while in the first what is probably the old reading omits all mention of Simoeis. There is therefore very strong reason for supposing that there was only one river named in the original legend; Simoeis may possibly, as Hercher thinks, be another name of the Scamander preserved by tradition. If the two are different, the only stream which can be identified with the Simoeis is apparently the pitiful brook of the Dumbrek-Su, which runs from E. to W. on the N. side of Hissarlik, and does not join the Menderes at all. It entirely ceases to run in summer (Schliemann). On the σχῆμα Ἀλκμανικόν, by which the plural (or, as here, dual) verb goes with the first of two nominatives, instead of following both, Aristonikos remarks τοῦτω τῷ ἔθει πεπλεόνακε καὶ Ἀλκμάν· διὸ καὶ καλεῖται Ἀλκμανικόν, οὐχ ὅτι αὐτὸς πρῶτος ἐχρήσατο ἀλλ' ὅτι τῷ τοιούτῳ ἔθει πεπλεόνακεν. He quotes other instances from T 138, κ 513, ξ 216.

776. πουλὺν is of course a feminine, as in πουλὺν ἐφ' ὑγρὴν K 27: so ἡδύς μ 369, and θῆλος generally. ἀήρ is never masculine in H. H. G. § 116, 4.

777. On ἀμβροσίην see note on B 19.

778. All MSS. give αἱ δέ, but τῷ δέ is found quoted three times by Scholiasts (Soph. El. 977, O. C. 1676, Eur. Alc. 902): there can be little doubt therefore that this rare feminine form is the original, and was excluded because unfamiliar. So in Θ 378, 455 we have feminine duals identical in form with masculine: and also Hes. Opp. 198-9. The word ἴθματα does not seem to recur (before Callimachos) except in Hymn. Apoll. 114 βᾶν δέ (Iris and Eileithyia) ποσὶ τρήρωσι πελειάσιν ἴθμαθ' ὁμοίαι, which is the passage quoted by Aristophanes, Av. 575, Ἴφρων δέ γ' Ὀμηρος ἐφασκ' ἱκέλην εἶναι τρήρωνι πελὲρ. There is perhaps a touch of the humour which is so often associated with the gods of Homer, in the vivid comparison of the short and quick yet would-be stately steps of the two goddesses to the strutting of a pigeon, so unlike a hero μακρὰ βιβάς. (Mr. Monro takes ἴθματα to mean the flight of doves.)

785. Stentor is never named again by Homer, and there seems to have been no consistent tradition about him. Some called him a Greek herald; Schol. A says τινὲς αὐτὸν Θρᾷκά φασιν, Ἐρμῇ δὲ περὶ μεγαλοφωνίας ἐρίσαντα ἀναιρεθῆναι, αὐτὸν δὲ εὐρεῖν καὶ τὴν διὰ κόχλου γραφὴν (sic: Schol. B μηχανήν, the device of the speaking-trumpet: this is the rationalising explanation). τινὲς δὲ Ἀρκάδα φασιν εἶναι τὸν Στέντορα, καὶ ἐν τῷ καταλόγῳ πλάττουσι περὶ αὐτοῦ στίχους. Ἐν τισὶ δὲ οὐκ ἦν ὁ στίχος (sc. 786) διὰ τὴν ὑπερβολήν. Bopp and Bergk may be right in explaining the name as originally meaning "Thunderer," from root stan, for which see Curt. Gr. Et. no. 220 (Skt. stanajati = it thunders). χαλκεοφώνος is not elsewhere found; but compare B 490, Σ 222 ὅσα χάλκεον. The Stentorian voice was proverbial in the time of Aristotle; see the well-known passage in the Pol. 4, 7, 11. For other instances of the superhuman power of gods see 859, Ξ 148.

787. For ἐλέγχεα (ἐλεγχείες one MS., Ar. κατελεγχείες) see note on Δ 242. αἰδώς is a nominative used interjectionally, apparently as a sort of imperative, αἰδώς ἔστω ὑμῖν and equivalent to αἰδῶ θέσθ' ἐνὶ θυμῷ, O 561, 661. The regular meaning of the word is of course "sense of honour," "recognition of the just rebukes of men”; it is not used in the sense of “disgrace” like αἰσχος or αἰσχύνῃ, either in Homer or later Greek. The phrase recurs in Θ 228, Ν 95, Ο 502, Π 422; and in a slightly varying form P 336 αἰδῶς μὲν νῦν ἦδε γ' . . . ἴλιον εἰσαναβῆναι, where we must take it to mean “this is a thing to arouse a feeling of rebuke,” just as we say “it is a shame to do so and so,” meaning a thing to be ashamed of. εἰδὼς ἀγῆτοί, like εἰδὼς ἀριστοί, Γ 39 (there was a variant ἀριστοί here).

789. Aristarchos held that the Dardanian gate was the same as the Skaian. Of course the question is insoluble; but see note on B 809. The name recurs again in X 194.

791. The best MSS. give νῦν δὲ ἐκάς, a few of the inferior νῦν δ' ἐκαθεν. Of course the former is right, as ἐκάς had F. But from a scholion by Didymus on N 107 it appears that Zenod. and Aristoph. read νῦν δὲ ἐκάς, Aristarchos νῦν δ' ἐκαθεν: a clear proof that Aristarchos did not always know what was the best tradition, or else deliberately rejected it from preconceived notions. The expression κοίλης ἐπὶ νηυσὶ is not appropriate here, as it is in N 107, where the Greeks have actually been driven back to the camp. Either therefore the line must be borrowed here, or a mistaken reminiscence must have caused some corruption.

793. ἐπόρουσε, “sprang to his side,” cf. ψ 343 ὄππος ἔρ., and P 481 ἄρμ' ἐπο-

ρούσας. Elsewhere it always indicates a hostile onslaught.

795. It might have been supposed that Athene had healed the wound in 122, but there is no explicit inconsistency between that passage and the present. See II 528; when a god miraculously heals a wound we are told so at length. Many critics however have made this supposed “contradiction” a fulcrum for breaking up this book. For the double acc. after βάλε cf. 361, Θ 405, Ω 421, and H. G. § 135.

796. The wound is in the right shoulder (98) through the top of the γύαλον, and just where the broad strap by which the shield was held crossed the shoulder, which it would seem therefore the plates of the cuirass did not quite cover. The shield, as we should expect, hung at the left side.

797. τῷ may be either τελαμῶνι or ἰδρωτί. It is not perfectly clear how he could get at the wound to wipe it without taking off the στρεπτοῖς χιτῶν.

802. There is considerable doubt as to the punctuation of this passage. Fäsi takes 805 as a parenthesis. Similarly Mr. Monro regards it as epexegetic of the preceding. Ameis less probably takes καὶ ῥ' ὅτε περ . . . ἐκπαϊφάσσειν as a general protasis, which is superseded and forgotten in favour of the special case introduced by the second protasis, ὅτε τε . . . Καδμείωνας. For the story see Δ 384 sqq.

803. νόσφιν Ἀχαιῶν is the same as μόνος ἑὼν in Δ 388. ἐκπαιφάσσειν, make display, see B 450.

808. According to Aristonikos this line was inserted here by Zenod. from Δ 390 (and E 828), but omitted by Ar. on the just ground that Athene is here emphasizing her restraint, not her support, of Tydeus; the interpolation destroys the effect of the following line.

811. πολυαῖξ, see A 165. As the ι is long by nature (-δικος) the ordinary accent πολυαῖξ is wrong. Cf. however κῆρυξ: some of the old grammarians held that ι and υ were never long by nature before ξ.

818. σέων Ar., σῶν best MSS. Ar. admitted the contracted form only after a vowel.

819. ἀντικρὺ, see 130.

824. μάχην in local sense, “the battle-field.” πόλεμος is never used in this way. ἀνά should be ἀνα, as it immediately follows its case; but Ar. refused to be consistent, on the ground that the word would thus be liable to confusion with the vocative of ἀναξ and the imperatival ἀνα = arise. In Δ 230 he wrote δία, not δία, for a similar reason. The whole theory of accentuation is full of irregularities, which in many cases no doubt represented a genuine usage, but were a subject of helpless groping after principles among the Alexandrian grammarians.

827. τό γε, for that matter: cf. ρ 401, μήτε τι μητέρ' ἐμῇ δξεν τό γε, μήτε τιν' ἄλλον. But it looks almost as if the line were a reminiscence of Ξ 342, μήτε θεῶν τό γε δεῖδιθι μήτε τιν' ἀνδρῶν δφσεσθαι, where the τό is probably governed by δφσεσθαι.

828. ἐπιτάρροθος, a word of quite uncertain origin; apparently identical in sense with ἐπίρροθος in Δ 390, though an etymological connexion is hardly possible. See note there.

831. ἄλλοπρόσαλλον, "double-faced," one thing to one person, another to another. This treachery of Ares is again alluded to in Φ 413, ὄνκε' Ἀχαιοὺς κἀλ-λῆρες, αὐτὰρ Τρῶσιν ὑπερφιάλουσιν ἀμύνεις, but no other trace of it occurs in Homer. τυκτόν is another ἀπαξ λεγόμενον in this sense: it apparently means "finished, wrought out," i.e. complete: cf. τετυγμέσων = well wrought, Ψ 741: so τυκτῆσι βόεσσιν, well wrought, M 105, and in the sense of "artificially made" ρ 206, δ 627.

832. πρῶην, see B 303. στεύτο, "pledged himself," see Curt. Gr. Et. no. 228.

833. μαχήσεσθαι, several MSS. give -σασθαι in spite of the following future; which shows how little authority the codices have in a question of this sort.

834. τῶν δὲ may be masc., sc. Ἀχαιῶν; but perhaps it is rather more Homeric to take it as neuter, "those promises."

835-9. ἀθετοῦνται στίχοι δύο, *ὅτι οὐκ ἀνεγκαίῳ καὶ γελοίοι, καὶ τι ἐναντίον ἔχον-
 τες. τί γάρ, εἰ χεῖριστοι ἦσαν ταῖς ψυχαῖς, εὐαεῖς δὲ καὶ εὐσαρκεῖ;* i.e. the fact that

Diomedes and the goddess were ἀριστοι does not involve their being heavier. But the couplet is quite in the spirit of the whole passage, which seems expressly to exaggerate the physical qualities of the gods, e.g. 785, 860. We may compare Aen. vi. 413, "gemuit sub pondere cymba Sutilis" (of Charon's boat). For φήγινος there was an old variant πῆγινος, found in Eustath., Hesych., and Et. Mag., and said to mean some kind of wood. For this word reference may be made to the article πηδός in Liddell and Scott. For ἄνδρα τ' in 839 Ar. read ἄνδρα δ'. His idea apparently was that he put the goddess and the hero too much on an equality.

841. In A and C 846 is inserted after this line, in the former with the note ἐν ἄλλοις ὁ στίχος μετὰ τέσσαρας στίχους κεῖται. It will be observed that the change makes little difference. ἐξενάριζεν and ἐνάριζεν (844) are the reading of Ar. with the best MSS., "was despoiling": others (probably Zenod.) ἐξενάριζεν, "had slain." There is no other case in Homer of a god in person actually slaying and despoiling a hero.

845. Ἀϊδος κυνέη, the "Tarnkappe" or "Nebelkappe" of northern mythology, not elsewhere mentioned in H. It is alluded to however in the (pseudo-) Hesiod Scutum Her. 227, and in Aristoph. Ach. 390; Plato, Rep. x. 612 B. It appears too in the legend of Perseus in Pherekydes, and is a piece of the very oldest folklore. The name Ἀΐδης here evidently preserves something of its original sense, the Invisible (Ἀΐδης). It is of course not necessary to suppose that the poet conceives Athene as literally putting on a cap; he only employs the traditional—almost proverbial—way of saying that she makes herself invisible to Ares.

848. This line is perhaps interpolated by a rhapsode who read ἐξενάριξεν in 842, and thought that an infinitive was required after ἔασεν. This idea led to another unmistakable interpolation, Ω 558.

851. ζυγόν, of Diomedes' chariot: Ares is clearly on foot (he has lent his chariot to Aphrodite, 363).

852. ἐλέσθαι, so A and other MSS.: vulg. ἀλέσσαι, but this by Homeric usage could only mean to lose his own life.

854. ὑπὲρ, so A: cael. ὑπ' ἐκ, which appears to be accepted by almost all edd., though no approximately satisfactory explanation has been given of the word, which can only mean "from under." Athene of course is on, not under, the chariot; and to suppose that she could direct the shaft from a place where she was not herself is to make her very unlike a Homeric deity. With the reading of A there is no difficulty whatever, and the authority of this MS. is as great as that of the consensus of all the rest, so that there need be no hesitation in adopting it. It is strange that neither Nauck nor von Christ so much as mentions the existence of the variant.

857. οἱ κατὰ τὰ κοῖλα μέρη ἐξώνυστο τὴν μήτρην· καὶ ἐστὶ διδασκαλικὸς ὁ τόπος (i.e. "this is the locus classicus"). For the nature of the μήτρην see on Δ 137. For μήτρην of MSS. Ar. read μήτρη; both cases appear to be equally Homeric: see Z 181, K 77.

860. This hyperbolic distich recurs in Z 148-9. Ar. is said to have read -χειλοι for -χιλοι, "with nine lips" (!) For the last half of 861 compare B 381, Z 448, T 275.

865. καύματος ἔξ, after hot weather: so Schol. It is hardly possible to get any good sense if we join ἐξ with ἀνέμοιο. It is not easy to say what the phenomenon meant may be ; perhaps a whirlwind of dust raised by the Scirocco. Others take it to be a thunder-cloud “standing out to the eye from the other clouda.” (7)

874. χάριν ἄνδρεσσι, so La R. : the best MSS. follow Ar. in reading χάριν δ', but the particle appears to be merely an insertion to assist the metre. Bekker rejects this line and the preceding, not without reason, as they are quite wide of the aim of the rest of the speech. So also Köchly and Nauck.

876. ἀήσυλα, so MSS. : but there is little doubt, as Clemm has shewn, that the word, which is not found elsewhere, is only an itacistic mistake for ἀίσουλα, iniqua, from ἴσος ; hence the commoner contracted form αἰσυλος.

878. δεδμήμεσθα, are subject to you, Γ 183, λ 622. For the change of person cf. H 160, P 250.

879. προτιβάλλεαι apparently means “attack,” “make an onslaught.” There is no other case in Homer of such a use, nor does the middle voice of this compound seem to recur in Greek literature, until the late Epic poets. Mr. Monro explains “dost give heed to,” comparing ἐπιβαλλόμενος Z 68, and βάλλεσθαι ἐνὶ θυμῷ, μετὰ φρεσίν.

880. For ἀνίης most MSS. give ἀνίεις. Schol. A on Z 131 ἀνίεις. The second form can hardly be right, the first is in accordance with the analogy of ἀνίησι, the latter is supported by μεθίει K 121, τιθεί N 732, α 192. In a point where the authority of MSS. is nil it seems better to take the more archaic form, as it has respectable authority ; as it is very probable that forms of the so-called “Aeolic” conjugation have constantly been altered to suit the later conjugation of contracted verbs. αὐτός is explained by Schol. B μόνος, i.e. without the intervention of a mother. There is no trace in H. however of the birth of Athene from the head of Zeus ; and the word here need mean no more than “thou thyself” didst beget (emphatically) ; σὺ τέκες above (875) is also ambiguous. ἀλδῆλον, destructive, as πύρ, B 455. (Welcker explains “secretly born,” as without a mother. But see 897.)

886. νεκάδεσσιν, ἀπ. λεγόμενον. Cf.

Ο 118 κείσθαι ὁμοῦ νεκέσσι μεθ' αἵματι καὶ κοίρῃσι, and Π 661 ἐν νεκῶν ἀγῶνι : see also note on 397. Ares, being immortal, seems a little confused between his two alternatives ; the contrast to ζῶς (another ἀπ. λεγ.) should of course be ἔθανον ; this being impossible he has to substitute the rather weak expression of the text.

887. ἀμειννός, only here in Il. : it occurs several times in Od. in the phrase νεκῶν ἀμειννὰ κάρηνα and once (τ 562) of dreams. It appears to be conn. with μένος, but the formation is not clear.

891. See note on A 177.

892. ἀσχετον : the formation of this word, which recurs only in Ω 708, is hardly explicable. According to Bekker it is for ἀν-ἀσχετος, through the stage ἀν-α(ν)σχετος, the second ν being lost before the σ, and the first then having to follow suit, that the word might not be confused with ἀνδ-σχετος in the opposite sense. If so, it is probably a late and wrong reading, for which ἀνδσχετον ought to be substituted here (so Wackernagel) : mere possibilities of confusion do not set aside the ordinary laws of linguistic formation. According to another view we have a case of "Epic diectasis" for δσχετος. This is not impossible in a passage which may possibly be of late origin, and contemporaneous with the formation on false analogy of ὀπάς for ὀπάεις through the stage ὀπίς.

893. σπουδῇ, as B 99, etc.

894. ἐννεσίησιν, for ἐννεσ. (ἐνέημι) ; the lengthening of the first syllable may be due to the ictus alone ; or possibly to a reminiscence of j, ἐν-jeo-ίη, though the latter alternative is the less probable.

898. For ἦσθα the best MSS. give ἦσθας, an impossible form, invented for the supposed benefit of the metre. The form ὀσθας however seems to be well attested in Eur. Ion. 999. For ἐνέρτερος Zenod. read ἐνέρτατος. The two last words of the line apparently mean "lower than the sons of Uranos," i.e. the Titans imprisoned in Tartaros, as in O 225, ὡπερ ἐνέρτεροι εἰσι θεοὶ, Κρόνων ἀμφὶς ἐόντες. This however is quite unlike the Homeric use of the word Οὐρανίωτες, and may be another mark of later date ; the Titan myths, like those relating to Kronos, seem only to have become part of the acknowledged belief of the Greek nation at large in post-Homeric times. If we take Οὐρανίωτες in its usual sense, we must translate either "lower than the heavenly gods," or "low among (partitive gen.) the heavenly gods" : either of which interpretations makes the passage intolerably weak. For the threat itself compare Θ 13-16 : and for the Titans Θ 479, Ξ 279, Hesiod, Theog. 720.

900. See 401-2. Here the best MSS. read πάσσειν or ἔπασσειν, and either omit 901 or give a note to say that it was sometimes omitted ; only those of the second class giving πάσσειν, which is necessary if 901 is read. The note in Schol. A (Didymus!) λακῶς φάρμακα πάσσει (i.e. not φάρμακ' ἔπασσει: the omission of the augment is always regarded as an Ionic peculiarity) shews that Ar. also omitted 901.

902. ὀπός, fig-juice used to curdle milk for making cheese: another material for the same purpose in classical times was πυτρία or τάμνος, "rennet," which is still employed. ἐπειγόμενος might quite well be taken as a passive, "being stirred"; but the common Homeric use of the participle is rather in favour of taking it as a mid., "makes haste to curdle" (cf. Z 388, ἐπειγομένη ἀφικάνει, etc.); the point of the simile lies in the speed of the process, so that the repetition of the same idea in μάλ' ὦκα in the next line is excusable.

903. περιτρέφεται, "curdles," so Herodianus ap. Eust., Apoll. Lex.; MSS. περιστρέφεται, which is obviously inferior, cf. ξ 477 σακτέσσι περιτρέφετο κρύσταλλος, where also, as La R. remarks, six MSS. give περιστρέφετο, though it is meaningless. So; 246, ἡμῖν μὲν θρέψας λευκοῖο γάλακτος. The idea evidently is that Paieon miraculously turned the flowing blood to sound and solid flesh.

905. On this line Ar. remarked ὅτι παρθενικὸν τὸ λούειν (it is always the maidens who give the bath): οὐκ οἶδεν ἄρα ὅφ' Ἑρακλείους αὐτὴν γεγαμημένην, ὡς ἐν τοῖς ἡθετημένοις ἐν Ὀδυσσεῖα (viz. λ 603); a characteristic specimen of the great critic's acumen, though the argument is not in itself convincing to a chorizont.

906. This line was marked by Ar. with "asterisk and obelos," the former implying that it occurs elsewhere (viz. A 405, where see note), the latter that it is wrongly inserted here. The reason for the latter decision is that κύδει γαίων is out of place on an occasion where Ares has so little to be proud of.

909. Ἄρην is the reading of nearly all codices, and of Herodianus, who also preferred Ἄρην to Ἀρεῖ in 757: but it only occurs here, so that the one MS. (Cant.) which gives Ἀρῆ is not improbably right.

Ζ

The sixth book with its immortal scenes between Diomedes and Glaukos, and Hector and Andromache, forms with the preceding tale of war and carnage a contrast which places it in the front rank of all poetry. But, as we so often find in the Iliad, supreme beauty of individual parts is not inconsistent with grave difficulties as to their relation to one another, and to the story at large.

There is a natural division of the book between lines 311 and 312, where it is not improbable that the repeated ὦ may indicate a break in recitation. The two parts however are closely connected, as the second continues the account of Hector's visit to the city, which begins in the first. The quotation by Herodotos of lines 289-292 as being ἐν Διομήδεος ἀριστεῖν indicates that there was originally no distinct break between E and the first section of Z. But, as has already been mentioned, this single rhapsody contains one of the most glaring inconsistencies in the Homeric poems; Diomedes in E has power given him to know god from man, and wounds Ares and Aphrodite, while in Z he doubts whether Glaukos be not a god, and declines to lift his spear against him if he be. Such an anomaly cannot be accounted for unless by the assumption that the two episodes of the wounding of the gods are a later addition to the original ἀριστεία. The contrary assumption, that the Glaukos story is the later addition, is entirely opposed to all probability; we can understand that the superhuman victories should be added to that part of the tale which presents only the common powers of the hero, but not that they should be totally forgotten if they belonged to the plot from the first.

The episode of Glaukos and Diomedes has however incurred suspicion, on account of a curious scholion of Aristonikos, ἡ διπλὴ ὅτι μετατιθέασι τινες ἀλλάχοντε ταύτην τὴν σύστασιν. Unfortunately he does not tell us to what place these unknown authorities transferred the scene, and modern critics have in vain endeavoured to find one as suitable as the present. The proud words of Diomedes in 127 must come after the beginning of his ἀριστεία, and therefore no mere alteration of place will do away with the contradiction between the following words and his supernatural vision and achievements in E; so that there can be no gain from any attempt to find a fresh connexion.

The allusion to the worship of Dionysos in 130-141 is probably a mark of later origin in that passage, which can however be cut out without injury to the context. With this exception there is nothing to be said against the claim of the episode to rank as a portion of the original Διομήδεος ἀριστεία, which it leads to a fitting end by contrasting the romantic chivalry of the two heroes—like that of Saladin and Coeur-de-Lion—with the carnage of the book before.

Αἶας δὲ πρῶτος Τελαμώνιος, ἕρκος Ἀχαιῶν, Τρώων ῥήξε φάλαγγα, φῶος δ' ἐτάροισιν ἔθηκεν, ἄνδρα βαλὼν, δς ἄριστος ἐνὶ Θρήκεσσι τέτυκτο, υἱὸν Ἐυσσώρου Ἀκάμαντ' ἦν τε μέγαν τε.

It has further been objected with some force to the introduction of the book (1-72) that it does not suit what follows; for Diomedes here again sinks into the background, slaying only two enemies, no more than fall to so insignificant a hero as Euryalos; so that the words of Helenos in 97-101 are quite out of place at this particular moment. It is probable therefore that these 72 lines belong to the episode of the wounding of Ares, and are designed to lead the way back to the original Diomedea which is resumed in l. 73.

Doubt has also been thrown upon the episode of Hector's visit to Paris (313-388). It has apparent reference throughout to the end of the third book, yet none of the allusions exactly suit (see particularly 337 compared with Γ 428-436). The words χόλον τόνδε in 326 are hard to explain, and would be more natural if they followed a scene in which Paris had actually left the battle-field in resentment at some outbreak of anger on the part of the Trojans. It is therefore possible that the duel in Γ, which we have already seen reason to suppose a later addition to this part of the Iliad, may have supplanted such an episode; but the proof of this is certainly not very strong. In any case the scene with Paris forms a most effective companion and contrast to that with Andromache, which is (with the exception of a few lines, 433-438) above suspicion.

1. οἰώθη, was left to itself by the departure of the gods, after the events of the last book. Cf. A 401.

2. πρὸς τοιο, "along the plain," as usual: not a partitive gen. after ἐνθα. ἰθὺς is the regular word for "charging," Δ 507, A 552, etc., the parallel form ἰθύνειν being used for the transitive. The mid. ἰθύνεσθαι recurs only ε 270, χ 8. ἰθνομένω is gen. abs., the subject being easily supplied from the first line: ἀλλήλων is doubtless the gen. usual after verbs of aiming (H. G. § 151 c), and is not in agreement with the participle. Cf. N 499.

4. The ordinary reading of this line is μεσσηγὺς Σιμβέντος ἰδὲ Ἐάνθοιο ῥοδῶν. But Aristonikos says (ἡ διπλῇ) στ

ἐν τοῖς ἀρχαίοις ἐγγράφῳ "μεσσηγὺς ποταμοῖο Σκαμάνδρου καὶ στομαλίνης". διδ καὶ ἐν τοῖς ὑπομνήμασι φέρεται. ὅστερον δὲ περιπεσὼν ἔγραψε "μεσσηγὺς Σιμβέντος ἰδὲ Ἐάνθοιο ῥοδῶν." τοῖς γὰρ περὶ τοῦ ναυστάθμου τόποις ἡ γραφὴ συμφέρει, πρὸς οὗς μάχονται ("sc. hi versus illa lectione retenta" Lehrs). Further Schol. BLV say πρότερον ἐγγράφῳ "μεσσηγὺς ποταμοῖο Σκαμάνδρου καὶ στομαλίνης"· ὅστερον δὲ Ἀρίσταρχος ταύτην τὴν λέξιν (sc. the present vulgate) εὐρὼν ἐπέκρινεν. Χαῖρις δὲ γράφει "μεσσηγὺς ποταμοῖο Σκαμάνδρου καὶ Σιμβέντος." Various emendations of the scholion of Aristonikos have been proposed; e.g. Lehrs conj. ἐν τοῖς Ἀρισταρχεῖσι for ἐν τοῖς ἀρχαίοις: Sengebusch ἐν τῇ προτέρᾳ τῶν Ἀρισταρχεῖων. But there is no reason to go beyond their plain sense; viz. that Ar. found the reading of our text in his "ancient" authorities—what these were we cannot say—and adopted it in his first edition and his "notes"; but that he subsequently found the reading of the present vulgate—again we do not know in what authorities—and adopted it in his second edition as being more in accordance with the Homeric topography of the camp, on which, as we know, he wrote a special dissertation. The στομαλίνη or "estuary" is not elsewhere mentioned. The name itself is very unlikely to have been invented, but very likely to have been supplanted by the more familiar Σιμβέντος. It appears moreover that the old tradition was so strongly in favour of our text that Ar. had difficulty in finding support for the variant which he preferred on other grounds. These grounds however have lost their weight to us, especially since Hercher has shown that in all probability the Simoeis was, if known at all to the original legend, only another name for the Skamandros. The two are distinguished only in E 774 (q. v.), M 22, Φ 307; and all these passages are reasonably suspected on other grounds of later origin. (The only other places in which the name Simeios occurs are E 777, Δ 475, T 53; cf. Δ 477, 488). Every argument therefore points to the adoption of the older reading of Aristarchos.

στομαλίμνῃ probably means a marshy estuary, not of the Skamandros, but of some adjacent stream such as is now formed by the Dümbrek-su, which it has been proposed by Schliemann to identify with the Simoeis.

6. φῶς, salvation, as Θ 282, Α 797, Π 95. For this Akamas see B 844.

9. φάλον, see on Γ 362.

14. βιότοιο, cf. E 544.

15. φιλέεσκεν, used to entertain]; cf. Γ 207, and χρῆζειν παρεῶτα φιλεῖν, ο 74.

17. πρόσθεν ὑπαντιάσας, standing before him to meet his enemy.

19. ὑφ' ἡνίλοχος is the reading of all the best MSS., cf. λαοὶ δ' ἐπ' ὀλίγους ἦσαν, Σ 519. But the vulg. ὑφηνίλοχος, a word not found elsewhere, is sufficiently defended by the analogy of ὑποδμῶς, δ 386, ὑποδρηστήρ ο 330; and it avoids the awkwardness of the detached ὑπό. γαῖαν ἐδύτην, the realm of the dead being under ground. Cf. 411, ω 106. Schol. B explains it ὅτι γῆρ ταφέντες ἐνεδύσαντο, which is obviously inappropriate, as there is no burying in question at all.

24. σκότιον, by a secret amour = παρθέσιος, II 180. Cf. Aen. ix. 546, furtim. μίγῃ sc. Bukolion.

24. ναῖε δέ, so MSS. with Ar.: Zenod. δὲ ναῖε, acc. to Ariston., who accuses him of making a false quantity. On N 172 the same difference is noted, and the same accusation made, but the text of the Schol. gives νάε. Now νάω from root nas to dwell (Curt. no. 432) would be just as possible by the side of ναῖω, as is νάω to flow (from root nu, Curt. no. 443) by the side of ναῖω: 222 in the same sense. It is therefore possible that Zenodotos may have found and discussed an old reading δε νάε, but proposed to write δε νάε on the analogy of ἐμπαιος, οἶος (""), etc.; and that the Scholiasts have jumbled up his remarks into the form in which we have them.

35. For this Πήδασος in the Troad cf. φ 87, τ 92. Strabo calls it a city of the Leleges opposite Lesbos, and another legend identifies it with Adramyttium. A town of the same name in Messene is mentioned in I 152, and there was a Πήδασα near Halikarnassos.

38. ἀτυζόμενῳ πεδίῳ as Z 7.

39. βλαφθέντε, entangled, cf. H 271. ἀγκύλον, like καμπύλον E 231, is only once used of the chariot. It doubtless indicates the curved form of the front.

40. ἐν πρώτῳ ῥυμῷ probably means the end of the pole where the yoke was fastened, also called ἄκρος, E 729; cf. II 371, Ω 272.

45. γούνων with λαβὼν, as A 407.

46-50 = A 131-5, and cf. K 378-381.

46. ζῶγρει, take me alive. In E 698 the meaning is quite different. The last syllable remains long because of the pause at the end of the first foot.

47. ἐν πατρὸς sc. δώματι, Z 378, Ω 309, 482, etc.

48. πολὺκμητος, implements wrought with much labour. The working of iron was of course a difficult matter in early days, especially as by primitive methods of smelting it would be obtained not in the pure malleable condition, but combined with a certain amount of carbon, making it more like steel or cast-iron, hard and brittle.

51. ἔπειθε, endeavoured to persuade (observe the different sense of the aor. in 61). So best MSS.: vulg. δρῖνε, which is less appropriate; for, as La R. points out, the appeal is not to Menelaos' emotions, but to his reason. The line recurs several times, always with δρῖνε (B 142, Γ 395, Δ 208, Α 804, N 468, ρ 150).

53. καταξέμεν is of course aor. not fut.; see Γ 105.

54. ἀντίος, so Ar.: Zen. ἀντίων. In other passages Ar. seems to have preferred the adverbial, Zen. the adjectival form. There is little or no ground of choice (La R., Textkr. p. 193).

57. The note of interrogation after Τρώων is not in the vulg., but it is shewn to be Aristarchean by the remark of Herodian that the ἦ is διαπορητικός, interrogative. On the whole it is more Homeric to have two consecutive questions in a case like this than a question followed by an indignant exclamation: Ξ 265, O 245, π 424, ρ 376 (Hentze). ἄριστα is not an adv. but subject to πεποίηται: for the impersonal ποιεῖται τινι κακῶς is not Homeric.

59. φέροι opt. by attraction, as usual in sentences expressing a wish. The use of κοῦρος to signify “babe” is quite unique; it elsewhere connotes rather a man in the prime of life. Död. thinks it means “of noble blood,” but this weakens the sentiment quite intolerably. If, as we should suppose, it means “male child,” we must regard the opt. as expressing a hope, not a command; unless Agamemnon’s fury makes him quite unreasoning.

61. παρέπεισεν, so MSS.: La R. needlessly reads ἐτρεψεν supported by the mention of it as a variant in two MSS.

(AO). παραπείθω is the usual word, H 120, N 788, etc. ἀδελφειοῦ, for ἀδελφείο, see E 21.

62. αἷσιμα: there are very few cases in the poems of a moral judgment of the poet upon the acts of his characters. Against the present one we may set the κακὰ φρεσὶ μῆσατο ἔργα of the human sacrifice in Ψ 176.

68. ἐπιβαλλόμενος, “throwing himself upon” the spoil, half in a physical, half in a metaphorical sense. For the gen. Ameis compares χ 310, Ὀδυσῆος ἐπεσσύμενος. The word occurs in later Greek, e.g. Aristot. Pol. 1, 9, 16, τοῦ εὖ ἢ ἔπιδε, with the purely mental sense, “desire eagerly”; like ἐπέσονται A 173.

71. συλήσετε, a potential fut., with double acc. like all similar verbs. Zenod. read Τρώων ἄμ πεδῖον συλήσομεν ἔντα νεκρῶν: on what authority of course we cannot say.

73-4 = P 319-320. ὑπό, see Γ 61. Schol. B for once shews a touch of humour: “λίαν οἶδε τὸ τῆς εἰμαρμένης ὁ ποιητής.”

76. οἰωνοπόλων ὄχ' ἄριστος (v. A 69) so MSS. : but the Schol. A (Didymus) says that Ammonius alleged as the reading of Aristarchos μάντις τ' οἰωνοπόλος τε, and adds ἔργον δὲ τὸ σαφὲς εἰπεῖν· διὸ διχῶς (i.e. this is to be recorded as a variant of Aristarchos).

79. ἰθύν, cf. δ 434, οἷσι μάλιστα πεποῖ-θεα πᾶσαν ἐπ' ἰθύν, for every enterprise, lit. "going."

82. πασέειν implies tumultuous rout ; compare the frequent but sometimes ambiguous phrase ἐν νηυσὶ πεσέεσθαι, where the confused rush to the ships seems to be sometimes that of the victors, sometimes of the vanquished : B 175 (q.v.), I 235, Δ 311, M 107, P 639. χερσὶ γυναικῶν, ironical of course.

83. ἐπεί κε with aor. subj. = fu. exactus, as Δ 191, Ψ 10, σ 150.

86. ἀτὰρ σέ, for the order cf. 429, π 130.

88. νηόν, sc. to the temple. Cf. δοιοι κεκλήτατο βουλῇν, K 195.

90. ὃς all MSS. and Herodian : most edd. write δ on account of the F of φοι, and there can be little doubt that this is right. Nearly all the other cases of οι for φοι can be set right by slight alteration, but see note on E 338. The mention of the peplos carries our thoughts to the Panathenaic festival at Athens. But the idea of propitiating divinities by clothing their images with costly robes is not only one of the most natural and universal of primitive cults, but survives in full force to the present day in many parts even of Western Europe. It was particularly appropriate to the goddess who presided over feminine handiwork, including weaving, cf. E 735. It is therefore quite futile to seek for Athenian inspiration in the present passage. Compare Pausan. iii. 16, 2, ὕφαινουσι δὲ κατὰ ἔτος αἱ γυναῖκες τῷ Ἀπόλλωνι χιτῶνα τῷ ἐν Ἀμύκλαις, and v. 16, 2, διὰ πέμπτου δὲ ὕφαινουσιν ἔτους τῇ Ἡρᾷ πέπλον αἱ ἐκκαίδεκα γυναῖκες (in Olympia).

The appeal to Athene is made not because she is the special guardian of Troy, but because she is recognized as the protector and strength of Diomedes ; only through her can his valour be abated. The title of ἑρυσίπτολις (305) is general. In virtue of her warlike nature she is the guardian of citadels, where her temple stands.

92. The words ἐπὶ γούνασι seem to imply a seated image ; that is, a rude wooden ξάνον such as survived in many Greek temples to historic times. Later legend connected such an image, the Palladium, with the fate of Troy. In view of the objection that such Palladia were always standing, not sitting, figures, Schol. B after explaining ἐπὶ as = παρά, which is obviously wrong, quotes the authority of Strabo — who says that ancient sitting images of Athens were found in Phokaia, Massalia, Rome, Chios, and several other places. Mr. Ramsay has found such archaic sitting figures in Phrygia (J. H. S. iii. 43). θεῖναι: the only instance in H. of the infin. for imper. in the 3d person with its subject in the nom. (ἦ, 87): as they are so distant from one another, it may be questioned if we ought not to assume an anacoluthon; i.e. that when the poet began with ἦ he was thinking of continuing with θέτω. See note on Γ 285.

94. ἦνις according to the old expl. from ἔνος (ἐνιαυτός), "one year old." It is now referred by Göbel, followed by Ameis, to a root an "to shine," cf. ἡρόψ, but the existence of such a root is doubtful. Düntzer derives from ανω, as if = perfect, τέλειος. The word occurs only in this connexion (cf. γ 382), so that the question cannot be solved. ἡκέστας, not having felt the good. The ἦ must represent an original ā-lengthened as in ἀθάνατος, ἡγάθεος (see A 252), etc., by the ictus. The word occurs only here.

96. For αἶ κεν Ar. read ὧς κεν, just as in τ 83 he read ἦν πως for μή πως, where it was preceded by another μή πως. As Hentze on τ 83 points out, he seems to have done this in both cases in order to bring the second clause into logical subordination, sacrificing the vigorous but less formal parataxis given by the repetition of the particles.

101. For οὐδέ τίς οἱ and ἰσοφαρίζειν most edd. now read οὐ τίς οἱ and ἀντιφέρειν after Bentley on account of the double neglect of the digamma. It must however be confessed that the former change at all events is not entirely satisfactory.

104. For δοῦρα we should have expected δοῦρε, which Bekker gives against all MSS.: cf. A 43. Two is the regular number for the Homeric warrior: it is strange that a schol. of Porphyrios on Γ 379 quotes this very line as evidence of the fact.

109. ὧς ἐλέλιχθεν ἀπὸ τοῦ οὕτως ἐλέλιχθεν, Nikanor. Cf. 166 ὁὖν ἀκουσεν, and note on Δ 157. There is no reason for taking ὧς in a temporal or causal sense. ἐλέλιχθεν and ἐλελίχθησαν above should, as elsewhere, be ἐφέλ: see on A 530.

112. Zenod. read this line ἀνέρες ἔστε θεοὶ καὶ ἀμύνετον ἀσπεύω βῆν. It certainly seems more probable that this should ὄφρ' ἂν ἐγὼ βῆω προτὶ Ἴλιον ἥδ' ἐ γέρουσιν

Γλαῦκος δ' Ἰππολόχοιο πάϊς καὶ Τυδέος υἱὸς
ἐς μέσον ἀμφοτέρων συνίτην μεμαῶτε μάχεσθαι. 120

“ τίς δὲ σύ ἐσσι, φέριστε, καταθηγητῶν ἀνθρώπων ;

οὐδὲ γὰρ οὐδὲ Δρύαντος υἱὸς κρατερὸς Λυκόοργος 130

ὃς ποτε μαινομένοιο Διωνύσοιο τιθήνας have been altered into the regular formula than vice versa. Of course for ἀμύνετον we must read ἀμύνετε. This will have been changed, in order to avoid the apparent hiatus, by those who believed that the dual could be used for the plural. For θεός used in this way cf. II 422.

114. The word βουλευτής does not recur in Homer, but the βουλή was an integral part of the heroic polity. The members of it are usually called γέροντες (v. on B 58, Δ 259), and in the case of the Trojans δημογέροντες, Γ 149, cf. X 119. They are however not mentioned in the sequel.

117. For the construction of the Homeric shield see J. H. S. iv. 268. The hides of which the body was formed were turned up at the outer edge of the shield to form a rim, and so prevent any friction against the edge of the metal facing. This rim is the ἀντυξ. Hector walks with his shield hanging—probably at his back—by the τελαμών. πυμάτη does not imply, as some have thought, that there was more than one ἀντυξ, any more than πρῶτος ἥμης (40) implies more than one pole.

120. ἀμφοτέρων, the two armies. But

A gives ἀμφοτέρω, and all the Alexandrian critics seem to have read ἰόντε in the next line.

124. The omission of the object is rather awkward; hence van Herwerden and Nauck insert σ' after μάχῃ.

130. The legend said that the contest arose when Dionysos was bringing to Europe the orgiastic mysteries of Phrygia. Lykurgos was king of the Edones, see Soph. Ant. 955. Pausanias (vii. 18, 3) mentions a similar legend as current at Patrae (Διόνυσον ἐνταῦθα ἐπιβουλευθέντα ὑπὸ Τυτάρων ἐς παντοῖον ἀφικέσθαι κίνδυνον). Both are evidently reminiscences of opposition offered to the introduction of a new and foreign worship. For οὐδὲ γὰρ οὐδὲ cf. B 708, E 22. MSS. are divided between the forms Λυκόοργος and -εργος: the latter seems more correct, but the balance of evidence is in favour of the former. So in the oracle in Herod. i. 65.

131. θῆν = δηναῖς, B 407: for the use of εἰμι with adverbs v. A 416.

132. τιθήνας: this title recalls the maenads of later Dionysos-worship. It appears to have had a peculiar mystic significance, from the words of Soph. O.

σεῦε κατ' ἡγάθεον Νυσήιον· αἱ δ' ἅμα πᾶσαι θύσθλα χαμαὶ κατέχευαν, ὑπ' ἀνδροφόνοιο Λυκούργου οὐδ' ἂν ἐγὼ μακάρεσσι θεοῖς ἐθέλοιμι μάχεσθαι.

 εἰ δέ τίς ἐσσι βροτῶν, οἳ ἀρούρης καρπὸν ἔδουσιν, ἄσπον ἴθ', ὥς κεν θᾶσπον ὀλέθρου πείραθ' ἵκηαι."
 τὸν δ' αὖθ' Ἱππολόχοιο προσηύδα φαιδριμος υἱός·
 "Τυδεῖδῃ μεγάλυμε, τί ἦ γενηὴν ἐρεεῖνεις ; 145
 οἷη περ φύλλων γενεή, τοίῃ δὲ καὶ ἀνδρῶν.
 φύλλα τὰ μὲν τ' ἄνεμος χαμάδις χέει, ἄλλα δέ θ' ὕλη τηλεθώσασα φύει, ξαρος δ' ἐπυγίγνεται ὥρη· ὡς ἀνδρῶν γενεή ἢ μὲν φύει, ἢ δ' ἀπολήγει.

C. 1050, ποτρίαι σεμνὰ τιθηνόυνται τέλη θνατοῖσιν. The maenads typified the nymphs who nursed Dionysos at his birth: Hymn. Hom. xxvi. The word μαινάς occurs once in H., in a simile—X 460. Dionysos is mentioned again in the Iliad in Ζ 325, and in the Od. λ 325, cf. ω 74; all probably passages of later origin. It is therefore not improbable that 130-141 are an interpolation; to this conclusion the virtual repetition of 129 in 141 strongly points.

133. Νυσήιον: the sacred mountain of Nysa was an integral part of the Dionysos legend, and was no doubt brought into etymological connexion with the name of the god. It can hardly have been a real mountain, as the usual tradition placed it in India, while here it is in Thrace, where the name was given to a district in Helikon. Schol. A moreover mentions several other sites, including an island in the Nile (as Hymn. Hom. xxxiv. 9), so that Nysa evidently went wherever the cultus was localised. θύσθλα is another word whose exact meaning can hardly be ascertained. It would naturally mean the thyrsi, but the Scholia explains it of various other objects of mystic significance: οἱ μὲν τοὺς κλάδους, οἱ δὲ ἀμπέλους, οἱ δὲ τοὺς θύρσους, τοῦτέστι τὰς βακχικὰς δράκας, ἃ ἐσσι Διονυσιακὰ μυστήρια· ἐνίοι δὲ πάντα κοινῶς τὰ πρὸς τὴν τελετὴν. (This sense of δράξ is not mentioned by L. and S.) The same may be said of βουπλήγῃ, which does not again occur in Homer, and is explained either as "ox-goad," or "pole-axe," in which sense later writers use it. It may possibly have some mystical connexion with ταῦρος as a name of Dionysos.

136. The line is evidently modelled on Σ 398. For φοβηθεὶς above Zenod. read χολωθείς, which is obviously less appropriate.

138. θεοὶ ρεῖα ζῶοντες, an Odysean phrase; δ 805, ε 122. τυφλός is a word of later Greek: ἀλαός is the Homeric word.

143. πείρατα, a doubtful expression: either "the uttermost bounds," like τέλος θανάτου: or "the bonds," lit. ropes (cf. μ 51, 162). See on H 402.

146. τοίῃ δέ, with δέ in apodosis, is the reading of Ar. and the best MSS.

148. δέ here = when. For ὥρη A gives ὥρη, which was the reading of Aristophanes. The subject will of course then be φύλλα, "they succeed in spring-time." Aristoph. also read τηλεθώσασα.

149. φύει seems to be intrans., though there is no other instance of such a use in Homer, and it appears specially harsh after the transitive in the preceding line. Moschos and Theokritos both use φύονται as intrans., perhaps in imitation of this passage. It is of course possible to translate "brings forth children," but εἰ δ' ἐθέλεις, καὶ ταῦτα δαήμεναι, ὄφρ' ἐν εἰδῆς 150 ἡμετέρεην γενεήν· πολλοὶ δέ μιν ἄνδρες ἴσασιν· ἔστι πόλις Ἐφύρη μυχῶ Ἀργεος ἵπποβότοιο, ἔνθα δὲ Σίσυφος ἔσκειν, δ' κέρδιστος γένετ' ἀνδρῶν, Σίσυφος Αἰολίδης· ὁ δ' ἄρα Γλαῦκον τέκεθ' υἱόν, αὐτὰρ Γλαῦκος ἔτικτεν ἀμύμονα Βελλεροφόντην. 155

 τῷ δὲ θεοὶ κάλλος τε καὶ ἡνορέην ἐρατεινὴν τῷ δὲ γυνὴ Προίτου ἐπεμήνατο, δι' Ἀντεια, 160 κρυπταδίῃ φιλότῃ μιγήμεναι· ἀλλὰ τὸν οὐ τι πεῖθ' ἀγαθὰ φρονέοντα, δαΐφρονα Βελλεροφόντην.

this to a certain extent destroys the symmetry of the comparison. In any case the idea is the same: "one generation is in full vigour while another is dying out." The reading of Alexio, ἡμὲν . . . ἦδ', hardly deserves consideration.

150. δαήμεναι, infin. for imper., with the punctuation of the text, which is that of Nikanor. It is perhaps better to leave out the comma after ἐθέλεις, and paraphrase "but suppose you wish to learn this also." The assumption of an omitted apodosis is unnecessary. For a similar ambiguity cf. Φ 487, ο 78.

151. This line looks as though it were merely added to supply an object to εἰδῆς. The neglect of the F of ἴσασιν is suspicious, and Nauck is probably right in bracketing it.

152. Ar. pointed out that Homer uses the old name Ἐφύρη in the mouth of the hero, though in his own person he says Κόρυθος (B 570, N 664). μυχῶ Ἀργεος, i.e. in the corner of the Peloponnese. So γ 263. For this sense of Ἀργος v. B 287, Γ 75, etc.

153. κέρδιστος, craftiest, as ν 291, κερδαλέος.

155. It will be observed that the act. and mid. of τίκτω are applied indifferently to the father; so also of the mother, e.g. B 728 and 742.

157. According to the legend given by the Schol., Bellerophon, who was originally called Ἰππώνοος, got his name from slaying one Βέλλερος, a prince in Corinth. Being exiled for blood-guiltiness he came to Argos (or Tiryns) to seek purification from King Proitos. But this of course is not Homeric, the idea of purification for blood being altogether later.

158-9. These lines appear to anticipate the sequel, the "driving from the land" meaning the errand to Lykia. The object of ἐδάμασσε may be either Ἀργεῖος or Βελλεροφόντην, i.e. either "Zeus had made P. king of Argos," or "Zeus had brought Bellerophon under the power of P." by making him an exile (e.g. on account of homicide) from his own country. The latter alternative gives the more vigorous sense, and the variant μιν for οἱ, which is found in several MSS., thus, though only a gloss, appears to be a correct one. Perhaps the old reading was ἐ δάμασσε (or ἦ ἐδάμασσε). Ἀργείων is gen. after δήμου: for φέρτερος in this phrase is always used absolutely, and φέρτερος Ἀργείων in the sense of "prince over the Argives" would be quite un-Homeric: it means that Proitos was in a position of power over Bellerophon.

160. Ἀντεια, called Σθενέβουα in the later legend. δια is used also of Klytāimnestra, in a purely formal sense implying no moral approval, γ 266: cf. Γ 352.

162. ἀγαθὰ here only in Homer approaches our word "good" in the moral sense. Even here the idea seems to be "being of an excellently wise disposition," φρεσὶ γὰρ κέκρητ' ἀγαθῆσι: for ἀγαθός in Homer regularly implies "that which is good of its kind"; the idea of an absolute standard of moral virtue, which is connoted by our phrases, "a good man," "a good deed," and the like, is later than Homer.

- ἡ δὲ ψευσαμένη Προΐτον βασιλῆα προσηύδα·

 ἀλλ’ ὅτε δὴ δεκάτῃ ἐφάνη ῥοδοδάκτυλος Ἥώς, 175

164. τεθναίης ἡ, i.e. I pray that you may die if you do not slay. The alternative explanation, "if you do not kill him, he will kill you," is obviously absurd.

165. μ’, i.e. μοι, as σ’ = σοι, A 170. Those who are sufficiently curious will find a very amusing instance of scholiastic lucubration on this passage by Schol. B (ed. Dind. iii. p. 289).

166. οἶον ἄκουσεν shews traces of the primitive "exclamative" use of οἶος, "what a thing he heard!" When incorporated into the sentence hypotactically, this becomes = ὅτι τοῖον.

167. ἀλλέεινε with infin.; cf. N 356, and for the second half of the line infra 417. β’ here, as in 158 above, Δ 524, etc., probably represents an original F = ε’.

168. It seems impossible to deny that these famous lines imply a knowledge of the art of writing in Homeric times. It is however to be remarked (1) that the knowledge is attributed to a family with Eastern (Lykian) affinities; (2) the word θυμοφθόρα seems to indicate the frame of mind with which savages regard writing: as a magical process, that is, which is capable of working mysterious effects upon the bearer; in β 329 it is used of magic potions, φάρμακα θυμοφθόρα, which come from Ephyre, Bellerophon's home. Thus the knowledge of writing is precisely what we should expect at the earliest stage; it is only a knowledge of its existence as a means of communication among certain families from Asia Minor. Prof. Sayce appears to have proved the existence of a syllabary in Asia Minor quite independent of the Phœnician alphabet. The reference may possibly be to a form of this, or to some yet ruder but effective means of communication, such as we find in the Australian message-stick or the picture-writing of the North Americans. In any case it is now known that the art of writing was introduced into Greece far earlier than Wolf supposed; it has been traced back to a period which probably coincides with the composition of the later parts at least of the Homeric poems. It is hardly necessary to mention that γράφειν and its derivatives (γραπτός, ἐπιγράφειν, etc.) always mean "scratch" in Homer. Cf. H 187.

169. πτυκτῷ, probably a double wooden tablet with the writing inside, and sealed up.

170. φ’ πενθερῷ, sc. the father of Anteia, called Iobates by the later legend. Perhaps he is identical with Amisodarus, ὅς βα Χίμαιραν θρέψεν ἀμειμακτέη II 328, though the anxiety to have the Chimaira killed is hardly consistent with the word θρέψεν.

174. ἐννήμαρ, the regular "round" number in Homer, followed by δεκάτῃ as in A 53, Ω 610, η 253. The entertainment of a guest before enquiring his name was an essential condition of hospitality in days when it was an even chance that a man might be an enemy, so that the enquiry itself would be a mark of suspicion. So at the court of Alkinoos Odysseus is not formally asked his name till the second day of his sojourn (θ 550), and even simpler questions are not put to him on the first day till he has been entertained (η 238).

καὶ τότε μιν ἐρέεινε καὶ ἤττε σῆμα ἰδέσθαι,

 ἀλλ' ὅτε δὴ γήγνωσκε θεοῦ γόνον ἣν ἔοντα,

176. σῆμα is slightly different from the σήματα of 168, and signifies the caesura hospitalis as a whole, apart from the marks which determined its significance. φέροντο: the use of the middle is unusual, but clearly means "brought for his own behoof." To take it as a pass. would be entirely un-Homeric.

179. ἀμαιμακέτος is one of the many obscure epithets of Homer: cf. II 328. It is used again of the mast of a ship in a storm, § 311. The old interpretation was ἄμαχος. It is better referred to μαίμωσσω (from μακ, a secondary form of μα-) in the sense "furious," "raging."

180. θεῖον γένος, according to the legend in Hesiod the offspring of Typhon and Echidna.

181. This line is remarkable as being the only case where Homer formally recognizes the mixed monsters which play such a prominent part in later Greek mythology. Even here he makes no mention of the winged horse Pegasus, who is an integral portion of the legend in Pindar (Ol. xiii.), unless a reference to him be found in θεῶν τεράεσσι, which may mean anything (cf. Δ 398). It is therefore highly probable that 181-2 are an interpolation from Hesiod (Theog. 323-4).

184. Σολλύμοισι, cf. ε 283. Herod., i. 173, identifies them with the Milyai, the original inhabitants of Lykia: according to Strabo (i. 12, 10) and Pliny (H. N. v. 27) this would seem to have been the general name for the Semitic inhabitants of Southern Asia Minor, the Milyai, Kabali, and Pisidians being subordinate divisions. It is a natural inference from the passage in the Odyssey that they had been driven to the mountains by the invading Lykians (who, acc. to Herod., came from Crete), and were in a state of chronic feud with them.

186. For the Amazons see Γ 189.

187-190. These lines have rather the appearance of an interpolation imitated from Δ 392 sqq., a passage which may have suggested itself at this point to some rhapsode's mind owing to the recurrence there of the phrase θεῶν τεράεσσι πιθήσας in 183. πυκινὸν δόλον looks like a reminiscence of πυκινὸν λόχον in Δ, where the adjective is used in a different sense. Indeed Δ actually reads λόχον here (corrected in margin). The object of Iobates was to avoid himself killing Bellerophon, his guest.

191. γήγνωσκε, began to perceive. θεοῦ γόνον, because according to the legend (which Pindar follows, Ol. xiii. 69) he was in reality the son of Poseidon.

192. δίδου, offered: the imperf. is somewhat more picturesque than the following δῶκε, as it brings before us in connexion with γήγνωσκε above the gradual opening of the king's eyes, δῶκε δέ οἱ τιμῆς βασιλῆϊδος ἥμισυ πάσης·

 καὶ μὲν οἱ Λύκιοι τέμενος τάμον ἔξοχον ἄλλων, 195 καλὸν φυταλιῆς καὶ ἀρούρης, ὅφρα νέμοιτο.

 Ἴσανδρόν τε καὶ Ἴππόλοχον καὶ Λαοδάμειαν·

 200 ἡ δ' ἔτεκε ἄντιθεον Σαρπηδόνα χαλκοκορυστήν.
 ἀλλ' ὅτε δὴ καὶ κείνος ἀπήχθετο πᾶσι θεοῖσιν,

 205 τὴν δὲ χολωσαμένη χρυσήνιος Ἄρτεμις ἔκτα.
 Ἴππόλοχος δ' ἔμ' ἔτικτε, καὶ ἐκ τοῦ φημὶ γενέσθαι·

whereas δῶκε merely states a fact. With 193 cf. I 616.

194. τέμενος, a grant of public land, apparently in gratitude for his services against the Solymoi. Cf. I 578, T 184.

195. ὅφρα νέμοιτο, so most MSS.; but A and others have πυροφόροιο as M 314, where the line recurs.

199. Arist. remarked that the Homeric genealogy of Sarpedon differs from that afterwards current (e.g. Herod. i. 173), according to which Minos and Sarpedon were sons of Europa.

200-2. These lines interrupt the narration, and Köchly considers them interpolated, though there is no obvious reason why they should have been inserted here. καὶ seems to indicate that they belong to another context, for it is not in relation with anything else. Mr. Monro takes it to be "even he, whom they had formerly loved and protected." Ameis's explanation, "Bellerophon like Lykurgos," (140) is too far-fetched, and Porphyrios' "like his children" is open to the obvious and fatal objection that the anger of the gods against his children does not precede but follows. Again, as the passage stands, τὴν δὲ in 205 is too far separated from its antecedent in 198. If 200-202 followed 205 there would be no further difficulty.

201. Ἀλῆιον, cf. οἱ στρατηγοὶ . . . ἀπικοντο τῆς Κιλικίης ἐς τὸ Ἀλῆιον πεδίον, Herod. vi. 95. The poet evidently means to hint an etymology in the word ἀλᾶτο. The use of the article is not like Homer: Bentley conj. τόν.

202. δν θυμὸν κατέδων, cf. ι 75 θυμὸν

ἔδοντες, and Ω 129 σὴν ἔδει κεράδιον, where Schol. A says, Πυθαγόρας παραινέει καρδίαν μὴ ἐσθλεῖν. There was evidently some legend of the madness of Bellerophon, but we know nothing of it from other sources, cf. Pind. Ol. xiii. 130, διασιγάσσομαι δ' αὐτῷ μύρον. Madness has always been considered a direct infliction of heaven: so in ι 411, when the Kyklopes think that Polyphemos is mad, they say νοῦσον γ' οὐ πως ἔστι Διὸς μεγάλου ἀλέσθαι. πάτον ἀνθρώπων, cf. θεῶν ἀπέεικε κελεύθου, Γ 406.

205. χρυσήνιος is used only here of Artemis, θ 285 of Ares (in Soph. O. C. 694 of Aphrodite, and of Hades in Pindar, according to Pausanias, ix. 23, 4). Göbel (Lexil. ii. 32) objects to the derivation from ἥνι on the ground that neither Artemis nor Ares (exc. E 356) is ever represented by Homer as driving a chariot. He therefore refers the word to root aw, to shine, and explains it as "gold-gleaming"; and in this he is followed by Ameis-Hentze. But the existence of root aw in this sense is very doubtful (cf. ἥνι, Z 94); it is better to abide by the old interpretation, and admit that here, as in so many divine epithets, the exact significance is doubtful. κλυτόπωλος as applied to Hades is a very similar case: see E 654. For Artemis as the bringer of sudden death to women cf. 428, T 59, λ 172, 197, etc. The Lykian system of descent was through the mother (Herod. i. 173); hence Sarpedon as son of the daughter inherits the kingdom, not Glaucos.

206. δ' ἔμ', so Bekk. and La R. :

πέμπε δέ μ' ἐς Τροίην, καί μοι μάλα πόλλ' ἐπέτελλεν

MSS. δέ μ', which is obviously wrong, as the orthotone form must be used when an opposition between different persons is indicated, as here.

208. This famous line recurs in A 784.

211. The lineage of Glaucos was no doubt an important tenet among the Asiatic Ionians, some of whom, according to Herod. i. 147, had taken his descendants to be their kings.

213. For the ἐν of all MSS. Bekk. conj. ἐν, according to the regular Homeric use, A 378, etc.; La R. compares Ψ 876 for this use of ἐν, but that passage is undoubtedly spurious.

216. The legend was that Oineus brought up his grandson Diomedes after the early death of Tydeus before Thebes (v. A 378, 409). He is mentioned also B 641, and in connexion with the story of Meleager I 535.

219. On staining with purple (crimson) cf. A 141. The material of the belt is of course leather.

220. ἀμφικύπελλον, A 584.

221. μιν, neut., cf. κ 212 (p 268). The line of course means "I still preserve it as an heirloom."

222. Τυδέα: this use of the acc. with μέμνημαι is very unusual in H.: cf. I 527 (τόδε ἔργον), ω 122 (τάδε πάντα), and perhaps Ψ 361 (Ar. δρόμους, MSS. δρόμου), where the analogy is far from complete. Heyne suggests that there may be a pause after Τυδέα, "as for T." Diomedes means to explain how the friendship of Bellerophon with Oineus can be called πατρώϊος.

225. τῶν, sc. of the Lykians, a rather obscure relation. Perhaps the original reading was ὅν, "thine," which Ar. would not allow to be used of any person but the third (A 393).

226. The MSS. are equally divided between ἔγχεα and ἔγχεσι: A has the former in the text, with the latter written above it. It seems that Zenod. read ἔγχεσι δ' ἀλλήλους, Ar. ἔγχεσι δ' ἀλλήλων, explaining ἀλεώμεθα by φειδώμεθα to account for its governing a genitive. But there is no trace of such a construction in H., though the verb is common enough; we are therefore bound to acquiesce in the reading of the text. δι' ὀμίλου, in the throng as well as on an occasion like the present ἐν προμάχαις.

κτείνειν, ὃν κε θεός γε πόρῃ καὶ ποσσὶ κυχίῳ, πολλοὶ δ' αὖ σοι Ἀχαιοὶ ἐναιρέμεν, ὃν κε δύνῃαι. 230
τεύχεα δ' ἀλλήλοισ ἐπαμείβομεν, ὅφρα καὶ οἶδε

ὥς ἄρα φωνήσαντε καθ' ἵππων αἰξάντε

"Ἐκτωρ δ' ὥς Σκaiάς τε πύλας καὶ φηγὸν ἵκανε, καὶ πόσιος· ὁ δ' ἔπειτα θεοῖς εὐχέσθαι ἀνώγειν 240

πάσας ἐξέλης· πολλῇσι δὲ κῆδὲ ἐφῆπτο.

ἀλλ' ὅτε δὴ Πριάμοιο δόμον περικαλλέ' ἵκανε,

228. θεός γε, so best MSS. : Bekker reads τε from inferior sources. But the two ideas are not to be divided : the thought really is, "whom god permits me to catch." The γε emphasizes the touch of modesty, which is consistent with 129.

233. Cf. Φ 286, B 341, for the clasping of hands in token of a pledge.

236. For prices calculated in oxen, as a mere measure of value, cf. α 431, B 449, Ψ 705.

This almost burlesque ending to one of the most delightful episodes in Homer has greatly exercised critics. Nothing else in the Iliad or Odyssey can be compared with it, unless it be the evident satisfaction with which κερδοσύνη is regarded (e.g. ν 291 sqq.). On the other hand generosity between ξεῖνοι is repeatedly spoken of in terms which shew that the poet fully entered into the chivalrous liberality of the heroic age. There is no ground whatever for rejecting these three lines as some have wished to do. They were Homeric in the eyes of Plato (Symp. 219 A) and Aristotle (Eth. N. v. 9, 7), nor have we any reason for believing that before that time it was possible to treat the Homeric poems with obvious levity. We seem therefore to have an outbreak of conscious and deliberate humour, which is only so far isolated that it appears among men and not, as elsewhere, among the gods.

237. For the oak-tree at the Skaian gate cf. I 354, Λ 170, H 22, Φ 549.

The two former passages do not exhibit the variant πύργον for φεγγόν, which is given here by A and other MSS. : it is therefore best to acquiesce in the text.

239. εἰρόμεναι παῖδας, sc. "about their sons," the so-called schemata Homericum; so K 416, Ω 390.

241. For κῆδὲ ἐφῆπτο see B 15. ἐξέλης does not seem very appropriate; hence the old variant, πᾶσι μὲν for πάσας, mentioned by Aristonikos. Düntzer on this ground rejects the line. The athetesis might, with Paley, be extended to 240; the couplet was possibly added by a rhapsode who considered that the husbands ought to be named among the objects of anxiety.

242-250. This passage is one of the loci classici on the heroic house : a subject on which reference may be made to Prof. Gardner's paper in J. H. S. iii. 264-282, and to the elaborate and on the whole satisfactory discussion in Buchholz, Hom. Realien, ii. pt. 2, pp. 86-137 : the latter is chiefly founded on the dissertation of Protodikos, de aedibus Homeri, Leipz. 1877. These are now supplemented, and in some important points superseded, by the evidence of Dr. Schliemann's last excavations, published in his Tiryns (1886). For the αἶθουσαι see note on I 472. The position of the sixty-two θάλαμοι is not easy to explain. Of the twelve which belonged to the married daughters, as they are described as ἐνδοθὲν αὐλῆς, it seems to be reasonable to suppose that they were additions to ξεστῆς αἰθούσῃσι τετυγμένον, αὐτὰρ ἐν αὐτῷ πεντήκοντ' ἔνεσαν θάλαμοι ξεστοῖο λίθοιο, πλησίον ἀλλήλων δεδμημένοι· ἔνθα δὲ παῖδες 245 κοιμῶντο Πριάμοιο παρὰ μνηστῆς ἀλόχοισιν· κουράων δ' ἐτέρωθεν ἐναντίοι ἐνδοθεν αὐλῆς δώδεκ' ἔσαν τέγεοι θάλαμοι ξεστοῖο λίθοιο, πλησίον ἀλλήλων δεδμημένοι· ἔνθα δὲ γαμβροὶ κοιμῶντο Πριάμοιο παρ' αἰδοῖης ἀλόχοισιν. 250 ἔνθα οἱ ἠπιόδωρος ἐναντίῃ ἤλυθε μήτηρ Λαοδίκην ἐσάγουσα, θυγατρῶν εἶδος ἀρίστην·

the house, built along one wall of the courtyard, and thus allowing for the expansion of the family. One such appears to have been found at Tiryns in what Dr. Schliemann calls "the court of the women's apartments," though it is more probably a separate house. Dr. Dörpfeld writes (Tiryns, p. 239): "A room was built in, which was entered from the east colonnade. Although its walls are of the same rubble masonry as the walls of the palace, and its floor is covered with a well-smoothed lime concrete, yet this room must be a later addition, because it disfigures the court, and shuts up part of the east colonnade. But it must also have been built before the destruction of the citadel." With regard to the fifty chambers of the sons the case is not quite so clear; ἐν αὐτῷ seems to imply that they were a part of the original buildings of the house, probably in the πρόδομος (like the θάλαμος of Phoenix, I 472), and therefore "over against" those in the αὐλή. τέγεος, which does not recur in Greek, is explained by the Scholiasts as ὑπερφῶς, as though "built on the roof." But this is hardly likely in the case of chambers ἐνδοθεν αὐλῆς, where there was no roof. More probably it means "provided with roofs" to sleep upon, according to the custom of eastern countries; this would imply that they were on a scale of proper magnificence. This is also indicated by the number fifty, which no doubt would distinguish the scale of heroic royalty from that which was possible for οἱοὶ νῦν βροτοὶ εἰσιν.

It has been suggested that the Trojans were in the stage of domestic economy which is known as the "common house" system, where a "joint undivided family" is kept together as a single unit, at least so long as a common ancestor is alive. Such a family, however, regularly includes only the sons and unmarried daughters; so that we can see a reason why the sons here are in the house, while the married daughters, perhaps by a special favour, are only accommodated with lodgings outside the actual δῶμος.

In 245 and 249 MSS. vary between πλησίον and πλησίον. Both are Homeric, but the latter has the evidence of the similar passages, Γ 115, ξ 14, in its favour. A in both cases gives πλησίον with ι written over the ν. In 246-250 there is a similar variation between παρ' αἰδοῖης and παρὰ μνηστῆς: but the evidence is in favour of the latter in 246 and the former in 250 (where Didymos says that it was the reading of Ar.).

251. ἠπιόδωρος, the explanation of Apoll. Lex. seems to be right: ἡπια καὶ προσήρη δωρουμένη κατὰ τὴν παιδοτροφίαν, cf. ἡπια φάρμακα, and ἠπιόδωρον Κύπριδος, Stesich. fr. 35, 2 (Bergk, p. 985).

252. Λαοδίκην ἐσάγουσα can only mean "bringing in Laodike" with her; but there is no significance in such a description, and the pointless mention of a κωφὸν πρόσωπον has naturally given great offence to commentators. Moreover without this line it would be more natural to suppose that his mother came out of the house to meet him. Hence Ar. wrote ἐς ἄγουσα, and explained πρὸς Λαοδίκην πορευομένη, comparing εἰς ἄγαμέμνονα H 312 for εἰς used with a person. But for the intrans. use of ἀγειν he seems to have brought no authority, nor is any to be found in Homer, except the very doubtful ἐξαγαγόντες in H 336. Many critics consider the line an interpolation meant to refer back to Γ 124; where however it is not Laodike herself, but Iris in her likeness, who is in the house of Paris, and therefore (v. 317) outside that of Priam.

ἐν τ' ἄρα οἱ φῦ χειρί, ἔπος τ' ἔφατ' ἔκ τ' ὀνόμαζεν· “τέκνον, τίπτε λιπὼν πόλεμον θρασὺν εἰλήλουθας;

 ἀλλὰ σὺ μὲν πρὸς νηὸν Ἀθηναίης ἀγελεύεις

255. Hekabe answers her own question. Some have taken this and the next line interrogatively, but ἦ μάλα is never used in this way: it always expresses a strong asseveration. δυσώνυμοι, cf. Penelope's κακοῖσι οὐκ ὀνομαστήν τ 260, and M 116 μοῖρα δυσώνυμος.

257. Of course ἐλθόντα goes with ἐνθάδε, and ἐξ ἄκρης πόλιος with ἀνασχεῖν. For the temples on the citadel see E 446: the existence of one to Zeus there perhaps follows from X 172. The prayer is actually made to Athene, for the reason given in the note to 90, and explained by Hector in 277.

258. ὅφρα κε . . . ἐνείκω, a fril. exactum, “till I have brought.” H. G. § 287.

260. MSS. vary between δὲ καὐτός, δὲ κ' αὐτός, and δέ κ' (κε) αὐτός. La Roche discusses the question of crasis in Homer, Hom. Unters. pp. 283-7, and decides in favour of the first. Crasis in Homer is established, as far as the Alexandrian text is concerned, by οὐμός Θ 360, ωτός E 396, ωριστος τὰλλα οὐνεκα τοῦνεκα, etc.; and though κε in the present passage is possible, yet καί gives a better sense. In N 734, γ 255, ζ 282, καί alone seems to be admissible. Cf. also χ' ἡμεῖς B 238. It is not improbable that in all these cases however the αι is really elided, as not unfrequently in verbal forms: so we find σ' and μ' for σοι and

μοι. The instances are then reduced to a very small number: for ωριστος the metre always allows of δωριστος, for ωτός we may read αὐτός or οὐτός, for οὐμός ο έμός, or better, as Nauck has suggested, άμός. See H. G. § 377.

261. μέγα is probably an adverb = μεγάλως, rather than a proleptic use of the adj. = ὥστε μέγα εἶναι. Cf. ρ 489, μέγα πένθος ἄρξεν.

262. “Spurius!” Nauck. The line is certainly rather flat in this place; and τύνη elsewhere is always the first word in the line.

265. The vulg. puts a comma before and a δ' after μένεος against overwhelming authority, including that of Ar. and Plato (μή λῖαν, ὦ δαίμονι, ἀκριβολογού, μή μ' ἀπογυνώσῃς μένεος, Cral. 415 A). In X 282 however μένεος ἀλκῆς τε must go together. Hector was on the level of the present day in his appreciation of the disadvantage of stimulants during severe fatigue. The simple γυνώ is used in the literal sense “to lame” in Θ 402, and the metaphorical “to weaken” by Hippokrates. The appropriateness of the expression here is obvious.

266. ἀνίπτοισιν, so Ar. and all MSS. but one, which follows Zenod. in reading ἀνίπτην. Cf. E 466, where Ar. read ἐνποικητοῖσιν, Zen. ἐνποικητῶσιν.

ἔρχεο σὺν θυέεσσιν, ἀολλίσσασα γεραιάς· 270

 εἰ κεύθον γε ἴδοιμι κατελθόντ' Ἀϊδος εἴσω, φαίην κεν φίλον ἦτορ οἰζυὸς ἐκλελαθέσθαι." 285

270. θύεα, apparently "burnt-offerings" in the general sense: Homer makes no mention of incense properly so called, nor would that suit the compound θυοσκόος. (It is however possible that in Ξ 172 ἐλαίῳ τό βά οἱ τεθυωμένον ἦεν a scented oil may be meant.) The word recurs I 499, ο 261, in the latter case as a correlative to θύοντα. Cf. Lehrs. Ar. p. 83, and the commentators on ε 60. 271-278. See 90-97.

281. εἰ κέ οἱ, all MSS.: but κε is absolutely inconsistent with the direct expression of a wish. The words can only mean "In that (or some) case the earth would swallow him up." The use of πῶς ἂν in later Greek (πῶς κε, ο 195) to express a wish is entirely different; for there the speaker represents himself as asking "in what case would a thing happen?" His desire that it should happen follows only from the anxiety with which he seeks for its conditions, and hence depends entirely on the interrogative form of the sentence. In short κε necessarily implies some conditioning circumstances, whereas a wish necessarily excludes them (see Lange, EI, p. 183). It seems therefore inevitable that we should read δέ with Bekker. A similar question arises on ο 545, where εἰ κε apparently expresses a wish, but Lange shews that it is really a conditional protasis: EI pp. 192-4 (particularly note 16), and H. G. § 300, where this instance might have been mentioned. For γαῖα χάνοι cf. Δ 182. αἶθι, on the spot, E 296, etc.

284. "Αἶδος εἴσω, sc. δόμον: for εἴσω in the Il. always takes the acc. after it; and 'Αἶδης' is a person, not a place, cf. A 3.

285. There are three readings of this line: (1) that of the text, which is not given by any MS., but was the reading of Zenod.; (2) φρέν' ἀτερ που, instead of φίλον ἦτορ, A and Aristarchos; (3) φρέν' ἀτέρπου, vulg. with all MSS. but A. Of these (3) construes, but the form ἀτερ-πος is barbarous. Heyne has remarked that it is not found in the Lexica of Apoll. and Hesych. The Homeric form is ἀτερπής. (2) was explained by Aristarchos as follows:—δόξαιμι ἂν ἐκλελῆσθαι τῆς κακοπαθείας καὶ χωρὶς αὐτῆς γεγονέναι· ἐνιοὶ δὲ ἀγνοήσαντες γράφουσιν ἀτέρπου, i.e. "I should deem that (being) apart (που?) from lamentation I had forgotten it in my heart." But for the authority of Ar. such an elucidation would probably not have been listened to for a moment. It can hardly be called Greek, much less Homeric. The only resource is to adopt the reading (1): it is quite impossible to say whether Zenod. invented it or found it in old sources; but his authority is surely enough to give it the precedence over nonsense, however well attested. At the same time we must admit that there remains the problem how the other reading came into existence—and of this no satisfactory solution has been given.

288. κατεβήσето, i.e. from the ὑπερῶν on the first floor, where the women worked, to the θάλαμος or treasure-chamber on the ground-floor at the back of the house (see the plan in Buchholz, Realien). 288 = o 99, 289 = o 105, 293-5 = o 106-8, with small variations. One of the editions of Ar. had also the variant ἡ δ' εἰς οἶκον ἰοῦσα παρίστατο φωριαμοῖσιν from o 104: but Hekabe is already in the οἶκος. κηῶεντα, Γ 382.

289. This line as given in the MSS. twice neglects the F. Bentley with one MS. conj. παμποίκια for -οι. For ἐνθ' ἔσαν οἱ (Ar. ἔσαν, to shew that οἱ was not the article) Heyne proposes ἐνθα δ' ἔσαν, Nauck ἐνθα τ' ἔσαν, Paley ἐνθ' ἦν οἱ after Hes. Theog. 321, τῆς δ' ἦν τρεῖς κεφαλᾶι. Compare o 105, where Ameis takes οἱ for the article.

The lines 289-92 are quoted by Herodotos, ii. 116, together with δ 227-230, 351-2, as evidence that Homer followed the old tradition of the journey of Paris and Helen to Egypt related in 113-115, and was therefore not the author of the Kypria, which brought the fugitives to Troy on the third day from Sparta. He quotes the lines as being ἐν Διομήδεος ἀριστεῖν, a title now confined to E, but perfectly appropriate to the present passage, as down to 310 Diomedes is still the chief terror of the Trojans. The reading of the MSS. of Herodotos agrees exactly with the vulgate: but we could not expect to find them an independent authority.

290. For τὰς Welcker conj. τοῖς, which gives a much more likely sense. The change may naturally be accounted for by the neighbourhood of the fem. substantive.

292. τὴν ὁδόν, as ζ 165, H. G. § 136, 1. ἀνήγαγε, properly “took away to sea,” cf. Γ 48; and cf. κατελθεῖν, to return home.

295. νεάτος ἄλλων: for this idiomatic use of the superl. see A 505, ὠκυμρότατος ἄλλων: and for νεάτος, A 381, I 153.

298. For this Theano cf. E 70, A 224. From 300 it would appear that her post was as much a civic as a religious appointment.

303 = 92, 308-310 = 93-95.

305. ῥυσίπτολι, MSS.: ἄμεινον δὲ ῥυσίπτολι, Schol. A. We have ἔρυ- σάρματες O 354, II 370, but that is from Ferwō to draw, a distinct verb from ρύομαι, ἐρύομαι to protect (see on A 216), which has υ in the sigmatic forms with but few exceptions. ρυσιπτολις occurs in Aesch. Septem, 129. 306-7 are imitated by Vergil, Aen. xi. 483.

311. ἀθετεῖται ὅτι πρὸς οὐδὲν τὸ ἐπιφώνημα (concluding remark) καὶ οὐκ εἰσισμένον· κατὰ μὲν γὰρ τὸ ἐναντίον ὁ Ζεὺς ἐπιβεβαῖοι κατανεύων (i.e. apparently it contradicts the promise of Zeus in A). καὶ ἐξῆς δ' ἐπιλεγόμενον "ὥς αἱ μὲν ῥ' εὐχοντο" σαφὲς γίνεται περισσὸς ὁ στίχος· γελοία δὲ καὶ ἡ ἀναεύνουσα Ἀθηνᾶ, Schol. A (Aristonikos?). It is hard to believe that such remarks come from Ar., who can hardly have forgotten the fact that ἀναεύνειν is repeatedly used metaphorically by Homer to signify a refusal. The line it is true may be spared, and the ὥς at the beginning of two consecutive lines is certainly a stumbling-block (but cf. P 424). Bekker and Nauck content themselves with rejecting the line; but the real explanation seems to be that suggested by Bergk and developed by Christ, that 311 is the ending of the Διομήδεος ἀριστία, and 312 the first line of a new rhapsody: cf. X 515, Ψ 1. With 311 compare II 250, and still more B 419, Γ 302, which shew that the ἐπιφώνημα is not unusual as the Schol. says.

312. The imperf. followed by the plup. shews that what follows happens contemporaneously with the preceding.

316. It looks at first sight as though δῶμα here meant only the great hall as opposed to the sleeping-rooms. But the word is of general signification, and includes the women's apartments in X 442, ρ 541, σ 314 (see Buchh. ii. 2, 129). It is more reasonable to regard it as meaning the building as opposed to the αὐλή, and thus including the θάλαμος as a part. The latter is particularly named because it is the scene of the following incident.

319. It is impossible to say whether we ought to read ἔχ' ἐνδεκάπηχυν with MSS., or ἔχεν δεκάπηχυν with some of the old commentators. Either length seems unwieldy to us, but in O 678 Aias uses a pike of twice the length, and Xenophon (Anab. iv. 7) incidentally mentions that the spears of the Chalybes were 15 cubits long. See J. H. S. iv. p. 299, where also will be found some remarks as to the πόρκης. The old explanation of this is no doubt correct, ὁ κρήκος ὁ συνέχων τὸν σιδήρον πρὸς τὸ ξύλον τοῦ δόρατος. Dr. Schliemann found at Hissarlik spear-heads with flat bases and holes for nails, by which they were fastened into a slit in the shaft. This necessarily implies the use of some sort of ferrule to prevent the wood from splitting, probably a "lashing" of wire. πάροιθε, "before him" as he went: cf. T 437, ἐμὸν βέλος ἀξὺ πάροιθεν.

321. ἔποντα, "handling." The root sak, which appears in Greek as ἐπ, is apparently a derived form of σα "together"; whence comes the sense of "laying hand to" a thing, and in the middle voice "joining oneself to" a person, i.e. accompanying. ἔπτω is probably also a parallel formation from σάμ, the longer form of σα, and shews clearly the connexion of the ideas of joining and touching. The simple ἔπω occurs only here; the compounds have acquired more or less metaphorical senses, which may nearly all be brought under the cognate ideas of treating or managing. The aor. is, with very few exceptions, only found in ἐπιστεῖν μῦσιμον ἡμῶν and similar phrases; where it has the sense of joining, i.e. reaching, an end (cf. French loucher à sa fin). (See a full discussion of the verb in Journal of Phil. vol. xiv. p. 231 sqq.) Owing to the ordinary view that ἀμφέπειν περίπτειν, etc., mean "to busy oneself about" a thing, critics have found a needless difficulty in the absence of the preposition here; Bekker has even conjectured περὶ κάλλιμα for περικαλλέα. Curiously enough, the next line is the only place where the simple ἀφῶν is found, though the compound ἀμφαφῶν is common in Homer, and ἐπαφῶν is Attic. Both verbs are closely connected in sense as in origin; the "dandy" Paris is turning over and admiring his fine armour with the same affection which Odysseus shews to his old bow, τόξον ἐνώμα, πάντῃ ἀναστρωφῶν, φ 393; in τ 586 τόξον ἀμφαφῶντας means "handling" the bow with the intention of using it.

322. The comma after θώρηκα is approved by Nikanor, and is undoubtedly right: the two participles need a conjunction, as they are obviously co-ordinate, φ 204 being an isolated and harsh exception. It is not necessary to do more than mention the curious variant τόξα φῶντα which is found in D and explained by Schol. LV to mean "making bright."

324. The constr. καλέειν τινί τι is elsewhere found in H. only where the accus. is a neuter pronoun, e.g. ρ 193, τά γε δὴ νοῶντι καλεῖσιν. The simple dat. of the person is however common enough, and the addition of the acc. to express the content of the verb is quite in accordance with the use of that case.

326. σὺ . . . καλὰ, see H. G. § 136 and compare σὺ τι ψεῦδος ἐμὰς ἀγας κατέλεξας I 115. The mention of the χόλος has caused critics a good deal of trouble, as Paris' absence from battle would seem to be sufficiently accounted for by his defeat at the hands of Menelaos. It seems best to suppose therefore that Hector speaks ironically, in suggesting that Paris has some cause of offence against the Trojans: though Paris himself seems to take the remark seriously (335), and the irony is perhaps almost too veiled for the Epic style. There is a possible alternative, to take χόλος as meaning "the anger of the Trojans against you," such as is exemplified in Γ 56, 454, of which we should suppose Paris to be conscious. This suits the answer of Paris in 335 better, as νέμεσις is commonly used of the indignation shewn by others; e.g. β 136 νέμεσις δέ μοι ἐξ ἀνθρώπων ἔσσειται, χ 40 ἀνθρώπων νέμεσις, cf. N 122 ἐν φρεσὶ θέσθε ἕκαστος αἰδῶ καὶ νέμεσιν. On the other hand it leaves τόνδε without its proper deictic force; we should be led to suppose that some particular manifestation of Trojan resentment was immediately present to Hector and Paris, but this is not the case. The phrases κότον ἐνθεο θυμῷ λ 102, and μὴ χόλον ἐνθεο θυμῷ ω 248, are also strongly in favour of the interpretation first given.

329. μαχέσαιο, fall out with, as E 875, I 32, etc.

330. ὄν τινά, so Ar. ; MSS. εἰ τινά.

331. πυρὸς θέρηται, as A 667, and in a different sense ρ 23. For the use of the gen. cf. H. G. § 151 c.

333 = Γ 59.

334. Cf. A 76. σύνθεο = mark my words, as T 84, ο 318, π 259, ρ 153.

336. προτραπέσθαι, to yield myself up to anguish (at my defeat); an isolated use of the word.

337. This is apparently a reference to Γ 432, but the application is not very exact.

339. ἐπαμείβεται ἄνδρας, shifts over the warriors, i.e. goes first to one, then to another. For this use of ἀμείβεσθαι cf. O 684 θρώσκων ἄλλοτ' ἐπ' ἄλλον ἀμείβεται, a 375 ἀμειβόμενοι κατὰ οἴκους. For the sentiment cf. Γ 440, Σ 309.

344. For κακομηχάνου ὀκρυόεσσης, Curtius, (Et. no. 77), after Payne Knight, would read κακομηχάνου κρυόεσσης, rightly. ὀκρυόεσσα is a vox nihili recurring only in I 64, which admits of the same correction. For κρυβεῖς in this metaphorical sense cf. E 740, I 2, and we may perhaps compare ῥιγεδανῇ Ἑλένῃ T 325.

346. Compare ν 61-82, where the ἀρπυιαί, the personified storm-winds, carry off the daughters of Pandareos. So also a 241.

348. ἀπόερσε, swept away; prob. root vars of Lat. verre-cre: cf. also Φ 283, 329, and Curtius, Et. no. 497 b, St. vi. 266 sqq. For this use of the indic. of the past tense to express a supposition, by a sort of attraction to the mood of the principal verb ὄφελε, see H. G. § 325, where it is well explained. The other instances in H. are 350 below, a 218, δ 178.

349. τεκμαίρομαι, to ordain as a final decision, as η 317, cf. H 30, 70, κ 563, λ 112, μ 189.

351. ἦδη, indic. as 348. νέμεσις here evidently means "the righteous indignation felt by men." For αἵσχεα = reproaches, see 524, Γ 242.

353. ἐπαυρήσεσθαι, reap the fruits : v. A 410.

356. ἀρχῆς, so Zenod. and one MS. ; the rest with Ar. having ἀτης. See note on Γ 100.

358. αἰοιδιμοὶ, cf. θ 579-580, ἵνα ᾗσι καὶ ἐσσομένοισιν αἰοιδῇ, and ω 200, of Klytaimnestra, στυγερὴ δέ τ' αἰοιδῇ ἔσσει' ἐπ' ἀνθρώπους. Paley quotes also Theokr. xii. 11, ἐπεσσομένοις δὲ γενόμεθα πᾶσι αἰοιδά. The phrase ἐσσομένοισιν αἰοιδῇ occurs also Theog. 251, in a good sense, in which signification the adj., a ἀπαξ λεγόμενον in H, occurs often in later Greek.

361. For this use of ὅφρα where we should rather have expected the infin. (as I 398, 42) cf. A 133, Δ 465, E 690. It is hardly likely that ἐπέσσυται is used without the object expressed (in A 173 φεύγειν is to be supplied), in which case ὅφρα might indicate a purpose.

365. The best MSS. give οἰκόνδ' ἐλεύσομαι, but some six or seven either read οἰκόνδε ἐλεύσομαι or have variant pointing directly at it. There can therefore be little doubt that La R. is right in adopting it in the text after Ahrens ; the vulg. is obviously an attempt to avoid the hiatus, which in the principal caesura is quite legitimate.

376. εἰ δ' ἄγε, used in addressing several persons and followed by plural, as B 331, 437, Θ 18, Γ 441, etc. So in Attic, Aesch. Pers. 140, Eum. 307, etc.

378. γαλῶν, εἰνατέρων, her husband's sisters or his brothers' wives, glores and ianitrices.

388. ἀφικάνει, apparently in perf. sense: cf. Ξ 43, ξ 159, ν 328.

389. μαινομένη, cf. X 460, also of Andromache, μαινάδι ἴσῃ.

390. ἡ ῥα with the subject expressed as here is rare; the only other cases are γ 337, χ 292, X 77. In the second clause after ἡ ῥα καὶ however the subject is not uncommon, e.g. A 528 (Ameis-Hentze, app. on σ 356).

392. εὔτε is used asyndetically as always when the clause which it introduces stands first in the sentence; see Ameis and Merry on γ 9.

393. τῇ ἄρ', so MSS. (except a few which give τῇ δ' ἄρ'): the vulg. τῇ γάρ is merely a device to avoid the hiatus.

394. πολύδωρος, Hesych. πολλὰ λαβοῦσα δῶρα, πολύφρωνος, πολύδενος, and Schol. A πολλὰ ἔδνα παρὰ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς λαβοῦσα. But the ἔδνα were given not to the bride, but to her father. The δῶρα however may indicate the gifts which human nature would prompt the suitor to offer when, as in Homeric days, woman had begun to assert her independence, and the ἔδνα were no more than a relic of the already extinct custom of the actual purchase of wives. But it does not seem quite natural to describe a wife as “having had many wedding-presents made to her.” Others compare it with ἡτιδῶρος (251 above) in the sense of “generous,” “open-handed,” which is preferable.

396. Ἡετίων seems to be attracted to the case of the following relative; see H. G. § 271, where Ξ 75, 371, K 416 are quoted: Bekker, H. B. i. 314, adds others, e.g. θ 74, λ 122. Thus Bentley's Ἡετίωνος δ ναίει is not necessary. A similar case of epianalepsis in a different case is to be found in α 50-51—νῆσφ ἐν ἀμφιρύτῃ, θοι τ' ὀμφαλὸς ἐστὶ θαλάσσης,

The site of Thebe is fixed by the later name Θήβης πεδίων, given to the plain of Adramyttion, Herod. vii. 42, etc. For Ἡετίων cf. also A 366, Ψ 827, X 479.

398. ἔχεθ' Ἐκτορι: this use of the dative (which is not mentioned in H. G. § 143) is analogous to the dat. after δαμάζειν, etc. (cf. Γ 301). For ἔχειν = have to wife, cf. Γ 123.

402-3. These lines look like an interpolation intended to bring in the name of Astyanax, so well known from the Cyclic poems (cf. Pausan. x. 25, 4), but probably not Homeric. Compare X 506, the only other passage where the name occurs in Homer. Moreover the derivation of the name is not very fortunate; for in no sense was it true that Hector "ruled" Ilios (for this sense of ῥύομαι cf. I 396), and if we understand it to mean "protected" (in battle), it does not explain Ἀστυάναξ. Plato however knew and commented on the lines, Cratyl. 392 C, οἶσθα διὰ Ὅμηρος τὸ παιδίον τὸ τοῦ Ἑκτορος ὑπὸ τῶν Τρώων φησι καλεῖσθαι Ἀστυάνακτα, Σκαμάνδριον δὲ δῆλον διὰ ὑπὸ τῶν γυναικῶν: and 393 A, ὁ γὰρ ἄναξ καὶ ὁ ἔκτωρ σχεδὸν τι ταῦτ' ἀναίρει, οὐ γὰρ ἂν τις ἄναξ ᾗ, καὶ ἔκτωρ δῆπου ἐστὶ τοῦτου.

407. δαιμόνι: for the meaning of this word, which is here really untranslatable, see on A 561.

408. ἄμμορος, cf. X 485 δυσάμμορος: here and Ω 773 τινὲς γράφουσιν "ἐμὸν μόρον," οὐκ εἶδ' (Ariston.). In v 76 we have the curious phrase μοῖράν τ' ἄμμορίην τε καταβηγῶν ἀνθρώπων, which apparently means "that which fate does and does not bestow," i.e. both good and ill fortune. Thus ἄμμορος means "deprived of μοῖρα," the just due of mankind, and hence = ill-fated, opposed to μοιρηγενής, Γ 182 (q.v.). In Σ 489 = ε 275 it simply means "not partaking of."

409. κατακτανέουσι: Cobet, M. C. p. 330, denounces this form (which recurs Ζ 481, Σ 309) as a barbarism, due to a false analogy with forms like κατέκτα, κατέκτανον, κατέκταθεν: he is probably right in restoring κατακτείνουσιν, which Nauck adopts in his text.

411. ἀφαρματούσῃ, losing, as X 505. χθόνα δύμεναι like γαῖαν ἐδίτην, 19.

412. πότμον ἐπίσπης, see note on 321.

413. Cf. Soph. Ajax, 514: the whole speech of Tekmessas there is worth comparison, as it is evidently full of reminiscences of this scene, many lines of which are quoted in the Sophoklean Scholia.

414. ἄμὸν (al. ἄμὸν) is apparently a proto-Epic form of ἡμέτερον: but in all the passages where it occurs it may = "mine," not "our"; and in some of them this sense is decidedly preferable, as in the present case and Θ 178. It looks as though ἐμὸς was assimilating an archaic form, whose real sense was only weakly supported by tradition.

418. It was a universal custom among the primitive Aryan nations to bury a warrior's arms with his dead body; it is needless to refer to more than the excavations at Mykenai, where an extraordinary quantity of swords was found in the graves with the dead. So Elpenor prays, λ 74, ἀλλὰ με κακῆμαι σὺν τεύχεσιν ἄσσα μοι ἔστωι: see μ 13. It is noteworthy that armour is not mentioned in any of the three full descriptions of a funeral (ψ 165-177, Ω 785-804, ω 63-84; in the case of Achilles his armour was of course given to be adjudged by the Greek captains, ω 85). But the idea that the departed warrior needed his arms in the next world belongs rather to the time when the body was buried than when, as among Homeric and later Greeks, it was destroyed by burning. Thus the casual mention of arms and burning together, here and in λ, seems to indicate an irrational survival among newer customs of an older practice, which in the time of Thucydides had actually come to be considered Karian, i.e. barbarian. The same is the case with the burning of garments as a funeral rite (X 512).

421. σὺ . . . σὺ, a good instance of the parataxis of co-ordinate clauses by which the relative was developed from the demonstrative.

422. ἰφ, masc. here only: the fem. ἰα occurs frequently. The origin of the forms is doubtful; ἰφ will be formed by false analogy if ἰα comes from μα, but this is very doubtful. The fem. ια is also found in an Aeolic inscription (Col-litz, 214, 12), and is given by the tradition in Sappho (fr. 69), but there is no other trace of the masc.

428. βάλ' Ἄρτεμις, cf. 205.

429-432. For imitations of these famous lines, see (besides Soph. Aj. 514, already referred to) Eur. Hel. 278; Ovid, Her. iii. 51; Ter. Andria, i. 5, 60.

433-439 were athetized by Ar. on the grounds (1) that it is not fitting that Andromache should act like a rival commander (ἀντιστρατηγεῖν) to Hector; (2) that it is not true that the wall is represented as specially accessible at this spot; nor are the enemy now near the walls. A modern reader will probably feel with more force the objection that we are presented with an anticlimax after the noble outburst of the preceding lines. But perhaps this is not a more valid criticism than the reasons of Ar. There was a legend—which of course may have grown out of these words—that when Apollo and Poseidon built the walls of Troy the mortal Aiaikos helped them at this point of the circuit; see Pind. Ol. viii. 31-46, where Apollo says to Aiaikos, Πέργαμος ἀμφὶ τοαῖς, ἥρωας, χειρὸς ἐργασίας ἀλλόκεται. This is the θεοπρόσιον referred to in 438. For the ἐρινεός as a landmark v. A 167, X 145: it stood in the plain outside the wall, so that this line seems inconsistent with the preceding αὐτοῦ μῦμ' ἐπὶ πύργῳ, an argument for the interpolation of the passage.

435. Of course τρὶς must refer to the period before the opening of the Iliad: this is not in itself an objection to the genuineness of the passage, cf. I 352 sqq. We should however have expected Achilles to be named among the leaders.

442. So X 105, under similar circumstances. Δικαιοπέπλους: for the form of the compound see H. G. § 124 c, 126, 2.

444. οὐδὲ . . . ἀνώγεν, litotes, like οὐκ ἔαν, "forbids."

446. Hector's only object is honour, as he despairs of final success. ἀρνύμενος, A 159.

447-9 = Δ 163-5, q. v.

453. The opt. πέσοιεν throws into the background, as a mere imagination, the fate of all but Andromache, which by the subj. ἀγῃται is emphasized as a fact vividly foreseen. ὑφαίνοις and φορέοις again present less vividly the secondary consequences. For the two latter forms a few MSS. give ὑφαίνης and φορένης, which Bekker has adopted, needlessly.

455. H. uses ἐλεύθερος only in this phrase (II 831, T 193) and κρητήρα ἐλεύθερον, inf. 528. Cf. δοῦλιον ἡμαρ, 463, and many phrases in which ἡμαρ is used to express a state.

456. πρὸς ἄλλης, at the bidding of another woman. For this use cf. A 239 (H. G. § 208).

457. Ἐν Θερᾷνῃ δὲ κρήνην τὴν Μεσσηίδα ἰδὼν οἶδα, Pausan. iii. 20, 1. (Therapne was in Lakonia.) According to B 734 Ὑπερεία was a fountain in Thessaly. Cf. Pind. P. iv. 125, ἐγγὺς μὲν Φέρης κρήναν Ὑπερῆδα λιπών. Döderlein has well observed that Argos indicates Agamemnon, Messeis Menelaos, and Hypereia Achilles, as the probable possessors of Andromache. Aristarchus remarked that owing to these words of Homer later tragedians (οἱ νεώτεροι) regularly introduce the captive Andromache as bearing water. This is done by Eur. Andr. 166, ἐκ χρυσήλατων τευχῶν χερὶ στείρουσαν Ἀχελῷον δρόσον.

459. The subj. is virtually equivalent to an emphatic future in this phrase, for which see also 479, and H. G. § 275 b. This use is generally confined to the subjunctive with ἄν (κέν). Cf. however A 282 and note there.

463. ἀμύνειν is added expegetically, "such a husband for saving thee from slavery," cf. β 60 ἡμεῖς δ' οὐ τί νυ τοῖα ἀμύνμεν.

465. γέ τι, so best MSS. after Herodian: vulg. γ' ἐτι, which is also an old reading defended by Ptolemy of Ascalon. πυθέσθαι with the gen. of the thing seems here to mean not, as usual, "hear the news of," but "hear" directly: otherwise the phrase is intolerably weak. Hentze compares O 224, where however the more usual meaning is admissible. Another case will be found in the phrase πυθέσθαι ἀγγελίας, to hear news, which occurs P 641, 685, Σ 19. Simple hearing is not the original sense of the word, but only a Greek weakening of it (Curt. Et. no. 328). For θ' ἐλκηθμοῖο Nauck conj. τε κλαυθμοῖο, which however is not an improvement: βοῆς and ἐλκηθμοῖο go together by hendiadys.

476. εἶπε δ', so Ar.: MSS. εἶπεν, a change probably due to copyists who did not understand the use of "δέ ἔν ἀποδοσι."

478. For Ἰλίου Bentley conj. λαοῦ, on account of the F of Fifi. But it is remarkable that ἱφ, unlike the other forms from the stem fs, never absolutely requires the F, and in five passages does not admit it (B 720, A 287, E 606, M 367, λ 284: of these Bekker has emended all but the first and the present passage, v. Knös. de Dig. Hom. p. 128). It is therefore best to leave the text. It is possible that the line may be interpolated, as Heyne suggests, in allusion to the name Astyanax. It is added asyndetically, so that τε . . . καὶ belong together, co-ordinating βίην ἀγαθὸν to ἀνάσσειν, as though for ἀνάσσοντα, a rather harsh anacoluthon. There is a variant καί ποτέ τις εἶποι 'πατρός γ' ὅδε πολλὸν ἀμείνων' κτείνας δῆιον ἄνδρα, χαρείη δὲ φρένα μήτηρ." ὡς εἰπὼν ἀλόχοιο φίλης ἐν χερσὶν ἔθηκεν παῖδ' ἑόν· ἡ δ' ἄρα μιν κηώδει δέξατο κόλπῳ δακρυόεν γελάσασα· πόσις δ' ἔλεσε νοήσας, χειρὶ τέ μιν κατέρεξεν, ἔπος τ' ἔφατ' ἐκ τ' ὀνόμαζεν· 485

"δαιμονίη, μή μοί τι λήν ἀκαχίξω θυμῷ· οὐ κακόν, οὐδὲ μὲν ἐσθλόν, ἐπὴν τὰ πρῶτα γένηται.

ἀλλ' εἰς οἶκον ἰούσα τὰ σ' αὐτῆς ἔργα κόμιζε, 490 ἰστόν τ' ἡλακάτην τε, καὶ ἀμφιπόλοισι κέλευε ἔργον ἐποίχεσθαι· πόλεμος δ' ἄνδρεσσι μελήσει βίην ἀγαθὴν τε, but the line would be improved by the omission of the particle τε altogether.

479. For εἶποι MSS. give εἴποι, but the former is doubtless the right reading, for several reasons. (1.) The Schol. A (Nikanor) on the line runs τὸ ἐξῆς, "καί ποτέ τις εἶποι ἐκ πολέμου ἀνιόντα": therefore εἶποι must have been the reading of Ar. The same words are quoted in the Schol. on N 352, and αἰ is written over ποι in A. (2.) Out of 120 passages where πατρός occurs in H. the α is nowhere else short. (3.) The confident prediction expressed by the subj. (cf. 459) is quite out of place among the optatives of the prayer. The mistake no doubt arose from a reminiscence of 459. γ' 58ε is also the reading of Ar., and clearly superior to δ' ὅγε, which is given by all MSS.

480. ἀνιόντα appears to be governed by εἶποι in the sense "say of him as he returns"; but this construction seems to be quite unique. The possible alternative is to translate "say to him"; though this is hardly sufficiently supported by the passages quoted, M 60 (210, N 725), P 237, 334, 651, T 375, ψ 91. In all of these εἶπε stands immediately with its object. We may however compare τ 334, πολλοὶ δὲ μιν ἐσθλὸν εἶπον: from which we may explain the clause here "πατρός . . . ἀμείνων" as a sort of object-clause expressing the content of the verb like ἐσθλόν. So we have ἐν εἰπεῖν τινα, to speak well of a person, α 302. These lines cannot fail to recall the famous prayer in Soph. Aj. 550—

ὦ παῖ, γένοιτο πατρός εὐτυχέστερος, τὰ δ' ἄλλ' ὅμοιος, καὶ γένοι' ἂν οὐ κακός.

487. ὑπὲρ αἶσαν, see B 155. "Αἰδι προιάψα, A 3.

488. For the use of the middle perfect participle see X 219, ι 455; in α 18 πεφυγμένος ἦν δέθλων the gen. implies escape from troubles in which the sufferer was actually involved; the accus. implies successful avoidance (v. Nitzsch on α 18). For the periphrastic perf. cf. πεφυλαγμένος εἶναι Ψ 343, and in the active E 873.

489. τὰ πρῶτα, once for all, see A 235.

490-3 recur with slight variations in α 356-9, φ 350-3; and for the last line and a half cf. also T 137, λ 352-3. The present context is that which they suit best (v. Scholia on α 356), and if there has been any copying it is from here. τὰ σ' αὐτῆς, so edd. with one MS. (caet. σαυτῆς), in accordance with the canon of Arist. that the compound reflexive pronouns are not found in H. The elision of the α of σά is however not very natural, and it is possible that the MSS. here are right and the canon wrong; v. La Roche, Hom. Unt. p. 139, according to whom we must read αὐτὸν μὲν (not αὐτὸν μιν) in δ 244. Nauck conj. τὴν αὐτῆς.

492. ἐποίχεσθαι, properly of weaving only: cf. A 31. But the word came to be used vaguely, of "going about" one's work as we say. Cf. τ 34 δόρπον ἐποίχεσθαι, ρ 227, σ 363 ἔργον.

493. For πάσιν ἔμοι δὲ μάλιστα Bekker, followed by Nauck, conj. πάσι, μάλιστα δ' ἔμοι, which is probably right; as it not only admits the F of Φίλῳ, but brings the phrase into agreement with the similar passages, X 422, α 359, λ 353, φ 353, ψ 61.

500. γόον, an anomalous form, “perhaps an aor. from the noun γός; so possibly δπλεσθαι to get ready, from δπλῶν, and θέρμετο grieve, from θερμός,” H. G. § 32. (Add κτύπε by κτυπέω, Θ 75.) Cf. also the pf. part. πεφυζότες, from φύζω, and other possible instances, ib. § 26, 5. Others regard it as a mistaken form for γῶον (γοῶν) which occurs κ 567. Fick (Hom. Od. p. 2) reads γῶον, comparing γέλαν in a lyric fragment (Bergk, fr. adesp. 77).

505. With this and the following lines compare X 21-23, and for the whole famous simile, Verg. Aen. xi. 492-497.

506. στατὸς, “stalled,” cf. the word stagnulum. ἀκοστήσας: Hesych. ἀκοστή· κριθή παρὰ Κυπρίους. Schol. A, κυρίως δὲ πᾶσαι αἱ τροφαὶ ἀκοστὰι καλοῦνται παρὰ Θεσσαλοῖς. A variant ἀγοστήσας was explained to mean “befouled,” from an imaginary ἀγοστής = ῥύπος. The former explanation must be accepted, though the word ἀκοστή is not known elsewhere.

507. Cf. X 23, θήρησι τιτανόμμενος πεδίοιο. On the form θεῖω cf. Curtius, Verb. i. 304, Gr. Et. p. 577. It would be better to write θεῖω for θέλω in Homer, as a proto-Epic form, on the analogy of the Aeolic πνεῖω, and the fut. θεύσσω.

510. ὃ δὲ, a nominativus pendens. For similar anacolutha compare B 353, E 135, α 275.

511. ἡθεα, haunts: so the word is used in § 411 of the sties in which the swine sleep, and frequently for “dwelling-places” by Herodotus (v. 15, etc.) νομόν, pasturage.

The swing of the dactylic verse has been universally recognized as harmonizing with the horse's gallop, like Vergil's “Quadrupedante putrem sonitu quatit ungula campum.”

The effect depends not only on the rhythm, but partly on the nasal consonants and the ρ. It is dangerous to lay too great stress however on the rhythm: Mr. Nicholson has pointed out that the passage which in all Homer shows the largest consecutive number of purely dactylic lines (five) occurs in the

513. ἠλέκτωρ the Shiner, i.e. the sun (Curt. Et. no. 24; Skt. ark'-as = sun); so T 398, ὥς τ' ἠλέκτωρ Ἰπερίων. Mr. Gladstone's explanation, that the word is another form of ἀλεκτρῶν, has not found followers.

514. καγχαλῶν must mean "laughing with self-satisfaction"; so K 565, ψ 1, 59. But in Γ 43 it means "scoffing" (in later Grk. καχάζω: Lat. cachinnus).

516. δάριζε, cf. X 127.

518. ἦ μάλα δὴ: Paris exaggerates an imaginary accusation by way of "fishing for a compliment"; a most vivid touch, which is partly lost if we put a note of interrogation at the end (cf. Schol. A, τὸ ἦ πνευστικῶς καὶ ἠθικῶς).

519. ἐνασίμος both here and in 521 can be expressed by the Lat. iustus (here iusto tempore). The connecting link is the idea of "proper measure"; cf. ὑπὲρ αἶσαν, 333, etc.

522. ἔργον, what you effect in battle: cf. A 470, 539.

523. τὸ is of course not the article, but the accusative representing the following object-clause. On the expression κῆρ ἐν θυμῷ Hentze remarks that it virtually means "my heart within me." The Homeric man half personifies his own thoughts as something distinct from him; hence such phrases as τίη μοι ταῦτα φίλος διελέξατο θυμός; εἶπε πρὸς δὲ μεγάλητορα θυμόν: compare the expression in the Psalms, "I commune with my heart." It is therefore wrong to compare more or less rhetorical phrases like "in my heart of hearts."

524. ἀκούω must here be subjunctive, as A 80, etc. 56' of course is δε, not δι.

526. τὰ δέ, "the rest," i.e. the hard words he has had to speak to Paris, now and previously. ἀρεσσόμεθα, I will make up for: exactly as A 362.

528. στήσασθαι, set up as the centre of a banquet where the freeing of Troy should be celebrated by libations to the gods. Cf. I 202, κρητῆρα καθίστα. For the middle Paley compares Theokr. vii. 150, κρητῆρ' Ἡρακλῆι γέρων ἐστάσατο Χείρων.

529. ἐλάσαντας, we should have expected the dative: but the "accus. cum infin." construction has begun even in H. to exercise the attractive power which afterwards became so extensive (H. G. § 237-241), aided in this particular case by the obvious ambiguity which would arise from the vicinity of the other dative θεοῖς.

H

The seventh book falls naturally into the two parts indicated by the Greek title. After a short introduction, which really belongs to the preceding book (1-16), the single combat of Aias and Hector occupies more than half the rest (17-312), and is then followed by a distinct section which relates the burning of the dead and the building of the wall round the Greek camp. The two parts must be treated separately, as each has its own difficulties.

The first part may be fairly counted among the best pieces of the Iliad. The casting of the lots is a highly spirited and picturesque scene, and the dialogue between Hector and Aias is admirably characteristic of the two heroes; it is only in the words of Menelaos (see note on 98) that we find anything at variance with the general tone of the epos. It is hardly likely that any doubts would have been suggested as to the genuineness of this part but for the existence of Book III. But if we take it in connexion with that book, the inconsistency of the two is striking. It is in itself somewhat surprising that two duels should be fought on the same day; but when we remember the very remarkable manner in which the first had ended, by an unpardonable violation of a truce made with all possible solemnities, and then find that the second is entered upon by the two parties without apology or reproach, the difficulty is one which can hardly be explained. Nor can it be smoothed over by the excuse of artistic propriety; for no canon of art will justify what we have before us; a duel which is proposed as a decisive ordeal, designed to finish the war, is succeeded at the distance of a few hours by another which is a mere trial of prowess, entered upon ἐξ ἔριδος, as is expressly declared. This surely approaches near to the limits of an anticlimax. And the sense of inconsistency with the third book is infinitely heightened by the fact that we do find in our text a brief allusion in Hector's words, 69-72, to the violation of the oaths. If this discreditable incident had been absolutely ignored, it might have been possible to explain the fact by saying that the third book, though in the chronological sequence only a few hours distant, is, in fact, to a hearer separated by a much longer interval, so that the whole of the first episode might have been considered to have served its purpose and been forgotten. Hector's almost cynical allusion seems as if designed to exclude this possibility, and to bring the incongruity into the most glaring light.

In any case then we must undoubtedly begin by cutting out these lines, while at the same time it may be remarked that there is in the MSS. what may be a valuable hint to shew that they were not originally to be found here; for in line 73 the reading of all the MSS. is ὑμῶν μὲν γάρ, for which editors have accepted the reading of Aristarchos, ὑμῶν

οὔρον, ἐπεὶ κε κάμωσιν ἐνξέστης ἐλάτῃσιν πόντον ἐλαύνοντες, καμάτῳ δ' ὑπὸ γυῖα λέλυνται, ὡς ἄρα τῷ Τρώεσσιν ἐελδομένοισι φανήτην.
 ἔνθ' ἐλέτην ὁ μὲν υἱὸν Ἀρηιόβοιο ἄνακτος,

δ' ἐν γὰρ. It hardly needs pointing out that the δέ is required only if 69-72 stand in the text, while if they be cut out the speech runs on quite naturally with the μὲν γὰρ in 73.

With this omission once made there ceases to be any reason for supposing the author of this episode to have had any knowledge of Γ and Δ; and we have a rational ground for holding that we have here the oldest form of the duel incident, subsequently developed into that between Menelaos and Paris. It is possible, as Christ has suggested, that these two forms of the same idea may have been used at first as alternative passages, the one longer and the other shorter, of which either one, but not both, could be used in making up an Iliad for the purposes of recitation. In any case to a hearer they are separated as they stand by a sufficiently long interval to make their inconsistency the less obvious; but to hold that they were composed in their present form for their present places in a poem conceived from the first as a whole, is hardly within the bounds of reason.

We now pass to the second part of the book, lines 313-482, where the difficulties are of a yet more serious nature. Controversy has long raged round the building of the wall by the Greeks in the tenth year of the siege; Thucydides pointed out the inherent improbability of such a delay, and the words of Ζ 31-32 seem to imply that the wall was built when the ships were first drawn up on the land. The fact seems to be that as the wall is not mentioned in the earlier battles, which are all fought out in the open plain, while it is an important element in the part of the story to which we are now coming, it seemed to some rhapsode that a specific account of the way in which it was introduced into the story was required, and that he chose this place for interpolating it; possibly using, as I have suggested on line 340, a piece of older poetry in which the building was described, but at an earlier period of the siege. It has been argued that, though the wall may, according to the tradition, have been built at the time of the first landing, yet it might with poetical propriety be brought in at this point of a poem which designs to give a complete picture of the siege in the space of a few weeks; just as Priam may thus be defended for not knowing by sight the Greek heroes before the Teichoscopy (see introduction to Γ). But if poetical propriety is to be made the standard, we should look for some more obvious motive for the selection of this point for the first building. The Greeks have met with no reverses sufficient to demand a further defence; and if it be replied that the absence of Achilles would be enough to make them anxious as to their position, it is strange that there should be no allusion to such a feeling in the speech of Nestor, from which it could hardly be absent if the poet had it in his mind. Further, the whole description of the building is very hurried and even obscure, little resembling the style in which an event of importance to the future of the story is generally told. On the other hand there are passages against which in themselves no serious objection can be raised; the burying of the dead, the Trojan assembly, and the description of the primitive market with which the book ends. I see no reason why these should not all be pieces of the original story, not very artistically joined together by passages which are chiefly made up of lines from other parts of the Homeric poems, and contain a good many obvious interpolations, including a long one which was unanimously condemned by the judgment of antiquity (442-464). Hence arises an obscurity in the chronological sequence of the days which can hardly be paralleled in Homer.

1. πυλῶν, Bentley conj. πόλεως or ρα πυλῶν, as the gen. plur. fem. in -ων is almost always counted as a single syllable. The only exceptions appear to be M 340 καὶ πυλῶν and φ 191 ἐκτὸς θυρέων. (He should however have rather suggested πόλιος, as πόλεως is not found in H. except as a variant in one or two passages, Δ 168, T 52.)

5. There is the same variation in the MSS. here between ἐπεὶ κε κάμωσιν and

ἐπεὶ κεκάμωσιν as in A 168. Aristarchos seems to have preferred the former, as Ariston. says ἐν τισὶ γράφεται ἐπὶ ἡν· ἐὰν δὲ οὕτως ἔχῃ, προενεκτέον ὑφ' ἐν, κεκάμωσιν, ὡς λελάχωσι.

6. πόντον θαύνοντες, here only for the frequent phrase (in Od.) θαύπτοντες. Schol. A mentions a variant ἐρέσσοντες.

9. For the title κορυνήτης see line 138, and for the difficulties involved in the legend, 149.

10. βοῶπις is used of a mortal as in Γ 144, where see the note.

12. στεφάνη seems to be merely one of the numerous synonyms for the helmet: see K 30, ἐπὶ στεφάνῃ κεφαλῆφιν αἰέρας θήκατο χαλκείην. It can hardly mean any special part, as here it covers the neck, while in A 96 it goes over the forehead. There is no archaeological evidence of anything that can be called the "brim" of the helmet. For λύσε Ar. read λύντο, as in 16.

15. ἐπιάλμενον, compare E 46; the aor. part. here is a reason against regarding ἐπιβησόμενον there as a future; it can only mean, "just mounted" on his chariot.

17. The Argives appear to be routed after their success in E with very little trouble; but this is no doubt in order to avoid the monotony of fighting. The ἀριστεία of Diomedes, having been fully developed, is now dropped. The turning of the battle—which here has no great effect upon the story—is told in a condensed form; 17-18 = E 711-12, 19 = B 167, 21 = Δ 508.

22. φηγῶ, the oak tree near the Skaian gate, see on E 693.

25. θυμὸς ἀνῆκεν: this phrase, which is peculiar to the Iliad, occurs only here and Φ 395 without an infinitive expressing the aim. The passage in Φ seems to be a reminiscence of the present lines.

26. The epithet ἑτεραλκῆς occurs only with νίκη, except in O 738, where we have ἑτεραλκέα δῆμον. The idea in all cases seems to be "a victory giving might to the other side," i.e. turning the tide of battle, ὅταν οἱ νικῶντες νικῶνται, ἢ ὅταν οἱ πρῶτην νικῆσάντων νικῶσιν, Schol. A; in O the δῆμος is a reserve to change the tide of war. It is easy to see how from this meaning is derived the use of ἑτεραλκῆς in later Greek (Herod.) in the sense of uncertain pugna, a battle where the tide keeps turning. This however cannot be deduced from either of the alternatives which have been proposed—(1) "decisive" victory, giving might to one only of the two parties; (2) victory "of other strength," i.e. won by divine interference (Mr. Monro ; in O 738 "a people to gain fresh help from"). We may compare for the sense of ἕτερος in composition Ζεὺς ἑτερορρετής, Aesch. Supp. 403; ἑτερόρροτος = "ambiguous, uneven," and the only other compound of ἕτερος in Homer (in a rather late passage, however) ἑτερήμερος, "changing from day to day," λ 303. Compare also Aesch. Pers. 950.

28. This line is a simple but good instance of the way in which the conditional sentence has been formed from two originally independent paratactic clauses. The optative in what we now call the "protasis" has its original meaning of a wish; the apodosis is added to shew the result of the wish, with κεν to refer back, "in that case." Thus the line really means "Ah would that thou mightest hearken to me! Then it would be far better" (L. Lange, EI, p. 52); and we might even put a colon instead of a comma after πίθοιο.

30. τέκμων, properly a thing established; hence, as in A 526, the determination, settling of a resolve; or, as here, a fixed goal, a limit of destiny. This is illustrated by l. 70 below, "Zeus settles an appointed time, against which you are to take Troy or yourselves be vanquished." Hence, as Buttmann remarks, comes the later sense of "foretelling by a sign"; for one who foretells an event by personal divine knowledge, like Kirke (κ 563, λ 111), "appoints," "destines" it to mortals; to a god the two are identical. In N 20 Poseidon ἔκετο τέκμων, Αἰγύς, i.e. "the goal which he had set for his journey"; II 472 τοῖο εἵρετο τέκμων, "attained the end at which he aimed." The only question which can arise on the present passage is whether τέκμων means "the limit set by fate for Ilios," or "the goal set for themselves by the Greeks with regard to Ilios." Ameis, on the analogy of II 472, accepts the latter interpretation. There however the verb is εἵρετο in the middle, which makes some difference (v. however δ 374), while here it is in the active; and the similarity of l. 70 seems decisive in favour of the former: "let them fight on" (the fut. gives the sense "for all I care") "till they find out by experience the limit set by fate for Ilios." So I 48, 418.

32. For ἀθανάτησι Aristophanes read ἀμφοτέρωσι, Zenod. ἀθανάτοισι.

36. For μέμονα with fut. infin. cf. B 544, o 522, etc. The pres. and aor. infinitives are however rather more common.

39. οἰόθεν οἶος, which recurs l. 226, is, with αἰνῶθεν αἰνῶς, 97, a phrase peculiar to this book, and hard to explain. Of αἰνῶθεν αἰνῶς we can only say that it is a case of emphasis produced by the familiar resource of reduplication, as in μέγας μεγαλωστί, δύμιμον δύμιτλεστον: no one has succeeded in explaining why the local suffix -θεν, with its very definite signification, should be used for the purpose. In οἰόθεν οἶος the meaning seems to be "man to man," and the repetition will then have a ground beyond mere emphasis. Bentley suggested οἶον, Döderlein οἶω (with μαχέσασθαι); and either of these would make the phrase a little more intelligible. The closest analogy is perhaps to be found in αὐτὸς ἀφ' αὐτοῦ, αὐτὸς καθ' αὐτόν. Phrases like ἄλλοθεν ἄλλος, B 75, have only a superficial resemblance, as in them each word has its distinct and separate meaning.

41. ἀγασσάμενοι, either "admiring" his chivalry, or "jealous" of their honour (cf. Ψ 639 ἀγασσάμενοι περὶ νίκης—a doubtful line however), "grudging" him the advantage. Observe the change of mood in ἐπόρσειαν, these two lines being added independently, and expressing the remoter result.

44. θυμῷ, i.e. not by the outer ear, but by his power as a soothsayer, Z 76.

48. For a wish expressed by the (potential) optative in a question cf. Δ 93. The clause is virtually a protasis of which the apodosis is here the imper. κάθισον, as in Δ γλαῖης κεν (L. Lange, EI, p. 75).

53. This line was athetized by Ar. on the ground that Helenos had understood the counsel of the gods only διὰ τῆς μαντικῆς. This is a frivolous objection; prophets have always been accustomed themselves to describe the divine admonitions as a voice speaking to them, even when the outer world gives a different name to the communication. The previous line, though not rejected by Ar., is open to far graver objection. For it corresponds to nothing in the words of Athene or Apollo above, and seems quite inconsistent with Hector's words in 77, to say nothing of his behaviour in 216.

54-6 = Γ 76-8. The joy of Hector is rather less appropriate here than in Γ.

59. There can be no doubt that the gods are supposed by the poet to take the forms of birds. Some have understood ἐοικότες to mean "after the manner," not "in the likeness," of birds; a translation which might be supported by B 337. But there is certainly no gain of dignity in supposing the gods to sit in human form at the top of a high tree. A similar transformation of Athene into a swallow takes place in χ 240. The explanation of one Scholiast, ὡς ἐφίξει ὄρνειον φυτῷ, οὕτω καὶ αὐτοὶ ῥαδίως ἐκαθέσθησαν, is hardly likely to gain much acceptance.

63. φρήξ, lit. “shudder,” the ripple before a rising wind. Cf. φρήξ μέλαινα δ 402, Φ 126, and for the gen. Ζεφύροιο, ὑπὸ φρικῆς βορέω Ψ 692.

64. Aristarchos read πόντον ὑπ' αὐτῇ, taking μελάνει as transitive. There was another reading πόντος ὑπ' αὐτὸν (sc. Ζέφυρον). The reading of the text seems to be eclectic, but it is strongly supported by μ 406, ἤχλυσε δὲ πόντος ὑπ' αὐτῆς. Ar. was no doubt led to read πόντον by the fact that verbs in -άνω and -άνω are almost always transitive in Homer. We have however in T 42 κυδάνω intr. by the side of the trans. use in Ξ 73, and so ἰδάνω is intrans. except in Ψ 258. Curtius (Vb. i. 265) remarks moreover that μελάνω appears to be formed as a denominative from the noun-stem μελαν-, in which case the analogy of verbs where -αν- is a formation of the present stem would not hold: but it may come directly from the root; cf. μολ-ώνω by μόλος, which are doubtless connected (Et. no. 551).

69-72. These lines, which must refer to the violation of the truce in Δ, are rejected by a large proportion of critics, and seem intolerable in the present place (see the introduction to this book). For the meaning of τεκμαίρεται εἰς ὃ κε, see on l. 30. It is not at all necessary to supply κακὰ after τεκμαίρεται: the object of the verb, as there indicated, is the whole relative clause εἰς ὃ κε, etc., “appoints us a limit, viz. until.”

72. The MSS all give δαμελεῖται. Some have taken this to be an opt., but there is no analogy whatever for such a form. The best attested form of the subj. is δαμήετε, which is restored by Bekker and La Roche. A full statement of the general question between εἰ and ἡ is given by Mr. Monro, H. G. p. 316, App. C. Christ however holds that the forms with εἰ really represent an old subjunctive in -ιω, analogous to the Doric and Sanskrit futures κρυψίω bhōtējamī (Rhein. Mus. xxxvi. 28). He has however to alter the MS. reading in many passages where it gives ἡ before εἰ and ἡ. In the conflict of traditional testimony it can only be said that his view is sufficiently probable to justify us in retaining the MS. reading here. See on εἴη in 340.

73. The MSS. give μὲν, for which Ar. read δ' ἐν. There can be little doubt that μὲν was the original reading, only changed to δ' ἐν after the interpolation of 69-72.

74. For νῦν ὃν τινα Didymus mentions a variant εἰ καὶ τινα. ἀνῶγει, so MSS.; La Roche reads ἀνῶγη: he points out that the use of the subjunctive is invariable after ὅς τις, where used, as here, to express a supposition: A 230, N 234 and often (except apparently β 114). In such a point the MS. reading is of no authority.

75. The Alexandrian critics took offence at Hector applying to himself the epithet δῖος. It will however be felt by any one who is in sympathy with the heroic age that this is no more than a somewhat naïve touch of self-consciousness such as is quite characteristic of Hector. ἴσος indeed is in Homer little more than an epithet of ordinary courtesy. Hentze however remarks that the only other instance in Homer where a speaker alluding to himself by his own name adds a laudatory epithet is in Θ 22, where Zeus calls himself Ζῆν' ὅπατος μῆστορα. We may compare Vergil's "Sum pius Aeneas."

76. ἐπὶ μάρτυρος, so A, as two words: cf. B 302 for the form μάρτυρος. The other MSS. give ἐπιμάρτυρος, which may be defended by the analogy of ἐπιβοῦ- κολος, ὑφηρίοχος, etc.: see Z 19. The sense is the same in either case.

79. δόμεναι: for the infin. used for the imper. of the third person see on Γ 285, Z 92; H. G. § 241.

85. ταρχύωσι, cf. Π 456, 674. The word is connected with τάραχος, and probably with τέρσεν, ίωρreo (Curtius, Et. p. 729), and must therefore mean something more than simple burying. Helbig (Hom. Epos, pp. 42, 43) suggests with great probability that it alludes to some process of partial mummification, such as seems to have been used on the bodies found at Mykenai; most likely by the use of honey as a preservative. This was known in Babylon in early times, and was used when Agesilaos the Spartan king died in Egypt. The custom of placing pots of honey on the bier (see Ψ 170) may be a relic of this forgotten usage.

87. For καὶ ποτέ τις εἴπησι followed by ὥς ποτέ τις ἐρέει cf. Z 459. The difference between subj. and future is only that the former expresses a confident assurance in the speaker's mind, connected with the suppositions he has been making; while the future simply makes an assertion independently of the manner in which the speaker regards it as connected with himself. It is well known that there are several ancient grave-mounds on the shore of the Hellespont (examined by Dr. Schliemann, see his Ilios); these no doubt suggested the speech of Hector.

94. ὁψὲ δὲ δὴ is the regular complement of the formal line 92 in books H-I, where the two go together six times; and so twice in the Odyssey (η 155, υ 321), but not elsewhere in Homer. Indeed the word ὁψὲ occurs eighteen times in these three books and the Odyssey, against three times in the rest of the Iliad (once each in Δ, Ρ, Φ).

- νέλκει ὄνειδίζων, μέγα δὲ στεναχίζετο θυμῷ· 95 “ὦ μοι, ἀπειλητῆρες, Ἀχαιῖδες, οὐκέτ’ Ἀχαιοί· ἦ μὲν δὴ λῶβη τάδε γ’ ἔσσεται αἰνόθεν αἰνῶς, εἰ μὴ τις Δαναῶν νῦν Ἴκτορος ἀντίος εἰσιν.
 ἀλλ’ ὑμεῖς μὲν πάντες ὕδωρ καὶ γαῖα γένοισθε, τῷδε δ’ ἐγὼν αὐτὸς θωρήξομαι· αὐτὰρ ὑπερθεὺς ὡς ἄρα φωνήσας κατεδύσετο τεύχεα καλὰ.

 εἰ μὴ ἀνατξάντες ἔλον βασιλῆες Ἀχαιῶν·
 αὐτὸς τ’ Ἀτρεΐδης εὐρὺ κρείων Ἀγαμέμνων

95. For νέλκει ὄνειδίζων there was a variant, perhaps conjectural but very plausible, νέκε, which Didymus mentions as occurring in “some of the notes” (ἐν τισὶ τῶν ὑπομνημάτων) of Aristarchos. It will stand for νέκεε, added asyndetically as a continuation of μετέπειτα. (For these “notes,” which were regarded as of inferior authority to the συγγραμματα or dissertations, see Ludwig, p. 24.)

96. See B 235. This quotation from Thersites intensifies the singular contrast between the whole of the present address and the tone of courteous regret which is elsewhere so characteristic of the attitude of Menelaos towards the Greeks. For αἰνόθεν αἰνῶς see on line 39.

99. The line is a curse, “May you rot away to the elements of which you were made.” The legend that man was formed out of water and clay is very common; e.g. in Hesiod, Opp. 61, when Zeus creates Pandora, he commands Hephaistos γαῖαν ὕδρι φέρειν: and the same idea occurs in the lines quoted by Schol. A from Xenophanes, which are to be read πάντες γὰρ γαίης τε καὶ ὕδατος ἐκγενόμεσθα· ἐκ γαίης γὰρ πάντα, καὶ εἰς γῆν πάντα τελευτᾷ.

100. ἀκλεῆς, neuter, adverbially. Others write ἀκλεῆς, nom. plur. by hyphaeresis for ἀκλεῆες, which perhaps has sufficient analogy to support it. See H. G. § 105, 4; Buttmann, Lexil. 296.

101. τῷδε, dative as with μάχεσθαι, etc.

102. πείρατα: it is hard to say whether in this and similar phrases the word has an abstract sense, “the issues of battle,” or a physical, “the rope-ends” (see μ 51, 162); the contending armies being regarded as puppets pulled this way and that by the powers above, who thus become “wire-pullers” in the most modern sense. The latter explanation, which was adopted by Ar. (Schol. N 359), though at variance with the general Homeric conception of the gods, who do not usually need such grossly corporeal means of influence, seems to be indicated by phrases like κατ’ ἴσα μάχῃ ἐτάσσουσέ Κρονίων A 386, εἰ δὲ θεὸς περ ἴσον τέλειεν πολέμον τέλος T 101, ἔριδα κρατερῇ ἐτάσσουσέ Κρονίων II 662, αἰνοτάτῃν ἔριδα πολέμοιο τάσσουσάν E 389: as well as in the very difficult lines

τοὶ δ’ ἔριδος κρατερῆς καὶ ὁμοίου πολέμοιο πείρατ’ ἐπαλλάξαντες ἐπ’ ἀμφοτέροισι τάσσουσάν,

N 358-9. We may perhaps compare the symbolical action of the Ephesians, when they connected the temple of their goddess by a rope with the city walls to enable her to help the defenders (Herod. i. 26), and of Polykrates who dedicated Rheneia to Apollo by binding it to Delos with a chain. The phrases in question are therefore perhaps to be regarded as conventional survivals from a more primitive stage of religious belief which did not die out till a later period from the region of popular superstition.

104. βιότοιο τελευτῇ, γράφεται καὶ θανάτοιο τελευτῇ, Did. (Vergil’s “mortis metas,” Aen. xii. 546).

δεξιτερῆς ἔλε χειρός, ἔπος τ' ἔφατ' ἔκ τ' ὀνόμαζεν· “ ἀφραίνεις, Μενέλαε διотреφές, οὐδέ τί σε χρὴ ἐσθλὸς Μυρμιδόνων βουλευφόρος ἡδ' ἀγορητής, ὅς ποτέ μ' εἰρόμενος μέγ' ἐγήθεεν φ' ἐνὶ οἴκῳ,

108. For δεξιτερῆς . . . χειρός Bentley would read δεξιτερῇ χεῖρα, on account of Fépos: cf. Ξ 137, Ω 671, α 121, etc.

109. This use of χρῆ with the gen. is elsewhere confined to the Odyssey. The form regularly used in this construction in the Iliad is χρεώ. For ἀνὰ δ' ἰσχεο Herodianus and apparently Ar. read ἀνὰ δὲ σχέο or ἀν δὲ σχέο.

111. ἐξ ἔριδος, “virtually ‘to fight a match,’” lit. to fight a battle arising from mere rivalry: cf. δ 343 ἐξ ἔριδος φιλομηλεῖδῃ ἐπάλαυσεν ἀναστάς, A 8 ἐριδι ξυνέηκε μάχεσθαι.

113-14. We have no incident in the Iliad to which these lines can refer; indeed they contradict I 352. They can only be explained as a rhetorical exaggeration used at the moment for a special purpose. Ar. appears, according to Didymos, to have read τοῦτόν γε and ἀντιμολῆσαι, and to have suggested δ καὶ μέγα φέρτατός ἐστιν in place of ὃ περ σέο πολλὸν ἀμείνων, which he considered rude to Menelaos.

117. The short α of ἀδείης is against the usage of the Homeric poems, which have retained the original δφ of δφέος and its compounds. As an emendation

Ahrens has suggested εἰ πέρ τ' ἀδδείης καὶ δει: others have preferred to regard 117-119 as an interpolation, the last couplet being made up of reminiscences of T 72-3 and E 409. The repetition δηλοῦ . . . δημοτῆτος occurs only here and 174; it is especially disagreeable in view of the fact that δημοτῆς regularly means the general engagement, not a single combat. See on T 20. For γόνυ κάμπτειν “to take rest,” cf. also ε 453. The phrase is common in tragedy.

120. See on Z 61.

125. When Gelon demanded the command of the Greek army from the embassy who had come to ask his help against the Persians, Syagros the Spartan envoy replied “ἦ κε μέγ' οἰμώξειεν ὁ Πελοπίδης Ἀγαμέμνων, πυθόμενος Σπαρτιήτας τὴν ἡγεμονίην ἀπαραιρῆσθαι ὑπὸ Γέλωνός τε καὶ Συρηκοσίων.” This is evidently an adaptation of the present line, and is an interesting proof of the date to which the consciousness survived that a short vowel, at least before a liquid, could be lengthened by the ictus alone. For the visit of Nestor to Peleus, when enlisting the Greek army, see A 765 sqq.

127. Zenod. appears to have read ὅς πάντων Ἀργείων ἐρέων γενεήν τε τόκον τε.

 τοὺς νῦν εἰ πτώσσοντας ὑφ' Ἑκτορι πάντας ἀκούσαι, πολλά κεν ἀθανάτοισι φίλας ἀνὰ χεῖρας αἰεΐρας 130
 θυμὸν ἀπὸ μελέων δύναι δόμον Ἄιδος εἴσω.
 αἱ γάρ, Ζεῦ τε πάτερ καὶ Ἀθηναίη καὶ Ἀπολλων, ἡβῶμ', ὥς δ' ἐπ' ὠκυρόφῳ Κελάδοντι μάχοντο ἀγρόμενοι Πύλιοί τε καὶ Ἀρκάδες ἐγχεσίμωροι, Φειᾶς παρ τείχεσσι, Ἰαρδάνου ἀμφὶ ῥέεθρα. 135
 τοῖσι δ' Ἐρευνθαλίων πρόμος ἴστατο, ἰσόθεος φῶς, τεύχε' ἔχων ὤμοισιν Ἀρηιθόιο ἀνακτος, δίου Ἀρηιθόου, τὸν ἐπὶ κλησιν κορυνήτην ἄνδρες κίκλησκον καλλίζωνοί τε γυναικες, οὐνεκ' ἄρ' οὐ τόξοισι μαχέσκετο δουρί τε μακρῷ, 140
 ἀλλὰ σιδηρεῖη κορύνῃ ῥήγνυσκε φάλαγγας.
 τὸν Λυκούργος ἔπεφνε δόλφ, οὐ τι κράτε' γε, στενωπῷ ἐν ὁδῷ, δθ' ἄρ' οὐ κορύνῃ οἱ δλεθρον ποτε μεῖρομενος μεγάλ' ἔστανε, taking μεῖρομενος as "being parted from his son." But, as Didymos points out, such a sense of μεῖρεσθαι is not Homeric. The reading, if admissible, would have the advantage of avoiding the awkward repetition of εἰρόμενος . . . ἐρέων, but would lose the essential contrast between οἰμώξει and ἐγήθεε (see Ludwig, i. 275; Aristonikos on I 616).

128. τόκον, "birth," i.e. parentage: apparently a more special term than γενεή, family. The word recurs in this phrase again in O 141, o 175, and in both it may have the same meaning, though there is a possible alternative, "offspring." This does not suit the present passage, though the Scholiasts put it forward (πατέρα καὶ παῖδα, Schol. A), and it was the prevalent meaning in later Greek (e.g. Ὀδύππου τόκος, Aesch. Sept. 372, 407). The only remaining instances of the word in Homer are T 119, P 5, both times in the physical sense of "childbearing." Cf. T 203, ἴδμεν δ' ἀλλήλων γενεήν, ἴδμεν τε τοκῆας.

129. This is the only case in Homer of the construction of ἀκούειν with acc. and participle, so common in later Greek. πεύδομαι is used in the same way only in δ 732.

130. In his "corrected commentaries" (ἐν τοῖς ἐξητασμένοις, see Ludwig i. 19, Lehrs p. 22) Ar. read βαρείας χεῖρας, "hands heavy with age."

135. This passage can hardly be reconciled with geographical facts. Φειᾶ is no doubt the same as Φεᾶ (o 297) in Elis; but there is nothing known of a Keladon or Iardanos anywhere near that town, nor, it would seem, are there any rivers that could correspond. Strabo wrote Ἀκίδωντι for Κελάδοντι, Χᾶας for Φειᾶς. Pausanias, v. 5, 9, identifies the Iardanos with the Akidas, on the authority of "a certain Ephesian." Ar. took κελάδοντι as an attribute of the Iardanos. The authorities and their various elucidations will be found in Ebeling's Lexicon, s.v. Κελάδων; it is clear that nothing short of the excision of 135 as copied from γ 292 with a reminiscence of o 297 (Christ), or a general assertion of an interpolator's incapacity (Köchly), will obviate the inconsistency. The cicerones of Olympia identified one of the scenes on the chest of Kypselos with this battle (Paus. v. 18, 6).

142. This Lykurgos is included in the list of early Arkadian kings given by Pausanias (viii. 4, 10), who further mentions the "narrow way" which was pointed out as the scene of the death of Areithoos, and was even adorned with his tomb (viii. 11, 4). This is no doubt however founded upon the Epic, rather than upon genuine local tradition. The στενωπός ὁδός evidently implies a pass so narrow as not to allow the κορυνήτης room to swing his club.

χραῖσμε σιδηρεῖη· πρὶν γὰρ Λυκούργος ὑποφθὰς δουρὶ μέσον περόνησεν, ὃ δ' ὕπτιος οὔδεις ἐρείσθη· 145 τεύχεα δ' ἐξενάριξε, τὰ οἱ πόρε χάλκεος Ἄρης.
 καὶ τὰ μὲν αὐτὸς ἔπειτα φόρει μετὰ μῶλον Ἄρης· αὐτὰρ ἐπεὶ Λυκούργος ἐνὶ μεγάροισιν ἐγήρα, δῶκε δ' Ἐρευθαλίῳ φῖλῳ θεράποντι φορῆναι.
 τοῦ δ' γε τεύχε' ἔχων προκαλίζετο πάντας ἀρίστους· 150 οἱ δὲ μάλ' ἐτρόμεον καὶ ἐδειδισαν οὐδέ τις ἔτλη· ἀλλ' ἐμὲ θυμὸς ἀνήκε πολυτλήμων πολεμίζειν θάρσει φῖ, γενεῇ δὲ νεώτατος ἔσκειν ἀπάντων.
 καὶ μαχόμεν οἱ ἐγὼ, δῶκεν δέ μοι εὖχος Ἀθήνη.
 τὸν δὴ μήκιστον καὶ κάρτιστον κτάνον ἄνδρα· 155
 πολλὸς γάρ τις ἔκειτο παρήγορος ἔνθα καὶ ἔνθα.
 εἴθ' ὥς ἡβώοιμι, βίη δέ μοι ἔμπεδος εἴη· τῷ κε τάχ' ἀντήσσει μάχης κορυθαίολος Ἔκτωρ.
 ὑμέων δ' οἷ περ ἔασιν ἀριστῆες Παναχαιῶν, οὐδ' οἱ προφρονέως μέμαθ' Ἔκτορος ἀντίον ἐλθεῖν." 160

149. It is clear that if the now aged Nestor took the armour in question in his early youth (153) from the man who had it from Lykurgos in his old age, the Areithoos from whom Lykurgos took it cannot by any reasonable chronology have left a son young enough to be fighting in the tenth year of the siege of Troy; yet in l. 10 this would seem to be implied. Moreover the Areithoos of l. 8 lived in Arnein Boeotia, whereas Areithoos here seems to be an Arkadian. The only way in which the two passages can be brought into harmony is by supposing that δ' in l. 9 refers to "King Areithoos" of the line above, so that "Areithoos the Mace-man" had a son, "King Areithoos," who, we must suppose, migrated from Arkadia to Boeotia; and that Menesthios is grandson of Areithoos I. and son of Areithoos II. This explanation is however very forced, and leads rather to the conclusion that the author of the present passage was as vague about his legendary history as about his geography. We shall elsewhere (A 670) see reasons for believing that a speech by Nestor about his youthful prowess offered a convenient opportunity for later interpolation.

153. φῖ, i.e. in my hardihood: see A 393. This is obviously better than the two ways in which φ can be taken to be the pronoun of the third person: (1) to fight against his bravery; (2) in the courage of ύ, viz. of my spirit. No parallel can be adduced for either of these; for (1) the nearest is the use of βῆ in the sense of "a strong man," for (2) the use of the quasi-personal epithet μεγαλήτωρ with θυμός. Zenod. is said to have read θάρσει ἐμῷ, but to judge from his usual practice this is probably a mistake, and means that he explained θάρσει φῖ to mean θάρσει ἐμῷ.

156. παρήγορος seems to mean "sprawling," having passed through the sense of "dangling loosely" from that of "hung on at the side," which we have in the case of the trace-horse. Cf. Aesch. Prom. 363, ἀχρεῖον καὶ παρὰ πόρον δέμας. So in Ψ 603 it means "loose, uncontrolled," in mind. For πολλός in the sense of "big" cf. A 307, Ψ 245, Σ 493, etc.: μέγας καὶ πολλὸς ἐγένεο, Herod. 7, 14; πολλή μὲν ἐν βροτοῖσι . . . Κύπρις, Eur. Hippol. 1, cf. 443; and often. The combination πολλός τις is common in Herod., but is not elsewhere found in Homer.

160. With this use of οἱ of the second person cf. T 324, ὃ δέ . . . πολεμίζω. The use does not seem natural to us, and is made even less so by ἔασιν in the previous line, where we should have looked for ἐστέ.

171. The form πεπάλασθε (and πεπαλάσθαι in i 331) can hardly be right. If they are derived from παλάσσω to scatter, sprinkle, the form should be πεπάλασθε, which was read by some here, but expressly repudiated by Aristarchos. There is no other instance of the use of παλάσσομαι to mean “drawing lots”; whereas πᾶλλομαι does occur in that sense (O 191, Ω 400), and has a reduplicated aor. ἀμπεπαλὼν. We should therefore read πεπάλασθε here and πεπαλέσθαι in i with Döderlein and Nauck; unless indeed we are prepared to follow Ahrens in regarding the text-form as an aorist with an α- stem, on the analogy of εἶπα, ἤρεια, which certainly seems insufficient. ὅς κε λάχῃσιν looks like the use of ὅς to introduce an indirect question. But this is against all the history and use of the pronoun: the sentence really means, not “draw lots to see who shall be chosen,” but “draw lots (for one man), and he shall be chosen.” Practically of course the meaning is the same, as the idea of a question is inherent in the drawing of lots; but theoretically the distinction must be carefully observed. Cf. B 365 (Delbrück, Etyim. Forsch. i. 41).

177. See Γ 318: the same variant θεοῖς, ιδέ occurs here also.

179. On the form of the prayer see B 413, Γ 285.

184. ἐνδέξια, A 597. Some have seen in the use of the word an allusion to the sacred nature of an appeal by lot; but it may be no more than a graphic touch. It is evident that the marking in 175 did not imply any writing, as no one understands any mark but his own.

186-9. Observe the rapid changes of subject in these lines: ἱκανέ, the herald; βάλε and ὑπέσχεθε, Aias; ἔμβαλεν, the herald; γνῶ, Aias.

192. δοκέω, to think, with infin., seems to occur only here in Homer; but σ 382 shews the transitional stage, "to seem to oneself." δύω in the next line is of course an aorist.

195. ἐφ' ὑμείων, as T 255 ἐπ' αὐτόφιν εἶπτο σιγῇ. The idea seems to be, "Do not let the Trojans hear your words, lest they may endeavour to counteract your petitions by prayers of their own"; this he immediately revokes by the καὶ in 196, virtually = "nay." There was a widely-spread primitive idea that every local or national god could be approached only by a particular form of words, which was therefore carefully concealed from an enemy. Thus the title by which the god of Rome was to be addressed was concealed, as a state-secret of the highest importance. 195-199 were athetized by Zenod., Aristophanes, and Ar. on the ground that "they are not consistent in the character of Aias, and that he raises objections to himself (ἀνθυποφέρει ἑαυτῷ) absurdly"; a judgment which does not commend itself.

197. For ἐκὼν Ar. read ἐλὼν; but ἐκὼν and ἀέκων are sometimes joined more from a desire to emphasizing the second than in strict logic; the phrase indeed may fairly be compared to αὐτόθεν αὐτῶς and οὐκ ἐθέλων ἐθελοσύνη, ε 155, and γ 272, Aesch. P. V. 19, etc., for somewhat similar reduplications. For the subj. δίηται cf. the instances in H. G. § 276 a.

198. ἰδρεῖη as II 359, ἰδρεῖη πολέμοιο. Aristophanes seems to have read οὐδὲ μὲν ἰδ. The best MSS. give οὐδέ τ' διδρεῖη. οὕτως, Döderlein conj. οὕτως, which is certainly more Homeric, "a mere dolt."

(A has ea written over η). Elsewhere they vary between the two forms, but ea is most in accordance with the tradition. (La Roche, H. U. 14, 6.)

212. βλοσυροῖσι, "fierce," a sort of oxymoron with μειδιῶν, like δακρυβέν γελάσασα, Z 484. Curtius and others explain βλοσυρός as "big, burly," deriving it directly from βλαθ = varidh to grow, cf. βλωθρός "tall" (Gr. Et. no. 658). But "fierce" is the universal meaning of the word elsewhere in Homer (O 608, A 36) and Hesiod (Scut. Her. 147, 175, 250), and generally in later Greek. Plato however uses it to mean "burly," "bluff." In προσώπασι Fick would see a relic of a genuine Aeolism, πρὸς ὀππασι; but "smiling at his eyes" would be a strange expression, and Fick does not suggest any other interpretation. προσώπατα occurs σ 192. νέρθε, as opposed to the face. So we have πόδες καὶ χεῖρες ὑπερθε.

214. μέν, so Ar.: MSS. μέγ'. There is little to choose between the two.

219. The "tower-like" shield of Aias is his constant attribute: it is the favourite type of the coins of his island of Salamis, and his son Eurysakes is named from it. Cf. A 526. The description, ἥτε πύργος, seems to suggest that, instead of being round or oval, it was oblong, like the scutum of the Roman legionary. This shape was not known in classical Greece, but it is attested for the pre-Dorian times by the representations of warriors on the archaic intaglios found by Dr. Schliemann at Mycenae (see J. H. S. iv. 283).

220. χάλκεον ἑπταβόειον, explained in 223. The seven layers of hide were probably fastened on to a wooden frame; the layer of metal was nailed on the top of them. Observe the obvious allusion in Τυχίος . . . τεύχων, and cf. Τέκτων Ἀρμονίδης E 59; and for the use of κάμε, B 101.

221. Ἵλῃ, in Boeotia, B 500, where the first syllable is long (in arsi), E 708. It has been suggested that this may be the town of the same name in Cyprus; but Homer never shews such knowledge of distant countries as would be implied in his naming a mere artificer in Cyprus. Kinyras, the only Cyprian he mentions by name, was, as we know, a legendary and semi-divine character there (A 20); so that the breastplate which he gives to Agamemnon is another matter.

222. αἰόλον, "sparkling" with the light upon the metal surface. This is the only tenable meaning of the word; Buttman's explanation "easily moved" (Lexil. p. 65) is in the last resource based upon a mistaken notion as to the μίτρη (see E 707). "Agile" is the last epithet to be applied to this shield of Aias.

226. οἴοθεν οἶος, “man to man” (as 39), by experience in single combat; an ironical repetition of Hector's own words.
230. ἀπομηνύσας, giving his wrath full vent; see on B 772.

231. τοῖοι οἳ, cf. P 164; the οἳ is epexegetic of τοῖοι, not correlative; we might have had τοῖοι ἀντιάσαι, as in β 60. Heyne and others would reject 229-232, with little reason. Indeed the last line is evidently alluded to in 235.

235. The usual course in a single combat was to draw lots for the first cast; see Γ 324-5. Aias, in telling Hector to begin, assumes a certain superiority, as though condescending to give his enemy every advantage, as in the old story, “Messieurs les Anglais, tirez les premiers.” Similarly in Φ 440 Poseidon, as the older and wiser, tells Apollo to take the first shot. This is why Hector feels himself treated like a child. πειρήτιζε, i.e. try if you can frighten me: cf. T 200.

238. The form βῶν is unique. It has been supposed to be a contraction for βωλην, but this is quite incredible, and is not supported by the analogy of βώσαντι in M 337. It is the accusative of βούς, which is twice used to mean “a shield” simply (τυκτῆρι βοεσσὶ M 105, βόας αἶας M 137). The exact form of the word is however doubtful. There was a variant βῶ for βῶα, but as the Homeric form must have been βῶφα this does not deserve much consideration. Aristophanes read βῶν. We have however some (very slight) testimony indicating that βῶς was a form in actual use, in Hesych., βῶν· ἀσπίδα, Ἀργεῖοι; and Priscian, vi. 69, “et Aeolis et Doris βῶς dicunt pro βούτι,” cf. Lat. būs, and Aeol. ῶν for οῦν. Hinrichs (Hom. El. p. 98) thinks that βῶν may represent βοφ-ν, but J. Schmidt has pointed out that it may be a very ancient form answering exactly to the Skt. gām, acc. of gaus. (see H. G. § 97).

239. The sense of ταλαύρινον and the construction of τό both admit of doubt, and hence several alternative explanations of this line have been offered. The common solution (that of Aristarchos) is that τὸ is the relative agreeing in sense with βῶν, as though σάκος had been used instead: just as we have τό following αἰχμή in Α 238; cf. also Φ 167, μ 74. Then ταλαύρινον will mean “of tough hide,” from ταλα(φ)ος enduring, and the translation will be “which is a sturdy weapon for me to fight with.” The title of Ares, ταλαύρινος πολεμστής (E 289, etc.) will then mean “the warrior with shield of sturdy hide.” This is possible in itself; but as the adjective recurs only in these phrases, it is hardly possible here to separate ταλ. from πολεμίζειν. If these two then be joined, we may take τό either as an acc., “therefore it is in my power,” or as a nominative representing the whole of the preceding sentence, “that is to me.” With the last alternative again we may either take ταλαύρινος in the sense given above, “that is to me (in my eyes) to fight as a warrior with shield of sturdy hide"; or we may derive the adjective directly from root τ(α)λα, and divide it ταλα-φρυνος, "shield-bearing"; "that is what I call fighting as a shield-bearer." And this appears to be the best explanation (so Hentze). It still remains a question whether ταλαύρων is masculine, in a construction of accusative with infin., or a neuter used adverbially. The phrase ταλαύρωνος πολεμοστής appears to be in favour of the former alternative.

240. ἐπαῖξαι, to charge, as ἐπαῖξασκε κατὰ μόθον Σ 159, Ἑκτορ ἐπαῖσσω Ψ 64. Fighting in the chariot is here opposed to σταδίῃ, battle on foot.

241. μέλπεσθαι, to dance the war-dance to Ares. So when Meriones "dodges" to avoid a spear, Aineias calls him an ὀρχηστής, Π 617. The allusion is evidently to the primitive war-dances in which all savage peoples delight, the warriors going through a whole battle-scene in dumb-show. Hector means, "I can dance the war-dance not only in mimicry at a feast of Ares, but in grim reality on the battlefield." The custom, as we know, survived till historical times in Greece, under the name of πυρρίχη.

242. Hector breaks off, that he may not be suspected of talking only to gain time and spy out a weak spot. As Hentze remarks, οὐ γὰρ . . . τύχωμι is really a parenthesis between ἀλλά and the act of throwing, which forms a practical "principal sentence." Cf. Φ 487-489.

244. A large part of the description of the fight is told in the same words: the duel between Paris and Menelaos. 244 = Γ 355, 250-4 = Γ 356-360, 256-7 = Ε 782-3, 259 = Γ 348, 264-5 = 403-4.

247. διὰ, in the sense of "passing through and out of," regularly takes the gen. (see H. G. § 216); here, where the idea "out of" is not in place, it has the acc.

255. ἐκσπασσαμένῳ, i.e. out of the shields in which they were fixed. Some of the old critics seem to have held that ἔγχεα must here mean ἐλφῆ, in order to give the participle its usual meaning, "drawing" a sword. It was probably on this ground that Zenod. rejected 255. 257 (and probably 258).

259. The reading of the MSS. here, as in Γ 348 (q. v.), is χαλκός.

269. ἱν' ἀπέλεθρον, see E 245. ἐπέρεισε, E 856. Here it seems to mean “pressed into the spear immeasurable strength.”

270. μυλοειδέϊ, like the upper stone of the ancient quern or handmill, such as is turned by the maids in η 104, etc. So μυλάκεσσι, M 161.

272. ἄσπιδ' ἐνιχρὶμφθεῖς, so Ar.: MSS. ἀσπίδι ἐγχευμφθεῖς. This word seems to mean “pressed into” his shield by the force of the blow, which drives the shield hard upon him. Apollo is further.” This chivalrous acknowledgment of an enemy's prowess is rare in Homer, and recalls rather the stories of mediaeval knighthood.

291-2 are no doubt interpolated here from 377-8, where they are quite in place. ἐτέροισι evidently implies a general combat between the two armies, and is not consistent with the single combat, which is never put forward as intended to have any decisive result upon the course of the war. Nor is there, either before or afterwards, any suggestion that the duel is to be renewed. 293 also was justly athetized by Aristarchos, as a weak repetition from 282. The speech runs quite smoothly when the three lines are omitted.

294. ὥς σύ τε, as though a second clause with καὶ ἐγώ subordinate to ὥς were to be added; instead of which we have in 296 an independent sentence with the fut. in place of the subj.

295. Athetized by Ar. on the ground that by the special reference to ἔται (cf. Z 239) and ἐταῖροι it unduly limits the more general πάντας Ἀχαιοὺς.

298. μοι seems to be a dativus ethicus belonging to the whole sentence, “on my account.” εὐχόμεναι, with thanksgivings; so εὐχόμεναι, v. 357. θεῖον ἀγῶνα, the holy assemblage of worshippers. Some take εὐχόμεναι μοι together, and understand it of quasi-divine honours paid to Hector, who θεὸς ὡς τίετο δῆμῳ: but it is surely not allowable to press a rhetorical expression into its literal sense in the very place where mention of the θεῖος ἀγὼν makes such a meaning obviously impious. There was a variant θδονται for δύσονται, apparently in the sense “do sacrifice to the assembled gods.” But such a construction is quite impossible; though θεῖος ἀγὼν certainly has this sense in Z 376.

302. ἀρθμήσαντε “reconciled,” only here; cf. ἀρθμοι, π 427.

305. δίδου, by the side of δῶκε, marks the second gift as simultaneous with the first; see H. G. § 71, 1. According to the later legends, both these gifts proved ill-omened to the recipients, Hector being dragged behind the chariot of Achilles by the belt of Aias, who in turn slew himself with the sword of Hector; for

310. ἀελπτεύοντες, still despairing of his safety, not yet able to believe that he was indeed alive.

313. With this line begins the second and probably later part of the book; see introduction. A large portion of it consists of lines which are found in other parts of the Iliad, and, in two or three cases, in the Odyssey. 313 = I 669, 314-5 = B 402-3, 316 = τ 421, 317-320 = A 465-8, 321 = ξ 437, 322 = A 102, 323 = A 469, 323-6 = I 92-5, 326 = A 78.

316. ἀμφὶ ἔπον, handled, “treated” it, i.e. cut off the superfluous parts, in order to make it ready for roasting. διέχευαν, divided into joints; μίστυλλον, cut into slices.

321. So Herodotus enumerates among the privileges of the Spartan kings (vi.

56), τῶν θυομένων ἀπάντων τὰ δέρματά τε καὶ τὰ νῶτα λαμβάνειν σφεας. Cf. Verg. Aen. viii. 183, “vescitur Aeneas . . . perpetui tergo bovis.”

332. κυκλήσομεν on the analogy of κατακόμεν must be aor. subj.; “let us wheel hither,” i.e. bring on waggons. The use of oxen to draw waggons occurs in Homer only here and in Ω 782. They are yoked to the plough, K 352, N 703.

334-5 were athetized by Ar. on the sufficient ground that the making of a τύμβος ἀκριτος was inconsistent with taking home the bones: a practice which we do not elsewhere find in the Homeric age, though it is alluded to by Aesch. Ag. 435-444. The use of ἕκαστος too is strange; the natural meaning would be, “that every man may carry his own bones back.” As it stands, we must take it to mean “that every man may take somebody's bones back to the children of their owner."

336. ἐξαγόντες, a difficult expression. Ar. explained it "marching out," a sense in which the word occurs in Xen. and later Greek; for the Homeric use he compared ἐσάγουσα (Z 252), explained to mean "entering in," but this is not satisfactory. ἐξάγειν is used by Thuc. in the sense of "extending" the circuit of a circumvallation (I 93, ὁ περίβολος ἐξήχθη), and though the word is more naturally used of "drawing" a line of walls than of "raising" a mound, still this is the most plausible explanation. Others again explain "bringing earth from the plain." It would be most natural to understand "bringing the corpses out of the plain," but this has already been mentioned in 332.

337. ἄκριτον, one for all alike. The idea seems to have been to combine utility with piety by making the burial mound serve as part of the circuit of the walls. The mound is however never mentioned afterwards as part of the works of defence.

339. πύλας does not necessarily mean more than one gate, in which sense Ar. took it. But it is probable that the poet regarded the wall as having several gates; see note on M 120.

340. εἴη MSS.: εἴη G. Hermann. There is a certain case of this form of the subj. in μερεῖω Ψ 47, and possible cases in I 245, Σ 88, ο 448 (for εἴθη), ρ 586. The following remarks may be made upon the point:—(1) The form εἴη would necessarily imply a subj. termination -ω, such as is postulated by Christ, v. on l. 72. εἴ(σ)η could never give εἴη, or (which La Roche would require) ἦη; there is no analogy with the vocalic stems θη- στη- and the like. (2) If a form εἴη existed, it would be almost certain to be corrupted into the ordinary εἴη. (3) The use of the opt. after a principal tense is far commoner than we should expect. But the instances commonly given require important limitation. In ρ 243 ὥς εἴθε after an imperative expresses a wish, and here the opt. is in place. In A 344 the reading is wrong. In ρ 250 we may read εἴθη. In no other case do we find the pure opt. in final sentences after principal tenses, and the opt. with ἄν and κεν, though not uncommon, is entirely confined to the Odyssey. (See Weber, Entwicklungsgesch. der Absichtssätze, pp. 43-45.) These considerations seem decisive in favour of the subj. here, if Christ's suggestion can be accepted, and on this etymologists have yet to decide. If not, the only resource is either to suppose that in 439, where the opt. is in place, we have a piece of older poetry, which has been worked into the story by composing Nestor's speech out of it, while leaving one refractory word in the original form; or else to consider εἴη as a false archaism on the mistaken analogy of θεῖη and similar subjunctives. It is curious that another question between η and γ arises in the same line, as there was a variant ἱππηλασίῃ (Schol. B), where the word was taken as a substantivum—a reading which deserves consideration. For the ordinary reading, where it is an adj., compare ἱππῆλατος, δ 607.

342. ἧ κε . . . ἐρυκάκοι: here, in the relative sentence with κε, the opt. is quite in order; see the numerous instances in H. G. §§ 304-306. ἀμφὶς ἐούσα appears to mean "surrounding the camp"; but this sense of surrounding completely properly belongs only to περί: ἀμφὶ and ἀμφὶς mean properly "on both sides"; then they come to signify "on different sides," and so can be used to indicate surrounding, not by a continuous line, but by individual points—a distinction corresponding to that between umher and herum in German. The δεσμοὶ ἀμφὶς ἔχοντες in θ 340 seem however to shew that ἀμφὶς came ultimately to be identical with περὶ, though perhaps only at a late date. I do not find any other instance however in Homer. In Γ 115 ἀμφί is clearly "on both sides" of each heap, not "all around." Perhaps therefore we ought to take it to mean here "apart from" the wall; the trench is generally conceived as being some distance away from the wall itself, and ἐγγύθι shews at all events that they were not to be in immediate contact, like the modern moat with a rampart.

Half of the following passage (344-405) is made up of lines found in other parts of the Iliad.

346. τετρηχυῖα, see on B 95; and for the assembly at the gates of Priam's palace, B 788.

352. ψευσάμενοι is not elsewhere found in H. with an accusative. Hence some take ὄρκια to be an "accus. of relation," "having been false in the matter of the oath."

353. This line was evidently added in order to supply a verb to the phrase οὐ νύ τι κέρδιον ἡμῖν, which does not need one. The clause ἵνα μὴ ῥέξομεν ὧδε cannot be translated so as to make good sense: it looks as though it were meant for "unless we do thus." But for such a sense the Greek language affords no support. Aristarchos, while obelizing the line, read ἵνα for ἵνα, which does not help matters.

357. φίλα, pleasing (not "friendly").

362. ἀπόφημι, to declare outright: cf. I 422.

363. Ἀργεος, here in the general sense of the Peloponnesos: Helen of course had been brought from Sparta. οἴκοθεν, from my own store.

368-9 are omitted by A.

371. There seems to be no reason for this advice here: the line is probably interpolated, owing to the similarity of the preceding line, from Σ 299, where it is appropriate, as the Trojans are camping in the plain near the Greek camp.

375. ἔπος, “proposal,” which however is expressed not in a direct form, but politely as a supposition; as though “make to them this proposition; we suppose they will be willing,” etc. It is not necessary to supply any apodosis to αἶ κε. εἰπέμεναι represents the 3d person imperative, see on 79.

380. Wrongly interpolated from Σ 298; here the phrase κατὰ στρ. ἐν τελέεσσιν is quite inappropriate; cf. 371. The best MSS. omit it in the text.

381. ἡῶθεν, next day; the Trojan assembly must, like the Greek council, have been held late at night. The Greek assembly, it may be presumed, is being held to carry into effect the decision of the preceding council. But the want of clearness in marking the passage of the night is quite unlike the real Epic style.

383. According to A 806 it was the ship of Odysseus, not of Agamemnon, which marked the place of assembly.

387. ἄ κε . . . γένοιτο is not part of the message, but apparently a courteous introduction by Ἰδαῖος himself; Mr. Monro compares “an it please you.”

393. ἢ μὴν, virtually “although”: this clause shews how such a conjunctive sense may arise in simple particles introducing a paratactic clause, where the concessive quality is given only ἄψορρον δ' Ἰδαῖος ἔβη προτὶ Ἴλιον ἱρήν.

οἱ δ' ἔατ' εἰν ἀγορῇ Τρῶες καὶ Δαρδανίωνες by the context. Τρῶες, Antenor seems to be regarded as the leader of a popular party. Cf. Γ 149, 454. For μήν some MSS. read μν.

394. ἠνώγεον, so MSS.: Spitzner and most subsequent edd. read ἠνώγει(ν). In form it must be the imperf. of a secondary present ἀνωγέω (like γηγωνέω by the side of γέγωνα), of which however there is no further evidence. Bentley's ἠνωγον (as I 578, etc.) is therefore preferable, as an aorist; see note on A 313, and for another view H. G. § 27. It may be observed that the change to the 3d plur. is natural, in order to shew that the subject is not the same as that of οὐ φησιν.

400. Ἀλεξάνδροιο, ablative gen. "from A.": cf. A 596.

402. ὀλέθρου πείρατα, "issues of destruction": though the metaphor of the end of a rope is suggested by ἐφήπται. See 102, B 15.

408. There is a slight pause after νεκροῖσιν, "as concerning the dead."

409. The sense seems to be "there is no grudging concerning dead corpses, as to giving them the consolation of fire speedily." The last clause would in Attic be introduced by μή οὐ. Mr. Monro (H. G. § 234 fin.) regards the infin. as "equivalent in sense to the genitive depending on a noun"; "there is no grudging about the appeasing." It seems simpler to regard it as a case of epexegetis, where the original dative sense of the infin. is still felt, "for the appeasing by fire." For οὐ φειδῶ with gen. compare X 243-4, μηδέ τι δούρων ἔστω φειδωλή. πυρὸς, as in πυρὸς λελαχεῖν, πρήσαι (B 415, q.v.), etc.

411. ὄρκια, the oath of truce. It is not clear why Idaios lifts his sceptre to all the gods, when only Zeus, the presiding deity of oaths, is named: see K 328, where the sceptre is again used as the instrument of the oath as in A 234.

412. τό as the article with σκῆπτρον looks like a later use. Mr. Pratt (in MS.) suggests δ.

414. Δαρδανίωνες only here and Θ 154; it is of course a patronymic; cf. υἱες Ἀχαιῶν.

415. ποτιδέγμενοι: Cobet (M. C. 380) conj. ποτιδέχμενοι, which is accepted by Christ. See B 794.

416. ἀπέειπεν, "declared," as I 309, 481, Ψ 361, and elsewhere; cf. ἀπόφημι in 362. In A 515 and other places it means "refuse."

418. There is a slight change of construction in ἕτεροι δὲ μεθ' ὕλην, as though another ἕτεροι had introduced the preceding clause.

420. ὠτρύνοντο νέκυσ, so Ar.: MSS. ὠτρυνον νέκυσ, but the active ὠτρύνειν is always transitive. νέκυσ, acc. pl. as ω 417: see H. G. § 100 for other instances. But the line is judged spurious by van Herwerden, Christ, and Nauck; no doubt rightly.

421-2 = τ 433-4. It may be observed that the lines appear to have been adopted in the Odyssey from this passage, not vice versa; as the omission there of the clause οὐρανὸν εἰσανιών makes the second line very awkward.

423. ἤντεον can hardly be a correct form; we should rather read ἤνταον.

424. χαλεπῶς ἦν: for the use of the adverb instead of the adj. with εἶμι see H. G. § 162, 4, a. ἀλλά in the next line means "but yet by washing them they could discern; and so," etc. There is no reason to limit the shedding of tears to the Trojans, as some have done. Priam forbids them to cry aloud, which was the habit of a non-Greek people, see Ω 721: hence the silence of the Greeks does not need mention.

428. ἐπενήνεον only here, and παρηνήνεον in Od. It is a reduplicated intensive of νέω, νῆέω. For the long syllable Curtius (Vb. ii. 153, 390) compares δαι-δάλλω, κω-κύω, etc. Bekker however conj. ἐπενήεον, which is probably right.

431-2 can hardly be considered genuine if 420 is to be condemned. Nauck and Christ however raise no objection to this couplet.

433. In the compound ἀμφιλύκη ἀμφί seems to give the idea of doubtfulness, hesitation between two sides, just as in our "twilight," where twi- "is used in the sense rather of 'double' or 'half.' The ideas of double and half are liable to confusion; cf. A.S. twæðen, doubt, from the hovering between two opinions," Skeat, Dict. s.v. This sense is common in later Greek compounds, ἀμφιλογος, ἀμφιγνοσι, etc., but there is no other instance in Homer. With this line τὸν δὲ μέγ' ὀχθήσας προσέφη νεφεληγερέτα Ζεὺς·

another day must begin, but the mention of the night is even more imperatively demanded here than in 381.

434. ἔγρετο MSS., was awaked or aroused (ἐγείρω); ἔγρετο La Roche and others, from ἐγείρω, “gathered”; and this is perhaps preferable. The same question arises on Ω 789.

443-464 were rejected as an interpolation by Zenod., Aristophanes, and Aristarchos, on the ground that the same question arises in the beginning of M with no allusion to this passage. In this they are followed by most editors; and if we accept M 1-34 as genuine there can be no doubt that their judgment is right. If however that passage be rejected, as seems to be necessary, there is no decisive argument against the episode here; though it is a suspicious fact that out of the twenty-two lines the following appear more or less in other places: 443 = Δ 1, 445-6 = E 420-1, 449-50 = M 5-6, 454 = A 517, 455 = Θ 201, 460 = B 140, 462 = M 31, 464 = E 274, etc.; or nearly half.

445. Poseidon is not generally found in Olympus unless specially summoned, cf. T 13-14.

447. ἐνίψει, will declare his intentions to the gods in order to ask their approbation. This fut. of ἐνέπω recurs only in β 137, λ 148. For the ε from root sep see Curt. Et. p. 467, no. 632; the correctness of the form is shown by the use in Pindar of ἐνίπτω, which is apparently a later deduction from the Homeric word.

451. ὅσον sc. γῆν, so Ar. and A, with the Ambrosian palimpsest: ὅσον is the reading of Zenod. and the vulgate. So also 458.

452. τὸ ἐγώ, so Ar.: A and other MSS. τὸ τ' ἐγώ. The hiatus is harsh immediately after the main caesura.

453. See Φ 446 (where Poseidon alone builds the wall), Pind. O. viii. 31: the story seems to be later than the older parts of the Iliad (cf. however Z 438). ἀθλήσαντε, so best MSS. (Ar. -σαντες), with much toil; cf. O 30, the only other instance in H. πολλοσσαμεν, “built,” cf. πεπόλιστο T 217. For ἦρψ most MSS. read ἥρωι as a dactyl. So θ 483.

- “ ὦ πόποι, ἐννοσίγαι’ εὐρυσθενές, οἶον ἔειπες. 455

463. ἀμαλδύνηται: this verb recurs only in the same connexion M 18, 32. Curtius (Et. p. 230, no. 255, b) connects it with βραδύς, Skt. mṛdu-s for nardus, Ksl. mladā, tender.

464. For this line as a sign of interpolation see E 431.

467. παρέστασαν, so MSS.: Bentley, followed by Cobet (M. C. p. 296), read παρέσαν, and the use of the aorist, “arrived” then and there, not “had come,” gives additional point to the narrative, besides saving the F of Φόινος.

468. This is one of the few allusions in Homer to the legend of the Argonauts. The others are in Φ 40, Ψ 746, and μ 69-72. Lemnos is mentioned also in B 722, Θ 230. The Minyan colony there seems to be regarded as preserving a friendly neutrality towards the Greeks. In I 72 the supply of wine is said to come from Thrace.

470. χωρὶς, specially.

471. μέτρα, as Ψ 268, β 355, implying some recognized quantity.

472. ἔνθεν ἄρ’, ἐνθ’ ἄρα, Cobet (M. C. 296), to save the digamma.

474. αὐτῇσι, “whole” or “live,” as opposed to the hides.

475. Rejected by Zenod., Aristoph., and Ar., on the ground that ἀνδραπόδος is a later word, unknown to Homer. The heteroclite dat. ἀνδραπόδεσσι does not recur in Greek: it seems to suggest the derivation from ἀνδρὸς ποῦς, which is however very doubtful. Zenod. ἀνδραπόδοισι. Ar. also objected to the (fifth) repetition of ἄλλοι.

478. There is no reason for confining σφιν to the Greeks alone; Zeus gives both sides alike ominous warning of the coming battles.

482. See I 713, τ 427. δῶρον seems to mean "the gift (of the gods) consisting in sleep." Ovid. translates by "carpebant munera somni," Fasti, iii. 185.

 ἀκροτάτῃ κορυφῇ πολυδειράδος Οὐλύμπιοιο.

Θ

The plan of this book is simple. Zeus, in accordance with the promise given to Thetis in Book I., forbids the gods to take any part in the war, in order that the Trojans may gain the upper hand. The Greeks are accordingly defeated, by means of a divine panic; and after a short rally, in which the archery of Teukros plays a chief part, are again driven back to the ships. Hera and Athene, attempting to go to their assistance, are stopped by command of Zeus, and Hector and the Trojans, flushed with success, bivouac on the plain, in full hopes of capturing the Greek camp next day. The narrative is clear and consistent with itself; the chief difficulties with regard to the book consist in the question of its position in the scheme of the poem as a whole.

Grote held that Θ was a part of the original "Achilleis," and followed immediately on A, the intervening books being an interpolated "Ilias." There can be no doubt that the beginning of the book stands in close relation with the end of A; and the idea that the prohibition to the gods should follow the promise to Thetis is probably correct. But there is a great objection to the supposition that the book as a whole occupied a place in any original scheme of an Iliad. This lies in the fact that so large a number of lines is found in other passages as to give to considerable portions all the appearance of centos made up from other books previously existing. This is especially noticeable in the transition from the opening scene in Olympus to the actual fighting; see note on line 28. From 28 to 72 every line, except 33-37 and half of 51, occurs elsewhere; and in the rest of the book, excluding repetitions of messages and other lines within the book itself, no less than 203 lines out of 461 occur elsewhere in the Iliad and Odyssey. It may be added that the sudden changes in the fortune of war, without adequate cause in the defeat of individual Greek heroes, are hardly worthy of the best Epic economy.

There is a sufficient motive for the interpolation of this book in the desire to fit Book ix., which, as we shall see, is almost undoubtedly of later origin, into its place in the story; for it presupposes a defeat of the Greeks.

Here, as elsewhere in passages of probably later origin, there are possibly fragments of old poetry worked in; this is perhaps the case with the ἀριστεία of Teukros, which is quite in the Homeric spirit, and contains very few lines which reappear anywhere else. From 266 to 329 there are only ten lines which recur outside this book, and of these several are quite formal. Christ thinks that the opening passage, 1-27, is also older than the rest. This is possible, but these lines do not fit in between A and Λ in their present form.

In spite of this apparent want of originality in the composition of the book, it has undoubtedly great spirit and movement. If such a fancy may be permitted, one might almost say that it is such a work as might be expected from the author of Book IX.; one who was a rhetorician of the highest order rather than an Epic poet in the proper sense, trusting for effect rather to his speeches than his narrative, and depending to a certain extent upon intimate familiarity with the older poetry in order to produce so much of a story as was necessary to form a basis for his own splendid work. In any case we must not ascribe to him several passages of some length which, on any theory of the origin of the book, can hardly be considered as anything but poor interpolations; see 28-40, 184-212, 524-541.

1. This line was placed by Zenodotos after 52.

4. ἐπὶ, simply “thereat.” It does not necessarily imply the idea of subjection, but is commonly used of any phenomenon following in connexion with another.

5. θείαιναι, a form which recurs, only in this particular phrase, in Θ 20, θ 341.

6 is omitted by the two best MSS., AD.

7. For θεός Aristophanes read θεῶν. τό γε anticipates διακέρσαι, “this, namely to thwart.” For the verb cf. O 467 μάχης ἐπὶ μήδεα κείρει δαιμόν, and ἐνικλᾶν Θ 408.

12. πληγαῖς, sc. with lightning, as 455, O 17. For οὐ κατὰ κόσμον cf. B

214 and 264. Οὐλύμπόνδε, i.e. far away from the battlefield, cf. 456.

13. The following passage seems to have been in the mind of the author of Hesiod’s Theogony, where we find several similar lines: thus Theog. 720, Τάρταρος ἡρόεις is τόσσον ἔνερθ’ ὑπὸ γῆς ὅσον οὐρανός ἐστ’ ἀπὸ γαίης: 726, τὸν περὶ χάλκεον ἔρκος ἐλήλαται: 782, πύλας δ’ ἐπέθηκε Ποσειδῶν χαλκείας: 811, ἐνθα δὲ μαρμαραὶ τε πύλαι καὶ χάλκεος οὐδός.

14. The βέρεθρον reminds us of the famous βάραθρον at Athens. The word is used again of the cave of Skylla in μ 94.

18. I have followed Nicanor (with L. Lange and Döderlein) in putting a comma after πάντες and a colon at the end of the next line, so that κρεμάσαντες goes closely with πειρήσασθε, “fasten a rope, and try me.” With the ordinary punctuation, in which there is a colon after πάντες and no stop after κρεμάσαντες, it is necessary to assume a rather harsh change of construction, “the participle being regarded as half independent, and the imperative being added in 20 as though another finite verb had preceded.” (So Ameis.)

19. It is curious that this line, which evidently alludes to a mere trial of strength by pulling at a rope, ἐκυσσίνδα, should have been made the base of all sorts of mystical interpretations and esoteric myths from the earliest times. Thus in Plato we find, Theaet. 153 c, τὴν χρυσὴν σείραν ὡς οὐδὲν ἄλλο ἢ τὸν ἥλιον Ὀμηρος λέγει. Eur. Or. 982, τὴν οὐρανοῦ μέσον χθονὸς τε τεταμέναν αἰωρήμασι πέτραις ἀλύσει χρυσταίσι. The neo-Platonists took up the idea, and from them it was handed on to the Alchemists of the middle ages, in whose mystical cosmogony the aurea catena Homeri signified the whole chain of existences up to the quinta essentia universalis. The rope is here of gold simply because it is divine.

23. Ameis points out that the δὴ shews that ὅτε is here strictly temporal, and not merely conditional; "as soon as I determined to pull." For ἐθέλωμι Aristarchos read ἐθέλωμι, which is perhaps less appropriate, as the case is purely imaginary; see note on A 549. πρόφρων, in good earnest.

24. For the use of the "comitative" dative with αὐτός see H. G. § 144. The object of ἐρύσαιμι is "you."

25. The exact idea of this line is uncertain. It may mean that Zeus is in heaven, holding one end of the rope, and that he fastens the other end to Olympus as a part of the earth. This seems to have been the view of Aristarchos. The alternative is to suppose that for the moment the poet forgets that Olympus is part of the earth, and conceives Zeus as fastening to a peak of it his own end of the rope, and so leaving earth and sea suspended. This seems more natural, but contradicts the canon of Aristarchos, that in Homer Olympus is always the mountain in Macedonia, not another name for the sky. Lehrs, Arist. p. 168.

28. The following passage, down to 40, was athetized by Aristarchos, on the grounds that it is wholly composed of lines from other places, and that it entirely destroys the effect of the masterful words of Zeus. Few will be disposed to doubt the validity of these reasons for condemnation. 31 is the same as α 45, etc., 32-37 = 463-468, 39-40 = X 183-185. The lines seem to have been added by some one who thought that excuse was needed for the moral support so freely given to the Greeks by Athene, K 507, A 438, O 668, P 552, etc.

32. ἐπιεικτόν, cf. E 892, and for οἶτον ἀναπλήσαι Δ 170.

37. τεοῖο is a quite impossible form, recurring only in the equally spurious line 468. Rohde and others have proposed to read τεοῖο for σείο, which may be defended on the analogy of τεός (τερός) for σός: v. H. G. § 98. Zenod. omitted the line altogether.

39. τριτογένεια, see Δ 515. πρόφρονι θυμῷ, “in full earnest,” which entirely contradicts the former speech of Zeus.

43. χρυσόν, his panoply, made, like other divine gear, of the noblest metal. Cf. E 729, etc. γέντο, a rather difficult form. According to Fick it is for γένθτο from root gandh, ghand, of χανδ-άνειν, pre-hend-o, etc. It recurs in N 241, Σ 476. According to Hesychius however the word is Cyprian and the root is γεμ: γέννου Κύπριοι καὶ λαβὲ καὶ κάθιζε: ἀπό-γεμμε ἀφελκε and ὄγγεμος συλλαβή, where ἰν is the known Cyprian form for σύν. The ordinary theory that it represents ἐλετο, ν standing for λ as in Dor. ἦθε for ἦλθε, is untenable, as there is no certain analogy for the representation of F by γ, even if ελαίν was ever Feλείν, which is very doubtful.

47. Gargaros seems to be regarded as a part of Ida, cf. Σ 292. According to Kallimachos the peaks of Ida were Gar-garos, Lektos, and Phalakre. For the expression μητέρα θηρῶν cf. B 696, I 479, Δ 222.

49-50 = E 775-6, except that here the best MSS. give κατὰ for περὶ.

51. κύδει γαίων, see A 405, E 906.

53. The δεῖπνον is here, as in Δ 86 (q.v.), in anticipation of a long day's fighting, taken before the start from the camp.

55. It may be noticed that ὀπλίζεσθαι in Homer means “to prepare” in a general way, cf. H 417, etc. The use of the verb as identical with θωρήσσεσθαι seems to be a later specialisation; besides the present passage it occurs in Homer only in ω 495, the latest part of all the poems. So the use of δπλα to mean armour occurs only in K 254, 272, Σ 614, T 21.

57. χρεοῖς, cf. A 341. 58-9 = B 809 810, q.v.; 60-65 = Δ 446-51.

66. ἱερὸν ἡμαρ, so κνέφας ἱερὸν A 194, etc. The epithet expresses the natural feeling of man towards phenomena which he sees to be beyond his own power, and which he instinctively tends to worship as actual superior beings.

68. ἀμφιβεβήκειν, stood with both feet upon the midst of heaven, as a warrior stands with both feet over a fallen comrade. Cf. δ 400, and in a metaphorical sense Z 355.

69. ἐτίταινε, drew out at full length, so as to leave the scale-pans clear; ἔλκε (72), lifted off the ground. The exact relation which this balancing of fates, and the general power of destiny, bear to the omnipotence of Zeus, is a question which has greatly exercised the minds of students. It is perhaps enough to say that such problems would have been perfectly unintelligible to the men of Homer's time; in a primitive state of thought man does not seek for a rational consistency in his abstract ideas. Such conceptions of fate and of supreme divinity as he has, have in all probability been evolved in his mind by two quite different processes, and he sees no necessity to reconcile them. The appeal to the scales recurs in the same words in X 209-210, when the death of Hector is at hand. In that passage it seems to be much more in place, as the fates are really fatal; whereas here the only result of the ordeal is a temporary repulse of the Greeks, which before long is decisively reversed. ταπηλεγέος occurs also in the parallel line X 210, and often in the Odyssey, always in the same phrase. The oldest derivation seems to be the best, παταταμένην ἔχοντος τὴν ἀλγυρόνα, Hesych., "bringing long woe," from ταναός and αλγος. See Merry on β 100.

73. This couplet was athetized by Aristarchos, and seems quite indefensible. The dual ἐξέσθην must be meant to stand for the plural; there is no reason why Zeus should have taken two fates for each side. Matters are not mended by the alternative ἐξεσθεν mentioned by Schol. A (Didymos?) The lines seem to be a gloss on 72.

75. A free use of thunder and lightning is characteristic of this book; see 138, 170, 405.

81. Aristarchos, "in some of the commentaries," read ἔδάμνατο, which seems rather more appropriate to the effect of an immediately fatal wound.

84. For καίριον see on Δ 185.

86. περὶ χαλκῷ, a bold phrase, "withing about the point of the arrow." Similar expressions occur in N 441, 570, Φ 577, Ψ 30, λ 424, μ 395; but in all of these the victim is pierced through the middle of the body, which makes the expression more natural.

87. The παρηορίας or extra trace-horse is mentioned by Homer only here and in II 152, cf. δ 590 τρεῖς ἵππους καὶ δίφρον.

89. ἡνίοχον is here used in the general sense of rider in the chariot, not as distinguishing the driver from the παραβάτης: so in T 401 ἡνιοχῆα means the fighter. From 121 we see that as a matter of fact Hector is not conceived as driving his own chariot. So also P 427. It may be noticed that θρασὺς is an epithet peculiarly appropriated to Hector: it is used eight times of him in Homer, and only four times of all other heroes together.

94. μετὰ νῶτα βαλὼν, generally rendered "turning thy back," a strange use. It is perhaps allowable to understand the shield as the direct object of βαλὼν, "throwing thy shield behind thy back," as we know was actually done in retreat, e.g. by Aias in Δ 545, ἐπιθεν δὲ σάκος βάλεν ἐπταβόειον. The taunt in

95 thus gains in sarcastic bitterness, "take very good care of your back." Such an expression as μετὰ νῶτα βαλεῖν describing a well-known manoeuvre might easily pass into a technical phrase in which it was needless to name the shield. In X 283 however the words of l. 95 are used merely to express the inherent disgrace of a wound in the back; cf. also N 289.

97. It was debated by the old critics whether ἐσάκουσε meant that Odysseus did not *hear*ken, or only that he did not hear what was said. The former was the view of Aristarchos, but the latter is supported by the fact that Homer never represents any of the leading Greek heroes as a downright coward. The compound does not recur in H., and both senses are found in Trag. The fact that the flight here is caused by the act of Zeus would hardly exonerate Odysseus under the circumstances, as Diomedes is able to resist the panic for a while under the action of a special incentive.

99. αὐτός, i.e. μόνος, as B 233, N 729. The phrase προμάχοισιν ἐμίχθη seems out of place here, as it is regularly used of a hero who comes forward from the rear to take his place among the champions of his own side; but now there are no Greek πρόμαχοι at all, as all have fled.

108. γῆρας ὀπάζει, as Δ 321. Here as elsewhere the MSS. vary between ὀπάζει ἐπέλει and ἰκάνει.

104. For the horses of Nestor, which seem to have been as famous for their slowness as those of Diomedes for their speed, see Ψ 309.

105-107. See E 221-223; and for the phrase μήστωρα or μήστωρε φόβοιο, E 272. Here, as there, MS. evidence is in favour of the latter reading, though the consensus is not universal.

108 was athetized by Aristarchos, according to Aristonikos, on the following grounds:—ὅτι ἀτοπὸν προστιθέναι τὴν ἰστορίαν τῷ εἰδότε καὶ ὁ καιρὸς δέεται συντομίας· καὶ ὅτι τὸ ποτὲ χρονικὴν ἔχει ἔμφασιν, τῆς ἀφαρέσεως γεγονυίας τῇ πρὸ ταύτης ἡμέρᾳ. These arguments hardly seem sufficient.

109. As usual τούτῳ is used of the more distant, τῷδε of the nearer to the speaker, of two objects. θεράποντε, Eurymedon (Δ 620) and Sthenelos.

111. For the use of the future instead of the subj. in final clauses see H. G. § 326, 3. For α, which has by far the best MS. authority, most editors read ἦ. But this use of ἦ to introduce a dependent interrogation is not well supported. See H. G. § 338, note.

114. ἰφθίμος, so two of the best MSS., AD; the rest give ἰφθίμοι. Cf. Ψ 511, ἰφθίμος Σθένελος.

116. Here and in 137 the MSS. vary between σιγαλόεντα and φοινικέεντα. For the latter cf. Δ 141 and Ψ 201, which shew that the art of staining leather purple was well known.

122. ὑπερώησαν, “swerved aside thereat,” on missing the guiding hand; as Ψ 493 (ἵπποι) ἠρώησαν ὀπίσω. For the verb ἠρώω see on B 179.

124. πύκασε, “covered up,” veiled his mind; in this metaphorical sense only in the present phrase, which recurs also in 316 and P 83. Cf. ἔπος φρένας ἀμφεκάλυπεν Γ 442, etc.

126. μέθεπε, “drove in quest of”; the construction is the same as in E 329, Τυδεῖδην μέθεπε κρατερώνυχας ἵππους, the direct object ἵππους being omitted here, as continually with ἔχειν when meaning “to drive.” ἐφέπει is used in a similar way, Π 724, 732, Ω 326. That the idea of “handling” horses (see note on Z 321) passes naturally into that of “driving” them is shewn—if proof be needed—by the special application of the word ménage (our manage) from manus. The common explanations, “to follow with the eyes, to seek or strive after” (L. and S.), or “busied himself about,” or simply “went after,” cannot be derived from the other uses of the root ἐπ, which never means simply “to go.” Much less does ἐπομαι mean “to follow at a distance”: it always is used of accompanying, and the middle is kept quite distinct in use from the active.

130. ἀμήχανα, fatal, irremediable, lit. “admitting of no μήχος” to evade them, see I 249.

131. Cf. Z 73. Schol. V says that this line was continued ἐν τισι τῶν παλαιῶν by the following:—

Τρῶες ὑπ' Ἀργείων, ἔλιπον δὲ κεν Ἑκτορα δῖον
 χαλκῷ δρωθέντα, δάμασσε δὲ μιν Διομήδης.

The sudden turn in the battle is quite out of proportion to what has gone before; there is no indication of any general rally on the Greek side, and the idea that Diomedes could unaided have caused a general rout of the enemy seems to be a mere outbidding of his exploits in the fifth book, even where he has divine assistance. These objections could to some extent be evaded by supposing 131 to be an interpolation.

135. For the smell of sulphur accompanying a lightning flash see E 415.

136. For the form καταπτῆτην see B 312.

139. φόβονδ' ἔχε, lit. “drive towards flight.” Cf. E 252 φόβονδ' ἀγόρευε, and πέδιονδ' ἔχον Γ 263.

143. εἰρύσσαιτο, a singular use of this verb, obviously different from that in A 216, where it means “to obey, observe.” It appears to be rather analogous to B 859, ἐρύσατο κῆρα, warded off fate, meaning here, "no man can defend himself from the designs of Zeus." But the other forms in el- always mean either "observe" in the sense of obeying, or "guard, protect," as II 542, T 93, X 303, etc. In π 463 εἰρύσασθαι means "watch" in a hostile sense. The same divergence of meaning is seen in the use of φυλάσσω and φυλάσσομαι, by which the Scholiasts explain the present word.

147. It is most natural to take τὸδε as agreeing with ἄχος, "this is the sore grief." It is however possible to understand it as an accusative anticipating the content of the following clause, "It is in respect of this that great grief comes upon me, namely, that," etc. For this use of the pronoun cf. τό γε E 327, and τὸ δὲ Z 523.

148. The future φήσει is found only here and in 153.

150. ἀπειλήσει, here in the primitive sense, "declare loudly," cf. Ψ 863, 872, and θ 383 ἀπειλήσας βητάρμονας εἶναι ἀρίστους. The word is possibly connected with ἡπύω, but this is doubtful. For the last half of the line see Δ 182.

153. εἴ περ φήσῃ admits Diomedes' view of Hector's action as right, "though Hector will indeed say."

157. φύγαδ' ἔτραπε, like φόβοδ' ἔχε above (139).

161. Hector loses no time in justifying the opinion of Nestor and Diomedes. For the chief seat and other marks of distinction see Δ 260, H 321, M 310, with the notes on those passages.

163. ἄρα with τέτυξο, "you are after all," as often. ἀντὶ, lit. in the place of a woman, i.e. no better than one. It may also mean "as good as," i.e. no worse than, I 116, Φ 75, θ 546; it merely indicates equality.

164. γλήνη, "plaything," doll, puppet. The word recurs in Z 494, ι 390, in the sense of the pupil of the eye (so also Soph. O. T. 1277); and the cognate γλήνεια is found in Ω 192, meaning trinkets (compare τριγλήνιος Z 183, "with three drops," of earrings; Helbig, H. E. 185). The word seems to come from the root γαλ directly, and to mean "something bright." In the present passage it has been taken to mean "girl" by a process the inverse of that πύργων ἡμετέρων ἐπιβήσεται, οὐδὲ γυναικάς ἄξεις ἐν νήεσσι· πάρος τοι δαίμονα δώσω.” 165

ὥς φάτο, Τυδεΐδης δὲ διάνδιχα μερμήριζεν,

[Ἀργεῖους παρὰ νηυσὶν, ἀτυζομένους ὑπὸ καπνοῦ.]”

by which κόρη comes to mean the pupil of the eye. But it implies no more than “you pretty toy.” οὐκ of course goes with ἐπιβήσεται, not with εἴξας.

166. δαίμονα δάσω, “I will deal thee fate,” a strange expression, not elsewhere found. Cf. δόμον θάνατον I 571, and the phrase δαίμονος αἶσα. Zenod. read πότμον ἐφῆσω, a more likely phrase. Aristarchos and Aristophanes athetized 164-166, partly on account of this, partly because they considered the lines “poor and unsuited to the characters of the speakers.” Against this may be set Bergk's remark that the speech of Hector without these lines is very weak and jejune.

167. διάνδιχα μερμήριζεν, followed by the statement of only one of the alternatives which present themselves, is exactly paralleled by our colloquial “had half a mind to turn his horses and to fight.” See on A 189, where the same phrase is found.

171. For the phrase μάχης ἑτεραλκεία νίκην see H 26. According to Nikanor, the comma must be put after Τρῶεσσιν, as is always printed, ἐὰν γὰρ συνάπτωμεν, σολοκοφανὲς γίνεται. I.e. he objects to taking σῆμα as an accusative in apposition with the preceding line, “by way of a sign,” and joining τιθεὶς ἑτ. νίκην Τρῶεσσιν, “appointing for the Trojans a turning of the tide of battle.” This construction is perhaps possible, though not very Homeric; it may have been suggested by the fact that the common phrase is σῆματα φαίνων, or the like. There is no difficulty in taking both νίκην and σῆμα with τιθεὶς by a slight zeugma.

177. For αὖ Dion. Sidon. read αἶ, which is pleasing in itself, and agrees with the habit of making a decided pause after νήπιος used interjectionally, instead of connecting it closely with what follows. We have however νήπια αὖ in O 104 and α 8, so that the question is doubtful. μηχανάσθαι is elsewhere always followed by an adj. in the neuter plural, not by a substantive.

178. ἀβλήχρ', E 337. οὐδενόσσωρα, “not worth a thought”; ἀπαξ λεγόμενον in Greek till Oppian. Döderl. takes it to mean “recking of nothing,” impious, which may be right. Hes. explains οὐδενὸς φυλακτικά, guarding nothing. For the almost unique composition of the word see H. G. § 124 c.

181. μνημοσύνη γενέσθω, a sort of periphrastic passive to μνῆμαι; cf. φειδῶ γίγνεται, H 409.

183 is omitted by all the best MSS. ;

ὥς εἰπὼν ἵπποισιν ἐκέκλετο φώνησέν τε·

it is merely intended to introduce Ἀργείους as a gloss on αὐτοῖς.

184. The following passage down to 212 has given rise to many well-founded suspicions. 185 has been condemned for the very good reason that the use of four horses in a chariot is post-Homeric. 186-190 are confused and absurd, even if we cut out 189; 192-197 are exaggerated, and do not agree with the rest of the Iliad. 198-211 are weak in themselves, contradict the fine introduction to this book, and have no bearing whatever on the story; 212 is a familiar sign of interpolation. 213 follows naturally after 182.

185. The names of the horses are all taken from other passages, see II 149, Ψ 295, ψ 246. A four-horse chariot is alluded to only in O 680, ν 81, in similes, and perhaps in Δ 699, q.v.

186. Observe the dual ἀποτίνεται continued in 191. This may indicate that the preceding line is an interpolation; though it has been proposed to defend it on the ground that two is the ordinary number of horses (H. G. § 173). The construction changes in 188, as often; it begins as though ἔθηκεν alone were to follow, but the idea is expanded so that πυρὸν has to come in a rather awkward apposition with κομιδὴν.

189. This line was athetized by Aristoph. and Aristarchos, on the ground that it is absurd to make the horses drink wine. The line in this case will be a singularly unfortunate expedient on the part of an interpolator who was offended at Hector's being made to eat grain, as is the case if we omit it.

πυρὸς has to be ground before it can be the food of men, ν 109. The whole passage is too hopeless to be remedied by a single omission.

192. A famous shield of Nestor is as little known elsewhere to the Iliad as a divine breastplate of Diomedes. As the story now stands, the latter must have belonged to Glaukos, with whom Diomedes had exchanged armour, and could not have failed to obtain mention in Z 236; while there is no allusion to the former in the passage which refers to the arms which Nestor may be presumed to have taken from Ereuthalion, H 146-155. Besides, the effect anticipated from the capture of these two pieces of armour seems quite disproportionate. νῦν in 192 is a mere metrical makeshift: for the phrase see θ 74. The κανόνες of 193 are explained as being the handles by which the shield was held; i.e. bars crossing the inner concavity. I feel some doubt however as to whether these were really used in the Homeric shield; see N 407, and J. H. S. iv. 290. In any case only one of these handles can have been a rod, viz. the one which was grasped by the hand; that which held the arm must have been a ring, and can therefore hardly have been called κανὼν. The κανόνες may therefore have been rods to which the ends of the τελαμών were fastened, or perhaps more probably they are identical with the ράβδοι, radial stays running inside from the central ὀμφαλὸς to the rim and forming part of the framework of the shield.

196. Cf. E 273. As a matter of fact ὥς ἔφατ' εὐχόμενος, νεμέσησε δὲ πότνια Ἥρη,

Hector's desire is to prevent the embarkation of the Greeks by burning the ships; 182, 217.

199. This line seems to be a poor attempt to outbid the famous passage, A 530.

200. ἀντίον ἦδα must here be taken to mean "addressed"; it is elsewhere used only of a reply to something previously said.

203. Helike and Aigai are two cities in Achaia, both chief seats of the worship of Poseidon; B 575.

204. βούλεο is generally taken as an imperative, but it may equally well be an imperfect, "you used to will them the victory." βούλεσθαι is the regular word for the wish of gods, which is equivalent to performance; H 21, P 331, Ψ 682. ἐθέλοιμεν in the next line = "make up our minds," B 123.

206. Ζῆν, a somewhat doubtful form. Ar., followed by all our MSS., wrote Ζῆν', assuming a synaphea with the following line. There are some other traces of this in Homer, but they are all very doubtful, and the short form Ζῆν' is defensible on analogy, though there is no direct evidence for it. It apparently represents the Skt. Djām, as βῶν represents gām, see H 238. Herodianus attests also a nom. Zῆs, which might have an accusative Ζῆν' on the analogy of nouns of the first declension. But the question is by no means certain; it is at least a curious coincidence that in every case where the form Ζῆν' occurs, the following word, at the beginning of the next line, should commence with a vowel (Ξ 265, Ω 331), see Hinrichs, de Hom. El. Vest. Aeol. p. 109; Curtius, El. p. 616.

207. This is quite inconsistent with the introduction to the book. καθήμενος is virtually the principal verb, "he would sit alone, to his vexation." Zenod. read καθοίτ' ἀκαχήμενος.

209. ἀπτοεπές used to be explained either as ἀπτόητος (undaunted) τοῖς ἐπεσιν or καταπτομένη τοῖς ἐπεσιν, neither of which will do. As the word stands it is better derived from root jan of ἰάπτω, iacio, in the sense of "hurling words about," reckless in speech (so Mr. Monro). But there is much plausibility in Wackernagel's suggestion ἀεπτοεπές (or perhaps rather ἀαπτοεπές), "unmanageable, uncontrollable, in language." Cf. the forms ἀμπεροπέης B 212, ἀμαρτοεπές N 824; and for ἀεπτος see on A 567. Tradition varies between ἀπτ- and ἀπτ-.

213. The meaning of this line has puzzled commentators, ancient and modern. The text is the reading of Aristarchos; Zenodotos, as has been shewn by Ludwig, had καὶ for ἀπὸ, while some read ἀπὸ τάφρου πύργος. Aristarchos also varied between ἐργε and ἐρυκε. As to the meaning, πύργος must stand for the whole fortification of the camp, as in M 333, πάπτην δ' ἀνὰ πύργον Ἀχαιῶν, though in this sense the plural is most common. The real difficulty lies in the two prepositions ἀπὸ and ἐκ. The latter should mean "starting from," and therefore imply a space bounded on one side by the ships. But how could any space bounded by ships and foes be ἀπὸ πύργου when the wall is between them? If we could understand πύργος as indicating some point of the wall, as for instance the "common grave" at one end (H 337), ἀπὸ might indicate the portion of the space between ships and wall remote from this end; but there is no reason why one end only of the camp should be specified. The only other interpretation consistent with the words is, I think, that which joins ἀπὸ with the verb, and takes πύργου τάφρος together, "all that the moat of the wall encloses from (i.e. up to) the ships." This is consistent and intelligible, but the order of the words is very harsh. The explanation which is generally approved is that of La Roche, according to which ἐκ means "outside the ships," and the space indicated is that between the wall and the moat, the Greeks not being actually driven inside the wall in this day's fighting at all. But this use of ἐκ for ἐκτός can hardly be supported; it has to mean here "in a space separated from" the ships; whereas the use of ἐκ, unlike that of ἀπὸ, always implies one of two things, either motion out of a space, or position in a space "starting from," and therefore in continuous connexion with, a limit; both of which senses have to be excluded here. In other words, to give the required meaning we ought to have ἀπὸ νηῶν ἐκ πύργου. Of the passages quoted by La Roche for the use of ἐκ the only one which has a real similarity to the sense he wants is Ξ 130, where ἐκ βελών means

"out of range." But analogy shews that this phrase means a space measured from the margin of the range of darts. It may further be urged that 217 and 220-222 shew that no stress can be meant to lie on the fact that the Greeks are not yet driven within the wall; rather they are at the very last line of defence which can save the ships. Although in many passages the moat and the wall are regarded as two lines with a considerable space between them, e.g. Σ 215, yet this is one of the points in which the poem shews decided unsteadiness of conception of the actual scene of conflict. The choice therefore seems to lie between the two explanations first given, unless we are prepared to adopt the reading of Zenodotos, or to make such a change as that suggested by Mr. Monro, ἐπὶ πύργῳ τάφρος, "the wall with its moat."

221. It is not quite clear whether Agamemnon holds the mantle in his hands in order to be the freer, like Odysseus in B 183, or to call attention to what he is doing; perhaps both ideas may be intended. It may be noticed that purple does not seem to be a distinctively royal colour in Homer, see θ 84, δ 115, etc.

222. μεγακῆτεϊ, "with mighty hollow," capacious; so Φ 22, "with mighty maw," and of the sea "with mighty deeps," γ 158. Jordan proposes to derive the word from the ordinary sense of κῆτος, "monster," explaining πῶτος μεγακ. as "teeming with great monsters," and μεγακ. νηὶ as "with a great monster" at the prow; for it was a common practice, as we see from the early vase-paintings, to make the prow of the ship in the form of a huge animal's snout, like a pig's, and to paint a great eye upon it (see B 637). But it is probable that the projecting "ram" was not a part of the oldest Greek ship; see Helbig, H. E. p. 56.

223. μεσσήτῳ, only here and A 6.
 γεγωνέμεν οὐ ψιλῶς ἐστὶ φωνεῖν, ἀλλ' ἀκουστὸν φθέγγεσθαι, Schol. A, rightly.
 222-226 = A 5-9; the last three lines are omitted here by the best MSS. 227
 = A 275, 228 = E 787.

229. εὐχῶλαί, "boastings," not in a bad sense, which is only given by κενεαυ-χέες. For the phrase πῇ ἔβαν cf. E 472, Ω 201. The following relative clause is evidently imperfect, as there is a verb wanting either after ὅς or ὅπῳτ' according as we punctuate. If we put a comma after Λήμνῳ, we must assume an ellipse of ἦτε, as in our idiomatic "you boasted when in Lemnos." It is common enough for the substantive verb to be omitted in relative clauses (H. G. § 271), and an instance after a temporal adverb will be found in κ 176, ὅπῳτ' ἐν νηὶ θατῇ βρώσις τε πόσις τε: but here the omission is harsh, because the subject of the verb is not expressed. Hence some join ὅπῳτε with ἡγοράασθε, and hold that there is an anacoluthon, the verb governing ὅς being forgotten after the interposed relative clause. Christ thinks that the confused construction indicates an interpolation by a cyclic poet from a narrative in the Kypria, which may from the abstract we possess have given some such story of a feast on the journey to Troy. But this is hardly probable. There is an evident allusion to the famous wines of Lemnos;
 see H 467.

231 was athetized by Aristarchos on the ground that beef does not tend to make men boastful.

232. For ἐπιστεφέας see A 470.

234. στήσεσθαι, with ἀντί, apparently "would weigh" as much as (see on 163); ἀξιοί being also used in this literal meaning. So Schol. B. Schol.
 A explains ἀνθ' as ἀντα, hardly so well, on the question-begging ground that if it is for ἀντί it would have no accent.

235. Athetized by Aristarchos and Aristoph. on the ground that it quite spoils the rhetorical effect of the reproach; Agamemnon ought to say "we are no match even for the weakest Trojan." It has all the appearance of a gloss. Aris-tarchos would have preferred to read Ἕκτορος ᾧ δὴ κῦδος Ὀλύμπιος αὐτὸς ὀπάξει, but we are not told if this is a conjecture or not.

237. This throwing of the blame upon the ἄτη of Zeus is a favourite resource of Agamemnon; see T 91, etc. The form ἄσας is in accordance with the best analogy, but the best MSS. read ἄσας.
 If we retain the trisyllable form we must read -τη α- as one syllable by synizesis, as the forms in αα never have both short, though one or other of the two is often so. The contracted form is supported by ἄσε λ 61, ἄσατο T 95.

239. The derivation and original sense of ἔρρᾶν are obscure. In Homer, as in Attic Greek, the verb is always used where the sense of going in misfortune, under a curse, and the like, is appropriate, if not necessary. Mr. Ridgeway however has remarked (Journ. Phil. xii. p. 32) that it seems to be used in an Elean inscription (Collitz, 1153) in the simple sense "to go, have recourse to," but the reading there is very doubtful. Cf. Σ 421, I 364. The sense "on my ill-omened journey hither" is obviously appropriate here.

243. αὐτοὺς, i.e. even if we fail of our purpose let us at least save our lives.

246. ἀπολέσθαι MSS., ἀπολείσθαι Ar., which is adopted by Naber and Christ on the analogy of ι 496, μ 230. But the best reading in the former passage is δλείσθαι not δλείσθαι: while in the latter φανείσθαι represents a future φανείτω in the speaker's mind, which is not the case here.

247. τελειότατον, ἐπιτελεστικώτατον Schol., most sure to bring fulfilment.

250. πανομφαίῳ, i.e. to whom belong all omens by sounds or voices, such as Odysseus asks from Zeus in υ 100, φῆμιν τίς μοι φάσθω. The epithet only occurs here, and is certainly not very appropriate to the particular omen.

254. εὗξατο, could boast that he had driven his horses in front of Tydeides. This is the only case in Homer of πάρος with the genitive. It takes up πρότερος in the preceding line. La R. however prefers to connect Τυδείδαο with πρότερος, and πάρος with σχέμεν, to drive right onwards, a use for which there seems to be no analogy whatever. ἐξελάσαι in Attic would require ὥστε. μαχέσασθαι, aor., to take up the fight. πρῶτος, Tydeides, by a rather awkward change of subject.

258-260. E 40-42, etc.

261. τὸν δὲ μετ', sc. ἦλθον. 262-265 = H 164-167. It is curious that Odysseus is not named here. Of all the heroes repeated from the preceding book the greater Aias is the only one who does anything at all.

266. παλίντονα probably alludes to the form of the “Scythian” bow, with a double curve, “bent back” in the middle to form a handle. Or it may mean simply “elastic,” springing back when bent.

267. This mode of fighting is characteristically oriental. In the Assyrian sculptures, especially in sieges, we often find a warrior with a large shield and spear accompanied by an archer who crouches down and shoots from under the shield. The same practice is also found, though rarely, on the old Greek vases.

270. βεβλήκει, so best MSS.; Ar. βεβλήκει, a very doubtful form (see H. G. § 83), and not necessary. With the next clause the construction changes, so that ἥρως in 268 is left as a nominativus pendens.

277 is omitted by the best MSS. It is from M 194, Π 418.

279. ἄπο, as Ω 605 πέφηνεν ἀπ' ἀργυρέοιο βιῶο.

281. φίλῃ κεφαλῇ, cf. Ψ 94, Σ 82, 114, O 39, and the allusion in Plato, Phaedr. 264 A, Φαῖδρε φίλῃ κεφαλῇ.

282. φόως, which generally means “safety, succour,” here, by a slight zeugma, includes the idea of “glory” to the father.

284. Athetized by Aristarchos and Aristophanes, and entirely rejected by Zenodotos, on the ground that the mention of Teukros' origin is out of place, and is of a nature rather to displease than to encourage. κομίσσατο, “took up,” is a slight hysteron proteron with τρέφε. According to the common tradition, Teukros was the son of Telamon by Hesione, daughter of Laomedon, who had been captured by Herakles when he took Troy, and given to Telamon; whence the name Teukros. But he is repeatedly called the κασιγνητος of Aias

(see M 371, κασ. καὶ δπατρος), a word which is commonly used of brothers uterine (see A 257, Ω 47), so that Aristarchos seems to have thought that the legend of Hesione was not known to Homer and that Teukros was regarded as a legitimate son. But Polydoros is the κασιγνήτος of Hector (T 419), though by a different mother (Φ 91). The mother of Aias was Eëriboia.

285. ἐπίβησον, cf. B 234, ψ 13, 52, χ 424.

289. πρεσβήιον, here only in the sense of "prize to the first man," (see note on πρέσβα, Δ 59); a form recalling the later πρωτεῖον, δευτερεῖον, etc.

290. ἵππῳ Zenod. and Aristoph.; the reading is perhaps to be preferred to ἵππους of Aristarchos and all MSS. but one (Townl.), which would be likely to be introduced in order to avoid the hiatus.

291. εἰσαναβαίνοι: for the opt. after the future cf. H 342.

296. δεδεγμένος, Herodianus δεδεχ-μένος. See on Δ 107.

297. τανυγλώχινας, with "thin," or perhaps "straight," barbs; see on Γ 228.

299. The comparison of Hector to a mad dog or man is rather favourite; see I 239, 305.

304. ἐξ Αἰσούμηθεν (or Αἰσούμηθεν, as Zenod., Aristoph., and Aristarchos wrote) of course goes with ὀπυιομένη, "taken as a wife from A."

305. Athenaeus, xiv. 632 F, quotes this line in the form καλὴ Κασσιέπεια, θεοῖς δέμας εἰκνία.

306. ἣ τ' ἐνὶ κήπῳ, sc. ἐστίν. This is the simple explanation; though Lehrs considers it weak, and prefers to supply κάρη βάλλει from the preceding clause, comparing II 406, where ἐλκεα has to be supplied after ὥς ὅτε τις φῶς. This famous simile is imitated by Vergil, Aen. ix. 436, "Lassove papavera collo Demisere caput, pluvia cum forte gravantur."

312. For Archeptolemos see 128, and for 313-317 see 121-125.

318. ἀδελφεόν, sc. of Hector, as he was a natural son of Priam, II 738.

321. ὃ δέ, as often, introduces a fresh act of the subject of the preceding clause; e.g. 302 above.

323. φαρέτρης, the second syllable is elsewhere always long. ἐξείλετο, in sense a pluperfect.

325. αὐερόντα, see A 459. The word recurs in a similar sense M 261. παρ' ὤμον naturally goes with it in the sense "drawing the bow back to the shoulder," but the following clause shews that it has to be taken also with βάλεν. ἀποέργει, cf. X 324, ἧ κληῖδες ἀπ' ὤμων αὐχέν' ἔχουσιν, λαυκανίην, ἵνα τε ψυχῆς ὀκιστος δλεθρος. The expression is hardly so exact here, as the collar bone cannot be said to hold asunder neck and breast in the same way as it holds apart neck and shoulders; still the meaning is clear.

326. For καίριον, or, as I should prefer to read, κήριον, see A 185.

328. νευρήν, according to the use of the word in Homer, must mean "bow-string," but the breaking of this seems such a subordinate matter that we should rather have expected νεῦρον, the sinew of the arm; cf. O 469.

332. ὑποδύντα, "getting under him" to bear him off, as P 717. 331-334 = N 420-423.

340. ἰσχία, accus. of the part affected; ἀπτομαι does not take a direct accusative in Homer. δοκεύει: this change from subjunctive to indicative is very rare after the simple τε, though common after δέ τε: hence Nauck is perhaps right in reading δοκεύη. In such a matter the tradition is of little importance. The verb means "watches for him as he keeps turning round."

341. ὥπαζε, pressed hard upon, cf. γῆρας ὀπάζει, and see E 334. The use of the cognate ἐφέπειν may also be compared.

345. The wall is not mentioned here, and seems to be included in the phrase σκόλοπας καὶ τάφρον. See on 213.

347. For εὐχετόωντο the more regular construction after τε καὶ would be a participle co-ordinate with κεκλόμενοι. Cf. Γ 80.

348. There is no mention of Hector having again mounted his chariot since 320. This is one of the points in which the poems often shew a certain want of clearness. The idea is that it was the practice of each warrior to be accompanied by his chariot close at hand, and to mount or descend from time to time, according to the convenience of the moment.

349. For ὄμματα Aristarchos read ὀμματα, "τὰς ὁδοὺς καὶ τὰ ὀρμήματα," which is far less appropriate here than in the other passage where the word occurs, Φ 252. In fact to Homer Gorgon was probably nothing more than a face. See A 36, and cf. κυνὸς ὄμματ' ἔχων A 225. For ἦέ, which was read by Zenod. and probably by Aristarchos, all MSS. have ἡδέ, which can hardly be right.

353. κεκαδησόμεθα, from κηδομαι, cf. φ 153 κεκαδήσει, causal but in a rather different sense. (See Curtius, Et. no. 284.) It must not be confused with κεκάδωτο, from root skad, Δ 497, A 334. ὑστάτιόν περ, as we should say "even at this eleventh hour."

354. See 34.

355. ῥιπῇ, rush, furious onset.

358. ὀλέσειεν, a proper opt., “I wish he might lose.” The ordinary phrase θυμὸν ὀλέσαι is enlarged by μέμος, apparently with a consciousness of its etymological connexion with μαίνεται in 355, which is again alluded to in the μαίνεται of 360. On the other hand there can be no such allusion in μενέων ἀπερωεύς, 361.

363. Eurystheus is mentioned by name again in T 133, O 639; cf. also the late passage λ 621. The twelve labours are not mentioned, and it is doubtful if they formed a part of the Herakles legend as it existed in Homeric times.

367. For the journey of Herakles to Hades to bring up Kerberos (who is not named in Homer), see on E 397. He is first mentioned by name, as πεντηκοντακέφαλος, in Hesiod, Theog. 311. πυλάρταο, “warder of the gate” of the prison-house of the dead. προὔπεμψεν, sc. Eurystheus.

369. αἰπὰ, headlong, perhaps in allusion to the cataract formed by the terrestrial Styx in Arkadia, which by its wild surroundings typified the river of hell.

371-2 were athetized by Zenod. and Arist. as superfluous here. See A 512.

373. ἔσται ὅτ’ ἂν, the day shall come when he will call me his darling. See Δ 164, Z 448.

375. Observe the change in sense which is proceeding with ὄφρα: here it is used in the primitive meaning, “until I shall have armed myself”; while in the next line it has the derived sense, “in order that.”

378. προφανέντε is given only by A, with Aristarchos. Most MSS. read -εῖσας, with Zenod., but this shortening of the -as of the fem. acc. plural is a Doric peculiarity, not admissible in the Epic dialect. One MS., D, has -εῖσα, which might be allowable. But see πληγέντε, used of the same pair of goddesses in 455. The masculine form of dual is commonly used by women speaking of themselves in Attic. The participial construction is unique after γηθεῖν, but is found after ἤχθεο N 352. Cf. also τίς ἂν τάδε γηθήσειεν I 77, and H. G. § 245. πτολέμοιο γεφύρας, see Δ 371.

381-3 = E 719-721, 384-388 = E 733-737, 389-396 = E 745-752. 385-387 were athetized here by Aristarchos and Aristoph., and omitted by Zenod. as being out of place, because all these preparations lead to nothing, and Zeus is wearing his own panoply, see 43. So also were 390-391, as inappropriately repeated from the fifth book.

398. This is the only mention in Homer of a winged deity; the conception seems to have been introduced from the East in post-Homeric times. See Langbehn, Die Flügelgestalten in der alt. Gr. Kunst.

400. οὐ καλὰ συνοισόμεθα, it will not be well for us to fight; cf. Z 826, οὐ μὲν καλὰ χόλον τόνδ' ἐνθεο θυμῷ.

402. Observe σφῶιν here in the third person, σφῶιν in the second in 416; see A 8.

404. ἐς δεκάτους ἐνιαυτοὺς seems to be a confusion between ἐς δέκα ἐνιαυτοὺς and ἐς δέκατον ἐνιαυτόν. Paley compares Aesch. Sept. 118, where πύλαις ἐβδόμαις seems to stand for ἐπτά πύλαις.

405. Ἐλκεα is no doubt here the accusative, "shall they be healed of the wounds." If we take ἔλκεα as the subject, the use of the dual to mean "the wounds of the two" is very harsh. Aristarchos however seems to have understood it in this way, as he read in one of his editions ἀπαλθήσονται, which Didymos prefers. So also Hippokrates, who uses so many Epic expressions, says ὄφρ' εἰδῆ γλαυκῶπις, ὅτ' ἂν φ' πατρὶ μάχηται.

 "Ἡρῃ δ' οὐ τι τόσον νεμεσίζομαι οὐδὲ χολοῦμαι· αἰεὶ γάρ μοι ἔωθεν ἐνικλᾶν, ὅττι κεν εἴπω."

ὥς ἔφατ', ὦρτο δὲ Ἴρις ἀελλόπος ἀγγελέουσα, [βῆ δὲ κατ' Ἰδαίων ὀρέων ἐς μακρὸν Ὀλύμπου]. 410 πρώτησιν δὲ πύλῃσι πολυπτύχου Οὐλύμποιο ἀντομένη κατέρυκε, Διὸς δέ σφ' ἔννεπε μῦθον·

 "πῇ μέματον; τί σφῶιν ἐνὶ φρεσὶ μαίνεται ἦτορ;
 οὐκ ἔαα Κρονίδης ἐπαμυνέμεν Ἀργείοισιν.

ὦδε γὰρ ἠπείλῃσε Κρόνου πάις, ἣ τελείε περ, 415
 γυνιώσειν μὲν σφῶιν ὑφ' ἄρμασιν ὠκέας ἵππους, αὐτὰς δ' ἐκ δίφρου βαλέειν κατὰ θ' ἄρματα ἄξειν· οὐδέ κεν ἐς δεκάτους περιτελλομένους ἐνιαυτοὺς ἔλκε' ἀπαλθήσεσθον, ἃ κεν μάρπτησι κεραυνός, ὄφρ' εἰδῆς, γλαυκῶπι, ὅτ' ἂν σφ' πατρὶ μάχηται. 420

"Ἡρῃ δ' οὐ τι τόσον νεμεσίζεται οὐδὲ χολοῦται·
 αἰεὶ γάρ οἱ ἔωθεν ἐνικλᾶν, ὅττι κεν εἴπη.
 ἀλλὰ σύ γ' αἰνοτάτη, κύον ἀδεές, εἰ ἐτεόν γε τολμήσεις Διὸς ἄντα πελώριον ἔγχος ἀεῖραι."

ἣ μὲν ἄρ' ὥς εἰποῦς' ἀπέβη πόδας ὠκέα Ἴρις, 425
 αὐτὰρ Ἀθηναίην Ἥρῃ πρὸς μῦθον ἔειπεν·

ἐπὶ τὸ ἔλκος ἀλθαίνηται. But the use of the accusative to express the remoter object is quite Greek and simple, and is undoubtedly found in the next phrase, ἃ κεν μάρπτησι, where the construction is the same as in ἔλκος τὸ μὲν βάλε Πάνδαρος ἐφ' E 795. The sense is "the wounds which the thunderbolt shall make by fastening upon them." There is no other similar use of μάρπτω in Homer.

406. εἰδῆ ὅτ' ἂν μάχηται, in our idiom "that she may know what it is to fight" with her father. For this pregnant use of εἰδέναι, to find the meaning of a thing, cf. A 185, H 226.

407. Compare Z 335. ἐνικλᾶν, literally to break off, i.e. thwart, like διακέρσαι in l. 8. ὅττι κεν εἴπω, so Aristarchos; MSS. ὅττι νοῶσω.

410. For εἰ κατ' Aristarchos read δ' ἐξ, and for ἐς ἐπὶ, on the ground that the prepositions κατὰ and ἐς are only appropriate when used of a journey from Olympus to the lower earth, not of a passage from one mountain-top to another, ἀπ' ἰσου ἐπ' ἰσον. But the whole line is of doubtful authenticity; two of the best MSS., AC, omit it in the text, and have it supplied by a second hand.

411. πρῶτησιν, at the entrance to the gate, from which the goddesses are just issuing.

415. ἦ, so Aristarchos; MSS. εἰ, which does not make good sense.

419. Observe the return to the oratio recta; the construction of κεν with an infin. in oratio obliqua is found only once in Homer, see on I 684.

420-424 were athetized by Aristarchos, not without good reason, 'as they are quite unsuited to the character of Iris, who always appears as a mere messenger. Of course the case against 423-4 is much stronger than against the first three lines. The last couplet is quite in the spirit of the unmannerly rudeness of the gods in the Theomachy in Φ, and in sharp contrast with the courteous tone of Iris in O 200-4.

423. αἰνοτάτη, sc. ἐσσι. This was the reading of Aristarchos, but it appears that there was a variant σοί (sc. νεμεσίζεται) for σύ γ'.

“ὦ πόποι, αἰγίοχοιο Διὸς τέκος, οὐκέτ’ ἐγὼ γε νῶι ἐὼ Διὸς ἄντα βροτῶν ἔνεκα πτολεμίζειν.
τῶν ἄλλος μὲν ἀποφθίσθω, ἄλλος δὲ βιώτω, ὅς κε τύχη· κείνος δὲ τὰ ἃ φρονέων ἐνὶ θυμῷ Τρῳσὶ τε καὶ Δαναοῖσι δικάζέτω, ὥς ἐπιεικὲς.”

430 ὥς ἄρα φωνήσασα πάλιν τρέπε μώνυχας ἵππους.

τῆσιν δ’ ὦραι μὲν λῦσαν καλλίτριχας ἵππους, καὶ τοὺς μὲν κατέδησαν ἐπ’ ἀμβροσίῃσι ἀπήρσιν, αὐταὶ δὲ χρυσεόισιν ἐπὶ κλισμοῖσι καθίζον μήγδ’ ἄλλοισι θεοῖσι φίλον τετιμῆναι ἦτορ.

435

Ζεὺς δὲ πατὴρ Ἰδῆθεν ἑύτροχον ἄρμα καὶ ἵππους Οὐλυμπόνδε δῖωκε, θεῶν δ’ ἐξέικετο θῶκους.
τῷ δὲ καὶ ἵππους μὲν λῦσε κλυτὸς ἐννοσίγαιος, ἄρματα δ’ ἄμ βωμοῖσι τίθει, κατὰ λίτα πετάσσας·

440

431. δικάζετω, let him decide for them, as A 542. τὰ ἃ, contemptuously, “those plans of his.” Cf. M 280. The combination of the possessive ὅς with the article is not common, occurring only eight times in the Iliad and six in the Odyssey.

433. For the position of the Horae as servants of the gods cf. 393 above. It is clear that when Poseidon performs a similar office for Zeus in 440 we cannot conclude that it is in virtue of his functions in later Greek mythology as ἱππιος, for the Horae never possessed such an attribute. But Poseidon stands to his elder brother in the honourable position of θεράπων or squire for the moment; though it is strange that he should be upon Olympus without warning, see H 445.

435. ἐνώπια, a much disputed word, which recurs only in δ 42, χ 121, and N 261. The usual view is that these were the side walls of the entrance, which must then be regarded as a short passage from the street into the αὐλή. But such a passage, though found by Dr. Schliemann at Tiryns, would be a very inconvenient place for a chariot, which would block up the approach from the street. The explanation of Protodikos (De Aed. Hom.: Lips. 1877) and others seems therefore preferable, viz. that it means the part of the front wall of the μέγαρον, at the sides of the main door leading into it from the αὐλή, which faced the person who entered from the street. This suits the passage in χ, and it would be under the protection of the colonnade, αἰθουσα, which ran along the front of the μέγαρον, so that a chariot placed here would be screened from the wet. παμφανόωντα, either as being of polished stone, or, according to Helbig, faced with polished wood, cf. θύραι φαιναί Z 169; and see φ 43.

441. βωμοῖσι, commonly taken to mean a stand on which the movable upper part of the chariot was placed when taken off the wheel-part; but rather, as such a construction would seriously interfere with the strength of a chariot, a stand on which the pole was placed to keep it horizontal when not in use. The mule-car seems to have had a movable box on the top (ὑπερερή or πεῖρυνθος Ω 190, § 70); but this is no proof of the existence of any such arrangement in the case of the war-chariot, where it would be not only useless, but prejudicial. βωμός is used again to mean the base of a statue in η 100, but these two appear to be the only passages in classical Greek where the word is used of anything but an altar. There were variants ἀμβωμοῖσι, ἀμβώνεσσι, both of which seem to have been taken to mean “on the steps” of the palace. For the custom of covering up a chariot with a cloth when not in use cf. B 777, E 194. It is impossible to say whether λίτα, which is found besides only in the dative λίτῃ, is a masculine singular or neuter plural.

 τὴν δ' ἀπαμειβόμενος προσέφη νεφεληγερέτα Ζεὺς·

444. ἀμφίς, apart from; as ξ 352, π 267. Aristarchos however, less appropriately, took it to mean “on either side of Zeus,” as sitting in the two places of honour. This leaves οἶαι without any particular force, and 458 evidently means that they were sulking apart from all the rest.

448. For κάμετον Zenodotos here read the Attic form καμέτῃ. On these dual forms see H. G. § 5. It is to be presumed that he also read ἵκεσθε for ἵκεσθον with two of our MSS. in 456, where Elmsley conj. ἵκησθον; cf. Curtius, Vb. i. 80. In the next line Aristarchos read τοῖον for τοῖσιν, a variant which, as Didymos remarks, ἔχει τινα ἔμφασιν, though we should rather have expected οἶον.

452. σφῶιν, an unusual instance of the dative where we should have expected the accusative.

455. οὐκ ἄν, i.e. “otherwise.” The γάρ in the preceding clause, in which this one is anticipated by the word ὅδε, expresses this, without the need of supplying any further ellipse beyond that which is implied in this very common use of γάρ. For the use of πληγέντι of females see 378 above, and Hes. Opp. 199, quoted by Schol., προλιπόντ' ἀνθρώπους αἰδώς καὶ νέμεις.

457-468 = Δ 20-25, Θ 32-37, q.v. 466-468 are omitted here by all good MSS.

470. For ἦοὺς Zenod. read das, which was rejected by Aristarchos as not being Homeric; it has however all the appearance of a genuine word of the old Achaean or proto-Epic dialect, representing dfas: cf. Aeol. dfws or afws. It can hardly have been invented by Zenod., and it is with hesitation that I have not inserted it into the text. But the second a has no exact analogy in Greek, though it appears to correspond to the Skt. ush-a, “early”; cf. Curtius, Et. no. 613.

471. For the phrase ὄψαι αἶ κ' ἐθέλησθα cf. Δ 353, etc.

475-476 were athetized by Aristarchos, on the grounds that ἡματι τῷ ought not to be used of an event which is to happen on the next day; that Achilles comes to the battle over Patroklos not ἐπὶ πρύμνησι, but at the trench outside the ships; that στεῖνος means a narrow place, not “a strait” in the metaphorical sense (on this see O 426); and finally, that the exact definition of the time is superfluous. None of these grounds except the first seems to be of weight. ἡματι τῷ is only used of the future here and in K 359.

479. Iapetos is named only here in Homer, while Kronos appears only as the father of Zeus except in three passages, Ξ 203, 274, O 225. According to the later legend both were members of the Titan dynasty. This is not distinctly brought out anywhere in Homer, though it is implied in a comparison of this passage and Ξ 279 with Ξ 204. See also note on E 898. The whole question of these dynasties before Zeus, as they are presented in Homer, is too vague to admit of a certain solution; when we come to Hesiod we find that Greek belief has passed into quite another stage, that of harmonizing the incoherent and inconsistent legends handed down, probably from sources differing by wide distances both of race and place. For Tartaros see line 13. The meaning of Zeus may be either “You may banish yourself for ever, and I should not be sorry to lose you,” or “You may try and raise a revolt in Tartaros, and I should not be afraid of your efforts.” The word ἀλωμένη rather points to the former. κύντερον (483), see K 503, A 159.

485. The narrative is now taken up from 349.

486. ἔλκον, a bold but vivid metaphor, darkness being regarded as a mantle or cloth which is dragged over the earth by the departing sun.

488. τριλλιστος: the only other case

in Homer of this intensive use of τρι- in composition is τρισμάκαρες ε 306, § 154. Cf. in later Greek τριδουλος, and numerous compounds with τρις.

491. ἐν καθαρῷ, in a vacant space, as Ψ 61. Cf. ἐν περιφαινόμενῳ, ε 476. The whole line recurs in K 199. Aristarchos concluded that there had been no burying of the dead, and that therefore the passage in H describing it was not genuine, or rather had been already forgotten, ὅτι οὐκέτι γέγονε νεκρῶν ἀναίρεσις. The following passage, down to 503, is chiefly composed of lines which occur elsewhere; 493-5 = Z 318-320, 496 = B 109, 497 = Γ 456, 499 = M 115, 502-3 = I 65-6, 510 = K 101, B 323.

501. For ἐπὶ ῥηγμῖνι θαλάσσης Zenod. read ἐπεὶ Διὸς ἐτράπετο φέρη, as in K 45. The objection of Aristarchos, οὐ κατὰ Διὸς προαίρεσιν νῦξ ἐγένετο, does not seem valid; Hector may well assume that Zeus has done for the sake of the Greeks what we are told that Here did in Σ 239-242. For 502 cf. H 282.

503. For ἐφοπλισόμεσθα Zenod. read ἐφοπλίζεσθον· συγχεῖ δὲ τὸ δυνάμειν, as Aristarchos remarks (see on A 567). It is however possible that this may represent an old variant ἐφοπλίζεσθε, altered for the sake of avoiding the hiatus.

505. ἄξεσθε, so Aristarchos; MSS. ἄξεσθε, but the epic form of the aorist is that with the thematic vowel, not the a-stem. See H. G. § 41, Γ 103, etc.

506. οἰνίζεσθε, see H 472.

508. μέσφα, only here in Homer. It is a word which only reappears in the Alexandrian Epics.

512. ἐπιβαίειν, Bentley ἐπιβῶσιν, to conform to the preceding μὴ ὁρμήσωνται and the following πέσση of MSS. It is however possible to take the opt. as expressing a prayer or urgent wish, a rhetorical figure which gives both force and variety after the hortative μή πως ὀρμήσονται. But this necessitates reading πέσσοι for πέσση with Aristophanes. ὥς then becomes the expression of a wish, like εἴθε, as in Σ 107, X 286, etc. (See however Delbrick, S. F. i. p. 60.) For a wish in the opt. followed by the subj. after ἵνα (515) compare σ 202. βλος πέσσαν, to nurse a wound, according to Aristarchos; and so Z 439, βλος εἶρηκε τὸ τρώμα δμῶνύμῳ τῷ τιτρώσκοντι. This however is hardly necessary; we may take it to mean "brood over the weapon which maimed him," as in the phrase κήδεα πέσσειν Ω 617, 639; and see note on B 237.

519. λέξασθαι, root λεχ, to bivouac. θεοδμήτων πύργων, cf. H 452. θηλύτεραι γυναῖκες, a phrase which occurs several times in the Odyssey, but not again in the Iliad; see Merry on λ 386. There is no trace of the word meaning anything else than female, and the redundancy of the epithet seems to be a genuine instance of Epic naïveté. The comparative form merely indicates opposition to the male sex; see H. G. § 122. Schol. A may be compared for a different and curious explanation.

523. It has been almost universally recognized that the concluding portion of this speech of Hector contains considerable interpolations. Aristarchos athetized 524-5, and 528 (this was omitted altogether by Zenodotos), and held that 535-537 and 538-541 were a double recension, repeating the same thought twice over (the recurrence of αἶσρων, 535 and 538, being particularly displeasing). 540, which is found in the parallel passage, N 827, he seems not to have read here at all. Of the two recensions he preferred the second, as being more boastful, and therefore more in accordance with the character of Hector, while Zenodotos omitted the former (535-7) altogether. Against individual lines many objections can be raised. The use of ἰγίης is unique in Homer, and the sense "profitable" is unlike the Epic style; the same may be said of the phrase φυλάξομεν ἡμέας αὐτούς. Again in 541 ἡμέρη ἤδε must mean, not "this present day," as it should, but "the day of which I am speaking," to-morrow. 527 is not consonant with Hector's intention, which is not to drive the Greeks away, but to prevent their escape. Hentze rejects 524-529, and 538-541, with which omissions the passage is freed from all the difficulties. I prefer to follow Ar. however in the rejection of 535-7. ὃς μὲν νῦν ἰγίης, that which is profitable for the moment, for to-day; while τὸν δ' ἡοὺς apparently means "that concerning the morrow I will now announce." This is not a very Homeric use of the article, but it makes better sense than to join ἡοὺς with the verb, "another announcement I will make to-morrow."

526. ἔλπομαι εὐχόμενος, so Zenod. Aristarchos εὐχομαι ἐλπόμενος, which violates the digamma of ἔλπομαι. This however is not of much importance in a doubtful passage; and, as Mr. Monro ἐξελάαν ἐνθένδε κύνας κηρεσσιφορήτους, remarks, we might read εἶχομ' ἐφελπόμενος. Still it is better to adhere to that tradition which on the face of it is the more archaic.

527. κηρεσσιφορήτους: on the analogy of B 302, 834, this should mean "hurried away from life by fate," and might well be used proleptically, "doomed to death." The following line however, which was not read by Zenodotos, gives a much less effective sense, and has all the appearance of a gloss. But the mere development of the idea of the compound is not in itself un-Homeric; Mr. Monro compares I 124 ἀθλοφόρους, of ἀέθλια ποσὶ φέροντο, and a 299.

529. ἡμέας αὐτούς, "our position" (Mr. Monro), but the phrase is a curious one. For ἐπὶ νυκτὶ cf. N 234, etc.

535. For this line see H. G. § 294.

διαείσεται has two objects, both ἀρετὴν and the object clause εἴ κε κ.τ.λ. "He shall learn (the value of) his courage, whether he will be able to abide my spear."

538. εἰ γάρ . . . ὥς νῦν: for this form of wish, where a thing is vividly depicted as certain by opposing it to an imaginary event which is obviously impossible, or vice versa, see Σ 464, ι 523, ο 156, and particularly N 825. The use of ἡμέρη ἦδε, which is inappropriate here, betrays that these lines are a reminiscence of the latter passage.

545. ἄξοντο, see on 505; MSS. ἄξαντο.

548 and 550-552 are not found in the MSS.; they were first introduced by Barnes from the (pseudo?) Platonic dialogue, Alcib. ii. 149 D. 548 seems in place; the word κνίσῃν in the sense of smoke from roast meat is prevailing, though not solely, used of the savour of sacrifices, so that the specific mention of the hecatombs is what we should expect. The last three lines however can hardly be genuine, as the statement that Ilios was hateful to the gods is quite at variance with the whole spirit of the Iliad, which always says that the city was destroyed much against the will of a large number of the gods, and in spite of the piety of the inhabitants.

553. The expression ἐπὶ πτολέμοιο γεφύρας (al. γεφύρῃ) is strange, as the phrase is elsewhere always used when a battle is actually going on, whereas here it must mean the place where battles were accustomed to be fought. The preposition ἐπὶ also is unique in this connexion; elsewhere it is always ἀνά, which Bekker and Christ read here, from the Schol. on I 88.

555. For φαεινὴν Eustath. records a variant φάει νήν, understood to mean "in light about the new (νέην) moon"; a worthy pendant to the opinion that διὰ στήλην in A 6 meant "for a woman."

557-8 were athetized by Aristarchos and Aristophanes, and omitted by Zenodotos, as being wrongly introduced from II 299-300. There can be little doubt that this judgment is right, fine though the lines are in themselves; as the strong phrase ὑπερράγη is far more appropriate in the latter passage, where the clouds are represented as being actually "burst open from above" by a gust of wind, than here where the air is still. So also the aorist ἔφανε implies a sudden glimpse through clouds. Here too the peaks and points are less in place than where the mountain to which they belong has been already mentioned. It is possible that the interpolation here may have displaced a different passage, as the repetition of ἄστρα in 559 immediately after 555 is rather harsh. If not, we must assume that a later poet was using up old materials with little skill.

559. δὲ εἶδεται, so Aristarchos, according to Schol. V, and one MS.; vulg. δὲ τ' εἶδεται.

560. For τόσσα there was a variant ὡς τὰ, because some critics thought that the comparison ought not to be with the number of the stars, when the comparatively small number of a thousand immediately follows, but with their brightness.

561. Ἰλιόθι πρό, see on I 3.

563. σέλαι, not σέλα, is the traditional spelling, on the ground that the iota subscript cannot stand under a short vowel. For τὰρ δὲ there seems to have been a variant ἐν δὲ.

I.

The position of the ninth book in the economy of the Iliad is a point of cardinal importance in the Homeric question. As has been already stated in the general introduction, I do not find it possible to believe that the book was included in the original draft of the poem. The chief arguments for this belief have been stated by Grote in a masterly manner; and though some of them have been weakened by later criticisms (reference may be made particularly to Bergk, Hentze and Mr. Monro) yet their general force is unshaken. The principal of them is the inconsistency of the whole idea of the offered reparation with the words of Achilles in Π 49-100. The whole tone of that speech excludes the idea that the restoration of Briseis had already been offered. This inconsistency is glaring in the case of a phrase like Π 72 εἰ μοι κρείων Ἀγαμέμνων ἦπια εἶδελι, 85-6 ὥς ἂν . . . οἱ περικαλλέα κούρην ἂψ ἀπονάσσωσι, ποτὶ δ' ἀγλαὰ δῶρα πύρωσι, and hardly less with words like those of Π 60-61 ἀλλὰ τὰ μὲν προτετέχθαι ἐάσωμεν, οὐδ' ἄρα πως ἦν ἀσπερχές κεχολῶσθαι ἐνὶ φρεσὶν. Compare again Α 609-610 νῦν δὲ περὶ γούνατ' ἐμὰ στήσσεσθαι Ἀχαιοὺς λισσομένους, which are meaningless in the mouth of a man to whom humble supplication on behalf of the Achaeans has been made only a few hours before. That the passages in Α and Π both belong to the oldest portion of the Iliad is to my mind beyond question. In the face of these facts, the mention of the embassy in Σ 448 and Τ 141, which may with equal confidence be pronounced later accretions, is of insignificant weight.

The conclusion as to the later origin of the book is also borne out by its language and contents, though much less decisively than is the case with K, Ψ and Ω. For the language, Mr. Monro has pointed out the following instances in which I agrees with K, Ψ, and Ω, and the Odyssey, rather than the rest of the Iliad (see H. G. index, Iliad, characteristics of particular books); the perf. in -κα from verbs in -τω (τεθαροῦκασι); ἐπί with acc. of extension over; ἐνὶ for μετά = among, with persons, and with abstract words (this is very characteristic of the present book, see 143, 285, 319, 378, 491); ἐκ = in consequence of; the use of the article in 342; ἄν with the first person of the opt., 417; ὥς τε with infin., 42; δεῖ for χρή, 337; ἄν with the infin., 684. We may add μετά with acc. = among, 54. The geography too is later than that of the Iliad, as is shewn by the mention of Egypt, and Pytho with its temple of Apollo (382, 405), and perhaps the extended use of the word Ἑλλάς (447, 478). The mention of εὐφήμησαι (171) as the accompaniment of a religious rite is apparently an approximation to the later custom, and does not recur in Homer. The legend of the choice of Achilles between two destinies (410) is apparently inconsistent with the first book.

Further, we must take into consideration the fact that the fate of the ninth book is bound up with that of the eighth. Now it is precisely that part of Θ which describes the defeat of the Greeks and prepares the way for I, which we have found to be largely a cento from other parts of the poems, to be full of obvious interpolations, and to fall consistently below the level of the best narrative of the Iliad. In questions of style every scholar must train his own perceptions and judge for himself; for my own part I feel without doubt that the author of I, though a magnificent rhetorician—perhaps no finer speech than that of Achilles was ever written—cannot be the same who composed either the first, the sixth, or the eleventh books of the Iliad.

However we may judge of the book as a whole, we must still admit the probability that it has suffered at least one large interpolation, the episode of Phoenix, which is discussed in the note to 168; there are numerous difficulties and inconsistencies in the long story which he tells; and even this seems little adapted to its end, as the punishment which falls upon Meleager is not so condign as to produce a great effect upon Achilles. It has also been suggested with great force that the appointment of the sentinels in 66-68, 80-88, which can be cut out without loss, is an interpolation designed merely to prepare the way for K, where the visit to the outposts is essential to the story. We never find tactical advice put into the mouth of Nestor without at the same time having other grounds to suspect an interpolation (see on B 362, Δ 303, H 337). With these exceptions the book is fairly free from spurious passages.

2. φύξα, Panic the handmaid of chill

Repulse. φύξα (φυγ-ja) and φόβος both originally meant "flight," and in H. the latter is almost confined to this sense: while the former has partly, as here, developed the idea of terror (ἡ μετὰ δειλίας φυγή) which in φόβος ultimately became dominant. Cf. πεφυζότες, Φ 6. κρύβας, lit. numbing, freezing; see Z 344.

3. βεβολητός and βεβολημένος (l. 9 and κ 247) are the forms always used of mental wounds, according to Ar. Zen. however read βεβλ. in all cases.

5. The poet evidently speaks as an inhabitant of Asia Minor or one of the islands near. This is not proved merely by his making the N. and W. winds blow from Thrace (see Mr. Monro in Journ. Phil. xiii. 288), but by his saying that they drive the seaweed up along the shore. The idea seems to be that of a sudden "chopping" squall, which the poet regards as two winds blowing at the same time. Βορέης, spondee as in Ψ 195. We may regard the first syllable as lengthened by the ictus (as τό βα II 228) and -ης as one syllable by synizesis: or, as Curtius thinks, the word may have been pronounced Βόρρης (Et. p. 609). Most edd. read Βορρης, though there is no variation in the MSS. in either passage.

6. κελαινόν, proleptic, "so as to become dark."

7. κορθύεται, rises into crests, cf. κορύσσεται Δ 424. παρέξ ἄλα, casts out along the shore.

11. κλήδην, ἐξονομακλήδην X 415, etc., giving a special invitation to each, and not proclaiming the assembly by shouting—lest the enemy should hear in the stillness of the night.

12. πονεῖτο, sc. κικλήσκειν: he took his share of the work in the summoning.

14. The simile is clearly that of the small but incessant trickling of a spring which opens on the face of a precipice, and streaks it with dark lines (of lichen, etc.), where the water, itself looking black, flows down—a very common phenomenon in limestone countries. μελάνδρος is commonly explained of the dark colour of deep water. But a deep well just at the top of a precipice can hardly have been a familiar phenomenon.

- ἦ τε κατ' αἰγίλιπος πέτρης δνοφερὸν χέει ὕδωρ· 15

15. αἰγίλιπος: Göbel derives from αἰγίς and λίπ- (of λε-λιμ-μένος, etc.) to love, explaining “the haunt of storms.” This may perhaps be accepted for want of a better. The old explanation was, “so steep as to be deserted even by goats”! It recurs only N 63 and II 4. Zenod. omitted 15-16, and for ὥς τε κρ. μελ. read μετὰ δ' Ἀργείοισιν ἔειπεν.

17-25. See B 110-118. The first line does not seem appropriate to a speech in the ἀγορῇ, where the whole army is assembled.

19. τότε, so Ar.: MSS. πρὶν, as B 112.

23-25 were athetized by Ar., as unsuitable to a general who is raising a siege. But here, as in B, they really add to the bitterness of the ἄτῃ. Zen.

omitted 23-31 altogether, substituting ἦτοι δ' γ' ὥς εἰπὼν κατ' ἄρ' ἔξετο θυμὸν ἀχεύων. | τοῖσι δ' ἀνιστάμενος μετέφη κρατερὸς Διομήδης.

30. ἄνεψ (so best MSS. and Schol. A, not ἀνεψ) may always be a nom. plur. masc. except ψ 93, where it is used of one woman. Probably this passage induced Arist. to write ἀνεψ and regard the word as an adv. like ἀκην. The word is for ἀν-αφ-ος, voiceless: root df of αἶψα, ἀντή: Lat. su-are (Curt. Et. no. 588 b). τετιηότες is explanatory, “silent for grief.”

31. Observe the characteristic modesty of Diomedes. He will not speak till he is sure that no one else wishes to do so; H 399, I 696, K 218.

32. σοὶ πρῶτα implies that he regards all the others as guilty in a less degree of the same cowardice. μαχήσομαι, of verbal strife, as B 377, Z 329.

33. θέμις ἐστίν, the ἀγορῇ being the place where freedom of speech was what we should call “privileged.”

34 alludes to Δ 370. ἀλκὴν has the emphatic place in rhetorical antithesis with ἀλκήν in 39; “it was my valour thou didst make light of . . . and it is valour that Zeus denies thee.” But as so often the thought grows as it is being uttered, and a fresh antithesis to ἀλκὴν is given by σκήπτρῳ μὲν in 38. πρῶτον, you began by blaming my valour (so now you cannot complain of my retort).

37. διάνδιχα, “endows thee only by halves.”

39. ὃ τε, attracted to the gender of κράτος: “valour which is the greatest sovereignty.” Cf. ἡ θέμις ἐστὶ, etc.

40. See A 561 for δαιμόνι (“verblendet,” Ameis). ἔλπεαι is often used meaning simply “to suppose,” e.g. II 281, P 404.

42. ὥς τε goes with ἐπέσσυται; we should expect the simple infin. Cf. ρ 21, the only other case in H. of ὥς τε in the sense “so that” with infin., instead of as an adverb of comparison. Here Lehrs would read ἀποτρέσσει (Ar. 157).

44. Rejected by Arist. as interpolated merely to supply a verb, which is not required, in the last clause of 43. It is omitted by the first hand of Townl.

46. εἰ δέ, “ay! even let them fly themselves,” etc. εἰ here has its original force of an exclamatory “adhibitive” particle, and is correctly used with the imper. as in εἰ δ' ἄγε (so Lange, and apparently Aristarchos). There is no need to supply any ellipse.

47. Diomedes bitterly repeats Agamemnon's words, l. 27.

48. τέκμωρ, see A 526, and notes on H 80 and 70.

49. εἰλήλουθμεν refers of course to all the Achaeans.

51. This is the invariable result of a speech by Diomedes: H 404, l. 711, etc.

54. μετὰ πάντας ὁμήλικας must mean “among all of thine own age,” or there is no sense in the passage; compare the very similar π 419. See also note on B 143. The peculiarity of these three passages is that there is no verb of motion, such as regularly precedes μετὰ in this sense; H. G. § 195. Nauck conj. κατά.

55. ὀνόσσεται, make light of. Cf. Ω 439.

56. πάλιν ἐρέει, to contradict; see Δ

357. τέλος, you have not proceeded to the full issue of your words, i.e. you overthrew Agamemnon's proposal, but did not offer anything practical in its place.

57. εἶης κεν, potential opt., as far as years go, you might be my son, my youngest born. ἦ μὴν καὶ, cf. B 291, "yet I must admit that you are young," an apology for the slight depreciation contained in the preceding clause. (Mr. Monro explains it as "'and yet you are but young,' serving to heighten the qualified praise of the preceding sentence." He regards the clause ἀτὰρ οὐ . . . μύθων as subordinate and parenthetical; whereas it really bears the whole emphasis, being thrown into strong contrast with what follows in 60 sqq.).

58. For βάζειν with double acc., meaning "to speak words to a person," cf. II 207. But the line is generally rejected by modern critics, after Bekker, as weakly tautological, and arising from a double reading ἀτὰρ πεπνυμένα βάζεις and ἐπεὶ κατὰ μοῖραν ἔειπες.

61. ἐξείπω is used as simply equivalent to a future. Cf. A 262, X 418. ἔξ implies "fully," as opposed to οὐ τέλος ἔκω.

63-4. These lines seem to point, in a vague way, at the conduct of Agamemnon in making strife with Achilles. ἐπιδημίου is of course the emphatic word. Nestor only hints at what he will afterwards develop. However, the lines do not seem very well in place here; they look like a favourite "gnomic" couplet, such as would naturally lend itself to interpolation. The meaning is "banished from tribe and law and home"; i.e. unworthy to share any of the relations which formed the base of primitive Aryan society, the clan, household worship, typified by the fire on the hearth, and community of θέμιστες or traditional law administered by the kings.

64. ὀκρυόεντος, the κρυόεντος of l. 2; but here, as in Z 344 (q.v.), we ought to read ἐπιδημίου κρυόεντος, the wrong form being perhaps due to the false analogy of ὀκρύβεις (so Curtius, Et. no. 77).

65. See H 282.

66. ἕκαστοι, severally, each at his own post. Arist. read φυλακτῆρας, when λεξάσθων will = let each chief choose (λεγ-). The text must mean "let them lie down, bivouac" (λεγ-). τείχεος ἐκτός implies that the moat is at some distance from the wall.

68. κούροι, the young men opposed to γέρουσιν, 70. See note on A 114.

69. σὺ μὲν ἄρχε, "take thou the lead" (the "initiative" in modern phrase) "for thou art the most royal of us." Cf. l. 392. A dinner was the usual means of consultation between the chiefs; e.g. in Od., η 189, ν 8, etc.; and compare γερούσιον οἶνον, Δ 259, 343.

72. ἡμάτιαι, daily. Gladstone thinks that these remarks of Nestor's allude to Achilles' taunts of avarice against Agamemnon in A. For the wine ships cf. H 467.

73. "It is for thee to offer all hospitality, seeing thou art lord of many men." For the long ι in ὑποδεξίη cf. ἀτιμίησι, v 142: ὑπεροπλήσι A 205, etc., and note on A 697. A gives ὑποδεξίη, which is perhaps right, though there is probably no other instance of this suffix, unless in ἐξείης, which is no doubt a genitive.

74. Ι.ε. "in the multitude of counsellors there is safety."

75. χρεώ with accus. and gen., as K 43, A 606. We may supply γίγνεται, as δ 634, or έστιν, as Φ 323; but the original construction of the acc. is shewn by ε 189, ὅτε με χρεὼ τόσον ἴκοι. See also Eurip. Hec. 976, τίς χρεῖα σ' έμοῦ (Merry and R. on a 124).

77. τάδε γηθήσαν, "Who can rejoice at this?" a sort of cognate accus. common in Attic, especially with personal participial constructions, ἥσθην εύλογοῦντά σε, I like to hear you praise. So Θ 378. Cf. μή μοι τόδε χέω, ε 215.

87. The moat is here unmistakably represented as being at a considerable distance in front of the wall, and independent of it. See on H 342.

89. ἀολλέας: Arist. read ἀριστέας, a form used by Pindar; but only ἀριστής is found in H.

94. καὶ πρόσθεν, "of old," not with any particular reference.

97. μέν . . . δέ, virtually "as I shall end with thee, so will I begin with thee." In other words, Nestor begins his speech in the usual style of an appeal to a god; because a king is the representative of Zeus. So "A te principium, tibi desinet," Verg. Ecl. viii. 11. He seems anxious to prove that he wishes to address Agamemnon in his official capacity, not as a private friend, so he begins in this formal way.

99. See A 238, B 206. θέμιστες, "dooms," a primitive form of our "common law"; a recognized body of principles and customs which had grown up in practice, and on which the simple litigation of an early age could be settled. They were handed down traditionally in the governing families till they had attained a fixed form, and hence were regarded as definite things which Zeus entrusted to kings to protect from harm. The σκῆπτρον indicates the right, probably, of political action, the "executive" as opposed to the "judicial" function. Hence the use of the sceptre to delegate the right of speaking in the ἀγορή. σφίσι, for the λαοί. For βουλευῆσθα after aor., see A 158.

100. περὶ, "more than others shouldst thou speak thy thought and hearken, yea and fulfil even another man's advice (as well as thine own) whenever any man's mind bids him speak for good (for εἰς ἀγαθόν cf. A 789, Ψ 305); for whatever any doth begin will hinge on thee"; i.e. do not be prejudiced against any advice because it is given by other people—the credit of carrying it out will revert to you. Cf. λ 346, Ἀλκινόου δ' ἐκ τοῦδ' ἔχεται ἔργον τε ἔπος τε.

106. ἐξ ἔτι τοῦ ὅτε, ever since the time when. The best MSS. and Scholia read διογενές (agreeing with Ἀχιλλῆος): but this can hardly be right.

107. χωομένου, in spite of his wrath. Ἀχ. is genitive after κλισίῃθεν. ἔβης ἀπούρας, much as we should say "you went and took"; though Agamemnon did not literally go himself, but only in the person of his representatives, the heralds. See A 323, 356, T 89.

109. ἀπεμυθεόμην, "dissuaded," A 254 sqq. ΔΙ. ἐπεμυθεόμην.

110. ἀθάνατοι περ, the very immortals. ἔτισαν, sc. by permitting the defeat of the Achaeans at his request. Observe the strong contrast into which ἔτισαν and ἠτίμησας are brought by their position.

115. οὐ ψεύδος is in a sort of predicative apposition with ἄτας. Cf. θανατόν νύ τοι ὀρκί' ἔταμνον Δ 155, ταῦτα . . . ἀληθεῖν κατέλεξα η 297. "Thou speakest of my infatuation (so as to be) not a falsehood," i.e. thou truly relatest. For Agamemnon's ἄτη see l. 18, and for δασύμην T 91, Δ 340.

 τὰς μὲν οἱ δώσω, μετὰ δ' ἔσσεται, ἣν τότε ἀπηύρων, κούρη Βρισηὶ· ἐπὶ δὲ μέγαν ὄρκον ὁμῶμαι

116. ἀντί, as good as, worth, many hosts. See on Θ 163.

119. λευγαλέῃσι, "sorry," "wretched," a term of contempt (cf. β 61, λευγαλέοι τ' ἐσόμεθα καὶ οὐ δεδαηκότες ἀλκήν): lit. "lamentable," λυγρός, lug-eo.

After 119 there was, according to Athenaeus and Eust., in the edition of one Dioskurides a line ἡ οἶνυ μεθῶν, ἡ μ' ἐβλαψαν θεοὶ αὐτοί; as also in the parallel passage T 137. It is obviously an intolerable interpolation.

120. ἀψ, retro, retracing my steps. ἀρέσαι, to conciliate, satisfy him, as 112.

122. ἀπυρος was explained (1) not meant for use, but only for ornament, ἀναθεματικός as opposed to ἐμπυρρήτης, Ψ 702; (2) new, not yet discoloured by being put upon the fire. See Ψ 267 and 270, where the ἐτι (λευκὸν ἐτ' αὐτῶς) seems decisive in favour of the second explanation. For the value of the talent of gold cf. Ψ 262-269, where two are worth less than a λέβης.

124. πηγῶν, strong, lit. compact, so ε 388 κύματι πηγῶν, and πηγασίμαλλος Γ 197.

125. "Not without booty would that man be, and not unpossessed of precious gold, that owned as much as my strong-footed horses won me in prizes." I.e. the mere prizes I have won in races would form a considerable fortune for any man. Mr. Ridgeway has shewn

(J. H. S. vi. 328) that ἀλῆιος comes from λῆις, and has nothing to do with λῆιον, which means "crop" or standing corn, not corn-land; several property in land is confined in the Iliad to the τέμενος βασιλῆων, while there are indications that the "common-field" system still prevailed (see on M 422). ἀλῆιος and ἀκτῆμων, like πολυκτῆμων πολυλῆιος in E 613, are evidently to be explained from ληιστοὶ μὲν γὰρ τε βόες . . . κτητοὶ δὲ τρίποδες in I 406; they represent the two primitive methods of acquiring wealth, plunder and trade, which in Homeric times flourished with equal rights.

128. ἀμύμονα, so best MSS.: Ar. apparently ἀμύμονας (so Did., whose authority outweighs the contrary statement of Aristonikos). ἔργ' ἰδυίας MSS., though one or two have preserved a relic of the better tradition in ἔργα εἰδυίας.

129. αὐτός, Achilles, who was himself their captor: Ag. will not name him (τοῦτον, 118; cf. 131; μιν, 142).

130. ἐξελόμην, chose as my γέρας ἐξαίρετον. In this book the chief seems to apportion the γέρας to himself, whereas in A it is the gift of the army; see 330-3 compared with A 162, 299. The imperf. ἐνίκων refers back to the time of the choice.

131. μετὰ, with them, i.e. in addition. See T 245.

132. κούρη, so Arist., MSS. κούρην, μή ποτε τῆς εὐνῆς ἐπιβήμεναι ἡδὲ μυγῆναι,

 ἢ θέμις ἀνθρώπων πέλει, ἀνδρῶν ἡδὲ γυναικῶν.
 ταῦτα μὲν αὐτίκα πάντα παρέσσεται· εἰ δέ κεν αὐτε 135
 ἄστν μέγα Πριάμοιο θεοὶ δώσω· ἀλαπάξαι, νῆα ἄλιν χρυσοῦ καὶ χαλκοῦ νησάσθω εἰσελθών, ὅτε κεν δατεώμεθα ληίδ' Ἀχαιοί, Τρωιάδας δὲ γυναικας ἐείκοσιν αὐτὸς ἐλέσθω, αἶ κε μετ' Ἀργεῖην Ἑλένην κάλλισται ἔωσιν. 140
 εἰ δέ κεν Ἄργος ἰκοίμεθ' Ἀχαιικόν, οὐθαρ ἀρούρης, γαμβρός κέν μοι ἔοι· τίσω δέ μιν ἴσον Ὀρέστη, ὅς μοι τηλύγετος τρέφεται θαλήῃ ἐνι πολλῇ.
 τρεῖς δέ μοι εἰσὶ θύγατρες ἐνὶ μεγάρῳ ἐνπηκτῷ, Χρυσόθεμις καὶ Λαοδίκη καὶ Ἰφιάνασσα· 145 τᾶων ἦν κ' ἐθέλῃσι, φίλῃν ἀνάεδνον ἀγέσθω πρὸς οἶκον Πηλῆος· ἐγὼ δ' ἐπὶ μείλῃα δώσω πολλὰ μάλ', ὅσσ' οὐ πῶ τις ἐῖ ἐπέδωκε θυγατρί. .
 ἐπτα δέ οἱ δώσω ἐν ναιόμενα πτολίεθρα, which might be explained by attraction to ἦν, or as a return to the original form of the sentence, τὰς δώσω.

133. τῆς, of her: genitive after εὐνῆς. So T 176.

134. This line is divided by the comma after πᾶσι into two equal halves; a rhythm for which there is no complete parallel, for in A 154 the elision perhaps helps to bridge the gap. Cf. A 53, and notice the difference produced by the slight change in l. 276.

135. αὐτίκα, at the moment; αὐτε, hereafter.

137. ἄλιν, adverbial; it does not take a gen. after it in H.: see Φ 319. χρυσοῦ is gen. after νησάσθω, which has the construction of verbs of "filling with" anything, which is regarded as taking from a source.

138. εἰσελθών, having burst in (taken the city by assault). But Bekker puts the comma after νησάσθω, and translates "entering (into the council) when we divide the spoil," i.e. so as to have his own way in the division.

139. αὐτός, i.e. like the commander-in-chief, as opposed to the assignment by lot to the rest of the army.

141. ἄ κεν with opt. of a remote possibility, see A 60. οὐθαρ ἀρούρης (only here and 283), Vergil's "uber agri, ubere glebae," Aen. i. 531, iii. 164, etc.:

"the udder of the soil," τὸ τρόφιμον τῆς γῆς, Sch. B.

143. τηλύγετος, see on Γ 175. This is the only mention of Orestes in the Iliad.

145. Λαοδίκη and Ἰφιάνασσα seem to answer to Electra and Iphigenia of the tragedians. The legend of the sacrifice in Aulis is evidently unknown to Homer.

146. φάλη: here the original sense, "own," is very well marked. See A 167. ἀνάεδνον (for the form see Curtius, Et. p. 579), without paying the usual ξῶνα, or presents made by the bridegroom to the parents of the bride (a relic of the universal primitive custom by which —when the bride is not seized by force from her home—she is bought, see A 243, II 178; and cf. Σ 593). From the ξῶνα we must distinguish the presents given to the bride by her parents, which seem to be signified by the μελῖα of 147; but it is not certain whether this is the technical name, or merely a general expression used here with a special significance, "peace-offerings" meant to appease Achilles. Agamemnon offers not only to remit the usual price to be paid by the bridegroom, but actually to give in addition (ἐπὶ . . . δώσω) a large dowry to the bride—as was done by Altes in his desire to secure the marriage between his daughter and Priam, X 51. See Cobet, M. C. p. 239 sqq.

150. These are Messenian cities belonging to Lakeldaimon, not to Mykenai. Agamemnon perhaps disposes only of the overlordship; or they may have been family property, though in his brother's territory. But from the mention of Pylos it would seem that they should belong to Nestor. None of them is named in the catalogue.

153. νέαται (for which Apollonius read κέαται), explained by Arist. as = ναίονται, “are inhabited,” as if from a perf. *νεῖμαι which does not exist. The word is usually explained as superl. of νέ(φ)ος, novissimae in the sense “furthest,” like νεάτη A 712, but see on A 381.

155. δωτίναι, free gifts (perhaps not unlike the “benevolences” of English history). κέ goes with fut. indic. because the event spoken of is regarded as contingent upon Achilles' acceptance.

156. λιπαρὰς τελέουσι θέμιστας, “will fulfil his pleasant ordinances.” For this use of λιπαρός cf. γῆρας λιπαρόν in Od., a happy old age, λ 136, δ 210, etc. Perhaps λιπαρός should be taken predicatively, “will bring his ordinances to prosperous fulfilment,” ἐπ' αὐτοῦ βασιλεύοντες εἰρηκτικῶς βιώσονται, Schol. A. Others explain “will pay rich dues” λιπαροὺς φόρους τελέουσιν: but it seems impossible to reconcile this with the very definite Homeric use of θέμιστες.

158. δμηθήτω (Zen. and Aristoph. καμψθήτω), “let him be overcome. Hades I ween yields neither to prayer nor violence” (μόνος θεῶν γὰρ θάνατος οὐ δῶρων ἐργῇ, Aesch. fr. Nioche), “for which very cause he is most hateful to men of all gods.” The τε in 159 is gnomic or generalizing.

160. See 69, A 279.

161. γενεῇ, in ago: = γενεῇφιν, 58.

164. οὐκέτι, no longer, i.e. your presents have passed the point at which they could be lightly esteemed (Ameis). But Nestor is really looking back to a time when Agamemnon was offering, not insufficient presents, but nothing at all. The expression he uses is very courteous, but shews which way his thoughts are running.

167. ἐπιόψομαι (fut. or perhaps rather aor. subj., see on E 212), “whomsoever I choose, let them be persuaded to go.” The step by which ἐφορᾶν gets the meaning of selection is that of passing in review, inspecting, a number of things; see β 294 τῶν (πῶν) ἐπιόψομαι ἢ τις ἀρίστη, so we say “to look out” a thing. τοὺς ἀν = οὓς ἀν, with δέ in apodosis.

168. There is very grave reason for suspecting, with Bergk (Gr. Lit. 595), that the whole episode of Phoinix is an interpolation. He is a quite subordinate character who has not been mentioned before, and he has no business to be present at a meeting of the royal council. Moreover we find the dual used of the envoys in 182, 192-8, evidently a trace of the original form of the passage. Ar. assumed that Phoinix was not one of the ambassadors, but was sent on first to prepare Achilles for their coming afterwards (ἔπειτα). But after reading all this into Homer we have gained nothing, for Achilles is surprised after all by the entrance of the envoys (193). Phoinix is entirely ignored from 168 to 432, except that he is a κωφὸν πρόσωπον in 223, where Odysseus seems to treat him with singularly little respect. However he cannot be cut clean out; three lines have been slightly altered to introduce him (169, 223, 621), though it is hardly worth while speculating as to their original form. Numerous difficult and confused passages in his speech will be pointed out in the notes.

171. εὐφημήσαι, either favete linguis, or "speak words of good omen." The idea does not again occur in H.

173. ἑαδῶτα (Fe-Fad-, σFad- of ἀνδ-ἄνω), grateful, pleasing. So σ 422.

175. See A 470-1. Here, as always, the drinking is quite separate from the eating, and has a distinctly religious character.

180. δεδῶλιν, acc. to Curtius and Fick a nasalized reduplication from δαρ-, δρα- to look (ὑπό-δρα, and δρα-κ- of δράκων, etc.). It will then mean, looking rapidly ("winking") to each, to enforce his advice, διανεύων τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, Sch. A. ἕκαστον must either include Phoinix, in which case the line, which is parenthetical, should be rejected, or else be = ἐκάτερον.

181. πειρᾶν, after ἐπέτελλε, and exegetic of πόλλὰ.

182. τὼ δέ: for the dual see note on 168.

183. Poseidon is both chief patron of the Achaian cause, and lord of the element by which they are walking. ἐννοσίγαιος, for ἐν-φοσι-γαιος, root Fob of ώβειν, Skt. vadh to smite; so ἐν-(F)οσι-χθών: either because Poseidon is the lord of earthquakes, or simply because the waves of the sea are for ever beating the land. γαιήοχος, perhaps originally "supporting the earth," regarded as floating in the sea. It has been proposed to take it as meaning "rejoicing in chariots." But in that case the η could not be explained, and the close connexion with ἐννοσίγαιος forbids; for it is much more likely that a somewhat tautological expression should be used than that the stem γαι should be habitually used in two adjacent words in two quite different senses. However we must remember that with epithets of gods we are on especially doubtful ground, as we can never be sure that the Greeks attached any very definite meaning to hieratic words whose sense may even to them have been lost in antiquity.

184. μεγάλας, proud; so μεγαλήτορι, 109.

186. This is the only case in the Iliad where we find music mentioned. The exigencies of war may perhaps account for the fact that the Iliad knows nothing of the δαῖδαί, who are so prominent in Od.

187. “The cross-bar thereon was of silver.” The ζυγόν was the bar, joining the two horns of the lyre, to which the strings were fastened by the pegs (κόλλοι, φ 407).

188. ἄρετα, had won (see on A 159). The “city of Eetion” was Thebe, whence Briseis had come.

189. κλέα, fames, i.e. famous deeds. The word seems to be for κλέα, cf. H. G. § 105, 4.

191. Cobet reads δέγμενος, a syncopated present for δεχόμενος, which is given as a variant in the margin of A, and is probably right. δέγμενος, if an aor. form, should mean “having received,” not “waiting,” but it is possibly a perfect (see Δ 107). Αἰακίδαην: the obj. is taken prepositively from the relative clause.

192. πρότερω, forward; an adverb, the compar. of πρόσω as Ψ 526, not a dual.

194. αὐτῇ σὺν φ.: the σύν is generally omitted in this construction of αὐτός with the dat.; but cf. M 112, Z 498, v 118. H. G. § 144, note.

196. δεικνύμενος, welcoming. We find δειδέχεται, -το, δειδεκτο (Δ 4, I 224, 671, X 435, η 72) δεικνόμεμαι O 86, σ 111, ω 410, δειδίσκομαι (for δει-δίσκ-ομαι) (γ 41, σ 121, v 197), all in this sense. They seem used specially of pledging with a cup, apparently from the idea of pointing at the person in whose honour the draught is taken; though this idea is absent here.

197. This disjointed sentence is very natural in Achilles' great surprise, and it is probably useless to attempt to produce from it one connected logical whole. Two thoughts spring to his lips; first, sincere pleasure at a visit from his friends—from whom perhaps he has been separated for a fortnight; and next, gratified pride at what he sees is the object of their visit—a confession of their sore need for him (ἦ τι μάλα χρεώ). This latter he checks, with his native courtesy, the instant he has uttered it, and returns directly to his first expression, which he puts in a still stronger form, with a half excuse (συνεχόμενος περ) for his unpatriotic satisfaction at the disasters of the army. “Welcome: surely ye are dear friends that are here—the need must be very sore—ay, ye are the dearest to me of all the Achaeans even in my anger.” It is possible however to take ἦ τι μάλα χρεώ as meaning “I had sore need of such a visit from my dearest friends.”

202. καθίστα, set upon the table.

203. ζωρότερον, generally explained as Martial translates it, “misceri iussit amicis Largius Aeacides vini diuissimum merum,” viii. 6, 11, as if from ζῆν. It is perhaps better to refer it to ζεσ-, to boil; it will then mean fervidius, hotter, stronger wine (Död., cf. Curt. no. 567). The merit of the wine given by Maron to Odysseus lies in its strength (i. 209).

204. οἱ = οδοί. For μελάθρον, used of a hut in the camp, see on Ω 643.

206. κρεῖον, i.e. a meat-block for chopping and carving, as appears from 209. ἐν πυρὸς αὐγῇ, no doubt the only light in the hut, for it is now night.

208. σιάλος in this connexion is acc. to Curt. (El. p. 717) a diminutive of σῦς, and not related to σιάλον = fat. We can however only translate “a fat hog.” τεθαλλῖαν ἄλ., “rich with fat, lard.” Cf. the use of θαλεῖα.

209. τῷ, held the meat for him. τάμνεν is to carve (into joints); μίστυλλαν, to slice into smaller pieces.

212. κατὰ . . . ἐκάη, our own idiom,

“burnt down”: only the hot embers (ἀνθρακίῃ) are used for roasting, the meat being placed directly over them.

214. ἄλδος is the “quasi-partitive” gen. usual where anything taken from a larger mass is employed: so πρῆσαι πυρὸς B 415, λελουμένος Ὀκεανοῖο E 6. H. G. § 151, c. θείοιο, perhaps because it was used on account of its purifying quality, to render sacrifices fit for the gods. No such usage is mentioned in Homer (salt is indeed only mentioned again in λ 123, ρ 455, ψ 270), but it is familiar to us from Jewish ritual. κρατευντάων, “dogs,” rests on each side of the fire on which to lay the ends of the spits. Död. derives from κέρας, supposing them to have been of the shape X; Düntzer from κρατεῖν, to master, i.e. to hold fast. For ἐπαείρας Arist. read ἐπαείρας, but the genitive may be local, as τοίχου 219, and so H 426.

215. ἀλοῖσι, “chargers” of wood to serve as dishes, see § 482.

219. τοίχου τοῦ ἐτέριοι, by the opposite wall of the hut (so Ω 598), in order

Ζεὺς δὲ σφί Κρονίδης ἐνδέξια σήματα φαίνων to watch his guests' wants. The genitive is local, like πεδία, etc.; H. G. § 149, 2.

220. θυηλάς, generally explained as a portion of the meat dedicated by way of ἀπαρχαί to the gods. Perhaps it may be incense, but see note on Z 270.

222. This line is merely formal, for the envoys had just supped with Agamemnon. For this reason, we are told, Aristarchos would have preferred to read ἀψ' ἐπάσαντο for ἐξ ἔρον ἔντο, but retained the MS. reading ὕδ' ἐπέρττης εὐλαβείας, fortunately for Homer's reputation and his own.

223. νεῦσε, made a sign to Phoinix to begin. But Odysseus anticipates him.

224. δείδεκτο, pledged; see l. 196 and Δ 4.

225. ἐπίδευεῖς, sc. ἐσμέν, or perhaps rather εἰσίν, “men are not,” as in φασίν, “men say” (Mr. Monro). Schol. A and Eust. mention variants εἰμέν and ἤμεν for ἡμὲν in the next line. Arist. read ἐπίδευεῖ, thou lackest not.

227. ἡδὲ καὶ, “even as.” I.e. it is not for food we have come. πάρα = πάρεστι, “there is abundance, to our heart's desire, to feast on” (δαίνυσθαι, expegeg. infin.).

229. πῆμα, accus. after εἰσορ., δείδιμεν being added without an object.

230. ἐν δοιῇ, “we are in doubt whether we shall save our ships, or whether they are lost.” For the constr. compare K

173. For σωσέμεν (cf. l. 681) Bekker ingeniously conjectured σώας ἔμεν (cf. Θ 246, A 117), but the correction is not absolutely necessary; the sudden change of voice and subject being quite in the Homeric style. If we read σωσέμεν, it is a “mixed” aor. = σάωσαι, rather than future. δοιῇ (ἀπ. λεγ.) = doubt, for δφει (δωα = two, cf. du-bius, Germ. Zwei-fel).

231. δύσεαι ἀλκὴν, clothe thyself in might; cf. ἐπιεμένοι ἀλκὴν H 164, etc.

232. αὔλιν ἔθεντο, made their bivouac. Hence the later αὐλίεσθαι, a regular military term.

235. “And deem that we shall hold out no longer, but fall (back) upon our black ships”; or “that they will no longer be withheld, but will assault,” etc. The phrase occurs several times, and generally with the same ambiguity. But B 175, A 311, M 107, are strongly in favour of the first interpretation; while here the absence of any mention of any subject (such as ἡμᾶς or Δαναοὺς) seems to require the second. Hence Christ thinks the lines are wrongly adopted from M. ἡμᾶς is a strong word, meaning a violent retreat, rather than “perishing among,” Z 82.

236. Cf. δοτράπων ἐπιδέξι' ἐναίσια σήματα φαίνων, B 353. 236 and 237 rhyme; an accident of which the Greeks do not seem to have been particularly conscious.

241. στεῦται, has set himself, see Σ 191. κόρυμβα, apparently the same as the ἀφλαστον (arblastria), O 717: the tall ornamental projection in which the stem of the ship (drawn up landwards) ran up. See the illustrations in Helbig, H. E. p. 56. The idea seems to be that Hector will carry these off as trophies.

242. πυρός, see l. 214 and B 415. Arist. ἐμπλήσειν. μαλεροῦ, devouring, in Il. only. Perhaps conn. with μάλα, mel-ior, in the sense of strong; or μαλάσσω, ἀ-μαλ-δύνω, in the sense of melting.

243. ὀρινομένους, roused up, driven about; like a wasp's nest when it is smoked. Cf. Θ 183.

244. ταῦτα refers to the following (μή οἱ . . . ἵπποβότοιο).

245. ἄη, the opt. of the remoter consequence, as frequently. Bekk. writes εἶη, perhaps rightly; for this form see on H 340.

248. ἐρύεσθαι (future? see H 36), to protect; it has nothing to do with "drawing away," though the two words approach near one another in phrases like this. See A 216. ὑπὸ, (from) before the onslaught of the Trojans.

249. "Nor is there any device (μηχανή, means) to find the remedy, whence once the harm is done." It is indifferent whether we take ῥεχθ. κακοῦ as gen. absolute or as governed by ἄκος. There is perhaps a play on words in ἄχος, ἄκος. Bekk. takes ἔστ' to be for ἔσται, which makes more prominent the especial reference to the irretrievable character of the disaster if once the Greek camp is stormed.

252. ὦ πέπον, "gentle sir" ("hypocoristic"): it is twice used in a contemptuous sense, "fools," "weaklings," B 285, N 120. Prof. Bloomfield has shewn that the Homeric word has probably nothing to do with πέπων = ripe (Skt. pakvā), but is more likely conn. with pāka, "young, simple, foolish" (Am. Jour. Phil. vi. 43).

253. Odysseus went with Nestor to beg the assistance of Achilles: see A 765 sqq., where Nestor quotes a different charge of Peleus to his son, αἰὲν ἀρστεύειν καὶ ὑπερὶ ῥοχον ἔμμεναι ἄλλων.

256. "Curb thy proud soul in thy breast, for gentle-mindedness is better."

257. ληγέμεναι, not strictly "abstain

300. μᾶλλον, i.e. too much for that. Observe the μὲν in protasis answered by δέ in apodosis. This is really a case of the "paratactic" construction of conditional sentences out of which the "hypotactic" sprang, & still retaining its interjectional force; lit. "come (put the case); Agamemnon it is true (μὲν) is too hateful to thee, but still have pity on the other Achaeans" (Lange).

303. σφιν ἄροιο, win in their eyes. The dat. seems to be locative in sense: lit. "among them," X 217.

304. Hector in his sober senses had hitherto shunned a conflict with Achilles. See 352-5. Thus λύσσαν ἔχων is significant.

309. ἀπηλεγέως: the old derivation from ἀλέγω seems right, "without respect of persons" (or regard for consequences). ἀποειπεῖν, speak outright, cf. ἀπομνησας, B 772. It generally means "to forbid" or "deny."

311. "That ye may not sit and coax me from this side and that." τρύζητε seems to be used properly of the "cooing" of doves (τρυνῶν).

312. This line recurs ξ 156 in a sadly undignified context. "The gates of death" mean the dreaded entrance into the world of shadows (see λ 491).

313. ἕτερον is answered by ἄλλο, cf. l. 472-3. The line is of course not aimed directly at Odysseus, but is rather an excuse for the freedom with which Achilles means to speak: κείνος is opposed to the emphatic ἐγώ (314).

316. Δαναούς, sc. ἐμὲ πεισέμεν (ἐμέ being the object in both clauses). ἐπεὶ . . . ἄρα, etc., "since it seems there are to be no thanks for battling against the foemen ever without respite."

ἴση μοῖρα μένουσι, καὶ εἰ μάλα τις πολεμίζου· ἐν δὲ ἰῇ τιμῇ ἡμὲν κακὸς ἤδὲ καὶ ἐσθλός· κάτθαν' ὁμῶς δ' τ' ἀεργὸς ἀνὴρ ὃ τε πολλὰ ἐοργάς. 320 οὐδέ τί μοι περίκειται, ἐπεὶ πάθον ἄλγεα θυμῷ αἰὲν ἐμὴν ψυχὴν παραβαλλόμενος πολεμίζειν.
 ὥς δ' ὄρνις ἀπτῇσι νεοσσοῖσι προφέρῃσιν μᾶστακ', ἐπεὶ κε λάβῃσι, κακῶς δ' ἄρα οἱ πέλει αὐτῇ, ὥς καὶ ἐγὼ πολλὰς μὲν ἀύπνους νύκτας ἵανον, 325
 ἡμᾶτα δ' αἱματόεντα διέπρησσον πολεμίζων, ἀνδράσι μαρνάμενος δάρων ἔνεκα σφετεράων.
 δώδεκα δὴ σὺν νηυσὶ πόλεις ἀλάπαξ' ἀνθρώπων, πεζὸς δ' ἑνδεκά φημι κατὰ Τροίην ἐρίβωλον· τῶν ἐκ πασέων κειμήλια πολλὰ καὶ ἐσθλὰ 330 ἐξελόμην, καὶ πάντα φέρων Ἀγαμέμνονι δόσκον

318. "A man hath the like share whether he stay behind or fight his hardest." μένουσι (= εἰ μένοι) alludes to Agamemnon (see l. 332). From 316 to 333 the leading thought is that Agamemnon has taken the spoils while leaving all the work to Achilles, like A 163-171.

319. ἰῇ, the same. This was apparently the original meaning (Skt. iva, whence Fia by the not unusual metathesis of F), that of "one" being developed later.

320. This line has all the appearance of an interpolation of the Hesiodic age, when "gnomic" poetry was fashionable. It has a specious resemblance to the preceding lines, but is no more than a pointless generality here, terribly weakening the speech. Achilles has no thought for anything but the conduct of Agamemnon, with which this commonplace has nothing whatever to do. Hence most edd. bracket it, Bekker condemning the preceding couplet also. Ω 45 is a very similar instance of gnomic interpolation.

321. "Nor doth there remain to me any profit because I suffered tribulation of soul, ever staking my life to fight." περίκειται, lit. nothing is laid up for me in excess (of others).

322. παραβαλλόμενος, like παρθόμενος β 237, γ 74, of the stake set down by the combatants to strive for. The idea of risking remained always attached to the verb, see note on Δ 6.

323. "Even as a hen-bird bringeth her unfledged chicks whatever morsel she may find—and it goes hard with herself—even so have I passed many a sleepless night." κακῶς . . . αὐτῇ must be taken independently as a parenthesis, as the verb is in the indic. instead of the subj.

325. ἵανον, as always, of "passing the night" or bivouacking, not of sleeping. See Curtius, Vb. ii. p. 367, where it and its aor. ἄεσα are referred to root vas, to dwell, after L. Meyer.

327. "Fighting the foemen for their dames' sake": an obscure expression. δάρων seems to refer to Helen, and the plural is used by a rhetorical exaggeration, while σφετεράων contemptuously ignores the fact that Helen belonged to the Greeks. (There is little force in referring δάρων to the captives, Briseis, Chryseis, etc.). Död. would translate "fighting for husbands on behalf of their wives," where δάρων will again refer to Helen. But ἀνδράσι never means "husbands" in Homer; and μάρνασθαι with dat. is so common in the sense of "fighting against" that it is impossible to take the construction here as a "dat. commodi." Christ reads μαρναμένοις with the Aldine edition, "warring against men fighting for their wives" (i.e. homes).

329. φημί: supply διατάξαι (the parenthetical use is not Homeric). Six cities are named as having been taken by Achilles: Thebe (A 366), Lyrnessos (B 691, T 296), Pedasos (T 91), Tenedos (A 625), Lesbos (I 129), Skyros (I 668). See note on A 125.

331. ἐξελόμην here seems to mean

Ἀτρεΐδῃ· ὁ δ' ὀπισθε μένων παρὰ νηυσὶ θοῇσιν δεξάμενος διὰ παῦρα δασάσκετο, πολλὰ δ' ἔχεσκεν· ἄλλα δ' ἀριστήεσσι δίδου γέρα καὶ βασιλεύσιν· τοῖσι μὲν ἔμπεδα κεῖται, ἐμεῦ δ' ἀπὸ μούνου Ἀχαιῶν 335

 Ἀργείους; τί δέ λαὸν ἀνήγαγεν ἐνθάδ' ἀγέρας Ἀτρεΐδης; ἢ οὐχ' Ἑλένης ἔνεκ' ἠυκόμοιο;
 ἦ μούνοι φιλέουσ' ἄλόχους μερόπων ἀνθρώπων 340
 Ἀτρεΐδαι; ἐπεὶ ὅς τις ἀνὴρ ἀγαθὸς καὶ ἐχέφρων, τὴν αὐτοῦ φιλέει καὶ κήδεται, ὥς καὶ ἐγὼ τὴν ἐκ θυμοῦ φίλεον, δουρικτητὴν περ ἐοῦσαν.
 νῦν δ', ἐπεὶ ἐκ χειρῶν γέρας εἴλετο καὶ μ' ἀπάτησεν, μή μιν πειράτω ἐν εἰδότος· οὐδέ με πείσει. 345
 ἀλλ', Ὀδυσσεύ, σὺν σοὶ τε καὶ ἄλλοισιν βασιλεύσιν φραζέσθω νήεσσιν ἀλεξέμεναι δῆιον πῦρ.
 ἦ μὲν δὴ μάλα πολλὰ πονήσατο νόσφιν ἐμεῖο, καὶ δὴ τείχος ἔδειμε καὶ ἤλασε τάφρον ἐπ' αὐτῷ εὐρέϊαν μεγάλην, ἐν δὲ σκόλοπας κατέπηξεν· 350 ἀλλ' οὐδ' ὥς δύναται σθένος Ἑκτορος ἀνδροφόνιοιο ἴσχειν. ὄφρα δ' ἐγὼ μετ' Ἀχαιοῖσιν πολέμιζον, οὐκ ἐθέλεσκε μάχην ἀπὸ τείχεος ὀρνύμεν Ἑκτωρ, ἀλλ' ὅσον ἐς Σκαιάς τε πύλας καὶ φηγὸν ἵκανε·

"took from the cities," not as usual
 "chose as a γέρας ἐξαιρετών," the mention of which comes afterwards (334).
 The attribution to the king of the right to divide the spoil, instead of to the army at large, seems to be a peculiarity of this book; see A 162, II 58, compared with 367 below.

333. διὰ with δασάσκετο, "the smaller part he divided, but the greater he kept."

334. For ἄλλα Bekk. conj. ἄσσα, ingeniously but needlessly. πολλά is so much the uppermost idea in the speaker's mind that he naturally passes to his next theme, παῦρα, as though he had not just mentioned it: in fact he has introduced it in 333 merely as a foil to the πολλά, and not for its own sake.
 There does not seem to be any particular distinction between ἀριστήης and βασι- λῆης.

336. ἄλοχον, an expression used merely invidiae causa; for he contemplates marrying a Thessalian maiden, 395 sqq.
 Compare however T 298.

337. δαί in this sense only here in Homer; elsewhere always χρή.

339. ἦ οὐκ, ironical; "was it not for Helen's sake," i.e. were we brought hither on account of a stolen wife by one that is himself a wife-stealer!

342. τὴν αὐτοῦ, sc. ἄλοχον. A very rare use of the article in H. Cf. Ψ 348, 376, χ 221. αὐτοῦ would be αὐτοῦ in later Greek, and so Ptolemy of Ascalon read here; but the compound reflexive pronouns are not known to H. We ought probably therefore to read ἦν for τὴν.

345. ἐν εἰδότος, "let him not tempt me, now that I know him well."

349. Aristarchos read ἤλασεν ἑκτορὸς τάφρον, which best suits the usual representation of the moat as separated from the wall.

354. φεγγόν, a well-known landmark near the gate; E 693, Z 237, A 170, H 22, etc. Cf. the ἐρμεῖς in X 145, etc.
ὅσον, so much and no more; cf. the use of τόσον, Δ 130, Ψ 327.

 τετλαίῃ κύνεός περ ἐὼν εἰς ὧπα ἰδέσθαι·
 οὐδὲ τί οἱ βουλὰς συμφράσσομαι, οὐδὲ μὲν ἔργον·

355. οἶον seems to be for οἷος οἶον (Död.), "man to man." (οἶον is not used by Homer as an adv. = ἀπαξ.)

358. νηήσας νῆας (a play on the sound ?), see l. 137.

359 = Δ 353. ὄψαι, a complete anacoluthon, natural enough in Achilles' excited mood instead of εἰμι or πλεύσομαι. The Hellespont seems to include the N.E. portion of the Aegæan sea.

363. So in γ 180 the voyage from Tenedos to Argos takes four days. Paley quotes Theocr. xiii. 29, where three days are spent in going from Phthia to the Hellespont.

364. ἐνθάδε ἔρρων, on my mad journey hither. See note on Θ 239.

365. ἄλλον, other than what I have at home. ἐρυθρόν, only here epithet of χαλκός (elsewhere αἰθρὸς ἥρωψ or νῶροψ); it possibly indicates that the metal was copper, not bronze, though little stress can be laid on Homeric indication of colour. See Gladstone, Juv. Mundi, p. 530; Buchh., Hom. Real. ii. 321. But bronze seems to have received the name of copper in almost all early stages of civilization, Semitic and Egyptian as well as Indo-European (Schrader, p. 272).

Dr. Schliemann's discoveries at Mycenae and Hissarlik prove the existence of the metal and the alloy side by side; so that we may conclude that χαλκός covers both.

366. πολίως: the natural colour of iron is light gray, as is seen in the fracture.

367. The portion assigned him by lot, in common with the rest of the army, is bitterly contrasted with the γέρας he received as commander. ὅς περ ἔδωκεν, see on 331.

369. Observe the bitter emphasis with which Achilles repeatedly forces the name Ἀτρεΐδης into the most emphatic place, l. 332, 339, 341, in significant contrast with Agamemnon's reluctance to name Achilles.

370. ἐπισκύζωνται, frown upon him. The next line is somewhat loosely added; "(I wish them to look upon him with disfavour), in case he may be expecting to outwit some other Danaan."

372. ἀναιδείην ἐπιειμένος, compare "he clothed himself with cursing like as with a raiment," and A 149.

373. κύνεός περ ἐὼν, even though he have the shamelessness of a dog; cf. κύνος ὄμματ' ἔχων, A 225.

374. οὐδὲ μὲν ἔργον, no, nor any deed:

ἐκ γὰρ δὴ μ' ἀπάτησε καὶ ἤλιτεν· οὐδ' ἂν ἔτ' αὖτις 375 ἐξαπάφοιτ' ἐπέεσσιν· ἄλλισ δέ οἱ. ἀλλὰ ἔκηλος ἔρρέτω· ἐκ γὰρ εὖ φρένας εἴλετο μητίετα Ζεὺς.
 ἐχθρὰ δέ μοι τοῦ δῶρα, τίω δέ μιν ἐν καρὸς αἶσῃ.
 οὐδ' εἴ μοι δεκάκις τε καὶ εἰκοσάκις τόσα δοίῃ, ὅσσα τέ οἱ νῦν ἔστι, καὶ εἴ ποθεν ἄλλα γένοιτο, 380
 οὐδ' ὅσ' ἐς Ὀρχομενὸν ποτινίσσεται, οὐδ' ὅσα Θήβας Αἰγυπτίας, ὅθι πλεῖστα δόμοις ἐν κτήματα κείται, αἷ θ' ἐκατόμυλοι εἰσι, διηκόσιοι δ' ἂν ἐκάστας ἀνέρες ἐξοιχνεύσι σὺν ἵπποισιν καὶ ὄχρεσφιν· οὐδ' εἴ μοι τόσα δοίῃ, ὅσα ψάμαθός τε κόνις τε, 385 οὐδέ κεν ὥς ἐτι θυμὸν ἐμὸν πείσει' Ἀγαμέμνων, πρὶν γ' ἀπὸ πᾶσαν ἐμοὶ δόμεναι θυμολαγέα λῶβην.
 κούρην δ' οὐ γαμέω Ἀγαμέμνονος Ἀτρεΐδαο, οὐδ' εἰ χρυσεῖη Ἀφροδίτῃ κάλλος ἐρίζοι, ἔργα δ' Ἀθηναίῃ γλαυκῶπιδι ἰσοφαρίζοι, 390
 οὐδέ μιν ὥς γαμέω· ὁ δ' Ἀχαιῶν ἄλλον ἐλέσθω, we must supply συμπρήξω instead of συμφράσσομαι (zeugma).

375. ἤλιτεν, sinned against me: με belongs to both verbs, as ἀλιταίνω regularly takes an accus. in H.; T 265, Ω 570, ε 108, δ 378, etc.

376. ἄλλισ δέ οἱ, i.e. let him be content with that he has already done. ἐκηλος, "let him go unhindered to his fate," or "out of my way," contemptuously, as we say "about his business."

378. ἐν καρὸς αἶσῃ, I hold him not worth a hair. καρὸς (which does not occur again) seems to be from κείρω, in the sense of a "cutting," "chip." αἶσα = "proper measure," see on A 418. (καρὸς was explained by the ancients as gen. of κήρ, death, or of Κάρ, a Carian—Kāres Καππάδοκες Κιλίκες, τρία κάππα κάκιστα—but then the shortening of the α is inexplicable. Another reading was ἐγκαρος, explained φθειρός!).

379. For the construction of this sentence compare χ 61 sqq. These are the only two passages where οὐδ' εἰ begins a sentence: elsewhere it always takes up a preceding negative clause. The apodosis begins with l. 386.

381. Orchomenos in Boeotia, B 511, was the city of the Minyae (λ 284), who were famed for their treasure and for the house in which, according to tradition, it was kept (see Pausan. ix. 36; Grote,

i. ch. vi.; and Schliemann in J. H. S. ii. 122-163). A mentions a variant Ἐρχομενόν here, which is perhaps right, as it is the form invariably found in the local inscriptions. See B 511.—This is the only mention of Egypt in the Iliad. The passage seems to allude to the height of Theban glory under the two first kings of the 22nd dynasty, about 930-900 B.C. If so, we have a terminus a quo for this book. The next line recurs in δ 127.

382. Αἰγυπτίας, trisyllable by synizesis, cf. Ἰσθμίου B 537.

383-4 look like an interpolation; they are a terribly frigid interruption to Achilles' fury (Heyne). ἐκάστας: supply πύλας from ἐκατόμυλος. H. does not use the singular πύλη. ἀνά is distributive, 200 to each.

386. πέσει MSS.; most edd. since Wolf read πέσει. The future is more positive and therefore perhaps more suited to Achilles' frame of mind (La R.); but the parallel passage χ 63, οὐδέ κεν ὥς λήξαιμι, is in favour of the opt. (see note on 379). The -ε of the opt. termination -εε is very rarely elided.

387. ἀποδομέναι λῶβην, a condensed expression for "pays me the price of the insult" (in humiliation, not presents).

388. See 146. γαμέω, future. It is indifferent whether we put a colon or a comma after Ἀτρεΐδαο.

ὅς τις οἱ τ' ἐπέοικε καὶ δς βασιλεύτερός ἐστιν.

392. Bitterly ironical; "one that suits his rank and is more royal than I." For comparatives which have a substantive to represent the positive, see H. G. § 122.

393. σώωσι, see on l. 424.

394. γαμέσσεται MSS.; Aristarchos γε μάσσεται, where the γε means "a wife, as far as that is concerned" with the emphasis of contempt: μάσσεται, will seek me out (μάομαι). This sense is not elsewhere found; but γαμέσσεται would be equally unique, the mid. being elsewhere always used of the bridegroom, and the rhythm of the text is far better than that of MSS., which has the objectionable trochaic caesura in the fourth foot.

395. Ἑλλάδα, in the restricted Homeric sense, a district of Thessaly. B 683, etc. But see on 447.

396. ῥύονται, protect, defend their citadels, as semi-independent chiefs. From σρυ- = σερF, A 216. The υ is short, as K 259.

397. ἐθέλωμι, so Aristarchos; MSS. ἐθέλωμι. The unfamiliar form of the subj. in -μι was generally corrupted by copyists; see on A 549.

398. ἐπέσσυτο, was set upon marrying, i.e. before sailing for Troy. γήμαντι, al. γήμαντα. Both would be Homeric.

401. ἀντάξιον is used like a substantive, "an equivalent"; representing the whole of the next two clauses.

402. ἐκτήσθαι (Attic κεκτ.), perf. infin. here used to represent the plpf.; the direct constr. would be ὅσα Ἴλιος ἐκτεττο, "used to possess." For the wealth of Troy see Σ 288, Ω 543.

404. ἀφῆτωρ, the archer, ἐκηβόλος. Pytho, the later Delphi, is named B 519, λ 581, and the oracle of Apollo there θ 80 (λάων οὐδὸν). For the wealth which accumulated in temples see B 549, Θ 203, γ 274, μ 346.

406. ληιστοί, to be gained by forays in war; κτητοί, by peaceful means, barter or gifts. See on 125.

407. For the pleonastic use of κάρηνα (as we talk of so many "head of oxen," though not of horses), cf. Ψ 260, βοῶν ἰφθιμα κάρηνα.

408. πάλιν ἔλθάν, sc. ὥστε π. ἐλθ. λείσθη, a curious by-form of ληιστή, which Düntzer would read here, with short η, as we sometimes have δῆμιος (~~~~). Cf. Attic λεία.

409. ἐλετή, a general word, of acquiring by any means; here answering to κτητοί above.

διχθαδίας κήρας φερέμεν θανάτοιο τέλοσδε.

 Φοῖνιξ δ' αὖθι παρ' ἄμμι μένων κατακοιμηθήτω,

411. I.e. there are two fated ways by which I may pass through life; one (μὲν, 412) short and glorious, the other (δέ, 414) long and unhonoured. We do not elsewhere find that Achilles has such a choice in his power; in A 352 he claims that since his life must be short it ought to be glorious as well.

412. ἀμφιμάχωμαι with accus. in local sense, as Z 461, II 73, Σ 208: also with gen. O 391, II 496, Σ 20; and dat. II 526, 565.

413. ὤλετο, aor., perhaps as referring to the moment of choice: "from that moment my return is forbidden me."

414. ἴκωμι, so A, all other MSS. ἴκωμαι, which is not improbably a relic of the original reading ἴκωμαι ἔην, where ἔην = mine own, see on A 393 (Brugman). If ἴκωμι is an aor. the active voice is unparalleled, and if it is a present the ι should be long. The objection to Brugman's reading is obviously that ἔην would have been changed not to φάλην but to ἐμήν (which Bentley actually conjectured).

416. Athetized by Ar. and expunged by Zen., as a weak tautology, interpolated from the supposed necessity of giving a verb to the last clause of 415—a frequent source of interpolation.

418. δῆτε, a future with present form, see X 431 βέλομαι. "Ye will never find" (as τέκμων Ἴλιου εἴρωσιν, H 31).

422. "Declare openly my answer, for so to do is the privilege of counsellors," sc. to speak openly. ἀπόφασθε, like ἀποειπεῖν 309.

424. σῶς, the reading of most MSS., with σῶς in 681, and. σώωσι 393, is defended by Mangold in Curt. Stud. vi. 199, and Bekker, H. B. i. 49. The question is however one of great difficulty. A reads σῶω here, but σῶς in 681, where, according to the Scholia, Ar. gave at different times σοφῆς and σαφῆς. We have the stem σω- in σώοντες ι 430, σώεσκον Θ 363, and σῶζω in ε 490; but all the other Homeric forms are from the non-thematic σάωμ, which would form σαώης (σαφῆς) in the 2d pers. subj., as Ar. read in 681, and σάωσι for the 3d plur. as Apio read in 393, but would require σαώη for the 3d sing. If we are to read σῶω and σῶς they can only be explained as optatives from the thematic forms σαῶ-αι, σαῶ-οις, with interchange of quantity from the contracted forms σῶοι, σῶοις, but for this there is no sufficient analogy.

425. ἐτοίμη (conn. by Curt. Et. 526 with ἔτεος, ἔτυμος, Skt. sat-vas in sense "really existing," i.e. present, at hand) seems here to mean "brought to reality," i.e. successful, as we say "realized." Σ 53, θ 384.

426. I.e. the plan of sending this embassy to me. ἀπομνηνίσαντος: for the force of ἀπο- see on B 772.

431. ἀπέειπεν here may mean either "spoke out" as 309, or "refused their offers" as generally.

433. ἀναπρήσας, "making his tears well up": see note on A 481.

434. μετὰ φρεσὶ βάλλεαι, art pondering over, is to be distinguished from ἐνὶ φρεσὶ βάλλεσθαι, to lay to heart, e.g. A 297.

436. αἰδῆλον, "making invisible," destroying. See on B 318.

437. λιποῖμην in passive sense, as often. ἀπὸ σείο, far from thee.

438. ἔπεμπε = πόμπην ἔδωκε, made me thy companion, "escort." Paley and Düntzer would read σοὶ δ' ἔμ' ἔπεμπε, which seems better.

440. ὁμοίου, "levelling": see note on Δ 315.

441. The τε is gnomic. Compare ἀγορὴν κυδιάνειραν, A 490.

444. Repeated from 437, ἂν going with the verb, as there, and not with ὥς, which virtually = wherefore (lit. in which way, or rather, in that way), like the later ὥστε.

446. γῆρας ἀποξύσας, having stripped off my old age from me. The metaphor is no doubt that of smoothing away the wrinkles. For this idea as implied in γῆρας compare its curious use by Aristotle to mean "the cast skin of a serpent," Skt. garastjus (Curt. Et. no. 130).

447. An attempt to reconcile the different statements in Homer about Amyntor lands us in hopeless confusion. In K 266 we have an Ἀμύντωρ Ὀρμενίδης in Eleon, and in B 500 we find Eleon in Boeotia; but here Amyntor's kingdom is Ἑλλάς. But according to the regular Homeric usage, Ἑλλάς is part of the kingdom of Peleus. We must assume therefore (1) that Ἑλλάς is here used in a wide sense, to include all N. Thessaly, where we find Ὀρμένιον (B 734); Eurypylos, who came thence, was according to the legend grandson of Ormenos, his father Enaimon being Amyntor's brother. (2) The discrepancy with K can only be reconciled by assuming the existence of another Eleon or another Amyntor. Demetrios of Skepsis read here Ὀρμένιον πολύμηλον, according to Strabo and Eustath., instead of Ἑλλάδα καλλιγύναικα, but this looks like a mere conjecture.

 ὥς μὴ πατροφόνος μετ' Ἀχαιοῖσιν καλεοίμην.]

449. παλλακίδος, on account of his concubine: this causal genitive is common after χάσσεσθαι and similar verbs, and is here particularly natural in connexion with περί.

451. γούνων is frequently thus used with verbs of praying: it is a pregnant construction, and we must supply λαβών or the like from λισσέσκετο. See note on A 500.

452. προμυγῆναι: the force of the proposition is not quite certain. Perhaps it means "in preference to," "taking the advantage of" my father.

453. We are told by Eustathius that an Alexandrian Bowdler, one Aristodemus, emended this passage into τῇ οὐ πιθόμην, οὐδ' ἔρεξα! οἰσθεῖς, suspecting, cf. A 561.

454. The Erinyes appear here in their proper function, as upholders of the moral order, and especially as guardians of parental rights. But though the Erinyes are appealed to, Hades and Persephone carry out the curse; while below, 569 and 571, the exact converse occurs. As in the latter case the Ἐρινύς is distinctly spoken of as a person, not a curse in the abstract, it seems difficult not to identify it with the nether gods, so that Hades and Persephone would be themselves the Ἐρινύες in so far as they were acting to maintain the right order of things.

455. ἐφέσσεσθαι (from ἐδ, and, root of ἴζω), transitive, as π 443, that he might never seat upon his knees any dear son begotten of me; i.e. he prayed that I might be for ever childless. οἷσιν perhaps however means "mine," which gives a far more natural sense: A 393. Didymus mentions a variant ἐμοῖσι, which may be only an explanation of this.

457. ἐπαινὴ occurs only as an epithet of Persephone, and only in this book and κ and λ of Od. It is explained either = αἰνή, terrible; or, ἡ αἶνος ἔπασσι, "highly praised," as Pers. is also called ἀγαυή and ἀγνή. But the former seems decidedly preferable. The Scholia mention a variant, or rather gloss, ἐπ' αὐτῷ, which suggested to Buttm. the correction ἐπ' αἰνή, where ἐπὶ will be an adv., "besides"; but this is very weak.

458-461 are not found in any MS., and were first introduced by Wolf from Plut. (de Aud. Poetis, 8), who expressly says, ὁ μὲν οὖν Ἀρίσταρχος ἐξεῖλε ταῦτα τὰ ἐπη φοβηθεῖς—shocked, that is, at the terrible crime with which Phoenix charges himself. La R. however points out that the expurgation cannot be due to Aristarchos, inasmuch as our MSS. represent the vulgate of the Alexandrian period, and not the Aristarchean recension of it; so that they must have disappeared previously. The connexion is, to say the least, not damaged by their absence. The sentiment of the lines is too thoroughly Homeric, however, especially in the reference to public opinion as the ultimate moral sanction, to let us believe that they were invented by Plutarch, or even in, much less after, the Alexandrian period.

460. Cf. Z 351, πέμψιν τε καὶ ἀλοχα πόλλ' ἀνθρώπων.

461. ὅς μὴ is exegetical of the previ-ἔνθ' ἐμοὶ οὐκέτι πάμπαν ἐρητύετ' ἐν φρεσὶ θυμὸς

ous line, and goes with ἐνὶ θυμῷ θῆκεν, "gave me the thought, 'let me not be called.'" So Hentze, and cf. Γ 453.

464. ἡ μὲν is the later καίτοι, lit. "true, that they kept me."

465. αὐτοῦ, there where I was: with κατερήτουν.

466. εἰλίποδας must mean volventes pedes, i.e. expressing the fact that "each foot as it is set forward describes a segment of a circle" (Merry on α 92). ἔλκας was generally taken by the ancients to mean "black" (see A 98). Ameis would refer it to root σελ-, "shining, sleek" (see note ibid.), which is not improbable. The most usual explanation is that which must have been accepted by the author of the Hymn. Merc.—not a bad authority in such a matter—βόας . . . κερύσσον ἐλκτάς, i.e. with "crumpled," twisted horns. This best suits the sense of the root Felek-, but the omission of any explicit mention of horns is as strange as if we should speak of a "crumpled cow."

468. "Were stretched to singe in the flame of Hephaistos." τανύοντο, sc. on long spits, see l. 213. εὐόμενοι (root us, to burn), in order to burn off the bristles and prepare them for cutting up. For φλάξ Ἡφ. cf. ω 71, P 88, B 426. Phoenix' friends endeavour by these festivities to distract him from his thought of flight.

470. ἱανον, like soldiers on watch; see on 325. παρὰ goes with the verb;

it is not used by Homer as a preposition in temporal sense ("by nights," Paley). εἰνάνυχες should be an adverb, formed, but not correctly, on the analogy of εἰνήμερες, where the -ες is part of the noun stem ēreos- (ēreos = ēreosos). It is however possible to make it a nom. pl., on the analogy of τριταῖος ἦλθεν, etc., where the adjective however is regularly used to express a point, not duration, of time. αὐτῷ, my person, expressing the closeness of the watch.

472. The Homeric house had two αἰθουσαι or colonnades; one in front of the μέγαρον, the other, facing it, along the wall which divided the αὐλή or courtyard from the street. The latter is here meant by αἰθούσῃ αὐλῆς; it is possible indeed that it may have run round more than one side of the αὐλή. The former appears to have been a vestibule leading to the μέγαρον, but not extending the whole width of the latter; at the sides were small chambers, in one of which it would seem that Phoenix slept. The whole of this structure, chambers and αἰθουσα together, no doubt formed the πρόδομος. Hence we find that visitors regularly have a bed made up for them ὑπ' αἰθούσῃ, and are also found sleeping in the πρόδομος, see Ω 643 compared with 673, and δ 296 with 302. Reference should be made to Schliemann's Tiryns, pp. 201-236, and plan ii., which appears to settle this disputed question beyond doubt.

477. ρεία, διὰ τὸ τῆς νεότητος ἀνθος, Schol. But perhaps there should be no comma after ρεία, that we might join ρεία λαθὼν.

480. ἐς, into the house of. So Ψ 36, etc.

482. τηλύγετον, see l. 143. The force of the word here is given by Merry (δ 11): "a father's increasing fondness for an only son is described: he is the heir of (ἐπὶ) large possessions, and the father's love for him grows as the chance of having other sons diminishes; the eldest being already in early manhood."

485. τοσοῦτον ἔθηκα, lit. "made thee as great (as thou now art)," i.e. reared thee to manhood. This is inconsistent with the legend of Achilles' education by Cheiron (A 831), and seems therefore a sign that the Phoenix-episode is an independent composition, not given by the legend.

487. Offended at the idea of an infant in arms going to a banquet, Düntzer conj. ἐθέλεσκον for -ες in 486, "I would not accompany a friend to the feast." This however does not suit the emphatic ἐγὼ in 488, though the line in other respects follows more naturally. As the text stands, we must consider πρὶν γ' ὅτε δὴ, κ.τ.λ., as substituted for the ἢ ἐμοὶ which would naturally follow ἀμ' ἄλλῳ.

489. προταμὼν, cutting thee the first morsel. ἐπισχών, X 83, 494, "holding to thy lips." Compare the very similar passage, π 442-4.

491. οἶνον, partitive gen., lit. "spitting out some of the wine." ἀλεγεινῇ, troublesome, irksome helplessness.

493. τά is answered by δ = ὅτι, "reflecting on this (namely), that the gods were not minded (imperf.) to bring into being any offspring of mine own;" see 455.

495. ποιέμην, "I strove to make thee (imperf.) as mine own son." ἀμύνης, subj. instead of opt., because the wish still remains in force and should indeed be now in course of fulfilment. See A 559, B 4.

497. στρεπτοί, capable of being bent by prayer; O 208, στρεπταὶ μὲν τε φρένες ἐσθλῶν. Cf. 158.

ὃς δέ κ' ἀνήνηται καὶ τε στερεῶς ἀποείπη,

498. ἀρετὴ, majesty, supremacy in the widest sense. Homer seems never to use the word for moral excellence.

499. καὶ μὲν τοῖς, yet even them prayers can bend (how much more should prayers move weak men !)

502-12. This remarkable passage is unique in Homer, where nothing else resembling an allegory occurs. It has been proposed to regard the Λιταὶ here not as an allegory, but as a personification; the primitive mind is always in the habit of regarding all forces, moral as well as intellectual, as sentient and active persons. This is undoubtedly the case with Ἄτη, who is personified in T 91, 133, and elsewhere; and even with ἔκτα πτερύοντα, which are conceived as winged beings flying like birds from man to man. But in the present case personification has passed into conscious allegory; at least the epithets in 503 seem to be susceptible of no other explanation. The passage falls into two parts—502-507 give the position of the offender; he is surprised by the sudden coming of Ἄτη, who makes him sin; sin is followed by the Λιταί, who in this connexion virtually mean penitence, prayers for forgiveness. 508-512 refer to the person injured, and the responsibility thrown upon him by his enemy's request for pardon. If he hearkens to the suppliant, the "quality of mercy bleaseth him that gives"; if he denies roughly, the prayers refused become a curse to him.

502. The τὴ is gnomic, as so often. Διὸς κούραι, because Zeus is the god of suppliants; and also, perhaps, to explain their power over the other gods (497-501).

503. The epithets are transferred from the attitude of the penitent to his prayers. χωλαί, because of his reluctance to go to ask pardon (pede Poena claudo, generally quoted here, is quite different): ῥυσαί, from his face wrinkled with the mental struggle: παραβλῶπες ὀφθαλμῶ, because he dares not look in the face him whom he has wronged.

504. καὶ belongs to the whole clause, and gives an additional touch to the picture. ἀλέγουσι is best taken closely with κιοῦσαι, "make it their business to go after Atē." The construction is thus analogous to that of φθάνει, etc., with the participle (so Nägelsbach on B 398).

505. I.e. man is swift to sin, but slow to repent; the wrong act is done and over long before any thought of penitence has time to arise in the mind.

506. ὑπεκπροθέει, lit. runs forward out from among them all. For φθάνει with long a see § 262.

508. αἰδέσεται, subjunctive. ἄσσον ἰούσας, when offered by the repentant offender.

509. It is not of course quite exact to say that Prayers hear a man's prayers: what is meant is that they, as representatives of the heavenly powers, ensure a man's prayers being heard. εὐξαμένοιο, the regular Homeric phrase; so most MSS. Cf. A 381, etc. Aristarchos read εὐχομένοιο, which is unusual in this sense; the pres. part. regularly means "boasting."

λίσσονται δ' ἄρα ταί γε Δία Κρονίωνα κιούσαι τῷ ἄτην ἅμ' ἔπεσθαι, ἵνα βλαφθεὶς ἀποτίσῃ.
 ἀλλ', Ἀχιλεῦ, πόρε καὶ σὺ Διὸς κούρησιν ἔπεσθαι τιμὴν, ἣ τ' ἄλλων περ ἐπυγνάμπτει νόον ἐσθλῶν.
 εἰ μὲν γὰρ μὴ δῶρα φέροι, τὰ δ' ὀπισθ' ὀνομάζοι 515
 Ἀτρεΐδης, ἀλλ' αἰὲν ἐπιζαφελῶς χαλεπαίνοι, οὐκ ἂν ἐγὼ γέ σε μῆνιν ἀπορρίψαντα κελοίμην Ἀργείοισιν ἀμυνόμεναι, χατέουσί περ ἔμπης· νῦν δ' ἅμα τ' αὐτίκα πολλὰ διδοῖ, τὰ δ' ὀπισθεν ὑπέστη, ἄνδρας δὲ λίσσεσθαι ἐπιπρόεηκεν ἀρίστους 520 κρινάμενος κατὰ λαὸν Ἀχαιικόν, οἳ τε σοὶ αὐτῷ φίλτατοι Ἀργείων· τῶν μὴ σύ γε μῦθον ἐλέγξης μηδὲ πόδας· πρὶν δ' οὔ τι νεμεσσητὸν κεχολῶσθαι.

512. τῷ is emphatic, that Ate may come upon him, as before upon the man who had wronged him. This is exactly illustrated by the case of Achilles. He suffers Ate (i.e. puts himself in the wrong) by refusing Agamemnon's humiliation, and pays the penalty in the death of Patroklos.

513. Lit. "provide thou that honour may attend upon the prayers" (of Agamemnon). The respect due to the divine quality of repentance, rather than the mere prayer for forgiveness, is here made the motive which influences men to relent, as indeed it really is. Phoenix says, "admit into thy soul that reverence which bends the minds even of the best." Others translate, "grant to the request of these Aἰτάι that honour (sc. Agamemnon's honourable gifts) may be bestowed on thee." But this is not the natural connexion of the words (as no σοί is expressed): it does not suit the drift of the allegory, and leaves no force in the emphatic antithesis καὶ σὺ . . . ἄλλων περ; and the purely abstract sense of τιμὴ is not so serious a consideration as it would be in an older portion of the poems.

515. γάρ implies "you may do so without disgrace." "For if Atreides were not offering thee gifts and promising thee more hereafter" (i.e. in 135 seq.) . . ., "I would not be the one to bid thee," etc. Agamemnon's liberal offerings not only guarantee his sincerity, but would make Achilles' change of attitude honourable by their publicity.

516. ἐπιζαφελῶς is referred by Ameis,

Diintzer, etc., to root φελ- to swell, of δ-φελ-λω, etc.: the ζα = διά being intensive, see 525 ἐπιζαφελος χόλος = "very swelling anger." The word occurs elsewhere only § 330, ἐπιζαφελῶς μενέαιεν.

519. διδοῖ, offers, like διδοῖς, l. 164.

520. This is yet another proof of the sincerity of Agamemnon's penitence.

522. ἀλέγξης, dishonour, bring to shame; so φ 424, and the subst. ἐλεγχος = disgrace. This sense is purely Homeric.

523. πόδας, i.e. their journey hither. This however seems much rather a Tragic than an Epic use; e.g. σὺν πατρὶς μολῶν ποδί, Eur. Hipp. 661. Cf. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach." There are many reasons for suspecting the following passage to have been tampered with; and this use of πόδες may indicate the first line of the interpolation (so Paley). The whole episode of Meleager is very confused in detail, though it may be greatly simplified by leaving out two passages, and only a disproportionately small part of it has any bearing upon Phoenix' argument—namely, the fact that Meleager's Ate was turned upon himself in that he had to run the risks of war without receiving the reward (597-599). It undoubtedly looks as though a quite distinct Epic ballad, most interesting in itself, had been not very skilfully grafted into this already long speech on account of a general similarity between the relations of Achilles to Agamemnon and Meleager to Althaea; and then 597-599 had been added to give a plausible connexion with the argument.

 οἷη δ' οὐκ ἔρρεξε Διὸς κούρη μέγαλοιο·
 ἧ λάθετ' ἧ οὐκ ἐνόησεν· ἀάσατο δὲ μέγα θυμῷ.
 ἧ δὲ χολωσαμένη δῖον γένος ἰοχέαιρα

524. τῶν πρόσθεν is in apposition with ἀνδρῶν ἡρώων. For κλέα cf. 189 and B 486. οὕτω, i.e. we have heard of such conduct on the part of heroes of the old time.

525. This is the only case in H. of ὅτε κέν with the opt. It is however sufficiently defended by the use of the opt. after ἐλ κεν.

526. "They were to be won over by gifts and persuasion." δωρητός is ἀπ. λεγ. in H.: παράρρητος recurs only N 726 in the sense of "persuasive."

527. μέμνημαι with accus. as Z 222. It is hard to see why Phoenix should adopt the confidential tone of 528.

529. Oineus the Aitolian, king of Kalydon, married Althaia, daughter of Thestios, king of the Kuretes. The two tribes combined to slay the wild boar that ravaged Kalydon, but fell out over the division of the spoils, which Meleager wished to assign as ἀριστεία to Atalanta; but the sons of Thestios, indignant, had taken it from her, for which Meleager slew them, and was therefore cursed by his mother Althaia, their sister. It will be seen that the story as given in the text is only very partially told, although 533-549 and 557-564 (or rather 572) are inserted, to the damage of the connexion, to explain the circumstances out of which the quarrel had arisen. In any case the story must be read continuously thus: 529-532, 550-556, 573-599. It will be observed that the fire-brand with which Meleager's life was bound up is inconsistent with the present legend: nor is Atalanta mentioned.

531. Καλυδῶνος (a sort of "causal" gen.) after ἀμύνεσθαι, as M 155, 179, N 700. For the Aitolians see B 638-644. The Kuretes are said to be a tribe who first inhabited Aitolia side by side with the Aitolians proper, but were afterwards expelled by them and inhabited Akarnania. They do not appear in the Catalogue. For the name cf. T 193. It may however be distinct from the substantive κουρήτες, and be related to the Italic Curetes, "spearmen," as Paley suggests.

533. τοῖσι, sc. the Aitolians. The story suddenly goes back to the ovum, and καὶ γὰρ = "for it must be known."

534. θαλύσια, the harvest feast when the first fruits were offered to the gods in gratitude for the abundance (θάλλω) of nature. γουνῷ ἀλωῆς (v. Σ 57), on the fat of the garden-land. γουνός is generally considered to be for γονF-os, a derived form of γόνυ, "knee," in the sense of "the hill" or "swell" of the garden; that is, the part most exposed to the sun, and therefore the most fertile. But Hesych. explains γονίμω τόπῳ, as if from γεν- to produce, and this seems more reasonable.

536. Διὸς κούρη of Artemis, § 151: elsewhere it almost always means Athene when used by itself. οὐκ ἐνόησεν, "neglected," deliberately.

538. δῖον γένος, "bright" or "noble offspring," whatever that may mean; it is an equally strange expression whether ὥρσεν ἔπι, χλούνην σὺν ἄγριον ἀργιόδοντα, δς κακὰ πόλλ' ἔρδεσκεν ἔθων Οἰνῆος ἀλῶν. 540

 πολλὰ δ' ὃ γε προθέλυμα χαμαὶ βάλε δένδρεα μακρὰ αὐτῇσιν ῥίξῃσι καὶ αὐτοῖς ἀνθεσι μήλων.
 τὸν δ' υἱὸς Οἰνῆος ἀπέκτεινεν Μελέαγρος, πολλέων ἐκ πολλῶν θηρήτορας ἄνδρας ἀγείρας καὶ κύνας· οὐ μὲν γάρ κε δάμη παύροισι βροτοῖσιν. 545 τόσσος ἔην, πολλοὺς δὲ πυρῆς ἐπέβησ' ἀλεγεινῆς.
 ἢ δ' ἀμφ' αὐτῷ θήκε πολὺν κέλαδον καὶ αὐτήν,
 ἀμφὶ σὺδς κεφαλῇ καὶ δέρματι λαχνήνenti, Κουρήτων τε μεσηγὺ καὶ Αἰτωλῶν μεγαθύμων.
 ὄφρα μὲν οὖν Μελέαγρος ἀρηίφιλος πολέμιζεν, 550
 τόφρα δὲ Κουρήτεσσι κακῶς ἦν, οὐδὲ δύναντο τείχεος ἔκτοσθεν μίμνεν πολέες περ ἔοντες· ἀλλ' ὅτε δὴ Μελέαγρον ἔδν χόλος, ὅς τε καὶ ἄλλων οἰδάνει ἐν στήθεσσι νόον πύκα περ φρονεόντων, ἦ τοι ὁ μητρὶ φίλῃ Ἀλθαίῃ χωόμενος κῆρ 555
 κείτο παρὰ μνηστῇ ἀλόχῳ, καλῇ Κλεοπάτρῃ, κοῦρῃ Μαρπήσσης καλλισφύρου Εὐηνίνης

it be taken to mean Artemis or the boar. But Düntzer conjectures θεῖον γένος, which is used of the Chimaira, Z 180, and this under the circumstances seems the best resource, though it is hard to see why the change can have been made.

539. χλούνην, an obscure word. Apollon. derived from χλόη and εὐνάσθαι, "dwelling in the grass," i.e. wild. Others explained "entire" as opposed to castrated, and therefore more savage. But this is probably mere guess work. After ἄγριον Aristotle (Hist. An. vi. 28) continues the quotation οὐδὲ ἐφκει | θηρί γε σιτοφάγῳ ἀλλὰ ῥίψ ὕληντι, which is apparently a confusion with i 191, due to his quoting, as usual, from memory, and cannot claim to be considered a variant.

540. ἔθων, "εἰς more," like II 260 ἐριδμάνωσιν ἔθοντες.

541. προθέλυμα, "by the roots," lit. from the foundations onwards, like πρόρριζος. So K 15; and cf. τετραθέλυμνος, of a shield, with four layers of hide as foundation. In N 180, q.v., προθέλυμνος seems to mean "with the base forward," i.e. firmly set upon the ground.

542. ἀνθεσι μήλων, either "fruit-blossom" or "blooming fruits": a periphrasis like ἀνθεα ποίης, i 449 (so Ameis).

546. ἐπέβησε, "brought to the pyre," just as we say "brought to the grave." So πυρῆς ἐπιβάντα, Δ 99.

547. "She brought to pass great noise and battle-cry over his body," as to the disposal of the spoils.

550. We now suddenly return to the war which arose out of the quarrel, in continuation of 532.

552. τείχεος ἔκτοσθεν seems to imply that the Kuretes, so far from besieging Kalydon, were themselves at first shut up in their walls, and could not meet Meleager in the open plain. This is a clear allusion to the position of the Trojans so long as Achilles fought, and emphasizes the parallel between him and Meleager. But we are left to supply a great deal more than is usually left unexpressed in Epic poetry.

553. ἔν χόλος (T 16, X 94), on account of his mother's curse, as is explained later on, 566.

554. οὐδάνει, makes to swell. Cf. 646.

555. ἦ τοι, "then," begins the apodosis.

556. κείτο, began to lie idle at home. ὅτε above shews that this must be the meaning (Σ 178, etc.); but the writer of 565 evidently took it to mean "lay in bed."

557. From here to 564 we have a digression which grievously interferes

Ἴδew θ', δς κάρτιστος ἐπιχθονίων γένετ' ἀνδρῶν τῶν τότε, καί ῥα ἀνακτος ἐναντίον εἴλετο τόξον Φοῖβου Ἀπόλλωνος καλλισφύρου εἵνεκα νύμφης· 560 τὴν δὲ τότε ἐν μεγάροισι πατὴρ καὶ πότνια μήτηρ Ἀλκυόνην καλέεσκον ἐπώνυμον, οὐνεκ' ἄρ' αὐτῆς μήτηρ Ἀλκυόνης πολυπενθέος οἶτον ἔχουσα κλαῖ', ὅτε μιν ἐκάεργος ἀνήρπασε Φοῖβος Ἀπόλλων.
 τῇ δ' γε παρκατέλεκτο χόλον θυμαλγέα πέσσων, 565
 ἐξ ἀρέων μητρὸς κεχολωμένος, ἥ ῥα θεοῖσιν πόλλ' ἀχέουσ' ἡρᾶτο κασιγνήτοιο φόνοιο, πολλὰ δὲ καὶ γαῖαν πολυφόρβην χερσὶν ἀλοῖα πρόχην καθεζομένην, δεύοντο δὲ δάκρυσι κόλποι, 570 παιδὶ δόμεν θάνατον· τῆς δ' ἡεροφοῖτις Ἐρινὺς ἔκλυεν ἐξ Ἑρέβessφιν, ἀμείλιχον ἦτορ ἔχουσα.

 τῶν δὲ τάχ' ἀμφὶ πύλας ὁμαδος καὶ δούπος ὀράρειν πύργων βαλλομένων· τὸν δὲ λίσσονται γέροντες with the narrative and savours strongly of the genealogical poetry of the Hesiodic age.

Idas the son of Aphareus had carried off Marpessa from her father Euenos (Ἐὐηνος is a patronymic), but Apollo wished to carry her off from Idas; so the two came to fighting until Zeus separated them, and bade Marpessa choose which of them she would have. And Marpessa chose Idas, the mortal, for fear the god should prove unfaithful.

562. They called her (sc. Kleopatra) Alkyone because her mother (Marpessa) wept in the fashion (i.e. with the plaintive voice) of the Halcyon (kingfisher: the female when separated from the male is said to utter continually a mournful cry). The legend of Alkyone and Keyx, which sprang from the same source, is of course not referred to here. οἶτον ἔχουσα, lit. having the fortune of the kingfisher. But this is all very strange and confused in expression. αὐτῆς, which should be emphatic, especially in its prominent position at the end of the line, is used in the weakest possible sense, "her mother"; a use which can hardly be paralleled in Homer. ἐν μεγάροις seems to be a purely otiose addition.

564. For κλαῖ' δτε Ar. read κλαίεν, δ, which is perhaps right.

565. The next eight lines seem intended to lead back from the digression to the main story while supplying some details which Phoinix had omitted. πέσσων, "digesting," brooding over. Cf. A 81.

567. πολλά goes with ἡρᾶτο, φόνοιο as "causal" gen. with ἀχέουσα. For κασιγνήτοιο (Arist.) others read κασιγνήτοιο, as adj. "fraternal slaughter"; for acc. to the legend Althaia had several brothers killed.

568. ἀλοῖα, she beat the ground with her hands, to call the attention of the gods below. So Hera appealing to Γαῖα and the Τυτῆνες, ἔμασε χθόνα χειρὶ παχείῃ, Hymn. Apoll. ii. 162.

569. See on 457.

570. πρόχην, lit. "knee-forward" (Paley), i.e. on her knees. χ for γ of γόνυ seems due to the immediately following liquid, cf. φρούδος, πάχνη. For προ cf. πρόρριζος, προθέλυμος, and see Φ 460. (This appeal to Erinyes has no apparent result except to deprive Meleager of the offered gifts.) The line is parenthetical.

571. For δόμεν θάνατον cf. δαίμονα δώσω, Θ 166. ἡεροφοῖτις, walking in darkness: here and T 87 only.

573. τῶν δὲ, the Aitolians: we suddenly return to the main incident, the siege of Kalydon.

Αἰτωλῶν, πέμπον δὲ θεῶν ἱερῆας ἀρίστους, 575 ἐξελθεῖν καὶ ἀμῦναι, ὑποσχόμενοι μέγα δῶρον· ὀππόθι πιότατον πεδίον Καλυδῶνος ἐραυνῆς, ἤμισυ δὲ ψιλὴν ἄροσιν πεδίοιο ταμέσθαι. 580

 πολλὰ δέ μιν λιτάνευε γέρων ἱππηλάτα Οἰνεύς, οὐδοῦ ἐπεμβεβαῶς ὑψηρεφέος θαλάμοιο

 πολλὰ δὲ τὸν γε κασίγνηται καὶ πότνια μήτηρ οἳ οἳ κεδνότατοι καὶ φίλτατοι ἦσαν ἀπάντων· ἀλλ' οὐδ' ὥς τοῦ θυμὸν ἐνὶ στήθεσσιν ἔπειθον, πρὶν γ' ὅτε δὴ θάλαμος πύκ' ἐβάλλετο, τοῖ δ' ἐπὶ πύργων τέκνα δέ τ' ἄλλοι ἄγουσι βαθυζώνους τε γυναῖκας.

 τοῦ δ' ὠρίνετο θυμὸς ἀκούοντος κακὰ ἔργα, 595
 βῆ δ' ἰέναι, χροὶ δ' ἔντε' ἐδύσето παμφανόωντα.
 ὥς ὁ μὲν Αἰτωλοῖσιν ἀπήμυνεν κακὸν ἦμαρ εἶξας φ' θυμῷ· τῷ δ' οὐκέτι δῶρα τέλεσσαν

575. What have the "best priests" to do with the matter? It is not a religious question. The line looks like an interpolation for the sake of introducing the explanatory but needless word Αἰτωλῶν.

578. τέμενος, a "severalty" taken from the public land. Cf. Σ 550, Z 194, M 313; and for πευτηκοντόγυον, K 351.

580. ταμέσθαι is added pleonastically, repeating ἐλέσθαι. ψιλὴν ἄροσιν, i.e. arable land unencumbered by trees. So ἀροσις λελή, ι 134.

582. Standing on the threshold of the chamber where his son had locked himself in, and shaking the doors in his endeavour to force an entrance.

583. γουνόμενος is here of course only metaphorical, "beseeching."

584. κασίγνηται, so Aristarchos. Al. κασίγνητοι, in support of which Schol. A quotes B 641 to shew that Meleager had several brothers.

586. κεδνότατοι, here "dearest," the primitive sense of root καδ- of κῆδ-ος, etc., to care; cf. κηδεσται. Curt. Et. no. 284.

588. Until at last the missiles reached even to his own chamber. πρὶν γ' ὅτι δῆ, as 488, M 437, and several times in Od.

589. βαῖνον, were beginning to climb. ἐνέπρηθον, were trying to fire the city.

593. ἀμαθύνει, ἀμαθον ποιεῖ, lays in ashes. This passage (592-4) is quoted with slight variations by Aristotle, Rhet. i. 7.

594. For τ' ἄλλοι Zenod. read δοῖ.

595. κακὰ ἔργα, all this sad story (especially no doubt the fate of the captive women).

598. εἶξας φ' θυμῷ, yielding to his own feelings (on hearing this appeal, and not to the λαταί of his mother, who had offended him). In this lies the point of the story. Meleager now has to pay for his stubbornness (512) inasmuch as he has to yield his point without the gifts πολλά τε καὶ χαρίεντα, κακὸν δ' ἤμυνε καὶ αὐτως.

 ἀλλὰ σὺ μὴ τοι ταῦτα νόει φρεσί, μηδὲ σε δαίμων 600

 νηυσὶν καιομένησιν ἀμυνέμεν· ἀλλ' ἐπὶ δώροις ἔρχεο· ἴσον γάρ σε θεῶ τίσουσιν Ἀχαιοί· εἰ δέ κ' ἄτερ δώρων πόλεμον φθισήνορα δύης, οὐκέθ' ὁμῶς τιμῆς ἔσσαι, πόλεμόν περ ἀλαλκῶν." 605
 τὸν δ' ἀπαμειβόμενος προσέφη πόδας ὠκὺς Ἀχιλλεύς·
 "Φοῖνιξ, ἄττα γεραῖέ, διοτρεφές, οὐ τί με ταύτης χρεὼ τιμῆς· φρονέω δὲ τετιμῆσθαι Διὸς αἴση, ἐν στήθεσσι μένη καὶ μοι φίλα γούνατ' ὀρώρη.

 ἄλλο δέ τοι ἐρέω, σὺ δ' ἐνὶ φρεσὶ βάλλεο σῆσιν·
 μή μοι σύγχει θυμὸν ὀδυρόμενος καὶ ἀχεύων, Ἀτρεΐδῃ ἥρωι φέρων χάριν· οὐδέ τί σε χρὴ which would have made his relenting honourable. (The context forbids us to take ψ θυμῷ in the natural sense of "his wrath": Paley suggests $\sigma\delta$ θυμοῦ.)

599. καὶ αὐτως, even so, without recompense. Phoinix means of course that Achilles' fate will be exactly the same if he persists in his refusal, 604-5.

601. Phoinix seems to understand that Achilles' threat of returning home was not seriously meant: as is clearly the case from 650. ἐνταῦθα, thither, in that direction. The word occurs here only in H.: ἐνταυθαῶ is found once in Il. (Φ 122) and twice in Od.

602. ἐπὶ δώροις, "in consideration of these presents," so best MSS. Aristarchos, for some unknown reason, read ἐπὶ δώρων, which he (or rather Didymus) explained as = μετὰ δώρων: but this seems quite untenable; the preposition with gen. could only be taken temporally, "in the day of gifts," while gifts are to be had. But as the gifts are in 515 plainly made the motive why Achilles should relent, the text seems preferable. The short form of the dative (δώροις for δώροισι), though rare, is not indefensible (see Introduction).

603. Compare E 78, etc., for the hyperbolic expression.

605. τιμῆς, apparently = honourable, as Σ 475; contracted from τιμήεις, a very late form; cf. τεχνήσσαι, η 110. It does not seem possible to take it as genitive of τιμή.

607. ἄττα, a primitive word for father, no doubt formed from the early efforts of childish lips, like our "dada." It is found in this identical form in Latin, Skt. (atā in fem.), and Gothic; and slightly altered in old Bulgarian, Albanian, and Erse, i.e. in every main branch of the Aryan family. "Attam pro reverentia seni cuilibet dicimus, quasi eum *an*i nomine appellemus," Paul. Epil. 12. See Curt. El. no. 207. So P 561 and several times in Od., where it is always used by Telemachos to Eumaios.

608. For $\chi\rho\epsilon\omega$ with accus. and gen. see l. 75. αἴση, "by the justice (true measure, see A 418) of Zeus, which shall ever be over me by the beaked ships so long as my breath is in my body." $\xi\zeta\epsilon\iota\mu\epsilon$ means "will never leave me"; cf. the frequent use of $\theta\acute{\alpha}\mu\beta\omicron\varsigma$, $\chi\acute{o}\lambda\omicron\varsigma$, $\psi\nu\omicron\varsigma$ $\epsilon\chi\epsilon\iota$. At the same time we get a more natural sense, though with some violence to the order of the words, if we refer η to $\tau\iota\mu\acute{\eta}\varsigma$, making $\phi\rho\omicron\nu\acute{\epsilon}\omega$. . . αἴση a parenthesis: cf. κλέος $\epsilon\chi\epsilon\iota$, P 143. So Schol. BLV. These words of Achilles seem to indicate that his determination to depart is a mere piece of rhetoric.

612. σῶγχε, "confound," our colloquial "do not upset me." Achilles acknowledges the effect which Phoinix' speech has had upon him. The text (given by all MSS.) seems to be a compromise between ἐνὶ στήθεσσι ἀχεύων, read by Ar., and the ὀδυρόμενος κυνρίζων of Zenod.

613. φέρων χάριν, out of complaisance τὸν φιλέειν, ἵνα μὴ μοι ἀπέχθῃαι φιλέοντι.

καλὸν τοι σὺν ἐμοὶ τὸν κήδην, ὅς κ' ἐμὲ κήδῃ. 615 to A. So E 211, 874: and cf. ἡρα φέρειν, A 572.

616. This verse is expunged as meaningless by almost all recent editors (Heyne, Bekker, Död., Ameis, Düntzer, Fasi, and Christ). But it is possible to explain it as a hyperbolic expression meant to be taken in irony rather than earnest: "ask what you will, even the half of my kingdom (but do not expect me to change my mind)": only for the last clause he substitutes "these shall take my message," i.e. I do not recall it. μείρομαι does not occur again: but it would be a legitimate present of ἐμμορε, for μερ-ζομαι. ἡμισυ must be taken as neut. acc. used adverbially, "share my honour to the half."

617. λέξο, i.e. λεχ-σ-εσο, from the "mixed" aor. ἐλεξόμην of λέχομαι*, like ἐδυσόμην. The imper. of the 2d (syn-copated) aor. (λέκτο) would be λέξο (λεχσο), like δέξο, T 10. So we have both δραιο and δρσο.

620. ἐπινεύσε ὀφρύσι, he nodded (with) his head to P. in silence . . . for Phoinix. Observe the four consecutive datives:

instrumental, jussive, modal, and "com-modi." ἐπινεύσε, because he wishes to give a silent hint for departure to the envoys.

625. μῦθοιο τελευτῇ, the fulfilment of our errand. μῦθος is "a charge imposed," as A 25.

632. τις, a man in general. Cf. Ω 46. φονῆος, so only A with Arist.: all other MSS. φόνου, κασίγ. being perhaps taken as an adj. (see L 567); it would then be accented κασίγνητοιο. But the text is preferable. Cf. Σ 335. "He accepts blood-money from the slayer of his brother or of his dead son." Perhaps it is more natural however to make παιδός genit. after ποινήν, by a slight change of construction, "compensation for his dead son." For the taking of blood-money see Σ 498.

634. The homicide, in consideration of this payment, is allowed to stay at home in peace, instead of having to fly into exile. This clear indication of a moral pressure upon the relatives of a murdered man to receive compensation instead of following up the blood feud is the first

636. δεξαμένῃ, so best MSS. for -ov of vulgate. The change of case is natural and Homeric. Cf. Σ 139, K 187, T 413.

637. θυμόν, here "anger." κούρης οἷης, "just one single girl." Aias' numerical argument is well suited to the not over-subtle quality of his character.

639. Ἰλαον, placable. ἐνθεο is explained by 629, and θέσαν 637.

640. μέλαθρον, i.e. the obligation of hospitality incurred by our reception under your roof.

641. πληθύος ἐκ Δ., we are selected from the host of the Danaans, and therefore claim respect as representatives of the whole body of the army. For πληθύος Zenod. read ἀθρόοι.

642. ὅσσοι Ἀχαιοί (supply εἰσὶ) goes closely with ἄλλων, "chiefest of all other Achaeans that there are." So l. 55.

645. "Thou seemest to speak every word almost after mine own soul." Achilles refers to the latter part of Aias' speech. The τι modifies the sentence like our colloquial "pretty much as I could wish." MSS. give εἰέσω: but H. uses the open form in -ω where possible, and Ar. wrote εἰέσω "ἐν τισι τῶν ὑπομνημάτων" (Did.).

647. μνήσομαι, aor. subj. ἀσύφηλον (also Ω 767), a difficult word apparently meaning "rash"; as a neut. accus. "did me rash wrong." Düntzer refers to the same root as σιφλός (v. Σ 142) = injurious (δ intens.).

648. μετανάστην, a settler from abroad, "outlander"; with the same contemptuous connotation as the Athenian μέτοικος. See II 59. ἀτίμητον, perhaps "without any τιμή" or blood-price attached to his life, i.e. one who may be killed with impunity.

650. Achilles has apparently by this time abandoned his idea of returning home, though Odysseus in 682 reports only the original threat. This difficulty was a popular ᾠροία in the Alexandrian schools, and is not solved by expunging the present passage; see 601, 619.

653. κατὰ σμῦξαι, see X 411, "burn down." There appears to have been a reading φλέξαι also recognized by Ar.

657. παρὰ νῆας, along the line of ships. The libation seems to mark the close of the meal, at which they were still sitting, at least nominally. So 712. Cf. γ 334, ὅφρα σπείσαντες κοῖτοιο μεδώμεθα. In one of Aristarchos' editions, Didymos says, he read λείψαντες, which was found in many ancient copies.

660. For ὥς ἐκέλευσε Zenod. read ἐγκονέουσαι, a word specially used in this connexion. See Ω 648.

661. “Fleeces and coverlet and fine flock of linen.” Cf. Ω 646. ἄωτον is rightly explained by Buttm. Lexil. as meaning “flocus,” the flocculent knap on woven cloths. It seems to come from αὐ to blow; “that which is easily blown about,” with reduplication, for αὐ-αὐ-τος. Similarly αὐτεῖν, “to sleep,” comes from the same reduplicated form of αὐ in the sense of “heavy breathing” (Clemm in C. Stud. ii. 54).

668. Σκύρου is said by the Scholia to be a city of Phrygia (one of those alluded to in 329), not the island of that name—for which see T 326.

671. δειδέχατο, see 196. ἄλλοθεν ἄλλος ἀνασταδόν, rising each in his own place.

673. μ', i.e. μοι. See on A 170, Ψ 579, etc. πολύναιος is an epithet used only of Odysseus: K 544, Λ 430, μ 184. It means “much praised,” illustrious. Buttm. however, Lexil. p. 60, says “αἶνος is only a speech full of meaning or cunningly imagined,” and quotes ξ 508 where it is used “of the short and pithy narrative of Odysseus.” He would then understand it to mean “full of pregnant utterances.”

678. μᾶλλον, all the more, i.e. our errand only exasperated him.

680. αὐτόν, “for yourself,” alone without his help.

681. σόης, so best MSS.: Aristarchos seems to have hesitated here between σοῦς and σαῦς. See note on 424.

684 is 417 turned into oratio obliqua, thus giving the only instance in H. of ἂν (as X 110 is the only instance of κε) with infin.

688. εἰσὶ καὶ οἶδε τὰδ' εἰπέμεν, οἳ, κ.τ.λ., "my companions are here to confirm this." This use of the infin. is exactly like that in T 140 (q.v.), δῶρα δ' ἐγὼν ὅδε πολλὰ παρασχεμέν.

690. αὖθι, there, in the tent.

691. ἔπηται, subj. after a historical tense, of an event that is still future; as A 158, 559.

Aristarchos obelized 688-692 as unusual (νεώτεροι) in sentiment and prosy in composition. It is sufficient however to condemn the three last, which are evidently added after the interpolation of the Phoenix episode.

694. Rejected by Ar. and Aristoph., and omitted altogether by Zenod., as interpolated from 431. Indeed several MSS. read ἀπέειπεν here also, though it gives no sense.

695-6 = 30-31. See note there.

698. μή (so MSS.: Ar. μηδ'; but for the hiatus cf. P 686, Σ 19) goes closely with λίσσεσθαι both in sense and construction.

699. καὶ ἄλλως, "at the best of times," in colloquial English. See T 99. A variant καὶ αὖτως is given in the margin of A.

700. "Thou hast the more set him on haughtiness." For this use of ἐνέημι, "to involve" a man in anything, see K 89 Ζεὺς ἐνέηκε πόνουσι, and o 198 ὁμοφροσύνην ἐνέησε. So ψ 13 ἐπιβῆσαι: and for the plur. of the abstract noun A 205, K 122.

701. ἐάσομεν, we will leave him to go his own way: followed by ἦ . . . ἦ with subj. as ξ 183.

νῦν μὲν κοιμήσασθε τεταρπόμενοι φίλον ἦτορ 705 σίτου καὶ οἴνοιο· τὸ γὰρ μένος ἐστὶ καὶ ἀλκή· αὐτὰρ ἐπεὶ κε φανῇ καλὴ ῥοδοδάκτυλος Ἥως, ὥς ἔφαθ', οἱ δ' ἄρα πάντες ἐπήνησαν βασιλῆες, 710

 μῦθον ἀγασσάμενοι Διομήδεος ἵπποδάμοιο.
 καὶ τότε δὴ σπείσαντες ἔβαν κλισίῃνδε ἕκαστος, ἔνθα δὲ κοιμήσαντο καὶ ὕπνου δῶρον ἔλοντο.

705. τεταρπόμενοι, redupl. aor. with the sense of "sating," as always.

708. ἐχέμεν, for imper. : "array."

 ἀλλ' οὐκ Ἀτρεΐδην Ἀγαμέμνονα ποιμένα λαῶν

Κ

Φασὶ δὲ οἱ παλαιοὶ τὴν βαψωδῖαν ταύτην ὑφ' Ὀμήρου ἰδίᾳ τετάχθαι καὶ μὴ ἐγκαταλεγῆναι τοῖς μέρεσι τῆς Ἰλιάδος, ὑπὸ δὲ Πεισιστράτου τετάχθαι εἰς τὴν ποιήσιν. These noteworthy words of Eustathios, which are repeated with a few variations by the Victorian scholiast, would be of more value if we knew who the παλαιοὶ in question were. As it stands we can only say that it shews at least this: that some ancient critics perceived the fact that the Doloneia stands as an episode by itself, an excrescence upon the Iliad, forming no part of the original plot. The connexion with the name of Peisistratos can hardly be more than a conjecture, as the story of the part played by that statesman in the formation of the Iliad is apparently of quite late origin—later than the days of Aristarchos—and as a piece of serious history is now generally discredited.

That the book forms no essential part of the story of the Iliad is obvious at once. There is no allusion to it in any form whatever in any of the subsequent books, even in places where such a mention would seem inevitable. For instance, in the races in Ψ the horses which Diomedes took from Aineias play a prominent part, but there is no mention of the much-lauded pair which the same hero here takes from Rhesos. Moreover the events recorded are crowded into the latter part of a night which began in Θ and has been already occupied by all the events related in I, the agora, the council, the Embassy, the report of the envoys to the council, and several feasts.

But the peculiarities of the book are far more significant than any mere negative evidence. It is almost the only part of the Homeric poems of which we can say that the style is distinctly mannered. There is throughout a distinct effort to produce effect by contrasts, such for instance as that between the way in which Nestor speaks of Menelaos and that hero's occupation at the moment; between the promise of Hector to give the horses of Achilles to Dolon and the loss through Dolon of the horses of Rhesos; between the exaggerated despondency at the beginning and hasty exultation at the end of the story. The result is that we have a series of vivid and effective pictures at the expense of the harmony and symmetrical repose of the Epic style. The motives of the story are much confused; Agamemnon proposes to wake Nestor in order to devise some plan with him (19), but only does so in order to get him to visit the outposts. Then the other chiefs, who would not be needed for such a purpose, are summoned in order to introduce the very un-Homeric meeting of the βουλὴ in the open plain. The author takes a quite peculiar delight in the detailed description of dress and weapons; in order to be able to give a detailed account of the arming of the two spies, Odysseus is made to start with nothing but a shield (149). This and similar scenes swell the exordium to a length quite out of proportion to the real story of the book, the expedition of Odysseus and Diomedes. Many other peculiarities and difficulties are mentioned in the notes.

The linguistic evidence points strongly in the same direction. The book abounds not only in curious ἀπαξ λεγόμενα, but in unusual and involved forms of expression. Such are the idea of "tearing out the hair to Zeus" (16), the curious phrase in 142, πτολέμοιο στόμα in 8, ὄμβλος in the sense of "assembly," αὐδήσαντος in 47, ἐπιβωσόμεθα or ἐπιδωσόμεθα in 463, and many others. The cases of approximation to later Greek are also very numerous. The pronoun ὁ is continually used as a fully developed article; we find numerous "perfects" in -κα from derivative verbs, βεβήκεν, παρήκωκεν, ἀδήκωκεν; the aor. ἔθηκετο (for ἔθετο); the 3 sing. pres. μεθιέ (121); the 2 fut. pass. μῆγῃσθαι (the only instance of the tense in Homer); the form νῦν (105) in the sense of 'now' (Mr. Monro). Still more significant are the pseudo-archaic forms παραφθαίσι (346), κράτεσσι (156), and probably σφίσι = ὑμῖν (398), with several other possible cases. Other words again are elsewhere found in the Odyssey, but not in the Iliad; δόσις, φήμις, δόξα, δαίτη (= δαίς), δωτέω, ταῦδεσσι, and others. In short the attentive student of the Iliad can hardly fail to perceive that in this book he has passed into an entirely different atmosphere of thought and language.

We must therefore recognize in this most individual episode a poem of later origin than any other part of the Iliad, composed it is true for its present place, but only superficially harmonized with what precedes.

1. For the introductory lines compare B 1-2, and see also Ω 677 sqq., ο 7. The appropriateness of the lines here is somewhat impaired by l. 26 below; while παννύχιοι hardly agrees with the end of I, where the princes are sitting up till late: hence Schol. V explains it, οὐ δι' ὅλης τῆς νυκτός, ἀλλὰ τὸ πλεῖστον μέρος τῆς νυκτός. Cf. A 472. Παναχαιῶν, B 404.

5. Hera is only here called ἠυκόμος. The point of the simile is shewn by 9 to lie in πυκινά, but it is somewhat exaggerated. L. 8 may indicate that thunder without rain or snow was regarded as an omen of the first order, portending nothing less than war; compare the well-known case of Horace, C. i. 34.

7. ἐπάλυνεν is of course aor. It would seem that we must understand πολλόν and ἀθέσφατον to apply also to νιφετόν, or else the picture of a snowstorm merely "sprinkling" the fields appears a very insignificant phenomenon compared to those which precede and follow it.

8. ποθὶ evidently serves to introduce a contrast in kind to what has gone before. For the phrase πτολέμοιο στόμα compare T 313, T 359. The origin of the metaphor is perhaps a comparison of the two lines of battle to the jaw of a wild beast, crushing what comes in between them. But the feeling of this origin has evidently died out and left a mere phrase.

10. νειόθεν, cf. Z 295, I 153, Φ 317. For τρομέοντο Zenod. read φοβέοντο, which was disapproved by Aristarchos on the ground that φοβέσθαι in Homer means "to flee," not "to fear."

11. The poet does not seem to have a very vivid picture of the situation, as Agamemnon is lying in bed in his hut, with a high wall between him and the plain.

12. Διόθι πρό, see on Γ 3.

13. The asyndeton is very harsh:

- αὐτὰρ ὅτ' ἐς νῆάς τε ἴδοι καὶ λαὸν Ἀχαιῶν, πολλὰς ἐκ κεφαλῆς προθελύμνους ἔλκετο χαίτας 15
ὑψόθ' ἐόντι Διί, μέγα δ' ἔστene κυδάλιμον κῆρ.
ἦδε δέ οἱ κατὰ θυμὸν ἀρίστη φαίνεται βουλή, εἴ τινα οἱ σὺν μῆτιν ἀμύμονα τεκτῆναιτο, 20

ἢ τις ἀλεξίκακος πᾶσιν Δαναοῖσι γένοιτο.
ὀρθωθείς δ' ἔνδυνε περὶ στήθεσσι χιτῶνα, ποσσί δ' ὑπὸ λιπαροῖσιν ἐδήσατο καλὰ πέδιλα, ἀμφὶ δ' ἔπειτα δαφοινὸν ἐέσσατο δέρμα λέοντος αἰθωνος μεγάλοιο ποδηνεκές, εἵλετο δ' ἔγχος.
ὥς δ' αὐτως Μενέλαον ἔχε τρόμος, οὐδὲ γὰρ αὐτῷ 25

Ἀργεῖοι, τοὶ δὴ ἔθεν εἵνεκα πουλὺν ἐφ' ὑγρὴν ἥλυθον ἐς Τροίην πόλεμον θρασὺν ὀρμαίνοντες.
παρδαλέη μὲν πρῶτα μετάφρενον εὐρὺ κάλυψεν ποικίλῃ, αὐτὰρ ἐπὶ στεφάνῃν κεφαλῇφιν αἰέρας 30 θήκατο χαλκείην, δόρυ δ' εἵλετο χειρὶ παχεῖῃ.
βῆ δ' ἴμεν ἀνστήσων δν ἀδελφεόν, δς μέγα πάντων Ἀργείων ἦνασσε, θεὸς δ' ὥς τίετο δῆμψ.
τὸν δ' εὐρ' ἀμφ' ὥμοισι τιθήμενον ἔντεα καλὰ

hence Düntzer and Nauck would reject the line. σύριγγες are not mentioned elsewhere in Homer; they are evidently meant to give a barbarian colouring to the Trojan night. αἰόλοι recur in Σ 495 only.

15. προθελύμνους, cf. I 541. Here again the poet shews a tendency to exaggeration.

16. ἔστene, acc. to Fulda, here shews a trace of its primitive meaning, "made his heart full of bursting." The dat. Διί seems to be an extension of the phrase Διὶ χεῖρας ἀνασχεῖν.

19. εἰ, in the hope that; the line being a wish, originally independent, brought into a hypotactic position. It is ambiguous whether the original wish was εἰ τεκτῆναιτο μῆτιν σὺν ἐμοί, or εἰ τεκτονάμην σὺν οἱ μῆτιν. In the former case we ought according to analogy to read οἱ, the pronoun being reflexive, not anaphoric. In the following line also γένοιτο seems to have been a proper opt., originally paratactic, "I would that such a one might prove."

23. It will be observed as a peculiarity of this book that the poet delights in detailed description of dress and armour; cf. 29, 134, etc. Compare also B 42.

25. The reading of A and one or two MSS., αὐ τῷ for αὐτῷ, is worth notice. Conversely, in B 681 some MSS. read αὐτοῖς for αὐ τοῖς.

26. μή, for fear lest; again directly derived from the sense of the pure optative, "may it not be that they suffer." It is to be taken in connexion with τρόμος, οὐδέ . . . ἐφίζανε being parenthetical.

27. For πουλὺν as fem. cf. δ 709, and for ὑγρὴν as a subst. Ξ 308, τραφερὴν τε καὶ ὑγρὴν.

30. στεφάνῃν, see H 12.

31. θήκατο, the only form of the mid. aor. in -κα- which is found in H.; it recurs Ξ 187.

32. μέγα as A 78. For the next line cf. E 78.

34. τιθήμενον, here only; but cf. Ψ 83, 247, τιθήμεναι. These forms "are probably due to the analogy of the non-thematic contracted verbs," H. G. § 20 (cf. § 16). Or possibly advantage was taken of the lengthening power of the ictus to introduce forms which otherwise could not be used in the hexameter.

37. ἦθεῖε, a word of address specially used between brothers; Z 518, X 229, 239, and see also Ψ 94, ξ 147 ἀλλὰ μὴ ἦθεῖον καλέω καὶ νόσφιν ἐόντα. Aristonikos calls it a προσφώνησις νέου πρός πρεσβύτερον.

38. ὀτρυνέαις, so Ar.: MSS. ὀτρύνεις. ἐπίσκοπον, so Ar. and MSS.: there was a variant ἐπι σκοπῶν, which Döderlein and others have preferred. Both σκοπός (χ 396) and ἐπίσκοπος (X 255, Ω 729, θ 163) are used in the sense of “overseer.” It is quite possible to take Τρώεσσι without a preposition as a sort of dat. ethicus, though the construction with ἐπι seems more natural. Again, while σκοπός is the regular word for “spy” or outpost (B 792, etc.), the addition of ἐπι in composition gives more force, as implying one who goes to spy out the foe, rather than a passive outpost; the form may be compared with ὑφηνόχος beside the commoner ἡνίοχος (Z 19). In this equally balanced uncertainty, which recurs in l. 342, we follow the best MS. tradition.

40. The pres. inf. after verbs of promising is excessively rare (cf. however Θ 246, I 683. In T 85 we should probably read πολεμίζεω for -ίζω). But here the construction is made easier by the fact that the infin. is epexegetic of ἔργον, though in N 366 we have ὑπέσχετο δὲ μέγα ἔργον . . . ἀπώσμεν.

44. ἐρύσσεται, fut., as T 311, Φ 176. Others however take it as aor. subj., the fut. act. being ἐρύω, as in A 454. In that case σαώσει should be written for σαώσει, or the change of constr. will be harsh.

46. Did. mentions a variant which seems to have been recognized by Aristarchos, εἰχ' ἱεροῖσιν, which has in its favour the fact that it would be changed to θῆχ' on account of the supposed need to avoid the hiatus (legitimate in the bucolic diaeresis), but not vice versa. Neither ἐπέχεω nor ἐπιτιθέναι φρένα recurs in Homer.

47. αὐδῆσαντος, by word of mouth; whereas by the usual Homeric practice it should mean, “I never heard any one speaking,” see II 76, γ 337, δ 505, ι 497. In the Tragedians however αὐδᾶσθαι means “to be noised abroad” (e.g. Soph. O. T. 731), which is correlative to the present use.

48. ἐπ' ἡματι, in a day's space, as β 284 ἐπ' ἡματι πάντας δλέσθαι, μ 105, and ἐπὶ νυκτὶ Θ 529. Ar. ἐν ἡματι, followed by a few MSS. There is no antithesis between μητίσασθαι and ἔρρεξε: this would require an οὐδέ in the former sentence, and practically in Homeric language μητίσασθαι implies ῥέξαι, like μήσατο in 52.

50. αὐτῶς, “just as he is,” without extraneous aid.

ἔργα δ' ἔρεξ', ὅσα φημί μελησέμεν Ἀργείοισιν

51-52. Athetized by Aristarchos and Aristophanes as tautological, not without some reason.

53. Didymos says that Ar. read Αἴαντα, but Telephos (a later and inferior witness however) denies this. In any case only the greater Aias is actually summoned. He and Idomeneus were stationed at the extremity of the camp: see 112.

56. In the absence of any evidence that sentinels were invested with a sacred character, or were regarded as being under divine protection, it seems necessary here to recur to the primary meaning of ἰερός, "strong." See note on A 366, and compare Ω 681 ἰερός πύλαωρός, ω 81 Ἀργείων ἰερός στρατός. τέλος in the sense of "a band" recurs in 470, and also in the phrase κατὰ στρατὸν ἐν τελέεσσιν H 380, A 730, Σ 298, and occasionally in later Greek, see Lexx. It is not clear why or what orders are to be given to the sentinels, who have been appointed only a few hours, I 80; nor as a matter of fact are any given in the sequel.

57. κείνου, so all the best MSS.; a few give κείνῳ, which is evidently a change to the more familiar construction. So in a 414 the right reading is probably ἀγγελῆς (not -ης) κείθωμαι (v. Fäsi), and in Herod. i. 126, ἐμέο κείθεσθαι. The old vulg. πιθοῖατο is without authority. For σημαίνειν with dat. = to command, see A 289.

61. γάρ here expresses surprise, "why, how dost thou." But it seems clear that we require a simple continuative particle, and Cobet's conjecture τῶρ (see A 8) is probably right, "how then dost thou instruct me." The asyndeton in the next line is thus natural, as it merely continues this question; but if we read γάρ, and thus refer the question to what precedes instead of what follows, the sudden transition in 62 is very harsh. μύθῳ is not elsewhere found with ἐπιτέλλεσθαι, and seems superfluous.

62. αἶθε, sc. at the outposts, as appears from Agamemnon's answer and the sequel. μετὰ τοῖσι, sc. the sentinels. δεδεγμένους, cf. Δ 107, Θ 296; generally δεδεγμένος ὁππότε. This perfect always means "await."

65. ἀβροτάξομεν stands to ἀμβροτεῖν much as ἀβρότη to ἀμβρόσιος (see notes on B 19, 651), the nasal having disappeared after generating the β. The suffix -άξω however is very peculiar, and should imply a noun-stem *ἀβρότη = ἀμαρτία. Possibly this may point to an old interpretation of νύξ ἀβρότη as "the bewildering night," which would suit the passage where the phrase occurs (Σ 78).

67. ἐγρήγορθαι, the "Aeolic" accent is traditional, and vouched for by Herodianus.

πατρόθεν ἐκ γενεῆς ὀνομάζων ἄνδρα ἕκαστον, πάντας κυδαίνων· μηδὲ μεγαλίζειο θυμῷ,

68. πατρόθεν ἐκ γενεῆς go together in a single phrase, “by his father's, that is, his family name.” This is actually done in every case, see 87, 144, 159.

69. κυδαίνων seems to mean “using the full complimentary title,” such as διογενές, μέγα κύδος Ἀχαιῶν, etc. μεγαλίζω, do not be fastidious.

70. ὦδε, in such a way, to such an extent, Zeus brought woe upon us at our birth. γεινομένοισιν (not γεν- or γυν-) is the reading of the best MSS.

74. παρά: it would seem that Nestor, like Odysseus, l. 151, is sleeping outside his hut, perhaps ὑπ' αἰθούσῃ, as Ω 644, where the construction of a “soft bed” is described.

76. τρυφάλεια, Γ 372.

77. ζωστήρ, Δ 134. The omission of the θώρηξ among the pieces of armour named is curious.

79. ἐπέτρεπε, did not yield to; this intrans. use occurs only here in Homer, cf. μή πάντα ἡλικίῃ καὶ θυμῷ ἐπίτρεπε, Herod. iii. 36; Plato Legg. 802 B.

84. This line was athetized by Aristarchos on account of the word οὔρεός, which he took to mean φύλαξ, a longer form of οἶδος, guardian. So also Fäsi, Düntzer, and others, comparing πομπεύς by πομπός, ἀρστεύς by ἀριστος. But this is hardly tenable; οὔρεός in the sense of “mule” is too common a word to admit of homonyms which might lead to ambiguity. And there is something peculiarly graphic in the idea of the suddenly awakened sleeper asking the intruder if he wants to find a friend or a strayed mule—of which there were many in the Greek camp, A 50, Ψ 111. Schwartz has compared Xen. Anab. ii. 2, 20, where a night alarm occurs owing to an ass straying among some armour.

88. γνώσκειαι, “you shall know,” a mild imper.; as we say “you must know.”

ἰζάνει, ἀλλὰ μέλει πόλεμος καὶ κήδε' Ἀχαιῶν.

 τὸν δ' ἡμίλβητ' ἔπειτα Γερήνιος ἱππότα Νέστωρ·

93. περιδείδια must be read in one word, or the caesura disappears; the best MSS. however give πέρι δείδια, and this Herodianus preferred here and in P 240, where he takes the same view, ἀναστρεπτόν τῇ πρόθεσιν; in N 52 the preposition must go with the verb.

94. ἀλαλύκτῃμαι, ἀπαξ λεγόμενον, from ἀλυκτέω*, standing to ἀλύω in the same relation as ὕλακτέω to ὕλῳ. We have ἀλυκτάζω in Herod., ἀλύσσω in X 70.

96. δραίνεις, again ἀπ. λεγ., from δράω, here apparently in a desiderative sense.

98. ἀδηκότες, so also 312, 399, 471; else only in μ 281, and ἀδήσειεν α 134. The verb seems to be a secondary form from ἀδην = σα-δῆν (root sa of sa-tur, etc.), and thus to mean "satiated." ὕπνῳ, sleepiness. But Zen. put a comma after ἀδηκότες, instead of at the end of the line, and read ἦδέ for ἦδὲ καὶ.

100. The punctuation of this line is doubtful. The colon is generally put at εἵαται, and the comma at ἴδμεν, but the real connexion of μή is not with ἴδμεν, but with the whole thought of the preceding three lines; it is really correlative with μή in 98, and neither depends upon ἴδμεν. Rather both are almost independent sentences, though we have to translate by "lest"; μή with the subj., as Lange says (EI, p. 432), puts aside an expectation. (For a somewhat different view see H. G. § 281.) The force of the aorist μενοινήσωσι must be "lest a desire come upon them."

105. ποῦ νυν ἐέλπεται, so the best MSS. (though most accent νῦν); those of the second class give που νῦν ἐλπεται. For the enclitic νυν = νῦν, now, cf. Ψ 485. The text undoubtedly gives the best caesura.

110. Φυλῆος υἱόν, Meges, B 627.

111. εἰ with optative expresses a wish, as often; cf. 222, II 559, Ω 74, etc. There is no ellipse to be supplied.

115. εἴ περ, so Ar., al. εἰ καὶ. The sense is the same, cf. Δ 55.

116. ὥς εὔδει = οὕτως. This sense comes from the subordination of an originally paratactic exclamation, "How he sleeps!" (and so indeed Nikanor thinks it might be taken here, καθ' ἑαυτὸ ἀναγνωστέον τὸ "ὥς εὔδει" ἐν θαυμασμῷ· ἢ τοῖς ἀνω συναπτόν).

120. For σε Nauck conj. εἰ; else we must supply αὐτόν after αἰτιάσθαι.

124. ἐμέο for ἐμεῖο occurs only here in H. It is however a genuine form occurring in Ionic prose, and is a transitional stage towards ἐμεῖ, corresponding to the genitive in -οο between -οιο and -ου. ἐπέστη, came to me.

127. As the text stands ἵνα must be demonstrative, "there"; a use of which there is no other example in Greek. In order therefore to introduce the sense "where," Bekker conj. τ' ἄρ, Hermann περ, Barnes φυλάκεσσιν, ἵνα σφιν, while Hentze thinks γὰρ here may be for γ' ἄρ. Possibly however the demonstrative use may be defended by the close connexion of the demonstrative and relative stems; in order to mean where ἵνα must have passed through a stage when it meant "there." The commentators compare δ γὰρ γέρας ἔστι θανόντων Ψ 9, for τὸ γάρ. ἡγερέεσθαι, so the editions of Aristarchos, rightly. Our MSS. give ἡγερέεσθαι. Zenod. read μιν for σφιν.

133. φοινικέεσσαν is to be read as two spondee with synizesis. For the nature of the archaic περονή see Helbig, p. 144; and for ἐκταδίη p. 135, where the word is explained to mean "smooth, capable of being put on without a fold." See note on τανύπεπλος, Γ 228.

134. ἐπενήνοθε, see B 219, whence the phrase seems to have been imitated, not very successfully.

139. The idea of a sound coming round a person is not uncommon in Homer, cf. B 41 θεῖη δέ μιν ἀμφέχυτ' ὀμφή, τ 444 (π 6) τὸν . . . περὶ κτύπος ἦλθε ποδοῶν, and ρ 261 περὶ δὲ σφεας ἤλυθ' ἰωή. For the φρένας as the organ in which sleep is situated cf. Ἔ 164, τῷ δ' ὕπνον . . . χεύη ἐπὶ βλεφάροισιν ἰδὲ φρεσὶν (Fulda). ἰωή, see Δ 276.

142. It is doubtful whether there should be a note of interrogation, or only a comma, after ἀμβροσίην. In the former case we must understand "is it because so great need has come?" or else we must read ὅτι, and take it to be an indirect, virtually equivalent to a direct, question, owing to an ellipse of the words "tell me," which is not possible. So Schol. A, "ἀντὶ τοῦ τί δὴ χρεῖώ τόσον ἔκει," comparing α 171, ὅσπολιν τ' ἐπὶ νῆος ἀφίκεο, where however κατάλεον has preceded at an interval of only one line. If we put a comma after ἀμβροσίην we may assume a curious inversion of expression, instead of "what need has come on you that you wander"; but this (La Roche's) explanation is very harsh. Or again we may read ὅτι and explain it as an accusative of relation, "on what account do you thus wander, in respect of which need has so much come!" So Mr. Monro, comparing Δ

32, τί . . . τόσσα κακὰ βέζουσιν, ὃ τ' ἀσπερχές μενεαίνεις: our choice seems to lie between the first and the last of these alternatives. For ἀμβροσίην as an epithet of night see B 19.

146. ἔπε, so Ar. and Townl.; the rest give ἔπει.

147. This line is almost undoubtedly spurious, interpolated from 327, with the intention of supplying an infin. to ἐπέοικεν, which does not need one. The question of fighting or flying is not one which has to be discussed at all now; it has already been settled in the Agora at the beginning, and the council at the end, of the preceding book. (So van Herwerden and Hentze.)

151. ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ seem to go together and to mean simply "outside." The modern Greek idiom happens to be precisely the same, ἔξω ἀπὸ τοῦ σπιτί = "outside the house."

153. σαιρωτήρ, the spike at the butt-end of the spear—not elsewhere named. See J. H. S. iv. p. 301. Aristophanes read σαιρωτήρας.

155. ὑπὸ στρωτο ῥινόν, like περικεῖσθαι τελαμώνα, ξίφος, etc., in Herod., and ἐπιειμένος ἀλκήν.

156. κράτεσφι, a form which can only be explained as an artificial coinage on the false analogy of στήθεσφι and the like: there is no stem κρατεσ-. κρασίν in 152, though it does not recur in Homer, is sufficiently defended by the common κρατί.

159. MSS. are divided between ὄρσεο and ἔγρεο, but the best give the former. Ar. also varied. ἀωτεῖς, only here and κ 548. The word seems to be formed from the root af to breathe, through a stage af-of-tos, and thus means “to breathe heavily,” perhaps even “to snore.” See I 661.

160. The θρωσμός πεδίοιο is a locality which is mentioned again in T 3, A 56; see the note on the latter passage.

164. σχέτλιος, “hard,” here in the physical sense, full of endurance, and so μ 279, σχέτλιός ἐις, Ὀδυσσεῦ, πέρι τοι μένος, οὐδέ τι γυνὴ κάμνει. Hence the derived sense “hard of heart,” full of resistance to entreaty.

166. ἔπειτα, “then” or “therefore,” i.e. because they are younger. There is no exactly similar use of the adverb in Homer.

167. ἀμήχανος, not to be dealt with, “unmanageable”; a half playful reproach from a younger to an elder man.

173. The proverbial expression is a common one in Greek, occurring in Herod. vi. 11, Theognis 557, Simonides 99; cf. Soph. Ant. 996 φρόνει βεβῶς αὖ νῦν ἐπὶ ξυροῦ τύχης, and perhaps Aesch. Cho. 883. Neither ἀκμή nor ξυρόν recurs in Homer, nor is the practice of shaving mentioned. This however is not an argument against the antiquity of this passage, as razors of very high antiquity have been found among remains of the bronze period in Italy, and perhaps Greece; the Homeric heroes probably shaved the upper lip (Helbig, p. 171 sqq.). In fact the Skt. kshurā = ξυρόν shews that the practice may even date from Indo-European days (cf. Schrader, S. und U. p. 53).

174. For the use of the infinitive here cf. I 230; ἴσταται is really an impersonal verb, and the substantive ὀλεθρὸς is not added in a very strict construction. Logically, the idea is “the state of all is on the razor’s edge (balancing) between destruction and safety.” But the juxtaposition of ὀλεθρὸς and βιώναι is a curious instance of the process by which the infin. in later Greek came to be used as a noun, and might well have been quoted in the instructive remarks on this point in H. G. § 234.

 Ἀργείων βασιλῆες, ὅσοι κεκλήατο βουλὴν. 195

179. τότε, sc. Aias and Meges: ἐνθεν, from their huts.

180. See Γ 209, of which this line is not a very happy reminiscence; as there it alludes to an assembly to which the Trojans were called, whereas in the case of the sentinels there is nothing of the sort. οὐδέ, an unusual form of the common δέ in apodosis.

183. δυσωρήσονται, so all MSS.; almost all edd. however give δυσωρήσωσιν, from Apoll. Lex., on the ground that the form in -σονται cannot stand in a simile, being a future. It would of course be easy to emend -σονται, but it is a question if this is necessary; the rule which our texts follow, that the long vowel in subjunctive forms is written whenever the metre admits it even in non-thematic tenses (H. G. § 80), looks like an attempt to reduce the Homeric forms as far as possible to the analogy of later Greek. Analogy would certainly lead us to suppose that the short forms of the aor. subj. in -ομεν, -ετε, etc., implied vowels short by nature even where they were long by position. I have therefore followed Christ here in restoring the MS. reading, though not in the other passages where the vulg. -σονται is supported by nearly all MSS., Θ 511, K 99, M 168, N 745, P 134. The verb itself seems to come from ώρα, and to mean “keep painful watch.” The use of the middle may be supported by forms like εὐλαβεῖσθαι, εὐθηνεῖσθαι, εὐωχεῖσθαι, etc., though the act. is certainly more usual.

188. φυλασσομένοισι: for the change of case after τῶν see H. G. § 243 (4); it is perhaps made easier by σφισιν in 186.

189. ὅππότε, not “whenever,” for the Trojans are not attacking; but like εἴ ποτε B 97, ὅτε ξ 522, “against the time when they should hear,” i.e. expecting to hear, this idea being implied in the preceding words. The full phrase δέγμενος ὅππότε occurs B 794, etc., cf. Δ 334. ἐπὶ may go either with αἰοιεν or ἰόντων, but better with the last; ἐπαῖω does not occur in Homer.

191. Omitted in the best MSS., AD Townl.

194. The sentinels are in the space between wall and moat, I 87. They now go out into the open plain.

195. βουλὴν, acc. of the terminus ad quem, only here with καλεῖν, and rarely with any verbs except those which imply reaching a point (H. G. § 140, 3). Cf. Z 87, ξυνάγονσα γεραίᾳς νηῶν. For the regular members of the βουλή see B 53.

199. See Θ 491, where the line is used of quite another place, νόσφι νεῶν.

200. πιπτόντων is hardly to be explained; it could only mean that men were still falling. Christ conjectures πεπτεῶτων, Renner τεθνεῶτων.

204. There is considerable doubt as to the punctuation of the whole of this speech of Nestor's, the note of interrogation having been variously put after ἐλθεῖν (206), Ἀχαιοὺς (210), and ἀσκηθῆς (212). That adopted in the text is Hentze's. The true explanation is mainly due to Lange (EI, p. 381). In 206 εἰ goes immediately with ἐλθεῖν, to go "in the hope that"; and ἔλοι and πύθοιτο are co-ordinate. Then ἄσσα is explanatory of φῆμιν, as expressing the contents of the supposed rumour, and is again divided into the two alternatives ἦ—ἥε. The optatives in 211 resume that after οὐκ ἂν in 204; in form they are a wish, in reality they are only a suggestion in form of a hope, "I should like him to find out"—a shade of meaning which we express by "he might." If we read κε for τε with some MSS. (v. note on 211), the expression would be more confident, "he would"; but this is better reserved till 212, where κεν indicates a result which in that case is asserted to follow upon the assumed condition, being virtually equivalent to the future ἔσεται. We may in fact regard the clause μέγα κεν . . . εἴη as an apodosis to the sentence ταῦτα . . . ἀσκηθῆς, which in effect, though not in form, is a protasis. This weakening of the simple optative from a wish to a supposition is indeed, as Lange has shewn, the origin of the conditional protasis; the εἰ is only a sign of the manner in which the optative is used, not, in its origin, an indispensable factor in the expression of a condition. A similar use of the opt. to express a condition, followed by an apodosis with κεν, occurs in α 265, the difference being that there the opt. resumes a wish introduced by εἰ (255): here the wish is put in the form of a question with οὐκ ἂν. So also σ 368-370, where however the apodosis is postponed till 375. (So in the main Hentze.)

207. φῆμιν recurs only in Od. The Schol. A. illustrates it by a well-known story: Λακεδαιμονίων βουλευομένων ποῖον χάρον ἐπιτελίσσουσι τῆς Ἀττικῆς, Ἀλκιβιάδης συνεβούλευσε πέμπειν εἰς Ἀθήνας κατασκόπους, οἵτινες παραγεγνημένοι ἤκουσαν αὐτῶν τῶν Ἀθηναίων διαλεγομένων ὅτι τὴν Δεκέλειαν μέλλουσιν ἐπιτελίσσειν οἱ πολέμοι· καὶ οὕτως Λακεδαιμόνιοι ἐπετελίσσαν τὴν Δεκέλειαν.

209. ἀπόπροθεν, i.e. from the city; the ellipse is filled up by πόλινδε immediately succeeding.

211. The MS. evidence is fairly divided ἀσκηθῆς· μέγα κέν οἱ ὑπουράνιον κλέος εἴη πάντας ἐπ' ἀνθρώπους· καί οἱ δόσις ἔσσεται ἐσθλή· ὅσοι γὰρ νήεσσιν ἐπικρατέουσιν ἄριστοι, τῶν πάντων οἱ ἕκαστος δὴν δώσουσι μέλαιναν 215 θῆλυν ὑπόρρηνον· τῇ μὲν κτέρας οὐδὲν ὁμοῖον· αἰεὶ δ' ἐν δαίτησι καὶ εἰλαπίνῃσι παρέσται."

 ὥς ἔφαθ', οἱ δ' ἄρα πάντες ἀκὴν ἐγένοντο σιωπῇ.
 τοῖσι δὲ καὶ μετέειπε βοὴν ἀγαθὸς Διομήδης·
 "Νέστορ, ἔμ' ὀτρύνει κραδίη καὶ θυμὸς ἀγήνωρ 220
 ἀνδρῶν δυσμενέων δύναι στρατὸν ἐγγὺς ἐόντων, Τρώων· ἀλλ' εἴ τίς μοι ἀνὴρ ἅμ' ἔποιτο καὶ ἄλλος· μᾶλλον θαλπωρὴ καὶ θαρσαλεώτερον ἔσται.
 σύν τε δὴ ἐρχομένω, καὶ τε πρὸ ὁ τοῦ ἐνόησεν, ὅπως κέρδος ἔη· μῦθος δ' εἴ περ τε νοήσῃ, 225
 ἀλλὰ τέ οἱ βράσσων τε νόος λεπτὴ δέ τε μῆτις."

between καί and τε; the former is given by C and D, the latter by the rest, A having κ written over the τ. Nikanor in Schol. A also reads τε, the argument in favour of which has already been given. The clause being a resumption of what precedes, τε goes with καί, and means "both."

212. ὑπουράνιον, i.e. over all the earth, virtually identical with πάντας ἐπ' ἀνθρώπους.

214. The phrase νήεσσιν ἐπικρατέουσιν is unusual; the line looks almost like an adaptation from a 245, νήεσσι being changed into νήεσσι.

215. πάντων, as we should say "without exception"; but the phrase is a rather awkward one, and so is ἕκαστος immediately followed by the plural. The omission of the F of ἕκαστος too is very rare. In 216 τῇ . . . ὁμοῖον is an obvious exaggeration, as a dozen ewes with their lambs would be of very little value. As for the promised standing invitation, it may be noticed that all the chiefs who are present, with the exception of Meriones and Thrasymachos, already share of right in the feasts of the γέροντες: cf. B 53, Δ 259. These numerous objections seem to indicate that 214 (or acc. to Nauck 213) -217 are an interpolation—perhaps from the time when the democratic σίτησις ἐν πρυτανείῳ had become a familiar institution as a reward for public service.

222. As Nikanor remarks, we may put either a comma or a colon at the end of this line; it is impossible to say whether the clause εἰ . . . ἔπειτο is a wish or a regular conditional protasis. This is a very good illustration of the way in which the conditional sentence has been developed from the parataxis of a wish and the expected result.

224-6. The recurrence of τε in these three lines is remarkable; it seems to be an instance of the primitive use in which it was simply a mark that the two clauses in which τε . . . τε occur are correlative, from which the use as a conjunction strictly speaking has been developed. Thus εἰ περ, the condition, is correlative to the apodosis which is stated paratactically by ἀλλὰ, while in the other two clauses containing τε . . . τε the co-ordination in pairs is obvious. The connexion of this use with the gnomic τε (almost = τοι) is not clear; the two are possibly quite distinct. The gnomic τε would of course be in place in such a sentence as the present, but it is not used in pairs. ἐρχομένω, a nom. pendens, like Γ 211, ἀμφὶ δ' ἐξομένω, γεραρώτερος ἦεν Ὀδυσσεύς. The old vulgate ἐρχομένων, evidently a correction, is found only in one or two inferior MSS. πρὸ ὁ τοῦ: for this order of words cf. E 219, εἰ νῦν τῷδ' ἀνδρὶ. The meaning is of course that sometimes one, sometimes the other, is quickest to mark.

226. βράσσων: apparently this must be the comp. of βραχύς, for βραχύνω (Curt. Et. p. 672), though the adj. is not found elsewhere in H. The sense will be, "his mind does not reach so far," he is "shorter of sight" as we should say. It has generally been referred to βραδύς, which gives a better sense, as quickness of perception is the point in 224; but βραδ-ῶν could only make βράδων. It was probably the knowledge of this which led Aristarchos to the strange idea that βράδων is a participle meaning "confused," "perturbed," ταρασσόμενος. λεπτή, only here and Ψ 590 (the same phrase) in a metaphorical sense. It probably means "flimsy," wavering, as in the phrase φρένες ἡρέθονται Γ 108.

231. τλήμων, cf. 498, E 670, Φ 430, the only instances in Homer, all in the sense of "enduring." The use of the article ὁ seems to be post-Homeric.

235. αἵρήσεται, "I expect you to choose," which may be taken either as a permission or as a modified imperative. Cf. Z 71.

236. φαινομένων, a curious use which must mean "as they present themselves." Hence Döderlein conj. φαινόμενον, to which Paech has added τοὶ γὰρ τὸν. But the later use of the article is common in this book.

237. αἰδόμενος, from a feeling of respect; as ζ 329, αἰδέτο γὰρ βα πατροκασίγητον.

238. σὺ δὲ 84, repeated to enforce the opposition of clauses, not of persons. This is common enough when the pronoun has not been expressed before, but is very rare in cases like this where an emphatic σύ γε precedes. ὀπάσσειαι, aor. subj., as regularly after μή; some have taken it as a "jussive" future, but this does not seem in place here.

240. Omitted by Zenod. and athetized by Ar. as superfluous. It clearly gives the meaning which is meant to lurk in the preceding line; and it is more in the Epic style that this should be openly expressed than left to be understood. Thus if it be rejected 239 should probably go with it; Agamemnon's remarks are then quite general in their application.

246. σπομένοιο, so Ptol. Ask.: MSS. ἐσπομένοιο. On this question see note on E 423.

247. νοστήσαιμεν without ἄν, another case where the strict sense of the opt. is becoming weakened: it is just on the borderland between “I wish we may return” and “I hope, expect we shall return.” H. G. § 299 f.

249. μήτε τι νείκει is superfluous according to our ideas: we can express it by saying “there is no more need of praise than of blame”; or perhaps there may be a thought of divine “nemesis,” “do not praise me over much, even as I hope you will not defame me.” It is really an instance of the tendency which we find in Latin as well as in Greek to emphasize a word by means of its contrary; as in phrases like fas nefasque, etc., where the second member is often superfluous.

252. The MSS. all give παρφύχωκε(ν), and a majority πλέω for πλέων. According to Didymus, Ar. read παρφύχωκεν. There is considerable variation between σχηκα and φύχωκα in other passages (Aesch. Pers. 13, Soph. Aias 896, and in Herodotus); but there is no good authority for the form σχηκα till quite late (Polyb.). The next line was omitted by Zenod. and athetized by Ar. The construction is hardly to be explained. Hentze understands it to mean “the greater part of the night, consisting of two watches”; but this is too artificial, and the use of the gen. can hardly be supported. The obvious sense “more than the two first watches have passed, and the third remains,” seems to be a contradiction in terms; but perhaps this is more apparent than real, for λέλειπται need not mean more than “the third watch is still with us.” For the three-fold division of the night cf. μ 312, ἥμος δὲ τρεῖς νυκτὸς ἔην, μετὰ δ' ἄστρο βεβήκει. The Schol. compares the three-fold division of the day φ 111, ἔσσεται ἡ ἡὺς ἡ δειλὴ ἡ μέσση ἡμῶν. ἔσση is indeclinable in Homer, but the only other instances of its use, except in nom. or acc., are κ 515 (gen.), N 407 (dat.).

254. ἔπλα = armour only occurs four times in H.: 272, Σ 614, T 21; elsewhere it means no more than “tools.”

256. τὸ ἐὼν seems to be a late use of the article; while ἐὼν is used in its primitive sense, his οὐκ (Brugman, Proö. p. 98).

258. ταυρεῖην with κυνέην seems to be a contradiction in terms, if κυνέην means “a helmet of dogskin” (cf. 335), though such a phrase can easily be justified (v. A 598). It is very likely however that it really comes from root κυ, to be hollow, which occurs with numerous suffixes; -να- occurring in Skt., though not in Greek (see Curt. Et. no. 79). V. J. H. S. iv. p. 298. ἄφαλον, without knobs or projections: v. on Γ 362. καταϊτυς a word of uncertain derivation, known only from the present line.

263. ἐντέτατο should mean “was stretched tight.” In this case the things could not have been “inside” the hollow, i.e. next the head. Possibly it is meant that there was a leather cap πῖλος, inside all (ἐν μέσση), wound round for the sake of strength with thongs; while outside these again came an outer covering of boar's tusks. The ἱμάντες are then ἐντοσθεν because they form the middle one of three layers. The tusks may possibly be a relic of the origin of the helmet from the wild beast's head, a form which is very commonly found in primitive headgear (J. H. S. iv. 294).

264. ἔχον, “clasped” the cap, surrounded it.

265. From this passage came the tradition in pictorial art by which Odysseus always wore the close-fitting cap called πῖλος, or πίλος.

266. Ἑλεῶν in Boiotia is mentioned in B 500. Ptolemy of Askalon read Ἑλεῶνος, a town in Thessaly, distinct from the Boiotian; but this is probably a mere figment, invented in order that the Amyntor here named might be identified with the father of Phoinix, I 447, where see the note. Autolykos was the maternal grandfather of Odysseus, see λ 85, τ 395; he was an arch-thief, ἀνθρώπου ἐκέκαστο κλεπτοσύνη θ' ὄρκῳ τε. Hence in the later legends he was made the son of Hermes.

267. ἀντιτορήσας, so Hymn. Merc. 178, μέγαν δόμον ἀντιτορήσων. The force of the preposition is not clear, and Döderlein (Gloss. § 672) is perhaps right in reading ἀντετορήσας, from the reduplicated aor. ἀν-τετορήσαι. The real form will then have been forgotten at the time of the composition of the hymn.

268. Σκάνδειαν, acc. of the terminus ad quem, cf. 195 κεκλήματο βουλήν. Ar. read Σκάνδειανδ', as H 79 σῶμα δὲ οἰκαδ' ἐμὸν δόμεναι πάλιν, ο 367 Σάμηνδε δόσαν.

269. For Molos, the brother of Idomeneus, cf. N 249.

273. It is doubtful if we should read κατ' αὐτόθι as one word or as two. The preposition in tmesis rarely stands after its verb: see however B 699. In φ 201, φ 90 κατ' αὐτόθι λείπεν, λιπόντε, where the verb follows, it seems most natural to take it with κατά. Herodianus held that even if κατά belonged to the verb it could not here suffer anastrophe, because of the intervention of the word δε.

275. There is a curious variant here, attributed to one Zopyros, a naturalist, παλλόν (gray) for Παλλὰς.

278-80. Cf. E 115-7 and ν 300-1. κινύμενος, apparently “no movement of mine escapes thee.” But this is hardly a Homeric view of the gods, whose omniscience does not extend to details unless their attention is called.

281. ἐυκλείας, for ἐυκλέας, is of course not an epithet of νῆας, but part of the predicate. The last syllable is lengthened by the ictus.

285. σπεῖο, a form which Curtius (Vb. ii. 47) gives up as indefensible, and only created by false analogy; only σπέο can be right. It is however possible that we may have here a bold case of lengthening by the ictus. ὅτε here, as elsewhere in the phrase ὥς ὅτε, originally was an indefinite adverb, “on a time,” “at some time.” The usual method of explaining ὥς ὅτε as involving an ellipse would land us here in the absurd tautology “accompany me as thou didst accompany when thou didst accompany my father.” For this famous expedition of Tydeus see Δ 396, E 803, etc.

289. μέρμερα ἔργα, the slaying of the men in ambush, Δ 396. The emphatic position of the quite insignificant κείσ’ produces a curious weakness in the effect of the line.

291. παρίσταο, so Ar., Zen., and αι πλείους, as μάρναο O 475; MSS. παρίτασο, which is more usual. H. G. § 5. Zenod. also read πῶρε κύδος for με φύλασσε.

292-4 = γ 382-4, to which place only they probably belonged originally. The tools for gilding the horns of the sacrifice are there described (432-438). See Helbig, H. E. p. 181, who points out that the process probably consisted in beating gold into thin leaves and laying these round the horns—not in anything like casting the gold. Cf. also § 232.

299. εἶας, so the best MSS.: the majority give εἶασεν, but the a is always long in this form. Nauck. conj. εἶαεν, which is possible; Christ εἶασεν ἀγῆνορας Ἐκτωρ, which is not, on account of the rhythm.

304. ἀρκιος, assured: see on B 393.

and cf. σ 358. It is equally possible however to understand the word here to mean “sufficient,” “ample”; and in this way the later imitative Epic poets seem to have taken it.

306. ἄριστοι ἔωσι, so Ar. followed by only two or three inferior MSS.: cael. ἀριστεύωσι. Zenod. read αὐτοὺς οἳ φορέουσιν ἀμύμονα Πηλεΐωνα, Aristoph. καλοὺς οἳ φορ. ἀμ. II.; see 323.

307. οἳ τ' αὐτῷ κύδος ἄροιτο is of course parenthetical.

311. φύξιν, a word peculiar to this book; see 398, 447.

312. νύκτα as a temporal accus. only occurs in H. in this book of the Iliad (188, 399) and in the Odyssey. ἀδηκότες, cf. 98.

314. For this introduction of a new character cf. E 9. κῆρυκος θείοιο, as holding a sacred office, v. A 334, Δ 192.

317. μόνος, an only son. Zenod. read κασιγνήτοισιν, understanding it to mean the only survivor among five brethren.

321. Cf. H 412. Dolon offers to Hector the staff which he is holding as the speaker “in possession of the house.” See 328. Thus τό mean “this,” not “thine.”

324. ἄλιος σκοπός, the phrase ἀλαοσκοπῆν (or ἀλαός σκοπῆν) ἔχειν (see 515), suggests that ἀλαός may be the right reading here. ἀπὸ δόξης, far from what you expect. The phrase recurs only in λ 344. Cf. ἀπὸ γνώμης, θυμοῦ (A 562), etc.

330. This line seems almost like an intentional irony, in view of Hector's coming fate. For the construction of μή with the indic. in an oath cf. O 41, ἴστω νῦν . . . μή δι' ἐμὴν ἰότητα Ποσειδάων ἐνοσίχθων πημάλει Τρῶας. H. G. § 358.

332. ἐπώμοσε, so Ar., AD: most MSS. ἀπώμοσε. The ἐπι- seems to mean "added a false oath" to his previous asseveration.

335. The κτίς or κτίς appears to have been an animal of the class of stoats or martens. Cf. on 258.

338. Aristarchos noted that elsewhere in the Iliad ὄμιλος means only "the battle throng," the sense of "assembly" being peculiar to the Odyssey.

341. οὗτός τις, so Ar. and αἱ πλείους, MSS. τοι.

342. ἐπίσκοπος, cf. 38.

344. παρεξελθεῖν πεδίοιο, "to pass by us out into the plain." On account of the scansion Christ proposes ἀλλὰ F' ἐῷμεν.

346. παραφθαίησι, a strange form, possibly a sham archaism (so Curtius, Vb. 158); the αι points to an opt. form, the -σι to a subj. It looks as though the poet thought that the -σι, which is so often found in the subj., was an arbitrary affix which might be appended also to the opt. La Roche and others write -φθῆησι, without MS. authority, except that A gives -φθαίησι. J. Schmidt takes this as a subj. of a lost present φθαίω* for φθάνω; while Christ sees in the -σι another instance of the sub-junctive stem in -ja-, for which see H 72, 340. It may be noticed that in 368 the two best MSS., AD, read φθαίη, though the subj. is not in place there.

349. φωνήσαντε is curious, as Odysseus only has spoken. Didymos compares the similar instance Φ 298 ὥς εἰπόντε after a speech from one only. There seems to be a sort of attraction to the number of the principal verb. There was a variant in the editions "of Aristophanes and others," ὥς ἔφατ', οὐδ' ἀπίσθησε βοῶν ἀγαθὸς Διομήδης· | ἐλθόντες δ' ἐκάτεροε παρέξ ὁδοῦ κ.τ.λ.

351. This phrase must be compared with θ 124, ὅσσον τ' ἐν νεῷ οὐρον πέλει ἡμιόνου, τόσσον ἵεπεκροθέων κ.τ.λ. An ingenious explanation is given by Mr. Ridgeway in J. H. S. vol. vi. He shews

ἡμίονων, αἱ γάρ τε βοῶν προφερέστεραί εἰσιν ἐλκόμεναι νειοῖο βαθείης πηκτὸν ἄροτρον, τὼ μὲν ἐπεδραμέτην, ὁ δ' ἄρ' ἔστη δούπον ἀκούσας·

 ὥς τὸν Τυδεΐδης ἡδ' ὁ πτολίπορθος Ὀδυσσεύς that the length of a furrow was commonly a fixed and recognized standard of length, as with us it is the furlong (furrow-long); it probably formed the length of each man's share in the common field. Now the unit of area was a day's work of plough (γῆης), as the German Morgen and Gallic journal, "a day's work," denote the patches in the common fields. If mules ploughed more swiftly than oxen, but with the same length of furrow, then in a day's work they would plough a wider piece of land. The width which they would thus cover (πλέθρον) is expressed by the distance between the οὐρα or side limits (whilst τέλειον = end-limit, "headland"); and the οὐρον of mules will form an absolute standard of distance, as we see that it does in θ 124. We may also compare Ψ 431 δισκον οὐρα, 523 δισκουρα. οὐρα is generally considered a heteroclite plur. of οὐρος = δρος, but so far as the Homeric evidence goes the old form of the singular may have been οὐρον, as Mr. Ridgeway remarks. ἐπὶ goes with δοσσον: the accent, according to the rule, is not thrown back, because τε intervenes. Cf. B 616 and note.

353. νειοῖο gen. of movement within a space, like πεδῖαι, etc. πηκτὸν, acc. to Hesiod, Opp. 433, means the plough made of several parts, opposed to the αὐτόγυνον where the body was composed of a single suitably shaped piece of wood. Hesiod advises that one of each sort should be kept in case of accident.

355. ἔλπετο does not in itself imply that Dolon hoped that he was to be fetched back; though this is probably meant, from the whole description of his cowardly nature. ἔλπομαι is often simply "to expect," "fancy," even of things which are dreaded; c.g. II 281.

356. But for the rhythm it would be more natural to join ἵεναι with πάλιν. And so Nikanor takes it. But the division of the line into two equal halves is hardly tolerable.

357. δουρηνεκὲς, as we talk of a spear "carrying" a certain distance (ἀπ. λεγ.).

361. ἐπείγετον would seem from the following προθέησι to be meant for a subjunctive. If so, it is a false archaism, as the subj. with a short vowel is only found in non-thematic tenses: H. G. § 82, n, and Curtius, Vb. ii. 73. But as both indic. and subj. are used in similes, it does not seem necessary here to assume that both verbs are in the same mood. The rule is however for the subjunctive to come first, and the indicative to follow after the δέ τε.

362. ὕληενθ' ὁ δέ τε, ὁ "τέ" σύνδεσμος οὐκ ἦν ἐν τοῖς Ἀριστάρχου, Did. It is not certain what τὰ Ἀριστάρχου means; it cannot be the editions, which are always called αἱ Ἀριστ.: probably therefore it means the ὑπομνήματα, which were regarded as of inferior authority. In some of these Ar. must then have read ὕληεντα, ὁ δέ, which is not improbably better, as the hiatus may have been removed by conjecture. Still the addition of a clause to a simile by δέ τε is so habitual that it is better to retain the MS. reading. Paech's conjecture (approved by Curtius) ὕληεντα, δ τε, though it would fully explain the subjunctive, is not quite like Homer; N 62, p 518, which he quotes, are not in point, as the relatives there refer to the main subject of the simile, not to a subordinate action, as here.

363. The use of the article ὁ is not

Homeric; but cf. B 278. It is easy enough to read ἡδὲ for ἡδ' ὁ, but it is doubtful if, in this book, the change should be made.

364. διώκετον: on this form of the 3d pers. dual in a historical tense see H. G. 5 ad fin.; Curtius, Vb. i. 75. The only other instances are N 346, Σ 583; cf. N 301.

365. μιγήσεσθαι, the only instance of the 2d future pass. in Homer.

368. For δεῦτερος = too late, cf. X 207, where the phrase is far more suitable: there Achilles is chasing Hector in sight of all the Greeks: here, in the night, away from the camp, there is little fear of Diomedes being anticipated.

375. βαμβαίνων, either “staggering” from βα-ν (βαίνω) like παμφαίνω from φαν; or “stammering,” uttering inarticulate sounds, an onomatopoeic word like βάρβαρος, balbus. Both interpretations were recognized in antiquity, and there is no ground but the taste of the individual for deciding between them. In late Greek the word is used to mean “stammering” only; e.g. Bion, Id. 4, 9, βαμβαίνει μοι γλώσσα. ἄραβος . . . ὀδόντων is parenthetical.

378-81. See Z 48-50.

383. καταθύμιος, “present to thy spirit,” as P 201; cf. Ω 152, μηδὲ τί οἱ θάνατος μελέτω φρεσίν.

384. This is an Odyssean line (forty-five times), recurring twice again in this book, and twice in Ω, but not elsewhere in the Iliad.

387 was athetized here by Ar.

 τὸν δ' ἐπιμειδήσας προσέφη πολύμητις Ὀδυσσεύς· 400

391. ἄτρησι is so far peculiar here that it is used of “blinding,” deception, of a purely human origin; ἄτας ἐφη τὰς ἐπὶ κακῷ ὑποσχέσεις, Schol. B. In every other instance it conveys the idea of some divine or mysterious blindness. For ἤγαγεν Aristoph. read ἥπαφεν.

394. θοὴν as an epithet of night is not very easy to explain. To an inhabitant of a northern climate the twilight of the south of Europe seems comparatively short; but we can hardly suppose, as some have done, that the Aryan immigration, if it came from the North, was sufficiently rapid to allow of such a contrast being felt: nor should we a priori have supposed that even in Greece darkness was felt as absolutely swift, either in approach or in duration. Nitzsch refers it to the sense “sharp,” and understands “the keen night air.”

398. βουλευοίτε . . . ἐθέλοιτε ACDH, βουλεύουσι . . . ἐθέλουσι GLMori, C (man. sec.) and A as a variant. καὶ γραπτέον οὕτως (sc. -ουσι) καὶ ἀθετητέον τοὺς τρεῖς στίχους (397-9) εἰ τι χρή πιστεῦναι Ἀμμωνίῳ τῷ διαδεξαμένῳ τὴν σχολὴν (the successor of Aristarchos in the School at Alexandria) . . . καὶ παρὰ Ἀριστοφάνει δὲ ἡθετοῦντο, Didymos. ἔτι οὕτως γραπτέον “βουλεύουσι” καὶ “ἐθέλουσι.” τὸ γὰρ “σφίσιν” ἐν τῷ περὶ τινῶν ἐστὶ λόγῳ (sc. belongs to the third person), ἀντὶ τοῦ αὐτοῖς, ᾧ ἀκόλουθα δεῖ εἶναι τὰ ῥήματα, Ariston. Other later scholia quote statements that that there was no explanation to be found in the ὑπομνήματα of Ar. of the obelos which he put against these lines. Ammonios is further stated to have said that Aristarchos first marked the lines with στιγμαί—apparently a sign of hesitation—and afterwards obelized them. The question is an important one not only from the light which it throws on the tradition of the Aristarchean school, but from its bearing on the whole problem of the use of the pronominal stem σσι for other persons than the third. For a full discussion reference must be made to Brugman's Ein Problem der Homerischen Textkritik. The following facts seem certain in spite of the doubt as to Ar.'s final opinion:—(1) That tradition, exemplified in the practice of Apoll. Rhod. and others, held that the derivatives of the stem σσι were not restricted to the 3d person. (2) That Aristarchos strongly held that they were. (3) That in this passage the κοινή, represented by our best MSS., read βουλεύατε, ἐθέλατε. (4) That Ar. wished to read βουλεύουσι, ἐθέλουσι, but hesitated about making the change. The obvious inference is that the tradition in this case was so unanimous that he did not dare to alter the reading. Now, as Brugman has shewn that the use of σσι for all persons is inherited from the oldest stage of the language, it is not impossible to retain the traditional reading here in spite of Ar., and understand σφίσιν as = ὑμῖν. But it must be remembered that elsewhere we have no instance of this use of the reflexive personal pronoun in Homer: in the oldest Epic language the “free” use of σσι is confined to the possessive δε. It seems therefore that we have here a false archaism, the first instance of the extension to the personal pronoun of that use of δε which was an accepted—and genuine—note of antiquity.

408. δαί, Ar. with A and others: some give δ' αἰ, which is perhaps preferable. There is no other case in H. of two articles coming together; but in this late book such a consideration is of less weight. δαί is also unknown to H. except in the two equally late passages, α 225, ω 299. The latter instance is very similar to the present, as δαί there, as here, only adds another question to those already asked, and thus loses the tone of surprise which it possesses in Attic. Nauck would read δ' αἰ, which is certainly more natural.

409-411 were athetized by Ar. as wrongly introduced from 208-210; his chief argument being that while Dolon answers the other questions he takes no notice of this. ἄσσα also makes a very awkward change from the direct to the dependent question.

415. For Ilos see T 232, and for his tomb A 166, 372, Ω 349. It is useless to attempt to define its position beyond noting that it was somewhere in the middle of the plain (μέσσην κὰρ πεδίον).

416. φυλακάς, the antecedent attracted to the relative—a very rare use in H. Cf. Vergil's "Urbem quam statuo vestra est." The other instances are enumerated in H. G. § 271.

418. ἐσχάrai, elsewhere an Odyssean word. It is in H. a synonym of ἐστία, and seems here to mean "hearths" in the sense of "families"; the whole clause ὅσσαι . . . ἐσχάrai is thus precisely identical with the phrase ἐφέστιοι ὅσοι ἔασιν in B 125. The use of ἐσχάrai does not encourage us to understand it of watch-fires. It may possibly allude to a primitive way of raising an army by a levy of a man from every "hearth"; so that in counting the numbers ἐσχάrai would be equivalent to "soldiers," and thus be κατὰ σύνεσιν the antecedent to δοῦναι. The θ in ἐγρηγόρθασιν is anomalous. In the only other forms of this perf. ἐγρηγόρθε and ἐγρηγόρθαι it is part of the termination.

428. This is a tolerably complete list of the races which, in the tradition known to us from post-Homeric times, formed the primitive population of the mainland of Greece and the coasts of Asia Minor. The Leleges and Kankones do not occur in the Catalogue, but are named elsewhere in H., e.g. T 96, 329, as inhabitants of the countries bordering on the Troad. Thymbra, a well-known town on the Skamander, is not mentioned again in H.

435. According to Apollodoros, Rhesos was the son of the river Strymon and a Muse ; which means no doubt that he was a local divinity, like Kinyras of Cyprus, who appears in Homer as a king and contemporary of Agamemnon. Possibly Ἥιονεύς may be the Strymon, which is not elsewhere mentioned in H.

437. λευκότεροι, probably a nominative of exclamation like 547 : H. G. § 163.

439. πελώρια, “prodigious”; the epithet is applied even to heroes who are not in the first rank (e.g. E 842), and implies only the belief in the greater stature of the heroic age as compared with οἱ νῦν βροτοὶ εἰσιν.

442. πελάσσετον may be a future used as a sort of imperative, “you are to take me”; Dolon assumes that his captors have undertaken to spare him. Others (Ameis, Fäsi, etc.) regard it as an imperative of the mixed aorist, with Curt. Vb. ii. 283 ; while Nauck conj. πελάσσετε (one MS. giving -σατον) which would probably be altered in order to avoid the hiatus, though this is quite allowable in the bucolic diaeresis.

447. Quite needless difficulties have been raised about the knowledge of Dolon's name which Diomedes and Odysseus possess here and in 478. An Epic poet is not a realist, like a modern novelist.

448. ἅμας, "mine" ? or "ours" ? Cf. Z 414.

450. ἦ τε introduces the apodosis. On the form εἰσθα (also τ 69, υ 179) cf. Curt. Vb. i. 50.

455. For this treatment of a would-be suppliant cf. Agamemnon's conduct to Adrestos, Z 37-65, and the sons of Antimachos, Δ 180-147. The τένοντε are evidently the two strong bands of muscle which run up the back of the neck, the lōlon of E 73.

457. λέγουσι γάρ τινας (sc. that a head can continue to speak while being cut off) ἐπαγόμενοι καὶ τὸν Ὀμηρον, ὡς διὰ τοῦτο ποιήσαντος "φθεγγομένη δ' ἄρα τοῦ γε κάρη," ἀλλ' οὐ φθεγγομένου, Aristotle, de Part. Anim. iii. 10. This curious variant is also preserved in one MS., though of course it is impossible, as κάρη is never fem. φθεγγομένου seems to mean "in the midst of his death-shriek," as in χ 329, where the line recurs, the victim is not speaking or attempting to speak. But in II 508 φθογγή is used of a dying man's articulate words.

460. ληϊτίδι, only here; else ἀγελήη.

462. τοῖσδεσσι only here in Il., five times in Od. It is an obscure form. τῶνδεων in Alkai. fr. 126 is perhaps only an imitation. Hinrichs (Aeol. 115) thinks that -δεσσι may come from deis* = (δ) δεῖνα (?). Nauck conj. τοῖσινδε, but he ought then to explain the origin of the form before us.

463. ἐπιβωσόμεθ', so nearly all MSS. This form occurs twice in Od. (α 378, β 143), but in the sense "to call the gods to help," while here it must mean "call upon in thanksgiving." Ar. read ἐτιδωσόμεθ', "ἐν ἡ δώροις τιμήσομεν," which is hardly possible. In X 254 ἐπιδόσθαι means to take the gods as witnesses, which does not suit this passage. Ribbeck has suggested ἐπιβωσόμεθ', which certainly gives the best sense. The contraction βωσ- for βοησ- is common in Herodotos.

466. A very obscure line. δέελον does not occur again in Greek, except in the gloss of Hesych. δέελος· δεσμός, ἄμμα. The word looks like an older uncontracted form of δῆλος (which occurs only once in H., υ 333) for δῆλος, cf. εὐδέελος β 167. But if it is an adj. agreeing with σῆμα, the position of τε is hardly to be explained. Christ and others join δέ τε, but for this there is no sufficient analogy. Bentley conj. δέελον δέ τε σῆμα' ἐπέθηκεν, but there is no reason why this should have been corrupted. Mr.

Monro thinks we may read σῆμα ἔθηκεν, but the hiatus in this place is quite intolerable. Of the three cases which he cites, ε 135 is hardly in point, for there we should read ἡδέ F' ἐφασκον θήσειν ἀθάνατον. The other two are in ω, the latest part of all the Homeric poems: in ω 209 we might easily read ἡδ' ἱανον, in 430 Bekker and Nauck read ὠκ' ἀφικέσθαι. It is therefore best to follow Hesychius, with Düntzer, and understand “he put up a bundle and a mark,” a hendiadys for “a mark consisting in a bundle.” It will stand for δεF-ελος: the lengthened form of the root δε is found in δέωω, cf. the fut. δεήσει (v. Curtius, Et. no. 264).

475. The ἐπιδιφριάς is not elsewhere mentioned. It is perhaps the name for the post which stood upright in the front of the ancient chariot, both Greek and Assyrian, and served partly as a support to the driver, partly, as I have shewn (J. H. S. v. 190), as the point of attachment of the ζυγόδεσμον (see Ω 274). πυμάτης may then mean “the bottom,” the portion of the “post” to which horses would most naturally be tethered.

Possibly however the ἐπιδιφριάς may mean no more than the breastwork of the διφρος, the reins being tied as usual to the ἀντιγέ which formed part of it. For ἐξ there is an old variant ἐξ.

476. (ἡ διπλή) στι καὶ ἐν Ἰλιάδι νῦν τὸ προπάρειθεν ἐπὶ χρόνου τέταχεν, πρόσθεν ἢ ἰδεῖν τὸν Διομήδην, οὐχ ὡς οἱ χωρίζοντες ἐν Ὀδυσσειᾳ μόνον, ἐν Ἰλιάδι δὲ τοπικῶς. Ariston. This is one of the most interesting of the few recorded arguments of the Chozizontes which we possess. As a matter of fact there are other passages in the Iliad in which προπάρειθε is apparently used in a temporal, not a local sense: Λ 734, X 197.

478. πίφασκε: the long ι occurs only here in thesi.

479. πρόφερε, put forth; cf. ἐρίδα προφέρονται Γ 7, and § 92.

480. μέλεον, idle, useless. II 336. These two lines are closely paraphrased in the Rhesos, 622-3—

Διόμηδες, ἡ σὺ κτεῖνε Θρήκιον λεῶν, ἡ μοὶ πάρες γε σοὶ δὲ χρὴ πῶλους μέλειν.

485. ἀσημάντοισιν, unguarded; compare σημάντωρ = shepherd; O 325.

487. ἐπώχετο, attacked, used especially of a god, cf. A 50, 383, Ω 759, etc., as we use "to visit," with almost the same connotation; cf. E 330, O 279, where, as here, heroes attack with a special inspiration of divine courage and strength. The word is not used anywhere of a merely human assault.

489. For the construction of this couplet cf. B 188-9. Did. mentions a variant πλῆξασκε.

493. For ἀμβάλνοντας, Cobet conj. ἐμβάλνοντας (M. C. p. 351), not without reason: cf. λᾶξ ἐν στήθεσι βάς Z 65, etc. ἀθήεσσον, not only ἀπαξ λεγόμενον, but the only instance of a verb in -εσσω making -εσσω instead of -ειω (Curt. Vb. i. 368). From the Schol. on E 231 it appears that there was a variant αὐτῶν (sc. Ὀδυσῆα), but this use of the acc. is not defensible. αὐτῶν is quite ambiguous: it may mean either "they were not used to corpses," having only just reached the seat of war; or "they were not used to Odysseus and Diomedes" as charioteers, cf. E 231; or again it might mean "O. and D. had no experience of the horses." In any case the use of αὐτῶν in the weak sense, "them," is suspicious; Hoogvliet conj. ἀθήεσσον γὰρ αὐτῆς.

496. The idea seems to be that Rhesos is breathing heavily under the influence of an ominous dream which has actually appeared to him, but fails to save him. But κακὸν ὄναρ was taken to mean in irony Diomedes, not an actual dream, by some rhapsode, who, in order to explain his idea, interpolated the next line. This was accordingly athetized by Ar. and omitted by Zen. and Aristophanes, with justice. The acc. τὴν νύκτα is wrong, for the sense required is not "all night through," but "in the night." It has been remarked also that Homer is true to nature in making those only appear in dreams who are known to the sleeper, which would not be the case here. Οἰνεΐδης is Tydeus, E 818.

499. ἥειρεν, cf. O 680 πύρρας συναίρεται ἵππους (vulg. συναίρεται, but see Cobet, M. C. p. 326, and the scholion of Porphyrios there quoted), and the forms παρήγορος, ξυνωρίς, etc., which prove the existence of αἰρω = to join, though it is probably distinct from αἰρω to raise. It would seem to be a by-form of εἰρω, and both must come from a root σfer, though εἰρω shews no trace of the F. (The views of Curtius in Et. 5 no. 518, and Vb. i. 117, seem to be contradictory and unsatisfactory. Sittl's conj. ap. Christ, σὺν δ' ἱμασὶν ἐ(F)ειρεν, does not account for the other forms.)

501. Odysseus, like another islander, Aias, never fights from a chariot, and hence, perhaps, forgets the whip.

502. ροίζησεν, cf. ι 315 πολλῇ ροίζῃ, and II 361. πιφαύσκων, as a signal.

αὐτὰρ ὁ μερμήριζε μένων, ὃ τι κύντατον ἔρδοι,

504. ἢ . . . ἢ . . . ἢ, the (indirect) question is only double, not treble: the second ἢ being subordinate to the first, i.e. ἐξερύοι καὶ ἐκφέροι are only two variations of the main alternative given by δίφρον ἐλών. For another instance of the lightness of the Homeric chariot see Θ 441, though there the wheels are possibly separated from the car, which cannot be the case here.

506. τῶν is an “article of contrast, more Thracians instead,” Mr. Monro, cf. H. G. § 260.

510. πεφοβημένος “in full flight,” in accordance with the usual Homeric use of the word. The second μὴ (511) implies fear, and is not so closely connected with νόστου μνήσαι as the first μὴ, which is virtually final. Cf. H. G. 278 (b). The distinction is however only one of the closeness of the connexion of thought: the two uses are originally identical. In any case Naber's conj. ἦν που (as τ 83) is quite needless.

513. ἵππων, sc. chariot. Of the two alternatives in 505-6, the second is forbidden, and it is not necessary to say more fully that the first is taken. There is no need whatever to assume that the two ride on horseback; such a practice is known to Homer (O 679, ε 371), but is mentioned only in similes, and never attributed to any hero; the expressions in the following lines (527-8, 541) are those regularly used of riding in a chariot. Besides, the plural ἵππων would be very awkward if used of a single hero riding: it could only mean “one of the horses.”

515. This line recurs in N 10, Ξ 135, θ 285. ἀλαὸς σκοπιῇν is the reading of A and Ar.: the rest of the MSS. give δλασσοκπιῇν, Zen. read δλαδὸν σκοπιῇν. It must be admitted that the phrase is almost comically inappropriate here.

516. μαθήπουσαν, keeping in hand, managing, directing; a sense derived immediately from that of handling, which seems to be the original signification of ἔπειν in Greek (see on Z 321). The active does not seem ever to mean “accompany,” which is the only use of the middle in H.; see Journ. Phil. xiv. 237.

521. For φονῇσι, “carnage,” “gore,” cf. O 633, and ἀνθρώπων νεκρόεσσι E 886.

531. This line is omitted by the best MSS. (AC Townl.): it is a very inappropriate interpolation from A 520, for there is no reason why the Thracian horses should be pleased to go to the Greek camp.

534 = δ 140; Zen. omitted it here. Of course it means “shall I be wrong or right in what I am about to say?”

537. ἄδε, “hither.” This sense of ὦδε in H. was denied by Ar. (see Lehrs, Ar. 70, 379), but is much more natural than the alternative, “thus” (as I hope). Cf. M 346. ἐλασαίατο, the middle is chiefly used of driving home spoil (A 674, 682, ν 51, δ 637). It thus adds a distinct idea to that which would be given by ἐλάσειαν.

538. μετὰ φρεσὶ and ἄριστοι were read by Ar. for the κατὰ φρένα and οἱ ἄριστοι of MSS.

540. For the phrase in this line cf. π 11, 351.

544. πολύαιν, see on I 673; and for λάβητον in the next line Θ 448. Zen. λάβητην, and in 546 σφῶ, against the rule of Ar. that the orthotone form belongs only to the second person, as in 552.

547. The nom. ἐοικότες is interjectional, see 437 and H. G. § 163.

νύψεν ἀπὸ χρωτὸς καὶ ἀνέψυχθεν φίλον ἦτορ, 575

556. Cf. ῥεῖα θεός γ' ἐθέλων καὶ τηλόθεν ἀνδρα σῶσαι γ 231. Cf. H. G. § 299 f. ἐπεὶ ἡ πολὺ φέρτεροί εἰσιν recurs in χ 289, and is there appropriate; here there is nothing with which the gods are to be compared. ἥε περ οἶδε, sc. εἰσιν, an unusual construction instead of τούσδε.

561. τρискаίδεκατον follows δυοκαίδεκα in natural sequence, though Rheseos, who has been already mentioned, is the thirteenth. The variant τετρακαίδεκα of which Aristonikos speaks, is evidently a mere conjecture to evade this small difficulty.

568. Διομήδεος, because Odysseus has no steeds; see on 500.

571. ἔφρα, until. They were perhaps laid aside as a sort of pledge to the goddess of the performance of the vow in 292. It is not clear whether the arms themselves are to be consecrated, though 460 may imply this; in that case it would seem that the dedication was to accompany the solemn sacrifice. But such a practice seems to be later than the Homeric poems, to which the idea of "trophies" properly so called is unknown.

572. Cf. A 621 for the practice of washing off sweat in sea-water. There was probably in Homeric times, as in the present day, a prevalent idea that "sea-water never gives a cold," however hot one goes in: but that it is necessary to be cool before taking a fresh-water bath. Hence the proper precaution is taken before the luxury of the δσάμυθος. The lengthening of the ε of ἀπενίζοντο is due to the ictus, aided perhaps by the analogy of other words where initial ν represents an older σπ (νύξ, νιφάς, etc.), which is not the case here.

ἔς ῥ' ἀσαμίνθους βάντες ἐυξέστας λούσαντο.

 δείπνῳ ἐφίζανέτην, ἀπὸ δὲ κρητῆρος Ἀθήνη πλείου ἀφυσσόμενοι λείβον μελιγδέα οἶνον.

576. The ἀσαμίνθος does not reappear in the Iliad, and hardly formed part of a camp-equipage. This couplet is purely Odyssean, v. δ 48, ρ 87, ζ 96.

577. λίπ', the full form is never found; it is probably an old instrum. λίπα for λίπεσα (cf. σάφα for σάφεσα); "an adverb related to λιπαρός, as κάρτα to καρτερός, λίγα to λιγυρός, etc., meaning 'richly,' 'thickly'" (Mr. Monro).

578. It has been remarked that this is the third δείπνῳ which Odysseus has enjoyed during the course of this one night; see I 90, 221. Ar. suggests that it is a breakfast rather than a supper.

579. Cf. Γ 295. Here, as there, Ar. (with A) justly preferred the present participle to the ἀφυσσόμενοι of the majority of MSS.

Α

The story of the main part of this book is, on almost any theory of the composition of the Iliad, an integral part of the original plot. The defeat of the Greeks, followed by the first sign of relenting in Achilles, forms the turning point of the tale of the Mênis, and is the foundation of the dramatic interest of the poem.

On the theory adopted in the introductions to the preceding books, Α will immediately follow the dream-scene in Β. It is clear that the first few lines will not fit on exactly to any point of Β; and it is indeed possible, or even probable, that the exact juncture may have been lost in the long interpolation, or rather series of interpolations, to which the preceding nine books belong. It is possible however that l. 17 may immediately follow Agamemnon's waking in Β 41. Another and preferable suggestion (Fick's) is that the array of the Greek army in Β may be part of the original poem, Β 443 taking the place of Β 51 by the change of a single word. We shall then have to join Α to Β 483. Now Α 56 is excellently suited for this purpose, as is shewn in the note to that passage. Β 477-483 seem expressly designed to introduce the ἀριστεία of Agamemnon which forms the first part of Α and gives its name to the whole book.

After 56 the narrative proceeds without flagging or offence of any sort till near the end of the book, if we except one or two passages of trifling compass which can easily be omitted (see notes on 78, 498, 522).

In Nestor's speech to Patroklos, however, we find a long passage (665-762) which is one of the clearest cases of interpolation in the Iliad. It is singularly out of place at the moment when Patroklos has refused even to sit down, owing to the urgency of his mission; and it has no apparent connexion whatever with the message which Nestor is so anxious to send to Achilles. It is moreover full of words and expressions elsewhere peculiar to the Odyssey, and in one passage seems to shew clear evidence of a knowledge of the Catalogue. We need not therefore hesitate to class it among the additions designed to glorify Nestor, which so often disfigure the old man's speeches.

With regard to the closing scene of the book, that between Patroklos and Eurypylos, the case is not quite so clear. It is generally held by the more advanced critics that this is merely designed to account for the long interval before the return of Patroklos to Achilles, which was involved in the interpolation of the four books (M-O) containing the τειχομαχία. This is possible; but as in the original poem there must have been some τειχομαχία (or rather ἐπὶ ναυοὶ μάχη, as the wall may be a later interpolation), a slight delay on the part of Patroklos may still have been needed. There are no great linguistic difficulties to convince us of the late origin of the passage; and as to the mere lingering of Patroklos on his way back to Achilles, it is at least not inconsistent with the character of the "kindly" hero that he should think the assistance which he could give to his wounded friend more material than the loss of a few minutes in delivering his message. As the Iliad now stands, that he should stay with Eurypylos during the whole of a long and varied battle without endeavouring to arouse Achilles, as he hopes to do successfully, is indeed a serious blemish in the plot. But, as we shall see, the Teichomachy was once in all probability of short compass, and nothing therefore compels us to eject this scene from the oldest form of the Mῆνις poem.

1-2 = ε 1-2. Tithonos is mentioned again in T 237 as brother of Priam, but there is no mention in Homer of the legend of his eternal youth, which first appears in Hymn. Ven. 219-239.

4. What the πολλοῖο τέρας, which Eris holds in her hands, may be, we cannot say. The rainbow is called a τέρας in I. 28 and P 548; but when Homer personifies this it is in the form of the goddess Iris, not of a thing which can be held in the hand. Others explain it as the thunderbolt, comparing K 8. A more likely object is the aegis of Zeus, see E 742.

5-9 = Θ 222-6, where they are better in place than here.

11. ὄρβια, the war-cry, comes in awkwardly after μέγα τε δεινὸν τε, and is an Attic rather than an Epic use. It is found in Hymn. Cer. 20, and (in the singular) twice in Pindar; otherwise it seems to be almost confined to Attic. Observe the F of Ἐκδύσσω neglected. The rest of the line and 12 = Ξ 151-2.

13-14 = B 453-4; they are clearly out of place here, where there is no question of returning home at all. Aristophanes and Aristarchos obelized, and Zenodotos entirely omitted, the couplet.

16. See B 578; 17-19 = Γ 330-2.

20. Kinyras was a legendary hero of Cyprus, the ancestor of the priestly caste of the Kinyradae; originally he was no doubt a local (Phoenician?) deity. He was said to have introduced the worship of Aphrodite into Paphos, and was famed for his wealth (see Pindar, N. viii. 18).

21. Κύπρονδε, a pregnant expression, the idea of sound coming to a place being involved in its being heard there. Cf. τηλόεε ἐκλυεν, Δ 455.

οὔνεκα, "that," expressing the content of the fame he heard. This use is not found again in the Iliad, but cf. ε 216, η 300, and several other passages in Od. We can only give it the primitive meaning "because" (as 54, A 11, etc.), if with Christ we join it with δῶκε in the preceding line, putting a comma after εἶναι and taking πύθρο . . . κλέος as a parenthesis.

22. ἀναπλεύσεσθαι, ἀνα- implies "out to sea," as ἀτήγαγεν Z 292.

24. The breastplate of Agamemnon is a piece of inlaid work like the swords found by Dr. Schliemann at Mykenai. It is explained at length by Helbig, H. E. 282-8. He shows that breastplate and backplate of the cuirass have each twenty-one stripes (οἰμοὶ) of inlaid metal, gold and kyanos coming alternately, and being separated by stripes of tin or white metal, thus—g t k t g t k t, where g = gold, t = tin, k = kyanos. Assuming the outer stripe on each side to be of gold, this naturally gives the number required. On front and back (ἐκάτερθε) there were further added three snakes coiling upwards; a favourite decoration of archaic times. κύανος was first shewn by Lepsius to be ultramarine (lapis lazuli), or rather an imitation of it by glass stained blue with compounds of copper. For this artificial imitation the island of Cyprus, the home of copper, was famous. See Helbig, H. E. 79 ff. Since the publication of Helbig's book the theory of Lepsius has received a striking confirmation from Dr. Schliemann's discovery at Tiryns of a frieze ornamented with this blue glass, the very θρυγὸς κυάνοιο of η 87. μέλανος can mean no more than "dark."

27. The likeness of the snakes to rain-bows must lie in their curved shapes rather than in any similarity of colour.

28. See 4, P 548. The genitive ἀνθρώπων is curious, as we should have expected a dative; but cf. ἀνθρώπων ταμίη πολέμοιο, Δ 84. It seems to be a sort of ablative use, "from the side of men," i.e. in their eyes. See H. G. § 147.

29. ἦλοι, nails by which the blade was fastened to the handle: Helbig, H. E. 238-9. Compare ἀργυρόηλον, B 45.

31. The ἀορτήρ (else only in Od.) is identical with the τελαμών, the baldric or strap by which the sword was hung over the shoulder. χρυσεόισιν, because the hero must have everything of the most precious substance, even where ordinary men use leather. See on E 723.

32. θούριν is to our ideas a curious epithet for so passive a piece of armour as the shield. But it was here that, to a Greek, the "point of honour" lay; so that the shield might be taken to personify the martial fury of its bearer. See J. H. S. iv. 282.

33. The κύκλοι are probably the concentric circles inside the shield, forming with the ῥάβδοι (M 297) a framework like a spider's web on which the hides (not here named) were fastened (J. H. S. iv. 286). These too are of metal, though for meaner mortals they would doubtless be of wood.

34. The twenty ὀμφαλοὶ of white metal are to be regarded as running round the edge of the shield, and forming the heads of the nails by which the metal face of the shield is fastened to the hides beneath (ibid. 289).

35. ἦν, there was one. For the central boss see Helbig, H. E. 226. It seems most natural to suppose that the Gorgon's head was in some way painted upon this, as otherwise the two would interfere with one another. In that case we ought to have τῷ for τῇ in the next line. The last syllable of λευκοῖ remains long in spite of the following vowel, because of the diaeresis at the end of the first foot. The bucolic diaeresis seems equally to explain the lengthening of the last syllable of βλοσυρῶπις in the next line: see E 484, and ἦν, γ 382. Perhaps we should read λευκοῖ for λευκοῖο.

36. For the word ἐστεφάνωτο compare E 739-741 and Σ 485, τὰ τελεῖα πάντα τὰ τ' οὐρανὸς ἐστεφάνωται.

37. Pausanias, in his description of the chest of Kypselos (v. 19, 4), shews us how the Greeks of the seventh century conceived the personified Φόβος on this very shield; the scene represented is the fight of Agamemnon and Koon over Iphidamas (see below, 248-260): Φόβος δὲ ἐπὶ τοῦ Ἀγαμέμνονος τῇ ἀσπίδι ἔπεστιν, ἔχων τὴν κεφαλὴν λέοντος. ἐπιγράμματα δὲ ὑπὲρ μὲν τοῦ Ἰφιδάμαντος νεκροῦ, Ἰφιδάμας οὐτός γε, Κῶν περιμάρναται αὐτοῦ.

τοῦ Ἀγαμέμνονος δὲ ἐπὶ τῇ ἀσπίδι, οὐτός μὲν Φόβος ἐστὶ βροτῶν, ὃ δ' ἔχων Ἀγαμέμνων.

39. ἑλέλικτο, i.e. FeFélikto (see A 530, etc.) "twined." A baldrick of silver with a glass decoration is clearly derived from the imagination, not from daily life.

40. ἀμφιστρεφέες seems to mean that the two heads at the sides are twisted symmetrically about the third in the middle.

41 = E 743, q.v.

45. ἐγδοῦπησαν, only here; cf. ἐρί-γδοπος. Apparently γδοπος (= δούπος) is a weakened form of κύπος (Curtius, Et. p. 698). The verb evidently means "thundered," though elsewhere this is the prerogative of Zeus alone.

47-9 = M 84-5, 77. πρυλῆες, see E 744. The word here clearly means "footmen" as opposed to ἱππῆες.

50. ῥῶοντο, moved nimbly; so Σ 411, κῆμαι ῥῶοντο ἀραιά. ἡῶθι πρό, before the face of the morning; cf. οὐρανόθι πρό Γ 3. The ἀσβεστος βοῇ is a marked departure from the Homeric conception of the silent march of the Greek (Γ 8, Δ 429).

51. φθάν, here only, cf. σπᾶν, 216. ἱππήων here = charioteers, which is not the usual sense of the word. The gen. is one of comparison, due to the idea "before" in φθάνειν. So φθάνειν ἦ, Ψ 444. How μέγα in this line is to be reconciled with ἄλλων in the next it is hard to see. The passage from 47 to 55 looks much like the work of the military but unskilful diaskeuast who appears so often to have put untimely tactical instruction in the mouth of Nestor. (See on A 303, etc.) 55 = A 3, so that four out of these nine lines may be borrowed.

54. A blood-red rain occasionally occurs among the portents of the Roman annals.

56. With this line at last we seem to be again in the original stream of the oldest part of the poem; it describes the first array of the Trojans for battle after the retirement of Achilles. The phrase θρωσμός πεδίῳ thus gains in significance; it means the point where the plain springs or rises to the hills; i.e. the foot of the hill on which Troy is built. This evidently must be the place where the army is set in order for battle. But when Θ had been interpolated, and the Trojans were bivouacking ἀγχι νεῶν, the sense of the phrase was lost. Hence the still later rhapsodists to whom we owe K 160 and T 3—the only repetitions of the phrase—took it to mean "rising ground in the plain," somewhere near the camp. But this is not like Homer; where he has to speak of a locality in the plain, he gives it a specific name, "the tomb of Ἴλος," "the mound called Batiēia," or at least "the oak." But here there is nothing whatever to specify the locality unless it be taken to mean "the margin of the plain." We might as well suppose, if we found such a phrase as πεδίῳ πείρατα, that it meant "the end (of something) in the plain." Τρῶες, in the course of the long clause following, is left without a verb; but we can easily supply κόσμηθεν, ὠπλίζοντο, or the like, from the general sense of the preceding passage. This is still easier if we suppose with Fick that B 444, οἱ μὲν ἐκήρυσσον, τοὶ δ' ἠγείροντο μάλ' ὧκα, originally preceded at the distance of only a few lines. Friedländer has conjectured αὐ κόσμηθεν for αὐθ' ἐτέρωθεν, but this is at least unnecessary.

58. Both Τρωσὶ and δῆμψ seem to be used in a locative sense, "among the Trojans in their land." For the hyperbolical θεὸς ὧς see E 78.

62. οὐλῖος = deadly, a by-form of οὔλος; not recurring in Homer. We find however οὐλῖος "Ἀρης twice in the Scut. Heraclis, and so Pindar (O. ix. 76, xiii. 23, P. xii. 8), and Soph. Aj. 933. The deadly star must be Seirios, see X 30, κακὸν δὲ τε σῆμα τέτυκται, καὶ τε φέρει πολλὸν πυρετὸν δειλοῖσι βροτοῖσι. The comparison of Hector to Seirios may imply therefore both brightness and terror; though it may be observed that the season when "the dog-star brings fever" is when it rises with the sun and is therefore invisible. It was perhaps this which gave rise to a curious variant mentioned by Aristonikos, αἰλῖος, δ' ἐστὶν ἐσπέριος, πρὸς δὲ αὐλίζεται τὰ ζῷα. He quotes Kallimachos, αἰλῖος δς δυθμῆν εἰσι μετ' ἡελίου, and so Apoll. Rhod. iv. 1623, ἀνὰ δ' ἤλυθεν ἀστήρ αἰλῖος, δς τ' ἀνέπαιυσεν ἀνδρῶν ἀροτῆρας. Cf. also ἐπιφάντιος· δ' ἐωσφόρος ἀστήρ, Hesych. It has even been proposed to translate οὐλῖος as = οὔλος in the sense "hairy," i.e. a comet; but this would require an epithet implying length of hair, whereas οὔλος signifies curliness.

67. The idea evidently is that the reapers start at the two ends of a field and meet in the middle.

68. δαίνων is used as often of carrying out long things in a line, as with τείχος, τάφρον, ἔρκος, etc. Compare the picture of the reapers in Σ 550-560. μάκαρος, α 217 ὡς δὴ ἐγὼ γ' ὄφελον μάκαρος νύ τευ ἔμμεναι νύδς ἀνέρος, "wealthy," or rather "powerful, exalted," if, as Curtius thinks, it is conn. with μακρός (Et. no. 90, p. 161). It indicates a chieftain who has a τέμενος of his own apart from the common field, and cultivates it by means of hired labourers. The word is almost always applied to gods; in the few other passages where it is used of men it indicates the very height of human happiness (Γ 182, Ω 377, ζ 158, λ 483, ε 306).

69. κριθέων, MSS. κριθῶν, but according to the tradition the contracted form of these fem. genitives is written only when preceded by a vowel. The gen. goes with ὄγμον.

72. The idea seems to be that the contest holds the heads of both parties on a level, does not suffer either to go down before the other. Ameis thinks that the ὑσμίνη is personified as a two-headed monster, but this is hardly likely. MSS. all read ὄσμινῃ and ἔχον, but the text, which is the reading of Ar., is clearly preferable, as οἱ δὲ would be awkward if there were no change of subject.

75-7. Lachmann rejected these lines, and other critics after him have condemned the three preceding as well, on the ground that they are inconsistent with the action of Here and Athene in 45. But the objection should rather be made to 45-6, which, as we have seen, are unusual in expression and thought.

76. οἷσιν, so Brugman with three MSS. and a variant in A, vulg. σφοῖσιν. The possessive οἷς = οἷων, and can be used with any person. See note on A 393.

78-83 were athetized by Aristophanes and Ar., and omitted by Zenod., ὅτι ψεύδης: of course the divine allies of Troy would not blame Zeus for giving their side victory, so that πάντες cannot be right. Besides it seems that Zeus is still in Olympos, whence the battle-field is invisible; he goes to Ida to look on only in l. 183.

84-5 = Θ 66-7. μάλα goes with ἤπτετο, "hit amain."

86. περ must go with ἦμος. For δειπνον Zenod. read δόρυον, which, as Ar. pointed out, meant the meal when the day's work was over, whereas δειπνον is the morning meal, commonly taken before a battle, B 381, T 171. So in 311 the Kyklops takes his δειπνον before driving the sheep to pasture. It may thus indicate a time considerably before noon; a woodman who only took two full meals a day would hardly wait so long before being tired. ἀέξετο indicates the early morning, while the day rapidly and sensibly grows hotter. Hence we may suppose the hour indicated to be about nine or ten. We reach noon only in II 777.

88. ἄδος occurs only here; for the ἄ compare ἄδην N 315, T 423, etc., with note on E 203 (the tradition as to the breathing is inconsistent). Thus there is no reason to read μάκρ', ἄδος (or ἄδδος) with Christ and others.

94. ὃ γα, Oileus. κατεπάλμενος, leaping down from the chariot against Agamemnon.

96. στεφάνῃ, see on H 12.

98. πεπάλακτο, was spattered over the inside of the helmet. Apollonios rejected this line, reading ἐγκέφαλόνδε in the preceding.

100. All MSS. and Ar. read περιδυσσε χιτώνας: but as it is impossible to make sense of this, I have adopted the ancient variant κλυτὰ τεύχε' ἀπήνυρα mentioned by Aristonikos as occurring "in some copies." στηθεσι παμφαίνοντας is no doubt an ironical allusion to the common phrase τεύχεσι παμφ., and forms a sort of oxymoron, "brilliant with—bare breasts." (So Schneidewin.) Ar. however took παμφ. with χιτώνας, and explained "where he had stripped off the coats of mail glittering on their breasts." For this sense of χιτών we might compare χαλκοχιτώνες, and see B 416, N 439. But the order of words is not Homeric. Besides περιδυσσε cannot possibly mean "stripped off," if it has anything to do with the ordinary verb δύνω to put on. The compound does not recur till quite late writers (Appianus, Josephus, Athenaeus), whose use of it is evidently founded on the present passage. Povelzen has been bold enough to give the proper meaning to the verb, and explain that Agamemnon puts on the armour of the dead men, in order to carry it away conveniently! περιδυσσε must, it would seem, represent a corruption of some forgotten word, now hopelessly lost.

101. βῆ Ἴσον, so Zenod.; Ar. and MSS. βῆ ῥ' Ἴσον: but the name is no doubt connected with the adj. Ἴσιος, so that Zenod. has preserved the older tradition. There was a variant Βήρσον (with ἐξεναρίζων).

103. ἔόντε, so Aristophanes; Ar. and MSS. ἔοντας. The hiatus is normal in this place, but will account for the reading ἔοντας, while the other would not be likely to be introduced if not original.

104. αἶ, here a conjunction, "but," answering μέν: 145, P 478, etc. παρέβασκε, was παραβάτης, the fighting man beside the charioteer. For δ Zen. read δν, so that he must also have read ε for σφε in 111.

105. δίδη, from διδήμι, an old form of δέω, so διδέντων, μ 54. μόσχοισι appears to be an adj. = young, afterwards specialized as a substantive, "the young" of the cow = calf, or of plants = young shoot. But we might take it as a substantive in apposition with λύγοισι, "with young shoots, even willow withies"; cf. οὐς κάπρος, etc.

106. ἀποίνων, gen. of price, H. G. § 153.

109. αἶ as 104. παρὰ οὖς: the hiatus can hardly be right. Curtius suggests παρ' οὐς (δφας), Fick παρὰ οὐας ἐλασέ τε, ἐκ τ' ἔβαλ' ἵππων, on the ground that οὐας is the Homeric form.

111. γυγνώσκων, "recognizing them," explained by what follows.

115. ἦτορ, "breath," see B 490. σφ' of course is σφε, accus. as 111.

120. χραισμήσαι has the construction of ἀμύνειν, cf. A 567.

123. μάλιστα goes with οὐκ εἶασκε, chiefly dissuaded; 124 being a parenthesis.

124. δεδεγμένος, according to the Homeric use, must mean "expecting," not "having received." Cf. Δ 107, etc.

126. δύο παῖδε resumes the main construction from 122 after the parenthesis.

127. ὁμοῦ δ' ἔχον seems to mean “they were both trying to drive,” i.e. the charioteer had lost command of the horses and the παραβάτης was trying to help him get them under control, as is explained by the γάρ in 128. So Schol. A. σφεας then really means only one of them, sc. the charioteer who had lost the reins; but the poet is engaged with the picture of the moment in which both are equally concerned, and does not care to express accurately what has gone before. (Others take ὁμοῦ ἔχον to mean “they were accustomed to drive both at once,” and then γάρ 128 must explain λάβε. But apart from the difficulties of such a proceeding, it is hard to see why they should go out to battle at all if neither of them meant to fight.)

129. τὰ δέ, the horses.

130. γουναζέσθην naturally means no more than “besought,” and does not indicate an attitude which could not have been possible in the diminutive car of the Homeric heroes. Cf. γουνούμενος, I 588. With the ordinary reading Ἀτρεΐδης we have a purely spondaic rhythm, cf. φ 15, ο 334, ψ 221. The grammarians called such a line δωδεκάσλλαβος. Nauck however has corrected the last two instances by the introduction of open vowels for diphthongs.

131-135 = Z 46-50. In 132 δόμοις, in spite of the rarity of the short form of the dat. plural, is preferable to πατρός, the reading of Zenod., as there is no other case in H. of the α remaining short before τρ in any of the forms of πατήρ. There was also a variant ἐν ἀφνειοῦ πατρός here as in Z.

137. Cf. φ 98. The contrast of course is between ἀμείλικτον and μελιχίους, “they spake him gently, but heard ungentle answer.”

138. δαίφρονος, Zenod. κακὸφρονος, and so also above, 128.

139. Μενέλαον is of course accus. after κατακτεῖναι.

140. ἀγγελίην ἐλθόντα, when he came on an embassy. See note on Γ 206, and compare ἐξεσίην ἐλθόντι Ω 235.

141. ἐξέμεν (i.e. ἐξέμεν 2 aor. infin. of ἐξίημι), not to let him go.

142. τοῦ πατρός Aristarchos; but Zenod. read οὐ πατρός, “your father,” which is certainly right. See A 393. Another old variant, σφοῦ, is, as Brugman remarks, an attempt either to mend the metre, or more probably to “correct” at least the number, if not the person, of the pronoun.

144. For οὔδεις ἐρείσθη (lit. “was supported by,” i.e. lay upon the earth), Arist. read οὔδας ἐπείσθη, pressed the earth: which may be supported by N 131, II 215 ἀσπίς ἀρ' ἀσπίδ' ἔπειδε.

145. ἀπόρουσε, leapt down, to escape. τὸν αὖ, but him, see 104. χαμαί, opposed to the death of his brother on the chariot.

147. Compare ἦκε δέ μιν σφαιρηδὸν ἐλίχσασθαι N 204, στρομβὸν δ' ὥς ἔσσευε Z 413. ὄλμος is explained by Schol. as κοῖλος λίθος εἰς ὃν κόπτουσιν ὀσπρία (pulse) καὶ ἄλλα τινά, i.e. a mortar. The headless and armless trunk he "sent rolling" with a kick, like a round block of stone.

150-154 are very suspicious lines. We must regard ἐπὶ . . . ἵππων as a parenthesis, and join δηιόντες with ἵππεῖς instead of πόδες, which is very awkward. The rhythm of 154, where the line is equally divided by a stop, is un-Homeric, the only parallel being I 134. The form ἵππεῖς is not Epic, but Attic, and there is no analogy to it in Homer. Lehrs has conjectured ἵππηες δ' ἵππηας, ὑπὸ σφισι δ' ὠρτο, on the strength of one MS. (D) which reads ἵππηες, without altering the remainder of the line: but the change is doubtful, as there is no visible cause for the corruption. ἐρίγδουπος is elsewhere used only of Zeus, though ἐρίγδουπος occurs in Ω and Od. as an epithet of the αἰθουσα, and in T 50, κ 515, of rivers.

155. Various explanations of ἀξύλος are offered by the Scholia. (1) θρυώδης, i.e. full of undergrowth only, with no timber trees. (2) πολυξύλων, with "a-intensive." (3) "untimbered" in the sense ἀφ' ἧς οὐδεὶς ἐξυλλίστατο, incalculable. The word is used by Herodotos in the sense of "timberless," and it is thus clearly best to adopt (1); this gives additional force to the word θάμνοι in the next line.

157. ἐπειγόμενοι, cf. Φ 362, "assailed."

158. κάρηνα, i.e. persons: a periphrastic use. Cf. 309, and Φ 336.

160. κείν', i.e. κενά, with accent thrown back on account of the apostrophe. πτολέμοιο γεφύρας, see Δ 371.

162. Ironical, "more delightful to the vultures than to their own wives."

163-4. This action of Zeus seems quite out of place here, and inconsistent with his message in 186 sqq. ὑπαγε is used only here in the sense ἀγε ὑπ(ἐκ) βελέων. The two lines seem to be an interpolation intended to account for the absence of Hector at this moment.

166. οἱ δὲ, the Trojans. For the tomb of Ilos see K 415; for the fig-tree Z 433, X 145; for the oak-tree (170) E 693.

168. ἰέμενοι with the gen. like verbs of “desiring” and “aiming”: Ψ 371, 718, etc.; H. G. § 151 c.

169. ἀάπτους, see on A 567.

172. οἱ δὲ, others, i.e. stragglers, opposed to the main body.

173. ἀμολγῷ seems to mean “in the depth of night.” (But see X 317.) The derivation is still doubtful, in spite of numerous conjectures. Perhaps the most probable is Benfey's: he connects it with Slav. mraku, Norse myrks, our murky, all in the sense of darkness. See Curt. Et. p. 568. Others assume a noun *μολγός from the same root, in sense “cloud,” and translate “in the cloudlessness of the night,” i.e. on a cloudless night. But this does not seem sufficiently general. For Buttmann's view see Lexil. s.v.

174. τῇ ἱῇ, cf. II 173, T 272, E 271, ἡ μία v 110, and so the article is used with other numerals almost as a demonstrative, to single out a definite number and contrast them with the larger mass. H. G. § 260 c.

175-6 = P 63-4. 178 = Θ 342.

179-180 seem a very needless repetition of what has already been said several times. πρηνεῖς for πρηνέες is a form which does not occur again. Aristarchos rightly athetized both, while Zenod. altogether omitted 180 as being interpolated from II 699.

183. πιδιήσσης, only here, = πολυπιδάκος.

184. οὐρανόθεν, from the summit of Olympus (which, though H. does not identify it with οὐρανός, still, as a mountain, reached into heaven). ἀστεροπή, a lengthened form of ἀστραπή (cf. N 242, etc.), which seems specially restricted to indicate the thunderbolt as a weapon, not as a flash.

186. τόν, this (which follows): a very unusual use of the demonstrative δ.

187. ἂν . . . κεν, so N 127, Ω 437, and several times in Od. e.g. ε 361.

189. ἀνέχθω, perf. imper.: we have ἀνωγέτω from the aor., β 195.

194. ἱερὸν, perhaps in the primitive sense "strong darkness," cf. A 366; an epithet suggested by the irresistible force with which it drives away the day.

This promise is not fulfilled, for Patroklos utterly routs the Trojans on the same day. These two lines with 208-9 are probably interpolated from P 454-5, where they are more in place, for they are thereafter accomplished to the letter.

200. υἱά, see A 489 for the scansion.

201. τεῖν = σοί, a form which occurs elsewhere only in Od. The form is "Doric," acc. to Schol. A: but this is of course wrong. The ν seems to represent the m of I. E. tu-bhjam (ti-bi), the -bh- being dropped.

202-209 = 187-196, mutatis mutandis.

214. ἐλελίχθησαν, read δὲ Felichthēsan, wheeled round. See A 530.

216. μάχῃ seems to be used here in a concrete sense, as in old English, of the embattled hosts: "the battle was ranged in order," i.e. the lines were re-formed. Cf. M 43, O 303.

 νύξ', ἐπὶ δ' αὐτὸς ἔρεισε βαρεὶν χειρὶ πιθήσας· 235
 οὐδ' ἔτορε ζωστήρα παναίολον, ἀλλὰ πολὺ πρὶν

218. This appeal to the Muses (cf. B 484) fitly introduces what is really the turning point of the poem. For now begins, with the wounding of Agamemnon, the disastrous rout of the Greeks which prevails upon Achilles to relax his anger and send Patroklos to the rescue.

219. ἀντίος, so most MSS., with Zenod. and Aristophanes: Aristarchos ἀντίον. The difference is immaterial.

221. The name is introduced asyndetically, just as in A 8.

222. For μῆλων Zenod. read θηρῶν.

224. μητροπάτωρ: it will be seen that Iphidamas thus married his maternal aunt (as did Diomedes, E 412), the sister of his mother Theano, the priestess of Athene in Troy, and wife of Antenor (Z 298).

225. ἐρικυδέος, because it gives a youth the power of attaining martial glory.

226. αὐτοῦ μιν κατέρυκε, his grandfather tried (imperf.) to keep him at home (lit. there where he was): δῶν, gave him in marriage (for a consideration; see 243-5). The imperf. indicates that δίδου is subordinate, = "by giving" (see H. G. § 71).

227. ἐκ θαλάμοιο, straight from the bridal chamber. μετὰ κλέος Ἀχ., "after the fame of the Achaeans," i.e. he went in the direction whence came the rumour of their expedition, as though to find it out. Cf. I. 21, and N 364.

229. Perkote, a town on the Hellespont in the N. of the Troad. As he came from the E. of Thrace across the Propontis, this would be the nearest point to Troy that he could reach; for the Greeks held the mouth of the Hellespont.

230. πεζὸς ἐὼν (al. ἰών), i.e. by land.

233. Schol. A remarks that this is the only instance in the Iliad of a single combat where the warrior who has the first cast and misses his shot still wins in the end.

234. ζώνη seems here to mean the waist of the cuirass = ζῶμα, Δ 187. θώρηκος ἐνερθεν must then mean "in the lower part of the breastplate," "the genitive being partitive, not ablative." Possibly however ζώνη might = ζωστήρ, as it is always used of a woman's girdle except here, and B 479 where it means the (human) waist. See Helbig, H. E. p. 199.

235. αὐτὸς ἐπέρισε, i.e. he threw the weight of his whole body into the blow, following up his heavy hand.

236. ἔτορε, this form only here: see note on K 267.

 ἄλλ' οὐδ' ὥς ἀπέλγη μάχης ἡδὲ πτολέμοιο, 255

237. μόλιβος, lead, named only here: but cf. μολυβδαίνη Ω 80—both times in similes, not as actually in use, as though the poet were aware that the metal was unknown in the heroic age.

238. τό γε, as though ἔγχος or δόρυ, instead of αἰχμή, had preceded. The spear being thus caught, Ag. is able to grasp it and drag it towards himself out of Iphidamas' hand. μεμαῶς, furious as a lion. Schol. A refers to the legend that wounded lions attempt to tear the spears from the huntsmen's hands.

241. χάλκεον ὕπνον, as though the sleep of death bound a man with bands that he could not break: Vergil's "Ferreus somnus," Aen. x. 745.

242. οἰκτρὸς, an exclamation, like νήπιος, σχέλιος. ἀπὸ, far away. ἀστοῖσιν: he was a Trojan, as the son of Antenor, though he had been brought up in Thrace.

243. κουριδῆς, see A 114. χάριν, he saw no return for the ἔδνα, or price he had paid to the father for his bride. This passage very clearly shews that marriage was a bargain. See I 146. Of course the gifts are not made to the wife, marriage settlements being not yet known. πολλὰ δέ, i.e. although he had paid a large price.

244. πρῶτα, as an immediate payment; ἔπειτα, in instalments from the increase of his herds. Observe χῶμα in neut. agreeing κατὰ σύνεσιν only with βοῦς, αἰγας and δις, perhaps from the general idea of μῆλα which covers all. See on E 140.

248. ἀριδείκετος (except here and Z 320 only in Od.), conspicuous, "exalted among men."

249. πρεσβυγενὴς, therefore the elder brother of Iphidamas.

250. ὀφθαλμοὺς ἐκάλυψε, as though grief threw a mist over his eyes; a metaphor very naturally suggested by rising tears, P 591, Σ 22, etc. κασιγ. πεσόντος, gen. after πένθος.

251. στῆ εὐράξ (O 541), he came up (A 197) from the side. It looks as though εὐράξ were a naval expression, on the "broadside." For the form cf. μουνάξ, θ 371: the termination is perhaps an instrumental form conn. with -άκας of πολλάκας, etc.

252. χεῖρα, the forearm, as often.

253. διέσχε, passed right through. E 100, etc.

256. ἀνεμοτρεφές, "a spear of grain storm-toughened on a windy site," Tennyson. The idea was that the buffeting of the winds strengthened the grain of the wood.

257. ὄπατρον, son of the same father. ὄ- is sa-, together; just like ἀ- δελφός, "of the same womb." So ὄτρικας οἰέτας, B 765. κασίγνητον is a general term covering fraternity on either side, and is specialized by the addition of ὄπατρον.

259. τόν, Koön: οὔτησε, sc. Ἀγαμέμνων.

263. ἔδυν, plur. like ἔβαν, στάν (I. 216), φθάν (51), etc.

264. ἐπεπωλεῖτο, "ranged" in hostile sense. It is also used of a general reviewing his army, Δ 231, etc.

266. "So long as the hot blood still gushed from the wound," before painful inflammation had set in. ἀν-ήνοθ-εν, from ἀνά and ἀνεθ- = ἀνθ-, to sprout, spring forth. Cf. on ἐπενήνοθε, B 219. Curt. Et. no. 304; Buttmann, Lex. p. 133.

267. ἐτέρσεται, began (imperf.) to dry up.

268. ἔ marks the apodosis.

269. βέλος ἔχῃ, metaphorically: "fear took hold upon them and pain as of a woman in travail." Compare also Θ 513 βέλος πέσσειν, in the sense of "wound."

270. μογοστόκοι Εἰλείθυιαι, both words of doubtful origin. The first is generally derived from μύγος, and explained "helping in painful labour." For the σ compare θεῖσ-δοτος, δικασ- πόλος. Fick however refers to the Skt. root magh, to make great, to forward (whence μῆχος, μέγας, etc.), and explains "forwarding childbirth," comparing φηρεσ-βιος. L. Meyer again (C. Stud. v. 95) divides μογο-στόκος, and explains "averting pain," root stak to drive back, to bring to a standstill (secondary of stak). So Brugmann, C. St. ix. 270. If so, the meaning of the word must have been quite forgotten, as the function of the Eileithyiae here is just the opposite.

Εἰλείθυιαι (plur. here and T 119 only; sing. II 187, T 103, τ 188), according to the old explanation "the comers," i.e. the goddesses that come in the hour of need. Fasi explains it as a personification of "the woman's time that is come," comparing ἦλθεν ἡ ὥρα αὐτῆς, John xvi. 21. Fick connects with ἐλεύθερος, to set free; the goddesses that liberate from pangs. The most probable derivation is perhaps that from Feλ, έλώω (= volvo), as if = the Twisters, squeezers, a personification of the writhing pangs.

271. Ἥρης, because she presides over marriage. ἔχουσαι, "having rule over."

272. ὀξεῖ, i.e. ὀξεῖαι, an elision which nowhere else occurs. Bentley conj. ὀξεῖ ὀδίνῃ δίνεν, but it is a question whether this line should not be omitted, a comma being put at the end of 268 and δ' in 269 being omitted. See Cobet, M. C. p. 375.

277. Observe how Agamemnon as usual gives way to despondency at the first reverse, and thinks only of danger to the ships, although he has hitherto been driving the Trojans right up to their city. Cf. I 27, E 65-80.

282. ἄφρεον στήθεα (synizesis in both words), their chests were covered with foam. στήθεα is probably accus.

284. Hector recognizes the moment at which Zeus has promised him victory (191).

288. ὠριστος (= ὁ ὠριστος), cf. ωῖός E 396. μέγα seems to be an adv., “has granted me my desire to the full.”

290. ὑπέρτερον seems to form part of the predicate, “that ye may obtain your boast in victory,” or perhaps “exalted above the boast of the Greeks.” Cf. κῦδος ὑπέρτερον = glory of victory, M 437, O 491. But Ar. read ὑπέρτεροι.

292. πον is nowhere else used in this way in a simile. ἀργιόδοντας is elsewhere used only of boars.

297. ὑπεραεὶ, blowing from on high, cf. ἀκραεὶ, E 253: an expression very natural to men who were accustomed to the sudden squalls which “leap down” upon coasting ships beneath the steep shores of Thrace and the Greek islands. Aristonikos mentions a variant ὑπὲρ οὐραεος.

298. ἰοειδέα, blue (or rather perhaps dark) like violets. The word occurs elsewhere only in Od.

299. For the question, cf. II 692: it ἀλλ' ἄγε δεῦρο, πέπον, παρ' ἔμ' ἵστασο· δὴ γὰρ ἔλεγχος 315 ἔσσεται, εἴ κεν νῆας ἔλῃ κορυθαίολος Ἐκτωρ.”

 τὸν δ' ἀπαμειβόμενος προσέφη κρατερὸς Διομήδης· “ἦ τοι ἐγὼ μενέω καὶ τλήσομαι· ἀλλὰ μίνυνθα

 Τρῶσιν δὴ βόλεται δοῦναι κράτος ἥε περ ἡμῖν.”
 ἦ καὶ Θυμβραῖον μὲν ἀφ' ἵππων ὥσε χαμάζε 320 is a rhetorical figure analogous to the apostrophe of 218, and indicates that such a vast number were slain that it is no easy matter to name them.

306. Νότοιο is genit. after νέφεα, the clouds brought by the south wind. Cf. κύματα παντοίων ἀνέμων, B 397. ἀργεστᾶο, as φ 334. From its use here it may perhaps mean “bringing bright white clouds:” it can hardly be compared with the albus notus of Horace which deterget nubila caelo. τύπτων, “lashing them with dense hurricane.” βαθεῖη perhaps means “far-extending,” reaching from earth to sky. But Nauck conj. βαπεῖη.

307. τροφί, big; lit. nourished to full size. So τροφέοντα O 621, γ 290 (where Ls. R. would read τροφέοντο as if = τρέφοντο): compare Lat. altus from alo. πολλόν is predicative, in multitudes.

308. πολύπλαγκτος occurs elsewhere only in Od. of wanderers tossed about from shore to shore. Here it may be transitive, “scattering”; the “wandering wind” is hardly a Homeric thought. ἰωῆς, Δ 276. καρήατα, like κάρηνα, 158.

310. This line gives an expanded form of the idiomatic λοιγία ἔργα A 518, etc.

311. Cf. I 235: the phrase πέσον is here clearly used of the fugitives, not of the assailants.

313. τί παθόντε, “what has come upon us that we have forgotten!” The expression looks rather like an Atticism, and seems to recur only in the probably post-Homeric ω 106.

314. πέπον, see I 252. παρ' ἔμ' ἵστασο, come and stand by my side.

317. μίνυνθα, “only for a little while will there be any profit of us,” i.e. we shall not be able to give any lasting pleasure to our friends. (So Fäsi, comparing Σ 80 ἀλλὰ τί μοι τῶν ἡδῶς, ἐπελ, κ.τ.λ. So A 576, etc. ἦδος occurs only in this phrase with ἐπελ.)

319. βόλεται (α 234, π 387), a form occurring only here in Il. The root βολ- is used to form the present stem (just like Lat. vol-o) without the usual strengthening (βούλομαι for βόλ-ν-ομαι, acc. to Curtius, Vb. i. 250). The verb is followed by ἥε because it expresses preference: see A 117, γ 232.

322. τοῖο ἀνακτος, so γ 388, φ 62: of him, the lord. Compare τοῖο γέροντος I 469, and H. G. § 261, 3 (1).

324. κυδοίμεον, made havoc of it; the word is transitive in O 136.

326. πάλιν ὀρμένω, charging back (from flight). Aristarchos read παλινωρμένω in one word; and so A. Cf. A 59, παλινπαλαγγθέντας.

327. The order of the words is ἀσπ. ἀνέπνεον, φεύγ. Ἑκτορα.

328. ἐλέτην is applied to δίφρον and ἀνέρε by a sort of Zeugma: captured the chariot and slew the warriors. The latter is the regular use of αἰρέω in battle scenes, the notion of catching, capturing passing into that of overcoming, and that again into slaying. δῆμον ἀρίστω, chiefs in their local community, Apaisos, as we see from B 828-834 (δῆμον Ἀπαισοῦ), where their names, Adrestos and Amphios, are given, and 329-332 are repeated.

334. κεκαδὼν, having deprived them, cf. κεκαθήσει, φ 153: a word of doubtful etymology. Curtius refers to κήδω, "to hurt" (Et. no. 284), but this does not suit the sense. Like κεκᾶδοντο (Δ 497, q. v.) it belongs to root skad to separate, whence also χάζω, the s having in the latter case produced aspiration of the k, while in the former it has simply disappeared.

336. κατὰ Ἴσα μάχην ἐτάνυσσε, see on H 102.

339. οὐδὲ οἱ ἵπποι, so Bentley, with one MS.; cael. οὐ γὰρ οἱ ἵπποι, while A gives as a variant οὐδὲ γὰρ ἵπποι, which may be right, but looks more like a combination of the other two readings. The F of F_{oi} cannot be neglected.

340. ἀάσατο here indicates only extreme folly, without connotation of moral offence; unless indeed it be implied that his joining the πρόμαχοι was an act of culpable presumption.

τὸν δὲ ἰδὼν ῥίγησε βοὴν ἀγαθὸς Διομήδης, 345

347. πῆμα, “this bane;” so νέφος is applied, by a sort of personification, to Hector, P 243. κυλίνδεται, like a wave.

348. στέωμεν, by metathesis of quantity for στήομεν. Possibly we should read στάομεν, though the shortening of the α is doubtful.

350. οὐδ' . . . κεφαλῇφιν is parenthetical. κεφαλῇφιν appears to represent a genitive, the regular case after verbs of aiming. So χαλκόφι in the next line. Possibly however they may both be locatives, e.g. ἀπὸ χαλκόφι = “from on the bronze;” there is no reason why, in old Greek, this case may not have been used with ἀπό, πρό, etc. All the forms in -φι quoted under the heading of “Ablative” in H. G. § 156, except ε 152 and N 700, have a locative sense, the ablative notion being given by the prepositions. Possibly therefore all the instances of this case-ending should be reduced to the two headings of Instrumental and Locative, with the exception of a few “false archaisms.” See H. G. § 158, note.

353. τρίπτυχος: perhaps, like the cap in K 261, it is of leather, with a felt lining inside, and the metal covering without. αὐλῶπις, τρυφάλεια, see E 182.

354. ἀπέλεθρον, an unmeasured, i.e. very great, distance; as in ὅ' ἀπέλεθρον ἔχωρτας E 245, etc. There is a variant in one MS. ὦκα πέλεθρον, and so Tzetzes took the words. This is preferred by Mr. Ridgeway (J. H. S. vi. 325) on the ground that the πέλεθρον is properly a measure of distance; and that it became a measure of area only in combination with the unit “furrow-length” (see on K 351), as representing the unit distance between the οὐρα, i.e. the breadth of a piece of ground which a team could plough in a day's work. This suits the other passages (Φ 407, λ 577) in which πέλεθρον occurs; in both of these it is better to take it as a measure of length than as one of area. But this is not sufficient to overthrow the best tradition here, which is quite intelligible.

355-6 = E 309-10; the second line was athetized by Ar. and Aristophanes, and omitted by Zenod. on the ground that the results are too serious for a comparatively unsuccessful blow. Ar. therefore in 359 evidently read ἄμπνυτο, “recovered his breath,” not ἔμπνυτο, “came back to his senses,” as La R. supposes without authority (see on E 697).

357. μετὰ δούρατος ἐρωήν, “after,” i.e. in the direction of the flight of his spear, to pick it up again.

358. καταείσατο, for the hiatus see Δ 138. γαίης, local, as in 356, had descended on the ground. This is more Homeric than the alternative of making it a partitive gen. after ὅθι.

364. μέλλεις, ironical, “to whom no doubt you pray.” See A 564.

365. ἐξανύω, future: exactly our idiomatic “I will finish, despatch thee.”

366. ἐπιτάρροθος, champion. See E 828. 362-367 are also found verbatim in T 449-454, where the violent language of 362 seems more in keeping with the uncontrollable passion of Achilles than here with the always moderate temper of Diomed.

368. ἐξενάριξεν, so Ar., “continued the despoiling” of P., which task Hector had interrupted, 343: cael. and Zenod. ἐξενάριξεν, but the aor. is obviously less suitable: his continued attention to the corpse explains how Paris got his opportunity. So αἴνυντο, 374, “was in the act of stripping off.”

372. For the tomb of Ilos see 166; ἀνδροκμήτῳ, “artificial,” distinguishes the barrow from any accidental mounds on the plain. δημογέροντος, “elder of the community,” see Γ 149. Ilos is in the direct royal line (T 232) and is the eponym of Ilios. The name thus indicates the identity of royalty with the patriarchy of the village community.

375. πῆχυν, see φ 419 τὼν (διστόν) ῥ’ ἐπὶ πῆχει ἐλὼν ἔλκεν νευρὴν γλυφίδας τε, from which it is clear that the word indicates the (metallic?) handle into which the two horns forming the bow (Δ 105-111) are fastened.

376. οὐδὲ . . . χαρὸς is parenthetical, βάλεν going with ταρσόν.

377. ταρσόν, apparently the flat of the foot (so only here and 388). In ι 219 ταρσοί are explained as hurdles or wickerwork shelves, so called from τέρ-σεν, because they are used for drying cheeses upon. Perhaps the foot was thought to have some resemblance to these.

380. βέβληται, perhaps rather βέβλη, as the synizesis is violent. Others scan βέβληται as a dactyl, cf. ληϊστή or λειστή, I 408.

381. νεάτον, nethermost, from root ni = down; see on νεαιρῇ, E 539.

 ἔστη πρόσθ'· ὁ δ' ὀπισθε καθεζόμενος βέλος ὦκ'·
 ἐκ ποδὸς ἔλκ', ὀδύνῃ δὲ διὰ χροὸς ἦλθ' ἀλεγεινῇ.

385. τοξότα, only here in H.; it is a word of contempt (see on Δ 242) as opposed to the hoplite who meets his foe ἀντίβιον σὺν τεύχεσι. λωβητήρ, cf. B 275, Ω 239. κέραι, so A and apparently Ar.: vulg. κέρα. It is generally taken to mean “with the bow of horn”; but Ar. explained it as a mode of dressing the hair, εἰς κέρατος τρόπον ἀνεπλέκοντο οἱ ἀρχαῖοι. This interpretation, strange though it may seem, is completely established by Helbig, H. E. p. 165. He gives a curious archaic illustration of the spirally curled locks which received this name. The old lexis shew that this explanation was always generally received. Cf. Schol. on ω 81, οἱ νεώτεροι κέρας τὴν συμπλοκὴν τῶν τριχῶν ὁμοίαν κέρατι τὸν κεροπλάστην δεῖδε Γλαῦκον, Ἀρχιλόχου. So Juvenal, xiii. 165, “madido torquentem cornua cirro.” ἀγλαέ thus receives its proper sense, “fine, brilliant.” For Paris’ hair cf. Γ 55, ἦ τε κόμη, τό τε εἶδος. For παρθενοπίπα cf. ὀπιπύσεις δὲ γυναῖκες τ 67, and for the form of the verb Curtius, Et. no. 627.

386. εἰ πειρηθείης is a wish rather than a proper conditional protasis, “I wish that you would measure yourself—in that day your bow and arrows shall avail you naught.” The speaker thus during the expression of thought changes his attitude from mere wish to confident expectation. Cf. Γ 54 οὐκ ἂν τοι χαλίσμῃ κίθαρις . . . θτ' ἐν κονίῃσι μιν γένηται, and more nearly K 222 εἰ τίς μοι ἀνὴρ ἔμ' ἔποιτο καὶ ἄλλος . . . θαρσαλέωτερον ἔσται. For ἂν or κεν with subj. as an emphatic future cf. 431, and H. G. § 276 b. Observe the singular χαλίσμῃσι agreeing with the nearer only of two subjects, Δ 255, Γ 327, etc.

389. οὐκ ἀλέγω, ὥς εἰ, I care as little (lit. I am heedless) as though a woman were to hit me.

390. κωφόν has the primitive sense “blunt,” from κόπτω, ὀ-τιναις, lit. “beaten back.” Cf. Soph. O. T. 290, κωφὰ καὶ παλαί' ἔπη.

391. ἄλλως . . . ὅξυ πέλεται, in a very different way my spear proves its sharpness. Delbrück (S. F. i. p. 177, 181) has remarked that this line offers the only instance in H. of εἰ κε with subj. in a general sense (= whensoever); in all the other cases it indicates a particular expected event.

392. With ὅξυ βέλος πέλεται cf. Γ 99, καὶ δ' ἄλλως τοῦ γ' ἰθὺ βέλος πέτετ', οὐδ' ἀπολήγει. As ἰθὺ there must form part of the predicate, it is better to take ὅξυ here in the same way, though πέλεται is not merely = ἐστίν. Eust. reads πέτεται here also. ἀκήριον, lifeless, as Φ 466; in Od. it means unharmed. αἶψα, so MSS., Ar. ἀνδρα, which is much less forcible.

393. ἀμφίδρυφοι, see B 700. ἐρέυθων, so Σ 329.

395. Compare γύπεσσιν πολὺ φιλτεροι ἢ ἀλόχοισιν, 162; and for the comparative πλέες, B 129.

399-400 = 273-4.

402. φόβος seems here to have made the very easy transition from “flight,” the usual sense in H., to “fear,” as 544, etc.

403. This verse occurs seven times in Il. and four times in Od. (all in ε). In the whole of H. there are only nineteen other passages where the F of Fōs is neglected, and eight of these can be easily emended. Forty-five passages absolutely require the F, and over 170 admit of it (Knös, p. 215). It seems strange that this formula, which must be an old one, should afford so large a proportion of the violations. Bekker emended Feῖπε Feón (? Feῖπεν ἐόν for (σ)ε*Fōν*); but this is not justifiable in face of the fact that there is in no instance any variation of reading hinted at. Fick thinks that ἐόν may be a monosyllable by synizesis; but it is very unlikely that the internal F should have so completely disappeared at a quite early date as to make this possible. The few instances of diphthongs like παῖς for *πά*F*ις* can hardly prove the case for synizesis, a much rarer phenomenon.

404. τί πάθω, delib. subj.: this well illustrates the close relationship between the subjunctive and future.

408. ἀποίχονται seems to be a general expression: cowards are off in a moment

(this being given by the perf. sense of οἴχεσθαι), while a brave man proves his courage by standing his ground. If we take it as a special reference to the Greeks, and to Diomed in particular, the general sentiment of 409-10 comes in rather awkwardly.

410. ἦ τε . . . ἦ τε, so MSS.; this is generally explained as = εἰ τε . . . εἰ τε, with a comma after κρατερῶς. But in this case we ought to write el (Lange, EI, p. 534). The text, with the colon, is preferred by Nikanor; though the sense is virtually the same, it is better as representing the old parataxis.

413. “They penned him in their midst, bringing a bane (cf. 347) among themselves.” For τιθέντες Zenod. read δὲ ἔλσαν, an expression which by no means gains in force what it loses in Homeric simplicity. Still it gives the right sense; Ar. wrongly understood it to mean “bringing destruction to Odysseus in their midst.”

414. κάπριον is governed by ἀμφί; prepositions of more prosodiacal value than two short syllables do not throw the accent back when they follow their noun, according to the traditional rule.

415. σεύωνται, sc. μν, give chase to him.

416. The ancient legend was that the boar prepared for battle by whetting his teeth upon smooth rocks.

417. ὑπαί, thereat, in the midst of all this is heard the gnashing of his teeth. Cf. θ 380, πολὺς ὑπὸ κόμπος ὀρώρει.

418. ἄφαρ, i.e. “without hesitation.” Cf. N 814.

423. αἶξαντα, so AD; cael. ἀλίσσοντα.

424. πρότμησιν, so MSS.; Ar. seems to have read πρότμησιν, and there are traces also of another variant πρότμητιν. The first form seems preferable, the abstract termination reminding us of τομή in the sense of “stump,” A 235. The word here evidently means the navel, “the cut place in front.”

425. ἀγοστῶ, a word which occurs only a few times, always in this line in Homer (N 508, Ξ 452, P 315), and occasionally in later poets (Theokr. 17, 129; Ap. Rhod. 3, 120). Benfey refers it to root a(n)g, to squeeze, so that it means “in his grasp.” Ap. Rhodius seems to take it for “the palm of the hand.”

427. ἐνυφένος, MSS. ἐνυγενέος. The correction comes from Didymos on Ψ 81 ἐνυγενέων· ἐν τῇ Ῥιανοῦ καὶ Ἀριστοφάνους ἐνυφένων διὰ τοῦ φ, εὐ τῷ ἀφένω χρωμένων, ὡς Κλέαρχος ἐν ταῖς γλώτταις. The reading of Rhianos is undoubtedly preferable, as the η of ἐνυγενέος cannot be explained, while in ἐνυφένος it is a regular lengthening of α, as in εὐήνωρ, εὐήκης. The word Εὐήφνης also occurs as a proper name upon an early Thasian inscription, so that the form is sufficiently attested. Cf. Curtius, El. no. 653.

430. πολύαινε, see I 673. ἄτ', for ἄτε, insatiate (ἀ-σα-τος). Ar. used the phrase as an argument against the chori-zontes, as it is in the Odyssey that the cunning of Odysseus is described. Sokos speaks in admiration, not in blame.

432. Ar. rejected this line on the ground that Odysseus is too hard pressed to think of despoiling the corpses. This is very true; but Fick remarks that we should read θυμὸν ἀπούρας, which was altered on account of θυμὸν in the next line; the older Epic style took no offence at such iteration.

437. For χροῖα (Zenod. and MSS.) Ar. strangely read χροός, which he must have understood to mean “stripped everything off the flesh of his ribs.”

 ὧς εἰπὼν Σῶκοιο δαΐφρονος ὄβριμον ἔγχος

439. αἱ Ἀριστάρχου οὕτως τέλος, καὶ σχεδὸν ἀπασαι· ἔγνω δτι οὐ κατὰ καίριον τέλος ἦλθεν ἡ πληγὴ, οὐκ εἰς καίριον τόπον ἐτελεῖται. Ζηνοδότος δὲ γράφει βέλος, κακῶς· οὐ βέβληται δέ, ἀλλ' ἐκ χειρὸς ἐπέπληγε· λέγει δὲ τέλος τὸ τῆς ζωῆς. Our MSS. agree with Zenodotos, with the exception of A. There is no doubt that βέλος gives the best sense, “the dart lighted not on a fatal spot” (for this, the regular use of καίριον, see note on Δ 185, where the phrase is very similar, οὐκ ἐν καιρίῳ δὲ πύγη βέλος). It seems that Ar. laid too much weight on his canon that βέλος could never be used of a weapon used with a thrust: it is only natural that the word should be applied generically to the spear, which was sometimes cast and sometimes held in the hand, without reference to the particular case in question. What the σχεδὸν ἀπασαι were which read τέλος we cannot say, and their authority therefore is hardly to be set against the vulgate. If we accept τέλος, we may read either κατὰ καίριον, the spear “came not to a fatal end” of its journey, or κατακαίριον (with AD and others), “a fatal end came not to him,” which seems to be meant by the concluding words of the scholion cited; cf. the phrase τέλος θανάτοιο, 451. Both of these are perhaps possible, but decidedly less Homeric in expression than the vulgate.

442. μὲν, so all MSS. but D and Eust. μὲν ῥ'. The ῥ' is a mere stop-gap, cf. H 77, T 243, where κέν is lengthened by the ictus.

445. See on E 654.

451. τέλος θανάτοιο, “the end of (consisting in) death has been too quick in catching you” (σε is governed by κιχήμενον). Here also Zenod. read βέλος, but he is not supported by our MSS.

452-5. Fick omits these four lines, remarking with force that they are quite unsuited to the position of Odysseus, who is surrounded by the victorious Trojans. From his point of view they are condemned by the Ionic form κτεριοῦσι in 455.

453. καθαιρήσουσι, draw down, close thine eyes. So λ 426, ω 296.

454. ἐρύουσι, future. πυκνά, either a proleptic predicate, “so as to be thick,” i.e. in dense flocks: or more simply, “thickly feathered,” a mere epithet.

455. So Aristarchos: MSS. all give ἐπεὶ κε θάνω, κτεριοῦσί με. The text is clearly preferable, as bringing out the required contrast σοὶ γε and ἐμέ.

466. ἵκετ' ἀντὶ, so Ar.; MSS. ἵκετο φωνῇ.

467. τῷ (neuter) represents by anticipation the following clause with ὥς εἰ. So X 410, τῷ δὲ μάλιστ' ἄρ' ἔην ἐναλίγκιον, ὥς εἰ, κ.τ.λ. The construction is well explained by L. Lange, EI, p. 437;

"a shout like the supposed case (that) the Trojans might be pressing him hard."

474. ἔπον, so La Roche for ἔπονθ' of MSS. The change is absolutely necessary, as the act. ἀμφένει is always used in this sense, and the middle never even approaches it. The corruption is evidently due to a mistaken wish to mend the metre. The compound ἀμφένει means to beset by surrounding, as ἐφένει to drive by pursuit. So 483, and cf. γ 118 εἰσάερες γὰρ σφιν κακὰ ράπτομεν ἀμφέποντες, of the siege of Troy (Journ. Phil. xiv. 239).

477. λιαρὸν, sc. ῆ, with the same sense as in 266, "while the blood flows warm from the wound."

478. δαμάσσεται, aor. subj., when the arrow has had its full effect upon him.

481. διέτρεσαν, scattered in terror. δ, the lion begins to rend in his turn.

482. ἀμφί . . . ἔπον, see 474.

486. στή παρέξ, stood forth beside him. Cf. νῆχε παρέξ ε 439, swam along the shore. But the phrase is unusual; Paley ingeniously conjectures παράξ, like εὐράξ 251, g.v.

488. θεράπων, i.e. of Menelaos. Odysseus, coming from mountainous Ithaka, has no horse nor chariot.

490. υἱόν: we must understand Πριάμων from Πριαμίδης, the expression being rather tautological.

493. ὀπαζόμενος, driven on from behind: from root σεπ, and used somewhat like a passive to ἐφέπειν. Cf. E 91, 334, Θ 341. χειμάρρους is here an adjective; cf. note on E 88.

494. ἀζαλέας, dead trees, either fallen accidentally by the side, or felled and left to dry.

495. ἐσφέρειται, draws into its current. ἀφυσγετόν, ἀπ. λεγ., probably "drift wood" or "mud." The origin of the word is obscure: perhaps ἀφύσσ-ειν and γα-, "hauriendo natius," (So Ebeling, Lex. s.v.).

496. Compare X 188, Ἔκτορα δ' ἀσπερχὲς κλονέων ἔφεπ' ὥκῃς Ἀχιλλεύς. The peculiarity of the present line is that ἐφέπειν has an inanimate object; it seems that we must understand "drove the plain, making havoc," πεδίον standing for the men and horses of which it is full. So we have in ι 121 κυνηγέται

. . . κορυφὰς ὀρέων ἐφέποντες, just as we speak of "driving a wood" when we mean driving the game found there. This use of ἐφέπειν seems to be derived from the primitive sense of "handling" through the idea of driving horses; cf. ὑσμίνης ἐφέποι στόμα Υ 359 (Journ. Phil. xiv. 238).

497. δαΐζων has the α long only here: hence Nauck conj. δηϊών.

498. The "left of the battle" can hardly be said from a Greek point of view here, as the river would then be on the right. But in details such as this it is useless to look for exact accuracy. See E 355, N 765, P 116. There is however something awkward in the sudden shifting of the centre of interest, as we have been led to believe that the hottest of the fight was about Aias, and are now suddenly told that it was on the opposite wing. Indeed the words of Kebriones in 523-530 directly contradict μάλιστα in 499. Most modern critics have therefore pronounced for the omission of 497-503 at least, with more or less of the context. The wounding of Machaon is however an essential part of the original story, and must be retained. Fick, omitting 489-503 (the first eight lines with hardly sufficient reason), suggests Ἀτρεΐδης for Ἰδομενεύς in 510, as Menelaos has not left the field, but only entrusted Odysseus to his θεράπων. This would remove all cause of offence; 504 comes much more naturally after the stubborn resistance of Aias than after the account of Hector's ravages.

 Ἐκτορι παρβεβαῶς, καὶ μιν πρὸς μῦθον ξειπεν·

502. ὁμίλῃα is an oxymoron, for it properly indicates friendly association; E 86, 834. So δαριστός, “dalliance,” is used of war, N 291, P 228 (so Mr. Monro).

503. νέων, a curious expression; it can hardly be meant to oppose the aged Nestor and elderly (N 361, 485) Idomeneus to their more youthful soldiers. Ar. read νεῶν, the battalions belonging to the ships, which certainly is a desperate resource.

506. It is not quite clear whether παῦσεν and ἀριστεύοντα go closely together, “stopped from doing deeds of valour,” or more loosely “stopped (from battle) while doing deeds of valour.” In favour of the latter is the construction ἐπανσας μάχεσθαι in 442, while the former seems a natural correlative to the construction of the middle with the participle (X 502, etc.), though the act. is not elsewhere used in this way.

509. μετακλινθέντος, apparently a metaphor from a scale-beam. Cf. ἐκλινε μάχην Z 510, and the simple Τρῳᾶς δ' ἐκλιναν Δαναοί E 37.

515. ἀθετεῖται, ὅτι οὐκ ἀναγκαῖα ἡ ἐξ-ἀριθμησις· μειοῖ γὰρ (it degrades the leech) εἰ μόνον ἰοὺς ἐκτάμνειν καὶ φαρμακεῖν οἶδεν. καὶ Ἀριστοφάνης προσθέτει· Ζηνόδοτος δὲ οὐδὲ ἔγραφεν. This objection, though approved by most modern edd., hardly seems sufficient to condemn the line, which fairly represents the primitive stage of Homeric medicine.

518. See note on B 729.

522. παρβεβαῶς, “standing beside” as charioteer, and clearly not in the later sense of παραβάτης, “fighter.” It must be remarked that Hector's approach seems to have no effect whatever on the fight; he is not mentioned again,

"Ἐκτορ, νῶϊ μὲν ἐνθάδ' ὁμιλέομεν Δαναοῖσιν ἔγχετ' ἄορι τε μεγάλαισιν τε χερμαδίοισιν, and the retreat of Aias is ascribed to Zeus. Hence it is not without reason that many critics reject the present passage (521-543).

529. προβαλόντες, a curious expression with ἐριδα, but compare ἐριδα προφέρουσι I 7. The idea seems to be "throwing into the midst" between the contending armies.

532. αἰόντες, according to Curtius (Et. no. 568), is here used in the primitive meaning of root av, to perceive, feel, without limitation to the sense of hearing. But λιγυρῇ, "whistling," may be more than a mere epith. organs, and mean that the very sound of the descending lash is enough for the high-spirited horses.

535. αἰὲρ περὶ δίφρον, sc. ἦσαν, see H. G. § 271; this is better than the usual reading αἰ, which implies a much later use of the article. In 537 αἰ τε is "those (others) thrown up by the tires."

537. ὄμιλον ἀνδρόμεον, "the human throng," a curious phrase not elsewhere found; ἀνδρόμεος is elsewhere applied only to human flesh or blood.

539. μίνυνθα χάζετο δουρός, another strange expression, apparently "he refrained but a little while from the spear,"

i.e. he gave his spear but little rest. Others understand "he drew away but a short distance from the spear," i.e. he never kept far from the enemy while driving along the line, or according to others again "he did not give way when he had thrown his spear, but followed it up at once." None of these explanations is satisfactory. Ar. read δουρί, without any apparent gain.

540-543 seem clearly to be a late interpolation, designed to harmonize the obvious difficulty that after the pompous description of Hector's prowess the retreat of Aias is attributed to other reasons. 543 is not given by any of our MSS., and has been introduced into the text from quotations only (Aristotle, Rhet. ii. 9, and Plutarch). It is inconsistent with the promise of Zeus to Hector, as well as with the next line, and is moreover hardly to be translated; it should mean "Zeus was wroth, whenever he fought with a better man," which does not make sense. Even if we can get out of it the sense "Zeus was indignant that he should fight," the reason for this emotion remains inexplicable. It may be added that 540-1 are a repetition of 264-5; and so 533 = P 458, 534-7 = T 499-502.

544. Αἶανθ', sc. Αἶαντι. φόβον, against the canon of Ar., seems here clearly to mean "fear," not "flight," which begins only with τρέσσε.

545. θπιθεν βάλεν, swung round so as to hang (by the τελαμών) in such a way as to protect his back while retreating.

546. τρέσσε as usual implies the actual movement of flight, and is to be taken with ἐφ' ὀμίλου, in the direction of the throng (of his friends). For this use of ἐπί with gen. see Γ 5, Ψ 374, H. G. § 200, 3. Aristoph. read δι' ὀμίλου, through the throng of the enemy. παπτήνας indicates a searching look to find the best course.

547. "Slowly changing knee for knee;" i.e. retreating slowly, pedetentim: cf. ἐπὶ σκέλος ἀνάγειν in the same sense, Arist. An. 383, Eur. Ph. 1400.

548-557. This simile is repeated almost verbatim in P 657-666. It is very appropriate, and it is with little reason that most editors, following Zenod., reject it here. There is nothing to cause offence in the immediate sequence of two similes. The point lies in the reluctant retreat, τετιηότι θυμῷ, 555.

549. ἐσσεύαντο, so La R. and others with G. Hermann for ἐσσεύοντο of MSS., which according to Didymos was Aristarchos' reading also. But this must be an error; for in the same line in O 272, where the MSS. read ἐσσεύοντο, Didymos distinctly says Ἀριστάρχος διὰ τοῦ α̃ καὶ ἀπασαι. The imperf. is entirely out of place in a simile. For this non-sigmatic 1st aor. in tran. sense see P 463, T 148.

550. πῖαρ recurs again (besides P 659) in ε 135, μᾶλα πῖαρ ὑπ' οὐδας. It seems decidedly more natural in the latter case to take it as an adjective, than as a substantive with Buttmann. The form πῖαρ with fem. πλεῖρα seems analogous to μάκαρ, μάκαιρα. So Hesych. πῖαρ . . . καὶ λυπαρόν, and Solon, 36, 21, πῖαρ ἐξέλη γάλα, "rich cream." (See F. G. Allinson in Amer. Journ. Philol. i. 458.) The difficulty here, if we wish to understand it as meaning "to pick out a fat one from the kine," is that the neuter is very harsh immediately after βοῶν. We may however compare the instances given in the note on ἐρήμα E 140.

552. ἰθύνει, charges; see Z 2.

554. δεταί, "bundles" of twigs (δέω, to bind). τρεῖ should be τρεῖς (so Nauck), though the present scansion might be defended by the bucolic diaeresis, which occasionally prevents shortening before a vowel.

558. The picture is that of an ass being driven by boys along a high road, and turning for a while into the standing crops (this is always the meaning of λήϊον) at the side; so Aias, though he is obliged to retreat, takes his own time about it. ἰβήσατο, is more than a match for, as we might say.

559. νωθής, apparently from νη- and δομαι, indifferent. ἔαγη, perf. subj.; so Bekker for ἔαγη of MSS.; the aor. has always ᾶ. The clause explains νωθής, he is indifferent because he is accustomed to more severe treatment than the boys can administer. Thus δῆ = before now. ἀμφίς, on both his sides.

561. νηπίη, childish, our colloquial "mere child's - play." αὐτῶν seems rather weak, though it may be thought to emphasize the contrast between the boys and stronger masters. But Hoogvliet's suggestion αὐτως is very plausible.

562. σπουδῇ, with all their efforts, hardly; cf. B 99.

564. πολυηγερέες, so Ar., ἐκ πολλῶν ἀγερθέντες. MSS. τηλεκλειτοί (or -κλητοί), the usual epithet.

565. νύσσοντες governs both Αἴαντα and σάκος by a sort of "whole and part" figure. ἔποντο, "hung on his heels," "stuck to him," as we say; it means more than is implied by our "follow." (See Journ. Philol. xiv. 233.)

569. προέεργεν ὀδεύειν, prevented from making their way. προ- implies "before (i.e. from) himself." Perhaps we should write it πρό as an adverb, and take it with ὀδεύειν, as in the phrase πρό ὁδοῦ Δ 382.

573. μεσσηγύ, half way. ἔπαυρειν, reach: see 391, Ψ 340.

574. For the personification of the spear see Δ 126, Φ 70. ἄσαι is here intrans., "to have their fill." It is more commonly causal, "to sate."

580. αἶνυτο, began to strip (imperf.)

584. δόναξ, the shaft of the arrow (so only here). ἐβάρυνε must be used in a metaphorical sense, “made it painful to move.”

585. ἐχάζετο, sc. Eurypylos. The phrase is generally used of a warrior who has just made a spear-cast, and immediately retires, being for the moment disarmed (see N 566, 596, 648, Ξ 408). Hence it has been proposed here to make Paris the subject. But the manœuvre is not required by the archer who shoots from a distance.

588. στῆτ' ἐλελιχθέντες, i.e. στήτετε ἐλελιχθέντες, as usual.

589. Αἴανθ' = Αἴαντι, as 544.

593. σάκε' ὥμοισι κλίναντες seems to indicate some sort of rudimentary phalanx or testudo, the shield being perhaps set with its lower edge on the ground, and the upper leaning against the shoulder, while the spears are sloped forwards. See X 4, and cf. N 130, φράζαντες δόρυ δουρί, σάκος σάκει προθελύνω (see J. H. S. iv. 284).

594. ἀντίος, with his face towards his friends.

596 = N 673, P 366, Σ 1. In these passages only δέμας is used with a gen.

like the Attic δικην or τρόπον, Lat. instar, meaning “after the similitude of fire.” The word is always however an “accus. of reference,” except in π 174 and perhaps κ 240 (Zenod. πῶδας): it means literally “in build,” in formation. H. G. § 136, 2.

597. φέρον, imperf., “were in the meantime carrying.” Νηλήϊαι, of the breed of Neleus, like Τρώες E 222. There was a variant Νηληϊον.

599. ἰδὼν ἐνόησε, he saw (with the bodily) and marked (with the inward eye).

600. ἐπὶ πρυμνῇ νηὶ, i.e. upon the small deck at the stern, which was turned inland and was high enough to enable him to see over the wall. μεγακῆτεϊ, capacious: see on Θ 222.

601. ἰώκα, flight: a metaplastic acc. of ἰωκή, see on E 521, 740. Aristonikos mentions the curious variant ἰὼ καταδακρυόεσσαν, which appears to be untranslatable.

603-7. It has been objected to these lines (1) that προσέειπεν in 602 ought, according to the regular Homeric practice, to be followed by the actual words spoken. (2) That a speech of a single line like 606 is very rare; this is indeed the only instance in any book before Σ. (3) That the allusion to coming events in 604 is not Homeric. Though these reasons are not convincing, yet taken together they have some force. (3) however is not exact, see E 662, etc.

 606. For χρεώ as a short syllable see I 75.

609. These words, on any fair system of interpretation, are quite inconsistent with the position of I in the story. See the introduction to that book.

611. ἔπεισο, apparently for ἐπέ-εο, from the longer stem ἐρε- found in ἐρέοντο Θ 445, etc. It should then be ἐρεῖο (Curtius, Vb. ii. 47). Compare σπεῖο K 285. Fick would prefer ἐρενε (which occurs in Hesych., and is explained ἐρεῖνα), or ἐρενο = ἐρεφο from the aor. ἐρέσθαι (for ἐρέσθαι).

618. οἱ, Nestor and Machaon.

622. This treatment seems somewhat heroic for a wounded man, but probably has some connexion with the idea of the healthfulness of sea-water (see K 572). Fick quotes similar conduct on the part of the heroes of the Nibelungen Lied. οὕτως διὰ τοῦ τέ, στάντε, Didymos; τι δεικνῶς, Schol. V. I.e. Ar. wrote στάντε, while others had στάν δέ, which occurs in one or two of our MSS. For θιν' (a) we should rather have expected the dat. θιν' (for θιν).

624. κυκεῖῷ, a sort of stimulating porridge; see Merry on κ 234, where Kirke prepares a similar one, only with the addition of honey, which is not mentioned here.

625. ἄρετο, won, as a prize, γέρας ἐξαιρετόν, given to reward his pre-eminence in council (627), no doubt on account of advice he had given relative to the capture of the city. Observe θυγατέρα in apposition with the relative τῇν, instead of the more distant nominative.

628. ἐπιπροΐηλε, moved forward to them. ἰάλλω is apparently a reduplicated form from root ar to go, in causal sense. Curt. Et. no. 661.

629. κυανόπεζαν, with feet of cyanos or blue glass; see l. 24.

630. ἐπὶ, and on it (the κάνεον, platter) an onion, as a relish for the drink.

631. ἀκτῆν is generally explained as meaning "bruised meal," from root faγ to break. We should however hardly expect to find the F omitted in what would naturally appear to be a very primitive phrase. Other derivations have been proposed, e.g. ac (Skt.) to eat (Benf.), or ak to be sharp, as though referring to the ears of corn (Hesiod actually uses it of standing crops; Merry and R. on β 355).

632. Ar. varied in his editions between ἦγ' and εἰχ' ὁ γεραιός. Nestor's cup was a favourite subject of discussion among ancient commentators and archaeologists, of whose remarks Athenaeus has preserved us extracts of more compass than value. The account in the text is quite intelligible with the aid of the specimens of early cups from Mykenai and Caere given in Helbig, H. E. pp. 272 ff. The πυθμένες were supports from the base of the cup to the lower part of the bowl, designed to strengthen the central stem. The οὐατα are handles at the side. In the cup found by Dr. Schliemann (Mycenae, p. 237, no. 346, Helbig, H. E. no. 116) we see not only these πυθμένες, which are continued into the handles above them, but we have actually two πελειάδες as ornaments on the top of the handles, with beaks projecting over the interior, as though they were feeding. The poetical cup only differs by its greater magnificence in having four handles instead of two, and two doves to each instead of one only. These four handles, as remarked by Ar., whose explanation seems perfectly right, are to be regarded as placed in two pairs, one pair at each side, not at equal intervals all round the cup. The chief uncertainty is as to the ἥλοι, especially as the material of the cup is not specified. These may have been actually used to fasten the parts of the cup together—the πυθμένες of the Mykenaeon cup are thus fixed to the base—or they may have been driven in as mere ornaments, a device which is familiar in ancient work of wood and clay, as well as of metal (Helbig).

636-7. This couplet comes in very strangely. So far from being represented as of unusual physical strength, Nestor is always lamenting his departed vigour. The lines might well be omitted.

639. "Pramnian wine" is said by the Scholiast to have been named from a mountain in Karia. It is mentioned by Galen as "a black austere wine," apparently in a descriptive rather than a local sense (see Merry on κ 234). κνή, a genuine form of the "Aeolic" conjugation (Fick). Ar. read κνέε. For the dative κνήσφι for κνήσφι-ι cf. Ψ 315, etc.

642. πολυκαγκέα, parching, cf. κάγ-κανα ξύλα Φ 364. It appears to be a nasalized reduplicated form of κα-, καF-, to burn (see Curtius, St. vi. 335, vii.
 204).

647. ἐτέρωθεν, from the opposite side of the tent to that where the chairs stood.

648. οὐχ ἔδος, “There is no sitting for me,” i.e. I have not time to sit down.
 So Ψ 205.

649. νεμεσητός in this sense is unique, and not easy to explain. The adjective recurs only in the form νεμεσσῆτων, a thing worthy of νέμεσις, or indignation (Γ 410, etc.). It seems to mean here “capable of indignation”; for the form
 Mr. Monro compares ἐπικειτός = “yielding,” Θ 32, ἐρπετός “creeping,” ἀτάρβητος “fearless.” The analogy of αἰδοῖος δεινός τε, Γ 172, would lead us to translate “terrible”; but this is not sufficiently supported by the use of νεμεσιζομαι in one passage (α 263) in the sense of “fearing the gods.”

654. δεινὸς ἀνὴρ is to be taken closely with οἶος, as in our idiom, “what a terrible man he is.” It may be questioned, however, if it would not be better to put a colon after ἐκείνος, and take δεινός ἀνὴρ as an exclamatory nom.

657. ὅσσοι . . . βεβλήται are contrasted with στρατὸν, “why does he show so much pity for the wounded and think nothing of the army at large?”

658. πένθεος. For the genitive after οἶδε compare Δ 357, M 229, H. G. § 151
d. It is not Homeric to regard πένθεος as a partitive gen. after τι.

659. βεβλημένοι by missiles, οὐτάμενοι by weapons held in the hand, as usual.

662. This line is om. by all the best MSS., and is evidently interpolated from Π 27. Nestor knows nothing of the wounding of Eurypylos, which happened after he had left the field.

664. From αὐτὰρ Ἀχιλλεύς here to the same words in 762 is almost beyond a doubt an interpolated passage. See the introduction to the present book.

667. πυρὸς θέρωνται, compare Z 331.

668. ἐπισχερά, "in order," one after the other. σχε- = (σ)εχ-, so that, with the exception of the unexplained suffix -ρω, ἐπι-σχε-ρώ exactly = ἐφ-εξ-ῆς. οὐ γάρ implies the suppressed thought, "I can do nothing to help it."

669. γναμπτοῖσι, flexible, lissome; else only in Od. and Ω 359.

671. Ἥλείοισι, elsewhere in H. always called Ἐπειοὶ (and so 688); cf. ν 275, Ἥλιδα . . . ὅθι κρατέουσιν Ἐπειοί, and B 619.

674. ἐλαυνόμενος goes with κτάνον. ρύσια does not recur in H.; it is used in the sense usual in later Greek, "reprisals," property seized as a pledge for reparation; Soph. O. C. 858, Aesch. Supp. 412, etc. The deed which led to reprisals is recounted farther on (698).

677. ἤλιθα, else a purely Odyssean word, always followed by πολλή. It is possibly conn. with ἄλις.

678-9 = ξ 100-1. The hiatus after πῶσα and the long ι of συβόσια are metrical anomalies, of which the latter may be explained by the ictus (two good MSS., L Townl., read συβόσεια). αἰπόλια πλατέα, wide-ranging flocks of goats (for the word αἰπόλος see B 474).

684. τύχῃ πολλὰ, much success had fallen to me. νέφ', as a "young hand," with κίοντι.

686. The reading of Ar. seems to have been χρεὺς ὀφείλετ' instead of χρεῖος ὀφείλετ', but the MS. is confused between the two.

688. δαίτρενον, proceeded to apportion. The verb occurs elsewhere only in Od., and always of carving meat (see 705).

689. ὥς = ὅτι οὕτως, "so few were we in Pylos through our disasters."

690. ἔλθων, a construction ad sensum, βίη Ἡρακλεΐη being = Ἡρακλῆς. Cf. E 638, H. G. § 196. For γὰρ AD read γάρ ῥ', but see on Δ 467. For the legend of the sacking of Pylos by Herakles see on E 393.

691. τῶν προτέρων ἐτέων: for the genitive see H. G. § 150.

694. ταῦτα adverbial, H. G. § 133. ὑπερφηφάνεοντες, see Curtius El. no. 392, where it is explained as from the adjectival stem ὑπερο- with "Epic lengthening" (cf. νεη-γενής, etc.), and φαίνω, lit. "shewing themselves lifted up."

695. ὑβρίζοντες, else only in Od. (seven times).

697. κρινάμενος, selecting; the case is not analogous to the ordinary division of spoil, which is in the hands of the army, not of the king, who is only given a γέρας ἐξαιρετόν: here he is exacting payment for a debt. τριηκόσια: for the anomalous long ι compare ὑπεροπλήρη, A 205; it is hard to explain in thesi. Hartel suggests that it may be due to the production of a γ-sound after the ι.

699. From the mention of a single charioteer in 702 (where, however, Naber suggests τῷ δ' ἐλατήρ' . . . ἀκαχήμενω) it would seem that a four-horse chariot is meant; the pl. ὄχεα being regularly used of a single chariot. For the very rare mention of such a team in H. see on Θ 185. The mention of ἄεθλα in Elis naturally leads us to think of the Olympian games. But we cannot argue from this as to the date of the present passage, for, as Mr. Monro has remarked, the prize for the chariot-race instituted there in Ol. 25 was not a tripod but a wreath of olive. The Olympian games were according to the legend of fabulous antiquity, the historical foundation being only a re-establishment of the contests begun by Herakles in honour of Iolaos. It is therefore quite possible that even this late passage may be earlier than the Olympiads, at least so far as the evidence of this line goes. Races on special occasions, especially at funerals, are familiar to Homer, X 164.

703. τῶν goes with ἐπέων and ἔργων, "these things, words and deeds"; implying apparently that an insulting message had been sent back by the charioteer. See B 629 for the wanton violence of Augeias.

704. ἐξέλετο, chose for himself; in a different sense from I 831. δῆμον, apparently "the common stock"; see note on A 231, B 547.

705. Interpolated from ι 42, as Zenod. and Ar. rightly judged. δαιτρεύειν properly means "to be δαιτρός," or carver at a feast. ἴσῃς, better ἰσῃς, fair share; see A 418. Fick reads ἰσῃς, quoting Hesych. ἰσασθαι· κληροῦσθαι, λέσβια. ἀτέμβεσθαι is a verb recurring only in Ψ and Od.

ἡμεῖς μὲν τὰ ἕκαστα διείπομεν, ἀμφὶ τε ἄστν

 εἶα θωρήσσεσθαι, ἀπέκρυνεν δέ μοι ἵππους· οὐ γάρ πώ τί μ' ἔφη ἵδμεν πολεμῆμα ἔργα.

706. διείπομεν, disposed, arranged, from δίεπω, not from εἰπεῖν (Journ. Phil. xiv. 238).

707. οἱ δέ, the Epeians, who make a raid to recover the booty taken from them. Many commentators have strangely fancied that this is the beginning of the war in which the fight already mentioned (671-6) was an incident. This leads to hopeless and needless confusion.

709. Μολλόνε, the same as the Ἀκτορίωνε Kteatos and Eurytos, B 621; see 750 below. The Homeric poems and Pindar (Ol. x. 26-38) know them only as twin sons of Poseidon, and leaders of the Epeians; they are named again in Ψ 638. The two names Ἀκτορίων and Μολλῶν are both obscure. In form they are of course patronymics, but they cannot both be so in reality, for they appear together in 750, and Homer never uses two patronymics together. The ordinary explanation is that Aktor was their nominal father, as Herakles is called son of Amphitryon, and that Μολλῶν is a metronymic from their mother Μολιώνη or Μολύη (so Pausan. v. 2, 2). The last assumption is impossible, both because the form forbids it, and because metronymics are unknown in Greece. Others have proposed to derive both Μολιώνη and Μολῶν from a supposed Μόλος, ancestor of the mother. For this there is no ground. It may be added that even Aktor (who, according to the later legend, was brother of Augeias) is not named in H.; the grandfather of Patroklos (785) being of course a different person. Later mythology made of the two brethren a pair of Siamese twins, διφυεῖς, with two heads and four legs and arms, but only one body (so Schol. A here and on Ψ 638, and apparently as early as Ibykos; see fr. 16, Bergk, where they are called ἐνίγνυοι). Welcker ingeniously, but not very probably, explained them as a personification of the two mill-stones (mola, μῶλη), and hence sons of Aktor "the crusher." Others have seen in the name Μολῶν an appellative meaning "the warlike," ὁ μετὰ μῶλον λῶν, and Hesych. explains the word as μαχηγῆς. So also Eustath.

711. Θρῠόεσσα πόλις, "Sedge-town," evidently the same as Θρύον Ἀλφειοῖο πόλιν, B 592.

712. νεάτη, "last," lit. "lowest," see I 153.

714. πεδίον μετεκλάβον, a strange phrase, perhaps to be compared with ἔφεπεν κλονέων πεδίον, 496, "when they had chased the plain," i.e. every warrior in it. This is not satisfactory, but neither is the alternative, "when they had passed over" the plain; for this sense can hardly be got out of μετεκλάβον, and the words are out of place and very weak after the mention of the beginning of the siege.

719. πολεμῆμα ἔργα, "the operations of war," seem to be contrasted with the foray against the country folk which constituted all Nestor's experience hitherto.

722. βάλλον, "emptying," a unique use in H., but imitated by Ap. Rhodius.

724. ἐπέρρεεν, "flowed up" to us. The best MSS. read ἐπέρρεον, but the singular is to be preferred, on account of the F of ἔθνεα, which is nowhere else neglected.

726. ἔνδιοι, at mid-day; see Merry and R. on δ 450.

729. For ἀγελαίην Townl. has ἀγελείη, a reading which is worth consideration. In any case it would seem as though ἀγελαίην contained an allusion to this familiar name of Athene.

730 = H 380. Zenod. read δειπνον for δόρπον.

733. On account of the F of ἔσταν, Bekker conj. ἀμφέσταν δὴ (cf. Σ 233), Christ ἔσταν δὴ ἀμφίσταντο. διαρῥαῖσαι, so AD, vulg. διαπραθέει.

734. προπάραιθε, "before that came about." See on K 476.

735. ἥελιος φαέθων, an Odyssean phrase (four times). ὑπερέσχεθε, stood above the earth. Cf. Γ 210, ν 93.

740. Ἀγαμήδην, apparently the Homeric name of Medeia. At all events, besides the resemblance of names, both are granddaughters of the Sun (the father of Augeias) and are famed for their skill in drugs. Schol. A here gives a short account of Medeia, ending οἰκίσσας δὲ αὐτὴ τὴν πλησίον Ἥλιδος Ἐφυραν πολυφάρμακον ἐποίησεν ἐπονομασθῆναι. This seems to be an attempt to bring the two legends into connexion.

748. ἀμφίς, one on each side of each chariot. Cf. 634, the only other case where ἀμφίς precedes the acc. governed by it. In both passages it has of course supplanted an original ἀμφὶ Φέκαστον.

750. ἀλάπαξα, only here of slaying single men; elsewhere always of destroying towns or embattled ranks.

751. εὐρὺ κρείων is elsewhere used only of Agamemnon.

754. διὰ σπιδέος, so AC with Zenod.; δι' ἀσπιδέος Ar. and the other MSS. The latter reading is explained to mean either "round like a shield" or "covered with shields" (thrown away by the fugitives); both of which are absurd. Hesych. explains σπιδέος to mean "wide." For speculations as to its etymology see Curtius, Et. p. 713, Clemm in Curt. St. viii. 116.

756. See B 615-7, from which it appears that Buprasion is a region, and the hill of Aleision and the Olenian rock localities on its boundaries. If however these are identical with the later Alesiaion and Olenos, the poet is clearly ignorant of the real geography; as these two places lay in the extreme S. and extreme N.E. of Elis respectively. It would seem therefore that he has merely taken the names from the catalogue, which must then be older than the present episode.

757. ἔνθα κέκληται, sc. "where is the hill which is called the hill of A.;" a pregnant expression hardly to be paralleled in H., but not unfamiliar in later Greek (ἐνθα κλήζεται οὐμὸς Κιθαιρών, Soph. O. T. 1452, etc.)

761. εὐχετόωντο, gave glory; see H 298.

762. ὥς ἔον εἴ ποτ' ἔον γε, see on Γ 180. αὐτὰρ Ἀχιλλεὺς seems to be the catchword from 664, with which we re-enter the original stream of narrative.

763. τῆς, so all MSS.; but there can be no doubt that the right reading is ἧς, cf. P 25 ἧς ἡβης ἀπὸνήτο. οἷος ἀπονήσεται, will have the profit to himself—an expression immediately corrected; "(nay, no profit; on the contrary) he will weep tears of penitence." μετα- gives the idea of penitence through that of "after" as in μεταμελίσθαι, etc.

767. Aristophanes and Ar. athetized from this line to 785, on the ground that the composition is prosaic; that they are inconsistent with the charge of Peleus to his son in I 254; that Peleus here ὡς εἰδῶλον σπένδει, leaving to his son all the duties of hospitality. Still more serious objections are that ἐκ in 765 is too far separated from the words to which it refers in 786; and that 784 appears also in Z 208, the repetition of such a line not being like Homer. The athetesis thus is quite justified; though perhaps it ought not to include 767-8. νῶι δὲ ἔνδον, so all MSS.; vulg. νῶι δὲ τ'. But the hiatus is not very uncommon after the first foot; see Knös, de Dig. Hom. p. 47, and compare E 728.

770. πούλυβότειραν, so AD; the epithet is elsewhere applied only to χθών. The rest give the usual καλλιγύναικα.

771. The reason which made Menoitios an inmate of Peleus' house is given in Ψ 85.

773. ἔκαie, so Ar.; MSS. ἔκγε, which is obviously inferior. τερπικεραῦνφ, "hurler of the thunderbolt," from τερπ- = τροπ- by metathesis, root tark, Vergil's "qui fulmina torquet." This explanation, given by G. Meyer in Curtius St. vii.

180, is far preferable to the ordinary "rejoicing in the thunderbolt." There is no other instance in Homer of such a "subjective" epithet of a god; λοχέαιρα, which has been compared, is of course from χέω, not χαίρω. Meyer further points out that if τερπ- came from τέρπω it should mean "making glad the thunderbolt." Cf. H. G. § 124 b.

774. χόρτφ, the enclosed space of the court where stood the altar of Zeus Ἐρκεῖος. ἄλεισον, else only in Ω and Od.; the exact meaning of the word is uncertain.

775. Döderlein is probably right in taking ἐπὶ to mean "with," "in addition to"; as the practice was to pour libations not on the altar, but on the ground.

776. ἀμφὶ ἔπετον, were "treating," preparing for the meal. For this form of the 2d person dual in historic tenses see H. G. § 5 ad fin., and note on Θ 448. Zenod. read ἠδελῆτην in 782, and therefore no doubt ἐπέτην here.

779. ξείνους θέμις ἐστίν, sc. παραθεῖναι. Note the short form of the dat. pl.

786. γενεῇ here means "descent" as son of a goddess, not "age" as in I 58.

789. σημαίνειν, to give the word of command, see A 289. This is hardly consistent with Phoinix' claim to the same position in I 442. εἰς ἀγαθὸν περ, "for his own good," as we say. Cf. I 102.

792. ὀρίναις: this form of aor. opt. is very rare in the 2d and 3d sing.; δ 547 is the only other instance of the 2d. G. Hermann and La R. conj. ὀρίνης, comparing O 403, where Patroklos repeats the words of Nestor, using ὀρίνω. See however ξ 119, and L. Lange, EI, 507.

794-803 = II 36-45. Fick urges with much force that the lines are interpolated here; they lose all their grace in the other passage if, instead of coming from Patroklos' own chivalrous thought, they are merely repeated by rote like a lesson.

795. καὶ τινα, "and such a prophecy has been declared to him," a simple case of parataxis where, in later Greek, an explicative relative clause would rather have been added.

799. ἴσκοντες only here (= II 41) and δ 279, else always ἔλκειν; hence Ar. read ἐλκοντες, a very unlikely form, as even Herodianus remarks. ἴσκω is apparently for ἴκω-σκω, root ἴκω of ἔοικα, etc. Γ 197.

801. τειρόμενοι goes closely with ἀναπνεύσωσι, "may have pause from toil."

802-3 were athetized by Ar. as being more in place in II 44-5, where the Trojans have been fighting a long battle at the ships. But there is little reason for selecting this couplet only for condemnation; it should keep company with the preceding eight lines.

806. κατὰ, over against. The ships of Odysseus were in the centre of the camp; see l. 5. In H 383 the ἀγορή is held at the ship of Agamemnon, a more likely place.

807. θέμις, the giving of dooms. Cf. ι 112, τοῖσιν δ' οὐτ' ἀγοραὶ βουλευφόροι οὐτὶ θέμιστες. For the half local use we may compare the Attic ψήφος = the place of voting, Eur. I. T. 945, πεσσοί, Med. 68, τυρός = cheese-market, and so on; but there does not seem to be any close analogy in H. For the common altar of the camp see Θ 249. ἦην, a form recurring only in Od., and perhaps a mistake for ἦεν; Curtius in St. i. b 290-4, H. G. § 12.

ἦν, τῇ δὴ καὶ σφι θεῶν ἐτετεύχατο βωμοί,

809. See 583 for the wounding of Eurypylos.

813. γε μὲν, “however,” “still his spirit was unshaken”; so B 703, etc., in later Greek γε μὲν.

817. ὥς ἄρα, like οὕτω δὴ B 158, etc.; “thus then ye were destined.” Or we might take ὥς as a simple exclamation, “how are ye destined!”

818. ἀργέτι for the more usual ἀργῆτι, “white,” as φ 127.

820. σχήσουσι, will sustain, resist the attack of Hector; so M 166, but σχήσονται in P 639.

821. ὑπ' αὐτοῦ δουρὶ, see on Γ 436.

823. ἄλκαρ, defence, cf. E 644. For 824 see on 311, I 235; the subject of πεσέονται seems to be Ἀχαιοί. Ἄρ. however took it to be Τρῶες. 826 = 659.

831. προτὶ goes with Ἀχιλλῆος: the insertion of the verb between preposition and case is very unusual. For δεδιδάχθαι Zenod. read δεδάσθαι (or -άσθαι), as π 316. This looks much more like a Homeric form, and perhaps should be adopted in the text.

832. δικαιοτάτος means, in modern phrase, “the most civilized,” most conversant with δικη, the traditional order of society. So the Cyclops in ι 175 is οὐ δίκαιος as opposed to φιλόξενος. The Centaurs are wild animals, φῆρες, A 268. For Cheiron cf. Δ 219, where he teaches Asklepios.

833. ἱητροὶ μὲν . . . τὸν μὲν, an anacoluthon; ὁ μὲν κείτω should have followed, in order to be regular, as ὁ δὲ does in the second clause, 836. Cf. I 356-61, B 353, for similar anacolutha.

835. χρηρίζοντα, needing, else only in Od. (three times).

838. πῶς τ' ἄρ' εἰσι, how can these things be? For the potential opt. without ἄν cf. Δ 318, K 247. Zenod. read ἔην. ῥέξομεν, prob. a dubitative subj.

841. μεθήσω, lit. "I will refrain from thee"; a curious expression. We have μεθίεναι ἀλκῆς and πολέμοιο, but not elsewhere a personal gen. Zenod. read σεῦ ἀμελήσω, which Arist. regarded as less poetical. περ is not elsewhere found after οὐδ' ὥς.

842. ὑπὸ στέρνοιο λαβὼν, i.e. he put his arm round his waist to support him as he walked.

845. περιπευκές, very sharp, only here, but cf. ἐχεπευκές A 51. αὐτοῦ, "it," sc. μηροῦ.

846. ρίζαν πικρὴν, acc. to Schol. A either the Achillea ("yarrow") or Aristolochia, both plants being used as anodynes in Greek medicine.

M

With this book we begin the history of the battle at the wall, which continues through N, Z, and O. As has already been intimated, the original poem must have contained some account of an attack upon the ships. Whether or no the wall played a part in this it is now not in our power to say; nor can we with any plausibility enucleate the original ἐπὶ νηυσὶ μάχη from the later additions in which it is probably embedded.

Like other portions of the Iliad which appear to be additions to the original narrative, M contains some noble speeches and effective single scenes, combined with difficulties in the connecting narrative. Of the former, attention may particularly be drawn to the words of Sarpedon to Glaukos (310-28) and of Hector to Polydamas (231-50), which are among the passages of Homer which have sunk deepest into the minds of men.

The difficulties begin with the exordium. The account of the destruction of the wall differs in several points from the genuine Homeric style. The mention of ἡμίθεοι is quite unlike anything in either Iliad or Odyssey, where the heroes, though superior in strength to αἰὲν ἄνθρωποι, are after all only men; demigods do not appear before Hesiod. The emendation of line 23, ἐν κοίτῃ καὶ Ἀρηὶ θεῶν, proposed by Axt and accepted by Christ, is entirely arbitrary, and no explanation of the supposed corruption is forthcoming. Moreover, the intimate local knowledge of N.W. Asia is, as has been already remarked, a sign of later origin. Besides, the mention of a time later than the war is not like anything else in the Iliad; where such future events are alluded to, they are put into the mouth of a god as prophecies, and not related by the poet in his own person. Hence the whole passage (3-33) must be counted among the later accretions to the poem.

The next stumbling-block is the description of the five-fold division of the Trojan army (86-107). This is forgotten immediately, and never influences the story in any way; the ascription of all the allies to a single division contradicts the passages when they are spoken of as more numerous than all the Trojans (see B 130). It would seem that we have here a trace of the hand which has so often interpolated into the speeches of Nestor untimely displays of tactical erudition. So again the episode of Asios (110-174), though announced with peculiar solemnity, leads to nothing whatever, and is simply left without an ending.

The conservative Nitzsch has thrown considerable doubt on the whole episode of Sarpedon (290-429). From 437-8 it would seem that Hector is meant, as we should expect, to have the glory of breaking through the fortification; yet the first breach is made by Sarpedon, who moreover in II 558 is described in εὐρύ, τὸ ποιήσαντο νεῶν ὑπερ, ἀμφὶ δὲ τάφρον 5 ἦλασαν, οὐδὲ θεοῖσι δόσαν κλειτὰς ἐκατόμβας, δφρα σφιν νῆάς τε θοὰς καὶ ληίδα πολλήν ἐντὸς ἔχον ῥύοιτο· θεῶν δ' ἀέκητι τέτυκτο ἀθανάτων· τὸ καὶ οὐ τι πολὺν χρόνον ἔμπεδον ἦεν.

 δφρα μὲν Ἑκτωρ ζωὸς ἔην καὶ μῆνι' Ἀχιλλεύς 10
 καὶ Πριάμοιο ἄνακτος ἀπόρθητος πόλις ἔπλεν, τόφρα δὲ καὶ μέγα τεῖχος Ἀχαιῶν ἔμπεδον ἦεν.
 αὐτὰρ ἐπεὶ κατὰ μὲν Τρώων θάνον ὅσσοι ἄριστοι, πολλοὶ δ' Ἀργείων οἱ μὲν δάμεν, οἱ δὲ λίποντο, πέρθετο δὲ Πριάμοιο πόλις δεκάτῳ ἑνιαυτῷ, 15
 Ἀργεῖοι δ' ἐν νηυσὶ φίλην ἐς πατρίδ' ἔβησαν, δὴ τότε μητιόωντο Ποσειδάων καὶ Ἀπόλλων τεῖχος ἀμαλδύναι ποταμῶν μένος εἰσαγαγόντες, the very words here used of Hector, as he ὡς πρῶτος ἐσῆλατο τεῖχος Ἀχαιῶν. Moreover both the beginning and the end of the episode are awkward; τότε γε in 290 is out of place, as the actual assault has not been delivered, and in 430 the Trojans suddenly take the place of the Lykians as the attacking party, without a word to explain the transition.

It has further been remarked with some truth that the numerous similes, though beautiful in themselves, are often disproportionately elaborate, and lead up to points which are almost in the nature of an anticlimax. This is particularly the case with 41-50, but several other instances may be noticed.

Among minor difficulties may further be mentioned the obscurity which hangs over the question of the gates in the Greek wall. The narrative of the Iliad never distinctly implies the existence of more than one, the plural πύλαι being regularly used of a single gate; and Aristarchos stoutly maintained that this is the conception of the present book. But the general course of the narrative seems clearly to imply that the attack of Asios is made at a different point from that of Hector, and therefore that there were at least two gates. We can only leave the question in the doubt from which we might have expected the poet to relieve us.

3. ὀμυαδόν, in throngs; the battle is no longer confined to the πρόμαχοι, but all the masses of men on both sides are engaged.

4. ὑπερθεν, as in the phrase πόδες καὶ χεῖρες ὑπερθεν.

6. οὐδὲ δόσαν expresses paratactically what we should render by "without giving"; it explains why the wall οὐκ ἔμελλε σχίσσειν. Compare with this the similar thought in H 443-463.

12. ἔμπεδον ἦεν seems hardly consistent with phrases like those of 399 or O 361, ἔπειπε δὲ τεῖχος Ἀχαιῶν. Hence Schol. A (Porphyrion) mentions an explanation which gave ἔμπεδον here the literal meaning ἐν πεδίῳ κείμενον καὶ μὴ ἀλίπλοον. It has also been objected that δφρα . . . μῆνι' Ἀχιλλεύς implies that the poet of these lines had before him a legend which gave a much longer duration of the μῆνις than the few days ascribed to it by the Iliad, which would be so short a life for the wall as to afford no proper contrast with the picture of its subsequent destruction. But it is clear that the μῆνις is mentioned as the distinguishing mark of the period which required the building of the wall; it is the terminus a quo of the wall, just as the sacking of Troy mentioned in the next line is the terminus ad quem.

14. There is an evident change of thought here; the line begins as though it were to be πολλοὶ δ' Ἀργείων δάμεν, and then, as in δ 495 πολλοὶ μὲν γὰρ τῶν γε δάμεν, πολλοὶ δὲ λίποντο, the thought of those who fell brings up that of the large number who, unlike the Trojan chiefs, survived.

18. ἀμαλδύναι, see on H 463.

20. Compare Hesiod, Theog. 340-5, where all these rivers, excepting Karesos, are named among the offspring of Okeanos and Tethys. Aisepos, Skamandros, and Simoeis (v. E 774, Z 4) are the only three which reappear in Homer. The Granikos is of course famous, but those named in 20 are quite unknown.

22. 88i applies only to the last two named. βοάγρια (only here and π 296), shields of ox-hide, like βοείη and βούτ; lit. "the spoil of an ox" (ἀγρη). So ἀνδράγρια E 509, warrior's spoils. Cf. Verg. Aen. v. 100, "ubi tot Simois correpta sub undis Scuta virum galeasque et fortia corpora volvit."

23. ἡμιθέων, a word which is not only ἀπαξ λεγόμενον in Homer, but is totally inconsistent with his idea of the heroes, who, though of divine descent and stronger than men of his own day, are yet no more than men. The word is found in Hesiod, Opp. 160, ἀνδρῶν ἡρώων θεῶν γένος, of καλέονται ἡμιθεοί, in the thoroughly un-Homeric passage about the successive ages of mankind.

25. For ἐννήμαρ Kallistratos read ἐν δ' ἡμαρ, holding it wrong to suppose that a god would require nine days to destroy what men had built in one. Hentze however shews good reasons for supposing 25-6 to be an interpolation.

ἡγείτο then gives the picture of Poseidon leading the procession of gathered rivers against the wall; whereas with the present text it lacks significance. Besides in H 452-3 a reason is given for the alliance of Apollo and Poseidon in the destruction, but there is no special excuse for the interference of Zeus.

26. For the scansion of συνεχές as a dactyl cf. ι 74 (Ar. συννεχές).

27. The trident as an attribute of Poseidon occurs elsewhere only in the Odyssey.

28. ἐκπῆκται κύμασι, expelled along the waves of the sea: the dat. is comitative, as in 207, πέτετο πνοῆς ἀνέμοιο. H. G. § 144.

29. φιτρῶν and λάων, gen. of material with θεμέλια.

30. λάω, apparently a sort of substantival use, "he made smoothness," made all smooth; compare phrases like οὐκέτι φυκτὰ πέλωται.

33. ἔεν, sc. ἔεσσαν, and so Pind. I. i. 25. There are variants, ἔη (ἔει, as 25) and ἔεν.

34. For ὥς ἄρ' ἔμελλον Zenod. read ὥς ἡμελλον, a form not elsewhere found in Homer, and called "barbarous" by Ar., though it is sufficiently established in later poets (from Theognis onwards).

36. δοῦρατα, beams, not spears, as Ar.

βαλλόμεν'. Ἀργεῖοι δὲ Διὸς μάστιγι δαμέντες νηυσὶν ἐπὶ γλαφυρῇσιν ἐελμένοι ἰσχανόωντο,
 "Ἐκτορα δειδιότες, κρατερὸν μῆστωρα φόβοιο· took it (ἐλλείπει ἢ ἐπὶ, ἢ ἐν' ἢ κανάχιζε δὲ δούρατα ὡς ἐπὶ πύργους βαλλόμενα, Aris-ton., a quite untenable interpretation, based apparently on the use of the simple gen. after verbs of aiming).

37. Cf. N 812, Διὸς μάστιγι κακῇ ἐδάμην Ἀχαιοί. The metaphor expresses the sway which Zeus wields over the battle, driving the armies backward and forward as a horse is driven by a whip—an idea which is more usually given by the metaphor of pulling with a rope. So πλῆγεις Θεοῦ μάστιγι, Aesch. Sept. 608; διπλῇ μάστιγι τὴν Ἀρης φιλεῖ, Ag. 642, etc.

38. ἐελμένοι, some MSS. ἐεργμένοι.

39. μῆστωρα φόβοιο, Δ 328.

40. For ἐμάρνατο Aristoph. read ἐμαίνετο.

41. ὅτ' ἂν followed by the indic. στρέφεται cannot be right; the old assumption that it is a "subjunctive with shortened vowel" is untenable, as the short vowel occurs only where the indicative is non-thematic; see H. G. § 82 ad fin.; Curtius, Vb. ii. 73. Paech conj. ὥς δ' ὅπῳ, Nauck. ἵτε δ', Mr. Monro more ingeniously ὥς δ' ὅτ' ἔναντα (but the dative instead of the genitive is then very strange).

43. πυργηδόν, in serried ranks, cf. Δ 334.

44. ἀντίοι, so MSS., Ar. ἀντίον.

46. φοβεῖται must here mean "fears," in spite of the canon of Ar. that in Homer it always means "to flee"; cf. Δ 544. For the second half of the line cf.

Z 407 δαιμόνιε, φθίσει σε τὸ σὸν μένος, and II 753 ἐγὲ τέ μιν ὤλεσεν ἀλκή.

47. πειρητίζων takes the acc. only here; so that it seems very probable that the line is a faulty adaptation of O 615, καὶ ῥ' ἐθελεν ῥῆξαι στίχας ἀνδρῶν πειρητίζων. This line and the next can hardly be defended; the repetition of στίχας ἀνδρῶν is very harsh, and the aor. ἔκτα following the presents according to the usual practice should mark the end of the simile (II 753, M 305, P 112, 664, Δ 555) (Hentze).

49. MSS. ἐλίσσεθ' or ἐλίσσεθ', but ἐλίσσεθ' or ἐελίσσεθ' appears to have been an ancient variant, as Nikanor says τὸ ἐλίσσετο ἑκατέροις δύναται προσδιδόσθαι, καὶ σημαίνει ἢ τὸ παρεκάλει παρὰ τὸ λίσσεσθαι ἢ ἐστρέφετο παρὰ τὸ ἐλίσσω ῥῆμα. He decides in favour of the former, on account of the awkwardness of the pause in the fifth foot if we have to join ἐταίρους with ἐποτρύνων. But this is a small evil compared with the intolerable anticlimax of ἐλίσσετο after so martial a simile; the more so because, as Mr. Monro has remarked, there is a precisely similar rhythm in 44 θαμειὰς | αἰχμὰς ἐκ χειρῶν, and 51 ἐπ' ἀκρῷ | χεῖλει ἐφεσταότες. Nauck and Christ read ἐ(φ)ελίσσεθ' ἐταίρων after Gerhard. ἐλίσσετο of course gives the required parallel to the repeated στρέφεται in 42 and 47. Cf. 467, κέκλετο δὲ Τρῶεσσιν ἐλίσσμενος καθ' ὄμιλον. Even so it must be admitted that the simile leads us to expect a far more direct attack by Hector than is here described, and the whole passage is open to serious doubt.

τάφρον ἐποτρύνων διαβαινέμεν. οὐδέ οἱ ἵπποι 50 τόλμων ὠκύποδες, μάλα δὲ χρεμέτιζον ἐπ' ἄκρῳ χεῖλει ἐφεσταότες· ἀπὸ γὰρ δευδίσσετο τάφρος εὐρεῖ, οὐτ' ἄρ' ὑπερθορέειν σχεδὸν οὔτε περῆσαι ῥηιδίῃ· κρημνοὶ γὰρ ἐπηρεφέες περὶ πᾶσαν 55

 ὀξέσιν ἡρήρει, τοὺς ἵστασαν υἱες Ἀχαιῶν πυκνοὺς καὶ μεγάλους, δῆϊων ἀνδρῶν ἀλεωρήν.
 ἔνθ' οὐ κεν ῥέα ἵππος ἐύτροχον ἄρμα τιταίνων ἐσβαίῃ, πεζοὶ δὲ μενοίνεον, εἰ τελέουσιν.
 δὴ τότε Πουλυδάμας θρασὺν Ἑκτορα εἶπε παραστάς· 60
 "Ἑκτορ τ' ἡδ' ἄλλοι Τρώων ἀγοὶ ἡδ' ἐπικούρων, ἀφραδέως διὰ τάφρον ἐλαύνομεν ὠκέας ἵππους.
 ἡ δὲ μάλ' ἀργαλήη περᾶν· σκόλοπες γὰρ ἐν αὐτῇ ἔνθ' οὐ πῶς ἔστιν καταβήμεναι οὐδὲ μάχεσθαι 65 ἱππεύσι· στείνος γάρ, ὅθι τρώσεσθαι οἶω.

 εἰ μὲν γὰρ τοὺς πάγχυ κακὰ φρονέων ἀλαπάξει

53. σχεδόν here is not very easy to explain; Mr. Monro takes it to mean "right over," "at a bound," comparing σχέδιος and αὐτοσχέδιος, "immediate," "off-hand." Perhaps it may mean "in order," "in serried ranks," lit. "holding on" to one another; one here or there might cross, but only to be separated from the main body, and attacked in detail. This is closer to the sense of "near," which is elsewhere universal in Homer. In this case it will go with both verbs.

54. κρημνοὶ ἐπηρεφέες, overhanging sides. περὶ πᾶσαν, round all the circuit of the trench.

55. σκολόπεσσιν, stakes arranged along the upper edge, so as to prevent a jumper alighting, like the modern abattis or chevaux de frise.

56. ἵστασαν, MSS. and Ar. ἔστασαν, which is taken to be for ἐστησαν, but is an impossible form. It occurs in other passages, but in each case with the variant ἵστασαν, which has rightly been adopted by edd. (see γ 182, also θ 435, σ 307, B 525, Σ 346). For the imperf. where we use the pluperf. see H. G. § 73; and also § 72, n. 1. Nauck's conj. ἥραρον is needless.

59. For ἐσβαίῃ (get within the circuit) Zen. and Aristoph. read καρβαίῃ, which is possible: see on 65. τελέουσιν, future after historical tense, here only: cf. A 83, σὺ δὲ φράσαι εἰ με σώσεις. μενοίνεον, only here, the form is else always μενοινάω. πεζοὶ is to be taken as part of the predicate, as there is no sharp distinction between horsemen and footmen in Homer; "they were pondering if they should accomplish the passage on foot."

64. ποτὶ δ' αὐτοὺς, "coming up to them;" compare H 337. (So AD Schol. V.: caet. περὶ δ' αὐτοὺς, which is less appropriate, though ποτὶ seems inconsistent with the space left between wall and moat.)

65. Franke and Hentze reject this and the following line, on the ground that the difficulty lies not in the descent, but in the ascent on the opposite side. But for a chariot the descent of a κρημνὸς ἐπηρεφής is as serious a matter as the ascent. The idea seems to be, "we can't even get into the trench with horses, nor, even if we get across, can we fight on the other side; for the space between the wall and the trench is a στεῖνος, too small for chariots."

66. ἱππεύσι, Zen. and Aristoph. ἱππῆας. τρώσεσθαι, "come to harm," as in Herod. τρώμα = defeat.

67. τοὺς is the reading of Aristoph.

Ζεὺς ὑψιβρεμέτης, Τρώεσσι δὲ ἴετ' ἀρήγειν, ἦ τ' ἂν ἐγὼ γ' ἐθέλοιμι καὶ αὐτίκα τοῦτο γενέσθαι, εἰ δέ χ' ὑποστρέψωσι, παλῶξις δὲ γένηται αὐτοὶ δὲ πρυλῆες σὺν τεύχεσι θωρηχθέντες οἱ μὲν ἅμ' Ἐκτορ' ἴσαν καὶ ἀμύμονι Πουλυδάμαντι, οἱ πλεῖστοι καὶ ἄριστοι ἔσαν, μέμασαν δὲ μάλιστα τεύχος ῥηξάμενοι κοίλῃς ἐπὶ νηυσὶ μάχεσθαι. 90

(Schol. A) or Aristarchos (Schol. V): MSS. δη.

68. ἴετ' ἀρήγειν, ὅπως πᾶσαι (i.e. Ar. and all the old editions), Did.: MSS. (exc. L) βοῦλετ'.

69-70 are to be taken parenthetically, the apodosis to εἰ μὲν in 67 being understood, or rather superseded; "if Zeus means to destroy them—that is what I wish to happen at once." Obviously εἰ μὲν does not express a condition of his wishing the enemy destroyed. Cf. A 135-137.

71. ὑποστρέψωσι may be either intrans., "turn against us" (A 446), or "turn us back." παλῶξις for παλι-ῶξις, and hence always with long α.

72. ἐνιπλήξωμεν, lit. "stumble upon," get entrapped by, like the birds in χ 469 which ἔρκει ἐνιπλήξωσιν. So also O 344. This shews that in 65 he is thinking of a battle in the space between the wall and trench.

74. ἐλιχθέντων, "rallied"; for the order of words cf. B 334. There is no ground for taking ἐλιχθέντων with some to mean "turned back by the Greeks," contrary to the regular use of the word.

77. πρυλῆες, predicate, "on foot": see A 49.

79. πείρατ' ἐφήπται, H 102.

87. For ἔποντο there is a variant ἕκαστος in A, ἕκαστοι in L; the latter is mentioned by Nicanor. This of course must be followed by a comma instead of a full stop. This division of the army into five bodies is quite forgotten in the following narrative; the allies, who are here (101) made into a single division, are elsewhere represented as far outnumbering the Trojans. It is probable therefore that 81-107 are an interpolation.

90. For this line most MSS. of the inferior class give τεύχος τι ῥήξαι καὶ ἐνιπρῆσαι πρυὶ νῆας (from 198).

καί σφιν Κεβριόνης τρίτος εἶπετο· παρ δ' ἄρ' ὄχεσφιν

91. Kebriones was chosen by Hector as his charioteer in Θ 318. τρίτος: it will be observed that each division has three leaders named.

93. ἐτέρων, the second body, as H 420, etc. With this enumeration compare the catalogue of the Trojans, B 816-877; the Dardanii there (819-823) seem to compose the fourth division here. B 838-9 = M 96-7. The leaders of the second division are not named in the Catalogue.

101. ἤγειτο, so L for ἤγησας of all other MSS.; this is probably right, as the preceding verbs have all been in the imperf.; the desire to avoid the legitimate hiatus in the main caesura has frequently led to corruptions of this sort, as Ahrens has pointed out. The aor. would mean, not "was in command of," but "put himself at the head of."

105. βόεσσιν, shields, see H 238.

This seems to indicate a rudimentary sort of testudo, cf. 86.

106. For οὐδ' ἔτ' MSS. give οὐδέ τ' (corrected by Barnes).

107. The subject of σχήσεσθαι is probably, from the use of ἔφαντο, Δαναοίς: they fancied that the Greeks would no longer hold their ground. But there is an ambiguity as usual; it may mean "they thought they would no longer be stopped, but would fall upon the ships." See note on I 235.

112. σὺν αὐτοῖσιν, not simply "with them," but a form of the phrase αὐτοῖς τοῖς ἵπποις, "horses and all." His fate, which is here alluded to, does not follow, as we should expect, in this attack, which leads to nothing in particular except the withdrawal of Aias and Teukros from Hector's point of attack, but is postponed till N 384.

116. δυσώνυμος, cf. Z 255 δυσώνυμοι υἱες Ἀχαιῶν, τ 571 ἦδε δὴ ἥως εἰσι δυσώνυμος: "hardly to be named," accursed. ἀμφεκάλυψεν: the metaphor is given fully in II 350 θανάτου νέφος ἀμφεκάλυψεν, cf. T 417, E 68. The idea is that of death darkening the eyes like a cloud (see II 333).

117. Δευκαλίδαι, son of Denkalion, the patronymic being formed from the short form of the name; so Ἀνθεμίδης Δ 488 = son of Anthemion, Δ 473.

118. μάχης ἐπ' ἀριστερά, see Δ 498.

119. νίσσοντο may mean either "were (now) going" or "were wont to go." The latter is preferable, as there is no mention of an attack on any stragglers, and ei with opt. in 122 perhaps implies that there were none. There is of course a causeway over the trench by which Asios drives across (διήλασεν).

120. πύλῃσιν is here used of a single gate. Ar. held that there was only one gate in the whole wall, but this is hardly consistent with 340 (q.v.) or the general course of the narrative, which seems to imply that Asios and Hector attacked at different points. A comparison of N

312 and 679 shows that the gate which Hector forces is in the middle of the wall, not ἐπ' ἀριστερά, as here. We may therefore conclude, as the reason of the case seems to demand, that the poet looks upon the wall as having two gates at least; though he does not need, for the sake of the narrative, to speak of more than one at a time. (175 would be decisive if it were genuine.)

122. Cf. Φ 531, πεπταμένας ἐν χερσὶ πύλας ἔχει, εἰς δ' κε λαοὶ ἔλθωσι πρότι ἄστυ πεφυζότες.

125. κεκλήγοντες, so most MSS.: Ar. hesitated between this and κεκληγότες. See H. G. § 26 (1), 27, and Curtius, Vb. ii. 24, 180.

126. See 107. σχήσεσθαι, as P 639.

127. Zenod. and Aristoph. read ἀνέρε . . . ἀρίστῳ, υἱε ὑπερθύμῳ, which can hardly be right, as the hiatus in the trochaic caesura of the first foot is very rare and probably not permissible. The name of the Lapithae occurs only here (and 181) in the Iliad, though some of their chiefs are named in A 263, q.v. For Leonteus and Polypoites see B 740-747.

μέμνον ἐπερχόμενον μέγαν Ἄσιον οὐδὲ φέβοντο.

137. βόας αὔας, see on βῶν ἀγέλην, H 238. For ἔκιον Zen. and Aristoph. read κίετην.

141. εἰς (MSS. εἰως as usual), for a while. In this sense it is always followed by μέν, N 143, O 277, P 730, β 148, γ 126. In several of these passages the more usual τείως occurs as a variant, and so (τῆς) Nauck would read here.

142. ὄρνυον, "had been inciting": the narrative here reverts to the moment preceding the attack of Asios, when the Lapithae are still on the walls. Hence in 142 ἑόντες, the reading of Ar. and best MSS., is clearly preferable to the variant ἑόντας.

147. δέχεται, an anomalous form, acc. to Curtius a non-thematic present, cf. ἔδ-μεναι and the participle δέχμενος, for which there is some authority, as it is given as a variant by A on I 191, and Hesych., δέχμενος· προσδεχόμενος. Buttmann and others regard it as a perf.

with reduplication lost, as the sense of "awaiting" generally belongs to the reduplicated forms (with the exception of δέχμενος). For other possible cases of the loss of reduplication in the perfect see H. G. § 23 (5).

148. δοχμῷ, cf. "verris obliquum meditantis ictum," Hor. Carm. iii. 22, 7.

149. Cf. A 417.

151. Observe how a mere detail in the original scheme of the simile is here made the base of a fresh simile. Ameis refers for similar "double-sided" comparisons to O 623 ff, N 795 ff. κομπέειν occurs only here.

153. Zen. appears to have read λάουσιν for λαοῖσιν, and to have explained it as = λάεσσιν, "trusting to the stones thrown from above." Observe the use of καθύπερθε used attributively with the subst., where later Greek would require the addition of a participle, ὄντιν or the like.

πάντῃ γὰρ περὶ τείχος ὁρώρει θεσπιδαῆς πῦρ

160. ἡδὲ καὶ ἐκ Τρώων is a curious way of adding the alternative. μένον too is a strange verb to use with βέλεα. Hence doubts have been thrown on the lines. αὖτον αὐτεὺν, cf. καρφαλέον ἔνεον N 409, “fragor aridus,” Verg., and “sonus aridus,” Lucretius.

161. βαλλόμεναι, so MSS. and Zenod.: Ar. βαλλομένων. μυλάκεσσι, as large as millstones, cf. μυλοειδέι πέτρῳ H 270.

163. ἀλαστήσας only here, O 21 ἡλάσσειν δὲ θεοί, and α 252 ἐπαλαστήσασα. The explanation of the word depends on that of ἀλαστος, which is generally derived from λαθ, in the sense “not to be forgotten,” which suits wherever it is an epithet of ἄχος or πένθος. But in X 261, Ἔκτορ ἀλαστε, this does not suit, nor is it easy to deduce the sense of the verb from it (“to feel things intolerable, lit. not to be forgotten,” hence “to break out in protest,” as Mr. Monro and others explain, is very artificial). It is preferable therefore with some of the ancient grammarians to derive ἀλαστος (or perhaps rather ἀλαστός) from *ἀλάζω, a by-form of ἀλά-ομαι with the sense of ἀλύω. The adjective will then mean “mad,” “distracted,” and the verb ἀλαστέω “to be distressed, at one’s wit’s end.”

164. The accusation seems to refer to the promise in A 207 sqq.: cf. Θ 170-182.

167. αἰόλοι, bright-coloured, variegated. Others after Buttmann take it to mean “flexible,” from the thin waist of the wasp: cf. T 404, πόδας αἰόλος ἱππος. The same ambiguity arises in line 208 αἰόλον ὄφιν, X 509 αἰόλοι εὐλαί.

169. Observe the transition from the subjunctive to the more graphic indicative.

170. ἄνδρας may be taken either with μένοντες, when for ἀμύνονται περὶ compare 243, or better with ἀμύνονται.

175-181. These lines have been universally regarded as spurious since the days of Zenodotos. 175 is adapted from O 414. In 176 the introduction of the poet’s personality is a mark of a late origin, cf. B 484, 761, etc. In 177 τείχος is violently separated from λαῖνον, and the mention of fire is quite out of place, as the Trojans have not yet reached the ships, and indeed only a few have even crossed the trench. In 181 the phrase συμβαλεῖν πόλεμον is unique. Lachmann conjectures that these lines may have taken the place of a passage recounting the end of Asios’ attack, which is at present forgotten while in a very unfinished stage.

178. It has been proposed to join λάινον with πῦρ and explain it of "the flame of battle carried on with stones." This is however even less possible than to join λάινον with τεῖχος, however unnatural the order of the words is, and however feeble the adjective in the emphatic place.

186. See A 98.

189. For the ζωστήρ see Δ 132. τυγχήσας is to be taken, as elsewhere, with βάλε, "hit his mark": cf. Δ 106.

192. αὐτοσχεδίν, sc. πληγῇ, as E 830 τύπον δὲ σχεδίν. οὐδεὶ ἐρείσθη, Ar. οὐδας ἐρεισεν, as Δ 144, q. v.

196. οἳ is here the relative, and so in the next line, which is added to describe those here named; in 199 it is demonstrative. Cf. 88-89.

199. μερμήριζον: the narrative reverts to the μερόντων εἰ τελέουσιν of 59.

201. ἐέργων, "skirting the host on his left," i.e. flying along the line in front from right to left. For this sense of ἐέργειν cf. Herod. vii. 43, ἐπορεύετο ἐνθεύτεν ἐν ἀριστερῇ μὲν ἀπέργων Ῥοίτειον πόλιν, and so vii. 109, etc. It is derived from that of boundding, as B 845, etc.

202. φοινῆεντα only here and 220; cf. δαφουῖος of a snake, B 308.

203. ἔτι seems to go with ζῶν, δοταίροντα explaining it. λήθετο, the snake.

204. It is not quite clear whether αὐτόν is acc. after κόψε, and means him, the eagle; or after ἔχοντα, the eagle holding him (self, the snake). Perhaps the passage originally was κόψε δὲ ἦ αὐτὸν ἔχοντα, struck him (F for ε, the eagle) holding him (the snake). The difficulty, if we take αὐτὸν with κόψε, is to see the exact force of the emphatic pronoun; Mr. Monro holds that the emphasis implies “struck at him in return.” Herodianus read γὰρ αὐτον, holding that αὐτος could be used in a non-emphatic sense, and was then enclitic.

207. κλάγξας, the eagle's cry, called a yelp by Tennyson. For πέτετο Plato, Ion 539 B, where this passage is quoted, gives ἔπετο. πνοιῆς, a comitative dat.; see on κύμασι, 28. ἀμα πν. ἀνέμοιο is the usual phrase.

208. αἰόλον, “glistening” or “wriggling,” see on 167. ὄφιν occurs only here in Homer. The lengthening of the first syllable must be due to the ictus alone: cf. ξεφυρή, η 119. Curtius (Et. p. 505) thinks it is for ὄπ-φίς, from ὄπ (ακ) to see, “the bright-eyed.” The same scan-sion is found in the choliambic of Hipponax (fr. 49, 6, Bergk), ἦν αὐτὸν ὄφιν τῶντι κνήμιον δάκνῃ.

211. This exordium is very strange after the speech of Polydamas in 80 sqq., where he gives advice such as Hector immediately follows. He uses the same tone again in speaking to Hector, N 726 ff. Fick boldly omits 211-215, a step which, if it can be justified, removes the difficulty; but it makes a very abrupt beginning to the speech, without the usual form of address; a peculiarity which in A 293 is evidently meant to have an effect of its own.

212. The repetition of the negative gives a rhetorical emphasis; the second οὐδέ going more especially with the verb, cf. οὐδέ ἔοικεν, A 119 and often: e.g. ε 212, οὐ πῶς οὐδέ ε.

213. δῆμον in the sense of “one of the vulgar” is a strange use, as the tendency of δῆμος is so decidedly to express the total community as opposed to any individual. Hence Bentley's conj. δῆμον ἔοντα is probably right; cf. δῆμον ἄνδρα B 198. Horace's “plebs eris,” Ep. i. 1, 59, may be an imitation, but proves nothing. παρὲξ, “wrongly” (from Hector's point of view—a touch of irony). This sense is else only Odyssean: δ 348, ρ 139, ψ 16; cf. ξ 168.

214. ἀέξειν, supply εἴκοι from 212.

217. εἰ here assumes as a fact, and virtually = since.

218. ὄρνις ἦλθε, so Ar.; MSS. ὄρνις ἐπῆλθε: but the shortening of the ε could hardly be defended, cf. I 323.

219 is here omitted by the best MSS.

222. ἐτέλεσσε, completed his journey, φέρων δόμεναι being taken together. For this pregnant sense of τελέω cf. η

227. δηώσωσιν, so best MSS.; Bekker with some inferior ones reads δηώσουσιν.

229. For the gen. after οἶσθα see H. G. § 151 d; and for the transition from the rel. to the anaphoric cf compare A 79, etc.

231-234 = H 357-360.

236. For this promise see the note on 164.

237. Paley suggests that a note of interrogation should be put after πείθεσθαι, which gives more force to the emphatic τύνη: "are you the one to persuade me?"

239. It is not to be concluded from this passage that the Homeric augur necessarily looked towards the north. The omens from birds in Homer come casually, and are not sought for as by a Roman; and though a bird on the right hand is lucky, it appears to be so even when we must assume that the observer is looking S. (as in K 274). In this case the Trojans happen to be looking N., and the bird, it seems, appears on their right; but the significance of the omen is judged, not by its position, but by the concomitant details, to be unfavourable; partly perhaps because it is flying towards the unlucky quarter, the realm of darkness. It would appear therefore that the interpretation depended (1) on the direction of the bird, to right or left (cf. Ω 312, Ν 821, ω 311; the appearance of birds on the right is lucky also in the Vedas, see Nägelsbach, H. T. p. 432); (2) on the direction in which it was flying, to E. or W.; (3) on the accompanying circumstances. Of these (2) occurs as significant only in this passage, and it would seem that (3) in all cases gives the meaning if possible; the exceptions being cases like a flash of lightning or a bird heard in the darkness, which do not present any details beyond the mere fact of their appearance. It may be noticed that this indifference of Hector to omens is in the spirit of the Homeric age; the art of augury is little developed and has little positive effect at any time. Signs encourage or discourage a resolution already taken, but they never determine or prevent any enterprise as they did in later times. Indeed they are elsewhere lightly spoken of: e.g. β 181, ὄρνιθες δὲ τε πολλοὶ ὑπ' αὐγὰς ἡελίου φαίτωσ'· οὐδὲ τε πάντες ἐναίσιοι.

245. περί, all around, in every direction.

250 = A 433. 244-250 were bracketed by Bekker; a modern poet would certainly not have added them after the fine climax in 243, but in matters such as this modern taste is not decisive; a modern poet would have closed the Agamemnon with the murder. The sudden change of thought with asyndeton in 244 is softened by the emphatic σύ, which takes up again the τῆν of 237, and the unjust and violent reproach is not inconsistent with the character of Hector.

255. θάγε, befooled, bewitched. The verb, which is much commoner in the Od. than Il., means "to charm" in either a good sense (e.g. ρ 514) or a bad, as here, N 435, etc.: cf. Ω 343.

258. κρόσσας was explained by Ar. to mean "scaling ladders"; he then had to make πύργων mean "towards the towers." This is clearly impossible: the word must indicate some part of the fortification and be distinct from the ἐπάλξεις, which we may presume to have been a wooden breastwork. It is not possible to give a closer explanation of the word, which recurs in H. only in 444. Herodotus uses it once of the steps of the pyramids. It might seem reasonable therefore to understand it here of courses of masonry; only that the wall seems to have been no more than an earthwork. In any case these courses would hardly have been arranged so as to form steps for an assailant, as would follow, if this interpretation be right, from 444. Others take it to mean a single course of coping-stones on which the breastwork was built; others again explain it of the battlements proper, i.e. high pieces of the breastwork between the embrasures; but there is no other indication of such construction. The question is not elucidated by the adj. προκρόσσας in Ξ 35, nor has any convincing derivation been proposed. πύργων probably means no more than "the fortification"; see H 338. The στήλαι προβλήτες are evidently posts, probably of wood, fixed into the ground in order to hold up the earth and give a steep face to the "profile" of the works, like the modern "revetment."

261. αὔερουν, see on A 459. The imperf. here and in the preceding lines is of course conative.

262. κελεύθου, cf. Γ 406, θεῶν δ' ἀπόεικε κελεύθου. It seems to be identical with our vernacular “to get out of the way,” i.e. the place where men are going up and down. Cf. Α 504.

263. φράξαντες, stopping up the gaps where the battlements had been broken down. ῥινοῖσι βοῶν is generally taken to mean “with shields,” but in this sense ῥινοῖσι alone is the usual phrase (Δ 447, Θ 61), and the addition of βοῶν perhaps indicates that they had whole hides ready at hand for the purpose of temporarily stopping breaches; a simple and effective device.

265. κελευτιόωντε recurs only in N 125: it is of the desiderative class, though in sense “imitative rather than desiderative,” “playing the leader” (Curtius, Vb. ii. 388). It is the only instance of this formation in H.

268. νεῖκεον for νεκέοντες, a relapse into the direct narrative form, as in Σ 535-7, Θ 346, Γ 80. The line is however superfluous, and Nauck is perhaps right in doubting its authenticity.

269. μεσῆεις, ἀπαξ εἰρημένον. For similar formations cf. ὀδυρεῖς, φαιδιμβεῖς. As a rule adjectives in -εις are only formed from substantives. Perhaps therefore we must assume here a form μέση used as an abstract substantive, as if = “middleness.”

270. πω = πως, see on Γ 306.

271. ἔπλετο: for this use of the aor. see H. G. §§ 32, 78.

273. ὁμοκλητῆρος ἀκούσας, a phrase which recurs in Ψ 452, and is more intelligible there. The word is regularly used of one who urges on by loud reproof. If this is the sense here, the participle must be entirely separated from the negative, and we must understand “let no man turn back, now that he has heard one who urges him on.” Otherwise it must mean “let no man turn because he hears a shout,” viz. the shout of the foe. The first alternative is more probable, though there is mentioned in A a variant ἀκούων, which would restrict us to the second.

274. πρόσω, so Mr. Monro with three MSS. (L S Syr), L. Meyer and Christ; the rest give πρόσω. But Mr. Monro remarks that ἴεμαι in the sense of “pressing forward” regularly has the l long, and is treated as though it began with a consonant, e.g. B 154, οἰκαδε ἱεμένων.

276. For νεῖκος in the sense of “battle,” cf. Δ 444, etc., and νεῖκος πολέμοιο N 271. It is strange that Ar. should have read νίκος, βοῦλεται γὰρ λέγεσθαι τῆς νίκης τὴν ἦτταν (i.e. he took νίκος = νίκην, in the sense of the enemy's victory).

277. προβοῶντε, cheering on; only here. In “some of the ὑπομήματα” Ar. read προβάοντε, marching forward;

τῶν δ', ὥς τε νιφάδες χιόνος πίπτωσι θαμειαὶ ἡματι χειμερίῳ, ὅτε τ' ὤρετο μητίετα Ζεὺς νιφέμεν, ἀνθρώποισι πιφασκόμενος τὰ δ' κῆλα· 280

 ὥς τῶν ἀμφοτέρωσσε λίθοι πωτῶντο θαμειαί, καλὴν χαλκείην ἐξήλατον, ἣν ἄρα χαλκεὺς 295

for which form see Curtius, Vb. i. 213, where προβῶντες is quoted from Kratinos and ἐκβῶντες from the (Doric) treaty in Thuc. v. 77.

278. τῶν is taken up again and given a construction in 287. For the simile cf. 156.

280. τὰ δ' κῆλα, these his missiles. κῆλον happens to be used only of divine weapons. The clause seems to indicate an extraordinary fall of snow.

281. For ἐμπεδον the variant ἀσπετον in the Μασσαλιωτική is worth noticing. In 283 the same edition had λωτοῦντα, which is followed by Ar.: MSS. λωτεῦντα, which must be a participle. Hesych. λωτεῦντα, ἀνθοῦντα. Against Ar.'s reading it must be observed that no adj. in -οεις in Homer is contracted into -οῦς.

284. ἀκταῖς: this form of the dat. pl. is unique in the Iliad; θεαῖς in ε 119, πάσαις χ 471, are the only other cases in H. Hence Nauck would reject 284-6. It may be added that Friedländer would reject 281-286 on the ground that the simile is disproportionately long, and that the description in these six lines tends to weaken rather than to improve the comparison. But the way in which 287 returns to the point of 278 seems to invalidate this criticism; and one could not without reluctance condemn one of the finest descriptive passages in ancient poetry.

285. ἐρύκεται, stops it, keeps it off. This use of the middle is found only here. προσπλάζον, beating up against it. Cf. A 351, B 132, Φ 269. The verb is conn. with πληγῇ, not with πέλας. For ἄλλα τε of MSS., Heyne followed by most edd. reads ἄλλα δέ, which is a little simpler but not necessary, as we can take the clause κύμα . . . ἐρύκεται as parenthetical, so that τε is co-ordinate with (καὶ) τε in the preceding line.

287. πωτῶντο, so MSS.: the form is found only here, and no doubt we ought to read ποτᾶντο, cf. ἀμφεποτᾶτο B 315, ποτῶνται B 462. λίθοι fem. as τ 494, in the same sense as masc.; in later Greek the fem. is confined to precious stones.

289. βαλλομένων, a reciprocal middle, "as they cast at one another," here only (so La Roche).

293. ἐλιξιν, see on I 466.

294. μὲν, as though δύο δὲ δοῦρε (298) were to follow; the construction is forgotten in the description of the shield.

295. ἐξήλατον (so Zen.), hammered out, explained by ἦλασεν in the next line, for which Zen. read ἐξέλασ': this very probably is right (as in Herod. i. 50, 68), and has been altered to suit the reading of Ar., ἐξήλατον, explained to ἤλασεν, ἔντοσθεν δὲ βοείας ῥάψει θαμειᾶς

mean "in six layers." But this could only mean "six-hammered." Besides, the Homeric shield has only one layer of metal (see J. H. S. iv. 288); whenever more layers are mentioned, they are always, as here, of leather (T 271-2 are undoubtedly spurious).

297. The most probable explanation of the ῥάβδοι is that of Grashof, according to which the backing of the shield consists of a framework of rods fastened into a central boss (the reverse side of the ομφαλός), and arranged radially all round the circle of the shield. Upon these the hides were sewn. The ῥάβδοι here are golden, like the κανόνες in Nestor's shield (which are perhaps the same; cf. Θ 193), because the weapon is something extraordinary; in the common shield they were of course of wood. (Helbig, H. E. p. 281, explains ῥάβδοις to mean geometrical ornaments on the face; but he has to make the violent assumption that a line has been lost after 296. Others take the ῥάβδοι to be pegs or nails driven through (διηνεκέσιν) the leather; but there is no reason why in this case the ordinary ῥάβδον should not have been used.)

302. παρ' αὐτόφιν, sc. παρὰ τοῖς μῆλοις. Cf. ἐπ' αὐτόφιν T 255.

304. ἀπείρητος, here in active sense, "without an effort," cf. πειρήσονται above. δέεσθαι, to flee, intrans. only here and Ψ 475, else always = to pursue. It goes with σταθμοῖο, as σ 8 Ὀδυσῆα διώκετο ὡς δόμοιο.

306. This line seems to be wrongly adapted from Δ 675, where ἐν πρώτοισι has its regular meaning, "among the foremost of his own side"; here it must mean among the foremost of the enemy. (So 299-301 come from § 130-4.) It has also been remarked that the very martial simile is hardly suitably followed by the "almost elegiac" speech to Glaukos. It is possible that the two passages beginning αὐτίκα δέ (294-308, and 309-329) are alternative readings; if not, the former, which does not fit on to 330, must be the interpolation.

311. See the notes on Δ 262, H 321, Θ 162, and for 313-4 see on Z 194-5; 316 = Δ 342. For τῷ in 315 see A 418.

318. The MSS. read ἀκλεῖς or ἀκλεῖς. Did. says οὕτως "ἀκλεῖς" (sic) αὐτὰρ Ἀριστάρχου καὶ αὐτὰρ χαρίεστεραι. Schol. Vict. ἀκλεῖς οὕτως. ἀκλεῖς δὲ Ἀριστάρχου κατὰ συγκοπὴν, ὡς τὸ "δυσκλέα" (B 115). ἀκλεῖς would be in accordance with the rule observed in our present Homeric texts (see H. G. § 105, 5), but it does not scan. Ludwig conjectures that the reading of Ar. was οὐ μὰν ἀκλεῖς, αὐτὰρ Λυκίην κ.τ.λ. I prefer to see in the fact that Ar. read some form ending in -es, not in -eis, an indication that there survived till his time a tradition of the form ἀκλε(F)es, which is certainly the correct one, and have accordingly followed Nauck in adopting it in the text. The authority of Schol. V in such a matter is nil.

320. With οἶνον supply πίνουσι (zeugma). ἔξαιτον, "choice," else only Od. (e.g. β 307): the derivation is doubtful. Compare the γερούσιον οἶνον of Δ 259.

324. Hentze puts a colon after ἔσσεσθαι, thus taking εἰ μὲν . . . μέλλοιμεν as a wish which has not passed into a regular conditional protasis. The difficulty of saying whether or no this is the case well illustrates the transition by which, as L. Lange has shewn, the conditional sentence arises.

326. γάρ in this proleptic use, familiar in later Greek, is virtually = ἐπεὶ, and as νῦν δὲ really goes with ἐφεστᾶσιν as much as with ἴομεν, it is better not to mark the clause ἐμπης . . . ὑπαλύξαι as a parenthesis, though it is from this parenthetic use that γάρ obtains this sense. "But since, as it is (νῦν δὲ), in any case death impends," etc. (See H. G. § 348, 2.)

331. For Menestheus see B 552.

332. The repetition of πύργον in this line and the next causes some difficulty, as the sense must be slightly changed. Hence Bekker, followed by several edd., reads τεῖχος in 333, without authority. Others take πύργον Ἀχαιῶν to mean the army of the A.; but πύργος when used of a body of men would seem to indicate a formation of a limited number for service in the field (Δ 334, 347) rather than a host generally, even when defending a wall as here. It is therefore best to take πύργον in both lines in the sense of wall rather than tower; and to understand τοῦ πρὸς πύργον as meaning "to his part of the wall." It is very seldom clear that πύργος must mean "a tower" (X 97, Δ 462, are the strongest cases), while there are very many passages in which it must mean "wall," or "fortification," and not "tower" alone.

334. ἀρὴν, al. Ἀρην, an uncertainty

ἐς δ' ἐνόησ' Αἴαντε δῶν, πολέμου ἀκορήτω, 335
 ἐσταότας, Τεῦκρόν τε νέον κλισίηθεν ἴοντα, καὶ πυλέων· πάσας γὰρ ἐπύχετο, τοὶ δὲ κατ' αὐτὰς ἰστάμενοι πειρῶντο βίῃ ρήξαντες ἐσελθεῖν.

 αἶψα δ' ἐπ' Αἴαντα προτεῖ κήρυκα Θωῶτην· “ ἔρχεο, διὲ Θωῶτα, θέων Αἴαντα κάλεσσον, ἀμφοτέρω μὲν μᾶλλον· ὃ γάρ κ' ὄχ' ἄριστον ἀπάντων 345 εἴη, ἐπεὶ τάχα τῇδε τετεύξεται αἰπὺς δλεθρος· ὧδε γὰρ ἔβρισαν Λυκίων ἀγοί, οἱ τὸ πάρος περ ζαχρηεῖς τελέθουσι κατὰ κρατερὰς ὑσμῖνας.
 εἰ δέ σφιν καὶ κεῖθι πόνος καὶ νείκος δρωρεν, ἀλλὰ περ οἷος ἵτω Τελαμώνιος ἄλκιμος Αἴας, καὶ οἱ Τεῦκρος ἅμα σπέσθω τόξων ἐν εἰδῶς.” 350 which often arises. So in Σ 485, Σ 100, Ar. read $\Lambda\rho\omega$ for $\delta\rho\eta$. In β 59 however $\delta\rho\eta$ is used of disaster not of a warlike nature, so that it seems best to adhere to the text.

336. This line evidently refers to Θ 334, where Teukros is taken to his tent after being wounded by Hector.

337. $\epsilon\gamma\gamma\acute{\upsilon}\theta\epsilon\nu$, the station of the Telemonian Aias was next the Athenians, B 558. $\beta\acute{o}\sigma\alpha\nu\tau\iota$: this contracted form occurs only here, and hardly seems Epic. G. Meyer however proposes to explain it as for $\beta\omicron\phi\text{-}\sigma\alpha\nu\tau\iota$, from a pres. $\beta\omicron\phi\text{-}\omega$. $\gamma\epsilon\gamma\omega\nu\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$, to make himself heard, as usual.

340. For the form $\pi\upsilon\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\omega\nu$ see H 1. $\pi\acute{\alpha}\sigma\alpha\iota$ and $\epsilon\pi\acute{\upsilon}\chi\alpha\tau\omicron$ are the readings of A with Ar., $\pi\acute{\alpha}\sigma\alpha\varsigma$ and $\epsilon\pi\acute{\upsilon}\chi\epsilon\tau\omicron$ of most of the rest, with Zen. The latter seems to require $\delta\alpha\tau\eta$ as the subject of the verb, “the noise had reached all the gates,” cf. δ 451. Ar. explained his reading to mean “the whole gate had been shut” (it will be remembered that he held that there was only one gate in all the wall). But if $\epsilon\pi\acute{\upsilon}\chi\alpha\tau\omicron$ be read it would seem to come from $\epsilon\pi\omicron\iota\gamma\omega$ and this sense can hardly be got out of it. It would be better therefore to read $\epsilon\pi\acute{\omega}\chi\alpha\tau\omicron$, and derive it from $\epsilon\pi\acute{\epsilon}\chi\omega$ on the not very sufficient analogy of $\delta\chi\omega\kappa\alpha$ (see B 218); for the sense of “holding close shut” cf. the phrase $\epsilon\pi\acute{\epsilon}\chi\epsilon\upsilon\tau\alpha\ \tau\acute{\alpha}\ \acute{\omega}\tau\alpha$, $\tau\acute{\omicron}\ \sigma\acute{\omicron}\mu\alpha$. But this is unsatisfactory; it looks as though Ar. had altered the reading, or adopted a bad variant, in order to save his theory of a single gate. Yet even with his reading $\pi\acute{\alpha}\sigma\alpha\iota$ must mean “all the gates”; there is no point in saying “the whole gate.” See note on B 809.

342. For $\Lambda\alpha\upsilon\alpha\tau\alpha$ in this line and the next Zen. read $\Lambda\alpha\upsilon\alpha\tau\epsilon$, which is found also in Syr.

344. $\mu\acute{\epsilon}\nu\ \mu\acute{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\omicron\nu$, the $\mu\acute{\alpha}\lambda\iota\sigma\tau\alpha\ \mu\acute{\epsilon}\nu$ of Attic prose; the compar. being here used because there are only two alternatives. $\delta = \tau\acute{\omicron}$, as Ψ 9, ω 190.

346. $\acute{\omega}\delta\epsilon\ \delta\alpha\tau\iota\ \tau\omicron\upsilon\ \sigma\theta\tau\omega\varsigma$, Ariston. It was one of Aristarchos' canons that $\acute{\omega}\delta\epsilon$ always meant “thus,” never “here,” in Homer. Zen. took it to be “here,” as he read $\kappa\epsilon\iota\sigma\epsilon$ in 359, and he is not improbably right, as it seems arbitrary to deny to Homer a use so common in later Greek, and so much more natural both in this passage and Σ 392.

347. $\zeta\alpha\chi\rho\eta\epsilon\varsigma$, cf. E 525, and for the present after $\pi\acute{\alpha}\rho\omicron\varsigma\ \pi\epsilon\rho$, indicating that a state of affairs in the past still remains, A 553.

350. $\delta\theta\epsilon\rho\epsilon\acute{\iota}\tau\alpha\iota$ by Ar. and Aristoph., apparently merely on the ground that no special summons was needed for Teukros, who always shot from under the shield of Aias. For the question between $\acute{\alpha}\mu\alpha\ \sigma\pi\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\theta\omega$ or $\acute{\alpha}\mu\prime\ \epsilon\sigma\pi\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\theta\omega$ see on E 423. The former is given here by H Syr.

355. ἡνώγει, imperf. where we should expect a present, cf. B 28 ἐκέλευσε.

365. For αὐτίκ' Ὀϊλιάδην Zen. read αὐτίκ' ἄρ' Ἰλιάδην, perhaps a reminiscence of an older αὐτίκα Ἰλιάδην, cf. B 527, N 203, 712, O 333, in all of which Ἰλιάδης is found as a variant; and compare Ἰλιάδα, the probable reading in Pind. O. ix. 112.

371. κασίγνητος καὶ ὄπατρος, son of the same mother and father, as A 257. κασίγνητος is elsewhere used in a more general sense (e.g. O 545, II 456), but here the addition of ὄπατρος seems to shew that it means a brother uterine

(cf. T 293). In that case it is in contradiction with Θ 284 (q.v.) Τεύκρον, νόθον περ ὄντα. It is however perhaps possible to take καὶ ὄπατρον exegetically, "his brother, to wit the son of his father."

372. This line was athetized by Ar. on the ground that Teukros did not need any one to carry his bow for him (Schol. V).

374. For the dat. ἐπειγομένοισι cf. H 7 (Townl. reads ἐλδομένοισι here also), H. G. §§ 143, 246. The apodosis begins with the next line.

381. ὑπέρτατος, the top of a heap of stones piled up by way of ammunition against the breastwork.

382. For χεῖρεςσ' ἀμφοτέρῃς, χείρι γε τῇ ἐτέρῃ is mentioned by Did. as a reading of al κονύτεραι, and is found also in A (text) and five or six other MSS. There is also a variant φέρει for έχοι. Ar. remarked with justice that the mention of one hand ἐκλείπει τὴν ἰσχυὴν τοῦ Αἰαντος. For the disparagement of men of the present day cf. E 304.

384. See E 743 for τετράφαλον.

385 = μ 413. For the comparison to a man "taking a header" cf. II 742-750, where the idea is worked out. Paley quotes also Eur. Suppl. 692, ἐς κρᾶτα πρὸς γῆν ἐκκυβιστώντων βία, and Phoen. 1150. The common reading is ὁ δ' ἄρ' ἀρνευτήρι, but two MSS. (L Syr, αρανευτήρι) omit ἄρ'; and as ἀρνευτήρι had F (whether it is conn. with Lat. uri-nari and Skt. vāri, water, Curt. Et. no. 510, or, as others say, with ἄρν-ός, a ram, in the sense of a tumbler "butting like a ram"), this appears to be the relic of a genuine tradition, and is therefore adopted in the text.

388. τείχεος seems to go with ἐπεσσύμενον, dashing at the wall (so also II 511). The genitives in 406, 420, do not justify us in joining βάλε τείχεος, "shot from (his position on) the wall."

393. ὅμως, only here in Il., the regular Homeric word being ἐμπης. Lehrs conj. ὁ δ' οὐδ' ὥς, which is the regular phrase, and probably right. (λ 565 is the only other instance of ὅμως in H., and there it is not quite certain.)

397. The ἑπαλξιν is no doubt a breastwork of planks; it has been undermined, so that when it is pulled down in one place, it falls "all along" the wall (διαμπερές). The nom. to θήκε is τείχος: the wall, by being stripped of the breastwork, makes an opening—which however is not passed as yet by any of the Trojans; they did not appropriate the passage thus made (θίσθαι κέλευθον, 411, 418: this is evidently the force of the middle).

400. ὁμαρτήσαντε, simultaneously. For the "distributive apposition" by ἀλλ' ὥς τ' ἀμφ' οὔροισι δὴν ἄνερε δηριάσθων, which this dual is followed by two verbs in the singular, compare H 306.

401. βεβλήκει: for the force of the plupf. cf. Δ 108. τελαμῶνα, the strap of the shield, which crossed the chest obliquely from the right shoulder. στήθεσφι, so ADG, vulg. στήθεσσι, but the rarer (locative) form is to be preferred.

403. νηυσὶν ἐπὶ πρυμνῇσι are the emphatic words: his fate is to be killed in the open plain.

404-5 = H 260-1. There is a variant ἢ δέ for οὐδέ, found in some MSS. and quoted by Did. as the κοινή.

407. For the aor. infin. after ἐλπομαι cf. Γ 112. Some MSS. give ἔλδετο, A having δ written over π.

408 = II 421 (cf. M 467). These and ζ 241 are the only passages in which ἀντίθεος is the epithet of a nation.

411. θέσθαι κέλευθον, see 397. παρὰ νηυσὶ, we should rather have expected παρὰ νῆας.

412. For ἐφομαρτεῖτε most MSS. give ἐφομαρτεῖτον: the dual for the plural is doubtless the reading of Zenodotos. Cf.

Ψ 414 (note also 413 = Ψ 417). Ar. read ἐφομαρτεῖτε. δέ τοι is the reading of the best MSS., but some give δέ τι, and 'one δέ τ''. We need not hesitate therefore to adopt Bentley's δέ τε, which is evidently original.

416. σφισι would most naturally refer to the Greeks, as the party last mentioned, as in χ 149, μέγα δ' αὐτῷ φ. ε.; but what follows shews that we must understand it of both parties, "a mighty task was revealed to them, set before them": cf. Δ 734, ἀλλὰ σφιν . . . φάνη μέγα ἔργον Ἀχαιοῖς.

420. τὰ πρῶτα, "once," as A 6.

421. The simile is clear evidence of the existence in Homeric times of the "common-field" system of agriculture, where the land of the community is portioned out in temporary tenure from time to time. For the οὔρα see K 351; they are stones (Φ 405) marking off the allotments, and are easily moveable by a fraudulent neighbour (X 489). Such a fraud could only be detected by re-measurement, and it is over such a dispute that the two men are engaged.

 ἐρράδατ' ἀμφοτέρωθεν ἀπὸ Τρώων καὶ Ἀχαιῶν.
 ἀλλ' οὐδ' ὥς ἐδύναντο φόβον ποιῆσαι Ἀχαιῶν, ἀλλ' ἔχον, ὥς τε τάλαντα γυνὴ χερνῆτις ἀληθής,
 ἥ τε σταθμὸν ἔχουσα καὶ εἴριον ἀμφὶς ἀνέλκει

 "ὄρυσσθ', ἱππόδαμοι Τρῶες, ῥήγνυσθε δὲ τείχος 440
 Ἀργείων καὶ νηυσὶν ἐνίετε θεσπιδαῆς πῦρ."

The point of the simile of course is that the two parties stand close to one another divided by the breastwork, as the two neighbours are only divided by the stone over which they are quarrelling. The ἴση (see A 705) is the allotted space of land. (See Mr. Ridgeway in J. H. S. vi. on the Homeric Land System.)

425-6 = E 452-3.

433. ἔχον is used intransitively in the first clause (as E 492, K 264, etc.) and hence ἔχει must be understood transitively in the second, by a sort of zeugma, "they held on, as a woman holds the scales." ἀληθής seems to be used here in the primitive sense, "not forgetting," i.e. careful, anxious about her task. The adjective elsewhere is only used of spoken words. To make it here = "honest," "conscientious," is to introduce an entirely un-Homeric conception. The woman weighs the wool not out of motives of conscientiousness, but in order to make sure that by giving full weight she will earn her pay. It may be mentioned that Apollonios read ἀλήτης, beggar-woman, which however is too harsh after χερνῆτις (which is apparently from χεῖρ, a handworker).

434. ἀμφὶς goes with ἔχουσα, holding one on each side. σταθμὸν = weight, only here in Homer. ἀνέλκει as Θ 72.

435. We must not look upon the μισθός as anything but payment in kind, food and perhaps cloth for garments. It is of course impossible to say what the woman has been doing with the wool she weighs, whether growing it on sheep of her own, or, which is more probable, putting it through some process such as carding, dyeing, or spinning. For ἀεικέα (miserable, meagre) Ar. read ἀνεικέα, explaining ἔξω πέλκους, τὸ ἴσον αὐτοῖς ἀπονέμουσα, though elsewhere he is said to have preferred ἀμεμφέα.

436. See A 336.

438. In II 558 the same expression is used of Sarpedon. For the difficulty therein involved see the introduction to this book.

439 = Θ 227. Ar. strangely enough made Zeus the subject of ἦρσεν, on the ground that Hector could not shout loud enough for all to hear him (442). Zenod. must have taken the same view if he is correctly reported to have read ἐπεὶ θεοῦ ἔκλυον αὐδῆν for the second half of 444.

442. οὔασι, pleonastic, like ὀφθαλμοῖσιν ἰδεῖν, ἐκαλέσατο φωνῇ (Γ 161). It is not necessary to suppose with Ameis that it implies any emphasis, such as hearing willingly.

446. πυρμνός, at the base. For this adverbial use cf. μέσος, ἄκρος, πρῶτος, etc. The use with a second adj. is however rare; with a participle it is not uncommon (λαβρὸς ἐπαγίλων, etc.).

447. δῆμου ἀρίστῳ, as A 328, "the best of a whole community."

448. ὀχλίσσειαν, as i 242. Four MSS. (D G Mor. Bar.) give ὀχλήσειαν (cf. ἐμύχλειον, 259); but Kallimachos and Ap. Rhod. read -ίσσειαν. The derivation and connexion of the word with ὄχλος or μύχλος are very obscure. If it is conn. with vecis, the F is neglected. ὀχλεῖνται, Φ 261, seems to be distinct.

450. Athetized by Ar. and Aristophanes, and omitted by Zenod., as diminishing the greatness of the feat.

451. For the indic. instead of the usual subj. after ὥς ὅτε cf. Δ 422. There seems however to have been a variant φέρη from the note of Did. that Ar. read it διὰ τοῦ ε.

454. πύκα goes with εἴρυντο, στιβαρῶς with ἀραρυίας. For εἴρυντο cf. A 238. The σανίδες seem here to mean literally "the boards" of which the two doors are made, as the epithets shew that πύλαι cannot mean the opening as opposed to the two doors which close it. In this sense however it is generally found, e.g. 121, β 344 (where the epithet δικλίδες, here belonging to πύλαι, is given to σανίδες).

456. ἐπημοιβοί, apparently this means "crossing in the middle"; the κληὶς being a bar to hold them in their place. A different arrangement is given in Ω 453, where the door of Achilles' hut is held by a single ἐπιβλή, apparently identical with the κληὶς.

458. διαβάς, setting his legs well apart. ἀφανρός is else used only of persons.

459. θαιρούς, hinges, projecting vertical iron pegs at the top and bottom, working in stone sockets.

νυκτὶ θοῇ ἀτάλαντος ὑπώπια, λάμπε δὲ χαλκῷ σμερδαλέφ, τὸν ξεστο περὶ χροῖ, δοιὰ δὲ χερσὶν ποιητὰς ἐσέχυντο πύλας. Δαναοὶ δὲ φόβηθεν 470 νῆας ἀνὰ γλαφυράς, ὄμαδος δ' ἄλλαστος ἐτύχθη.

463. ὑπώπια, here in the sense of "face" generally; the phrase is curious, as it is in the brow, above the eyes, that we are accustomed to see a dark expression.

465. ἐρυκάκοι, so MSS.; Ar. ἐρύκακεν.

466. Hentze and others are inclined to doubt the genuineness of this line, as the addition of νόσφι θεῶν, and still more of ὅτ' ἐσᾶλτο πύλας, is very flat; while the last clause seems to contradict the preceding simile, and may possibly be a vague reminiscence of ὅσσα δεδήειν, B 93.

470. ποιητὰς = ἐνποιήτας E 466, etc.
